LIBRARY
THE MUSEUM
OF MODERN ART
Received:

Scanned from the collection of
The Museum of Modern Art Library

Coordinated by the Media History Digital Library
www.mediahistoryproject.org

Funded by a donation from Domitor

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2012 with funding from Media History Digital Library

http://archive.org/details/movinwor06chal

FL
PER

FL
2735

January 8, 1910 Price, 10 Cents

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE EXHIBITOR

THE FILM AND SONG SLIDE NEWS

Published Weekly by the WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING CO., 125 E. 23d ST., NEW YORK

The Motiograph Motion Picture Machine is A Wonder

AND WILL INCREASE YOUR BUSINESS

It projects Flickerless, Steady and Wonderfully Brilliant pictures, has Patented 1½ minute Rewind from main crank, revolving Magazines, Automatic Fireproof shutter, etc., not found in other Machines.—WILL WEAR TWICE AS LONG.

C. H. D. of Keokuk, Iowa, writes: Motiograph Making a Big Hit and Business increased wonderfully.

F. L. F. of Chicago, Ill., writes: "Used every day for seven months, and not one penny for repairs."

F. J. K. of Kansas City, writes: "Operating Motiograph nearly two years. Have operated all makes, but none to compare with Motiograph.—PRICES, $150.00 AND UP

The Enterprise Calcium Gas Outfit is the only satisfactory substitute for electric light Write for Catalog to-day

Western Representatives { S. Lubin Geo. Melies FILM

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564-572 West Randolph Street, Chicago

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

orth 8th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA

and Newest Independent American and Foreign Films

SUPPLIES——18 REELS PER WEEK——SUPPLIES

RELIABLE SERVICE Members N. I. M. P. Alliance

r's Exchange Building, BALTIMORE, MD.

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

Po"

Cam

Guaran

Power's" in Moving Means Perfect Pictures

Power's Inductor for alternating current

Power's "Bill Splitter" for direct current

Power's Tool Kit

Send for Catalog G

NICS POWER COMPANY, 115-117 Nassau St., New York

NOW READY

After Se Mo
Careful dy an Practical nstration

The 1910 Feature Attraction

NOVELTY
TRADE MARK
PUZZLETTES

"PUZZLE PICTURES WITH A MEANING"

Amusing Entertaining

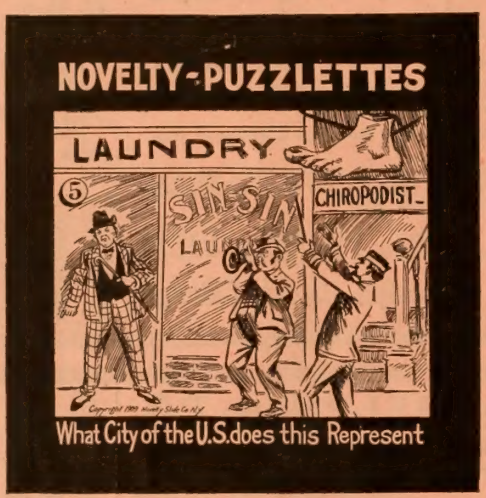
A GENUINE NOVELTY

Intere eek
Educa al



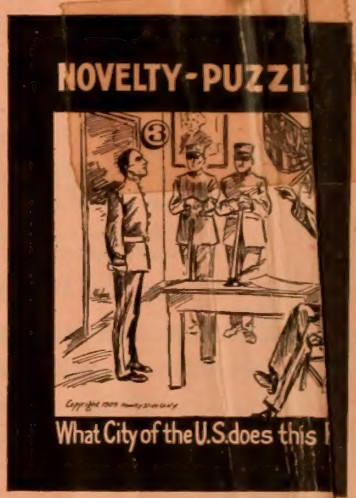
SERIES I

"Cities of the United States"

Released Jan. 3rd

Weekly Releases of New Subjects Every Monday

Write for Catalog W



Clever, Original Puzzles. Each Beautifully Colored.
Set of Ten Slides $6.00. No Extra Apparatus Nec.

NOVELTY
TRADE MARK
PUZZLETTES

Will Please Your Patro
Will Increase Your Pro
Will Cost a Trifle to Us
Will Create an Inter
Your Show.

Don't Delay. Order a Set To-day. Rented or Sold Ou
Ask Your Exchange

NOVELTY SLIDE COMPA

221 East 53rd St. NEW YORK CITY 10 East 14

BISON FILMS

ONE REEL A WEEK TRADE MARK

REGULAR RELEASE DAY FRIDAY TRADE MARK

FOUR REELS A WEEK

Beginning with the week of January 10th, 1910, we will issue four reels a week on regular release days, as follows:

Tuesday,	January 11, 1910,	a "Bison"
Wednesday,	" 12, 1910,	Italia
Friday,	" 14, 1910,	a "Bison"
Saturday,	" 15, 1910,	Ambrosio and then each and every week, thereafter on the same days, one reel of the same producers. You can absolutely count on these releases and make up your programs accordingly.

Ambrosio and Italia Films

The imported reels of Ambrosio and Italia will be released in this country on the corresponding date that they will be released in Europe, so as to protect all exchanges and their first run customers. It is a well established fact that these foreign film manufacturers produce the best of all European productions.

Lithographs and Posters Free

We will furnish as usual all exchanges handling these productions with one sheet four color lithographs, also posters containing synopsis, absolutely free with each reel.

Next Issue, Friday, Jan. 7th

RED GIRL'S ROMANCE

Dramatic Code Word "Rapture" Approx. Length, 990 ft.

Without doubt, the New York Motion Picture Co. has in this subject produced one of the most sensational and interesting films ever made, which treats of the wild and wooly west. Photographically superb.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
Manufacturers of "Bison" Life Motion Pictures
429 Sixth Ave., Cor. 26th St., NEW YORK CITY
PHONE 6690-1 MADISON SQ.
Cable Address: NOSIB

Can You Beat It?
No.
You Can't Even Tie It

A high-Class Independent Service, comprising only Representative Film by Manufacturers of Established reputation, at legitimate prices.

UNITED FILM RENTING CO.
STANDARD FOR COMPARISON

121 East 23d Street, NEW YORK CITY — 1 First Street, TROY, N. Y.

Why Stop at Ten Per Cent?

If you exhibitors continue to stand for that rotten ten per cent penalty imposed upon you every time you switch your business from one to another licensed exchange, what on earth is to prevent the exchanges from eventually raising it to twenty or thirty or forty per cent? Answer that question, man to man, and where do you land? You've dealt with the trust exchanges long enough to know that they'll grind every cent out of you that they possibly can. And you've let them get away with it so long that it has become a habit. You had some sort of an excuse a few months ago, because you didn't like the Independent films on the market—but Heaven knows that excuse no longer exists, for the Independent manufacturers are turning out goods which are driving the trust to desperation. In spite of my exposure of the rotten ten per cent secret, the trust exchanges are going right ahead with the penalty plan? Why? Because THEY THINK YOU ARE AN EASY MARK and they laugh at the idea of your awakening to the true condition of affairs. I am standing between you and trouble. I am out in front taking the blows that otherwise would land on you. Believe it or not, just as you like. I don't want your gratitude. I want your business, and some day I'll get it—not on sentimental grounds but on pure merit of films and service.

CARL LAEMMLE, President
THE LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE
Headquarters
196-198 Lake Street : : Chicago
Minneapolis, Portland, Omaha, Salt Lake City, Evansville
(Canadian Office in Montreal)
"The biggest and best film renter in the world."

"My Minneapolis knows of a good house in North Dakota for sale. If interested write my Minneapolis manager for particulars."

ECLAIR FILM

The well-known brand of ECLAIR FILMS will hereafter be sold by us direct to the American Trade.

We announce our first release on or about

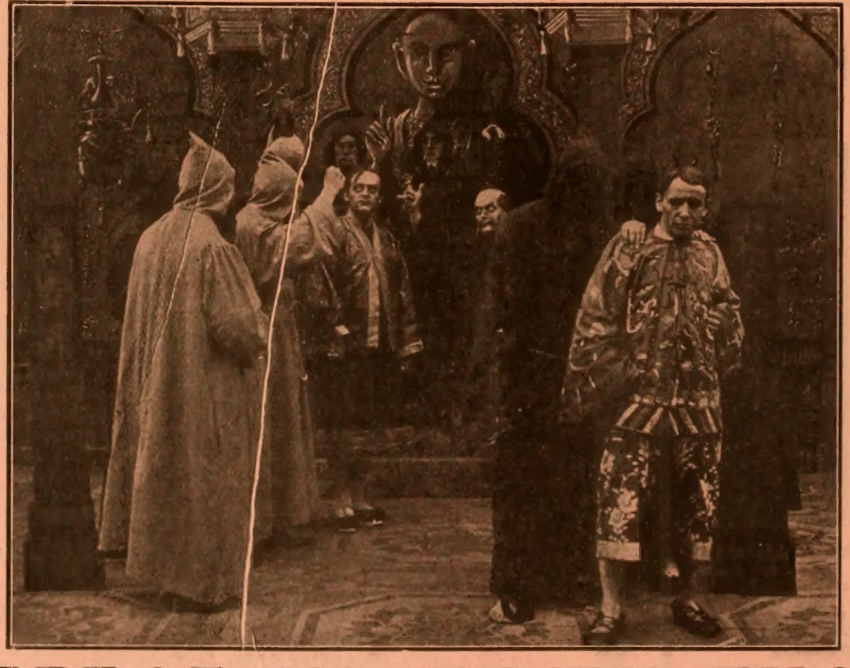
January 15th, 1910

Send in your standing orders without delay

ECLAIR FILM COMPANY, 31 E. 27th St., N.Y. City

E. OFFEMAN, Manager

QUALITY FILMS



VENGEANCE

OR

The Forester's Sacrifice

Length, 551 Feet

Refreshing Bath

Comedy

Length, 308 Feet

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

NORDISK FILM COMPANY, COPENHAGEN

7 EAST FOURTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK CITY

PATHÉ FRÈRES

WILL RELEASE

On Wednesday, Jan. 12th

THE FILM D'ART

CAMILLE

Staged and photographed by Pathé Frères in their own inimitable style and enacted by Film d'Art actors.

A thrilling and dramatic presentation of that masterpiece of Alexander Dumas, fils known all over the English speaking world as "Camille." The story is too well known to need any synopsis. For a generation it has been enjoyed by old and young both in book form and in Verdi's masterful adaptation known to the opera-goers as

"La Dame aux Camelias"

"La Traviata"

The film represents the acme of perfection. Every shade of meaning is portrayed with the utmost skill and fidelity. For those who have read Camille this picture will be of especial interest—after seeing it. The unfortunare Margurite Gautier, who was in real life the Camille of the story, and her unhappy lover, Armand Duval, will be real characters, who will live forever in their memory.

YOU NEED THIS FILM

Insist on it from your exchange

BEAR IN MIND: RELEASEE JANUARY 12—WEDNESDAY

For the description of other Pathé Releases for the week of January 10th, including "The Storm," "Beggar's Repentance," "On a Racket," "Stag Hunting in Java," "Story of a Leg," and "Mtss Moneybags Wishes to Marry." See Pathé's weekly bulletin. If you don't get it, write—it's yours for the asking.

Get Your Posters from the A. B. C. Co. of Cleveland, Ohio

NEW YORK
41 West 25th Street

CHICAGO
35 Randolph Street

NEW ORLEANS
813 Union Street

Pacific Coast Agency—Turner & Dahnken, 136 Eddy Street, San Francisco, Cal.

THE MASTERMARK OF PICTUREDOM

START THE NEW YEAR RIGHT—THE SELIG W

Release Date January 3rd. "THE SMUGGLER'S GAME"

An intensely interesting film dealing with the great contraband traffic in Fi

1000 Feet Code Wode, Game

TRADE MARK

Release Date Jan. 6th "The Highlander's Defiance"

Just another of those great Selig war pictures.

Length, 625 Feet Code Word, Defiance

A film for the masses

On the same reel "Alderman Krautz,s Picnic"

The best laugh film produced in years.

370 feet of continued gaiety.

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE CO., Inc. 45-47-49 Randolph St., Chicago, U. S. A.

THE MASTERMARK OF PICTUREDOM

MOVING PICTURE OPERATING

Complete Operating Course Taught—$15

WE POSITIVELY GUARANTEE you a $15 position. Evening class, every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. We have graduated from our school hundreds of successful students. Investigate our references. On and after January 1st, 1910, the fee for complete operating course will be advanced to $25. Register now.

Call, Write or Telephone 1405 Madison Square

F. C. TAYLOR - - 51 West 28th Street, New York City

VITAGRAPH FILMS

THE FILMS OF "QUALITY"

Tuesday, January 4

SECOND SERIES OF THE LIFE OF MOSES

Forty Years in the Land of Midian

THE FILM SENSATION OF THE YEAR.—The second reel of this great Biblical series, produced under the personal supervision of the eminent Rev. Madison C. Peters, D. D., will be found even more magnificent than the first, which has already called forth enthusiastic praise from press, pulpit and public. Approximate length, 868 feet.

Beginning January 4, 1910, with the release of the second series of the Life of Moses and with each reel thereafter, we will supply direct our own elaborate lithograph. 10c each, in lots of 10 or more, 6c each

Saturday, January 8

Richelieu

AN ELABORATE MOTION PICTURE CLASSIC—adapted from the world famous play and produced on a magnificence that marks it as one of the greatest of the great films issued by this company. The acting is of the very quality of dramatic art, and the film will prove to be a veritable motion picture classic. Approximate length, 992 fee

TWO GREAT FILM ISSUES IN ONE WEEK

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA NEW YORK, 110 Nassau CHICAGO, 109 Randolph LONDON, 25 Cecil Co PARIS, 15, Rue Sai

Moving Picture World

IE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY - 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
each Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

EDITORS: J. P. CHALMERS, THOMAS BEDDING, F. R. P. S.

BSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rica and the Philippine Islands.

VERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3⅜ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.

TIME DISCOUNTS: 5% two or more insertions, 10% three months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

. VON HARLEMAN, Western Representative, 913-915 Schiller Building, Chicago, Ill. - Telephone, Central 3763

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

. 6 JANUARY 8, 1910 No. 1

oming Meeting of the Film Service Association.

ne next semi-annual meeting of the Film ce Association will be held in New York (January 29-31), instead of at Palm h, as suggested at the last meeting.

Summary of the Week.

ving picture palace wanted on upper Broadway. ll rise to the occasion? (Page 8.)

* * *

in the right direction—moving picture roof garden ed. (Page 8.)

* * *

fect of cheap vaudeville as a part of the program out to the exhibitor. (Page 8.)

* * *

achine manufacturers should encourage the middle- ge 9.)

* * *

Hubbard gives logical reasons why he patronizes picture show. (Page 10.)

* * *

round out the year with a masterful production are's "A Midsummer Night's Dream." (Page 10.)

* * *

ofed films, a late development of the business, the exchanges.

* * *

discuss the need of more strict censorship and vaudeville. (Page 13.)

* * *

hicus replies to critics. (Page 14.)

* * *

s report of Alliance meeting. (Page 15.)

* * *

ectures for two notable Pathe pictures: "La teche" and "The Birth of Jesus." (Page 17.)

* * *

ding film manufacturers are preparing for the New ge 18.)

It Will Go On.

It was towards the conclusion of the war between France and Germany, when a victorious German espied one of the defeated Frenchmen. "Vive la republique," said the German. "Elle vivra sans vous," was the reply: it will go on just the same; it will live without you. A close perusal of much of the recent literature devoted to the moving picture field has brought this little anecdote to our mind, and the rejoinder that we desire to make to those writings is largely that which the Frenchman of thirty-eight odd years ago made to the German, "It will live without or in spite of you." In other words, what the Frenchman meant to convey was that France was a powerful institution. What we mean to convey is that the moving picture is a permanent institution of the entertainment field.

Just at the close of the year, when many deliverances as to what has been done in the last twelve months have been printed, we are also confronted by the duty of facing the future. Some of those to whom we have spoken and many of those who have written prefer to speak of and write about the past. We have done with the past. Our gaze is all towards the future—the future of the moving picture. Elle vivra sans vous—the moving picture will live in spite of its detractors and in spite of those who have no confidence in its future. Mainly because they are ignorant of what it is, what it does and what it can do.

We address this article in particular first of all to the manufacturers, those whose brains, capital and lives are embarked in the commercial end of matters. The men who wonder to themselves after having got so far in this branch of industrial production, if further commercial progress lies in front of them. What we think is this, that by the end of 1910 they will be making more money than they were at the end of 1909.

Then we come to the renter who seems, frankly, rather a nervous kind of man who is undecided whether his future existence is at stake, or not. To our view the renter will be more than ever an indispensable factor in the position. So will the exhibitor. He is the man who shows the pictures to the public. Last of all the public remains, that vast, thoughtless and thinking public, thoughtless because it does not concern itself with the ways and means, thinking because it knows what it likes best of all.

The public of to-day is stronger for the moving picture than ever, and we say neither manufacturer, nor renter nor exhibitor seems to understand or to realize what an enormous factor in the position the public is. Few amongst them begin to understand what the public wants. Elle vivra sans vous, the public remains whether the present manufacturers, the renters or even the exhibitors go out of business. The moving picture is here, will remain here, and will be here for all time. That is the point of this article. At the commencement of this year of grace, 1910, the moving picture is more established in popular esteem than ever it was before.

Rising to the Occasion.

Round about Christmas we spent several evenings and many hours studying moving picture audiences and moving picture houses in New York City. The impression that all this made upon our minds was somewhat disappointing, because wherever we go, we go in quest of the picture, we go for the picture, and we like to see and study the effect which the picture is making upon the minds of the public.

The New York moving picture public is in a parlous state. It does not know exactly where it stands. So far as we can observe it wants to see and appreciate the moving picture, but the owners or proprietors of the various theaters in New York City seem undecided in their own minds as to how to treat the public. So in their indecision they fall back upon compromise and sandwich the moving picture with vaudeville. They do not understand their public, they do not seem to have the prescience to know that public; they do not seem to realize that there is a great picture public per se—a great public for the picture by itself, for itself, and of itself. And so they are diluting the picture with vaudeville. This, if not exactly a counsel of despair, is temporizing.

The man of all others in New York City whom we think is temporizing with his opportunity is Mr. Ganes of that very charming little house on West Thirtieth street and Broadway. We looked upon Mr. Ganes as the man to seize the opportunity that lay ready for him —that opportunity being to give Broadway a picture palace, and a picture palace only. Broadway has not yet got its picture palace. It has its theaters galore, it has its vaudeville houses, but its picture palace has yet to be erected—erected on a sumptuous scale with the picture beautifully shown, with flowers, music and all the rest of the concomitants which make the sumptuary surroundings of the moving picture as luxurious and as beautiful as those which surround the opera or the high class play. In other words, what we want to see on Broadway, New York City, is the moving picture treated with the dignity which Mr. Hammerstein treats an opera or Mr. Charles Frohman treats a play.

New York, then, has not yet risen to the level of its opportunities in the way of moving picture houses. We have absolute faith in the future of the moving picture as an entertainment, perfectly comparable in essential qualities with the opera or the talking play. Fourteenth street does not seem to be able to supply the goods, nor does Twenty-third street, nor Thirty-fourth street; but it has got to be done and probably done elsewhere in the city. Where will that be and who will do it?

A Step In Advance.

For many months past we have noticed the upward progress of the moving picture in the estimation of those who make it their prime business to cater to the entertainment of the public. It seems only yesterday that the moving picture was not shown in New York City, north of Fourteenth street. Then came the Majestic Theater, the Circle Theater, finally Mr. Ganes's house on Thirti street. All these we regard as so many steps forward

We have been watching very closely for the entra of the moving picture into the center of things—the ce ter of things being Forty-second street, the very axle of the wheel of amusements in New York City. We kn that it was bound to come and it has come.

The other day small paragraphs appeared in the ne papers saying that the New York Theater Roof Gar was being adapted for the purposes of the moving p ure. The moving picture has been installed there a a week and, we believe, successfully. It is attract and it is bound to attract a very considerable pul The experiment is interesting in its way, but we reg it as a half-hearted one. This particular theater r garden is well known in the city and well known throug out the world with its own clientele—a clientele th will advance when the Winter is gone and the Sprin and Summer here. A clientele that will probably becom permanent. Sufficient to learn for the present purpos that the moving picture has "got there," that it has drive the thin end of the wedge in. Once having got to Forty-second street, it is never likely to be dislodged from it. Rather more is it likely to arrogate to itself the province of having its own special home in the center of the great amusement circle of the greatest city of the new world. which is where we expect it to be, where we want it to be, and we are sure it will be, amid surroundings which will dignify it and beautify it.

Cheap Vaudeville A Menace to the Exhibitor.

THE PASSING OF A NOTABLE SHOWHOUSE AN OBJECT LESSON THAT IT DOES NOT PAY TO TRY AND FORCE ON THE PUBLIC THAT WHICH THEY DO NOT WANT.

Changes are observed on Market street, Philadelphi which might serve the argument of the pessimist th cinematography has seen its best days. As a matter fact, the thick cloud of gloom that hangs over cert quarters point to a salutary reform and presages a vorce between cheap vaudeville and motion pictures the lasing benefit of moving picture interests and tending to the welfare of legitimate vaudeville inter Those five-cent palaces on Market street which sta out a year or more ago to give a combination pro have found that people who want vaudeville will g a regular vaudeville house, and those who want t pictures will rather patronize a house that is devot the exclusive exhibition of the best pictures. The agers of the combination houses have done every they could to stem the tide. The Palace offers el souvenirs to ladies. The Victoria decorates its en with a department store showcase in which is dis a dummy showing the petticoats to be given away as souvenirs. The Unique decided that the limit had been reached and instead of giving away souvenirs closed a place that was erected a year ago at great expense. After January first the Unique will be a thing of the past, making room for a large drug store.

Although we regret this loss to the ranks, the passing of the Unique will be a benefit if it serves to convince theater managers that the mixed program of mediocre quality is not what the public wants: that it is impossible to give good vaudeville and good pictures with a five-cent admission; that it can only be done in ten-cent houses of large seating capacity with any degree of satisfaction: that it is the cheap, low class, so-called vaudeville acts that have done more than anything else to hurt the standing of moving picture shows, and in fact all theaterdom (as witness the present rigorous censorship of vaudeville in Chicago).

The passing of the Unique on Philadelphia's great thoroughfare and the stability of some of its competitors reminds us of the fable of the oak and the reed. The strong oak tree was nagging and laughing at the weak reed, but when the storm came the strong oak tree went down while the reed, bending to the gale, straightened up after the storm had passed. The Family Theater on the same street kept to its two reels of good pictures, is still making good, and is more than ever the haven of rest for the busy shoppers of Market street.

We have often been asked by exhibitors as to the advisability of their giving vaudeville as an attraction. No vaudeville act that is a real attraction can be engaged at a price that can be paid by the house of limited seating capacity. That the large houses cannot or will not obtain good acts was painfully forced upon us one day this week in the largest combination house in our immediate vicinity. Sandwiched in between two amateurish and silly vaudeville acts was the fine film "To Save Her Soul," by the Biograph Company. The film received the loudest applause, while some ladies sitting behind us commented on the silly vaudeville act in very uncomplimentary terms. There is class to the films that are being now offered to the public and the time is ripe for the film manufacturers to adopt some measure which will prevent their films being shown in bad company. In other words, we protest against good pictures being used to carry bad vaudeville.

The Protection of the Middleman.

In any business in which the middleman is a necessity, he should be protected and his interests respected by manufacturer and consumer alike. This observation is directed mainly at the manufacturers of moving picture machines and supplies, as many are the complaints on the part of exchange men that they have spent hours and days in working an exhibitor up to the pitch of investing in a new machine, only to learn afterwards that they have been undersold by the manufacturer and get no credit for the sale.

While the manufacturers receive many direct orders as the result of their advertising and there is a disposition on the part of many people to deal with the manufacturer direct, yet there are a great many moving picture machines sold through the personal solicitation of exchange managers or their agents. The average exhibitor is not a ready spender and as long as his old machine does the work he is not going to hunt up a manufacturer to order new apparatus. He is going to patch up the old one as long as he can. But the enterprising solicitor or manager of an exchange desires to see his films run on good machines and after much persuasion he convinces this exhibitor that he is not up-to-date and must get a machine of latest improvements if he expects to compete with his neighbor. Now, after the exhibitor has been convinced by the exchange man that he must have a new machine and decided on a particular make, in nine cases out of ten he will write to the manufacturer to see if he can make a better deal direct, and, even if the price is the same, the purchaser will most likely order from the manufacturer. The manufacturer will allow a cash discount to the exhibitor equal to the commission allowed the exchange. Only the other week a case was brought to our notice where the manufacturer allowed even a larger discount to the exhibitor than to the exchange and made the sale, although the business had been created at the solicitation of the exchange.

Now this is not fair, neither is it conducive to the business interests of the manufacturer, as the sentiment expressed by this exchange man was that hereafter he would not try to sell any new machines for that manufacturer, but would advise exhibitors to have their old machines repaired, as he would be sure of the repair money, while he was not sure of the commission on a sale. This is not the sentiment of one alone, but of many, therefore we say that if the middleman is to be tolerated at all his business interests should be respected.

Respecting the Probabilities.

Whenever a basis of fact is taken for a moving picture story, care, we suggest, should be exercised either by the author or the producer so as not to outrage the probabilities. In the forthcoming Essanay masterpiece (we are quoting an extra official description given to the story of "The Adventurer," to be released on January the 15th) the story, we are told, is founded on a real incident, and the real incent takes place in a compartment in an English railroad carriage running between London and Epsom Downs.

As far as we can gather, the incident is supposed to take place at race time. A woman charges a man with assault; the man, however, clears himself. The story is highly improbable if the incident is supposed to have taken place at the time referred to. Hundreds of thousands of people travel over this thirteen or fourteen miles of railroad between London and the Epsom racertack. It is the last place on the earth where "an English confidence woman" would try to intimidate a man with charge of assault; in other words, it is highly improbable, or, we might put it, it is straining probability too much.

Then, we come to the statement that the story is in part a true incident, a chapter in the "life of General X. of the English Tenth Hussars." Here again the author of the Essanay story is mixing things up. On a train between London and Woking, over thirty years ago, Colonel V. Baker was said to have made advances towards a girl who resented them. Anyhow she brought a charge against the Colonel in the police court, and although nothing was proved against the officer, yet public opinion took the view that he had not disproved the charge. So he had to resign the colonelcy of the Tenth Hussars, and went to Egypt, where he served with distinction in the Egyptian army. He did not go to Russia or Plevna. He did not return to England, society did not welcome him back again; and the woman did not confess to having blackmailed him. These are the facts. We are of the opinion that the choice of the theme for the moving picture is out of place. Still, it may work out well on the screen, and we should not have referred to this matter, except that we happened to be very familiar with the Epsom Downs and the Colonel Baker history and therefore we were curious to see how the incidents had been treated by an American film producer.

ANOTHER LITERARY WORK FILMED.

"Pardners," by Rex Beach.

"Pardners," Rex Beach's extraordinary story of life and scenes in the Alaskan gold fields, is the subject scheduled by the Edison Manufacturing Company for release on January 4. The news that America's most successful young novelist had identified himself with the Edison interests and was arranging his famous story for film production was received by exhibitors and exchanges generally with a considerable interest. The announcement of this release has been eagerly awaited for some time. The Edison Company promises that the picture will be a splendid reproduction of Mr. Beach's extraordinary story and that his literary style is vividly portrayed by their stock company.

ELBERT HUBBARD ON THE MOVING PICTURES.

The Oracle Declares Himself a Moving Picture Fiend.

[From the New York American.]

Are we down-hearted? No-o-o-o!!

One reason, Terese, why I am able to roll off the tasks, and keep my skypiece working in double shifts is because I am a moving picture fiend.

I do not drink and I do not smoke, but I spend ten cents on a moving picture show whenever I have the chance. Sometimes I spend a dollar and take nine kids with me.

Between the nicotine and the nickelodeon I prefer the latter.

The moving picture show cheers, but does not inebriate.

It lubricates the wheels of existence, rests, refreshes, stirs the imagination, brings into play a new set of convolutions and costs a dime.

It never gives you that dark brown taste the day after, nor a headache and that tired feeling; nor does it make for a hike to the booby hutch.

For nervous prostration or nervous prosperity try the moving pictures.

I go to see the moving pictures so as to keep from having nervous prostration.

If you go to the races you'll probably bet—and, anyway, you'll get excited. If you go to the theater you will have to dress for it, perhaps have a carriage and a little feed afterward. And you'll get tired out.

But the moving pictures is Jeffersonian simplicity and practical democracy. You slide in and out, and the whole thing is free from frills, fads and fussiness. You always get your money's worth, and there is no haunting regrets as to your having made a fool of yourself by spending a whole evening on a bum play and knocking a five-dollar bill all to flinders.

Another things about moving pictures is that the invention is one of the great educational factors of the time. It is one of the things that is helping to make this old world over into a better and happier place.

Up to less than a hundred years ago civilization was provincial. Only a few people could travel, see and know. The many were submerged in ignorance and superstition The sailors who went round the world were nature fakers. The stories they told us would make your hair curl.

Now we are getting acquainted with the world. Quick transportation, the mails, the daily American, the telegraph, the telephone, the talking machines and moving pictures are bringing the world to our doors.

I once knew a dear old lady who had a way of saying when you told her anything, "I want to know—I want to know!"

I used to laugh at this, but now I sympathize with the sentiment. "I want to know—I want to know!"

In Missouri the folks ask for visual demonstration. This to me is also beautiful. Show me! I want to know!!

The moving picture satisfies our desire to know, because it shows us. The extent of knowledge which it distributes as to the ways, customs and habits of the people of the world is great, and far-reaching for good.

I am a writer of books. In these books I describe what I have seen, and the things I imagine, and I state some of the things which seem to me to be true. Just to the degree that I express truth and make men think do I benefit them.

No criticism can be brought against moving pictures which cannot be brought against books with equal truth. There are good books, there are bad books and there are bum books written by punk parties with literary eczema, which are neither good nor bad.

It is exactly so with moving pictures.

These pictures tell a story, playing the thing out while you sit and look on.

Good people only want to see the truthful and the worthy.

SHAKESPEARE ON THE SCREEN.

The Vitagraph Company Stages "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

It is not so very long since the playing of a Shakespearean play on the ordinary stage was attended by considerable financial risk. A well-known theatrical manager on the other side of the Atlantic once publicly stated that in his opinion "Shakespeare spelt ruin." What he meant was this: That the public interest in the works of the bard of all time was so small that no matter how elaborately those plays were mounted, no matter how well they were acted, the public would not support them in sufficient numbers to make the ventures remunerative.

The man we are quoting was the late F. B. Chatterton, a name that will no doubt be familiar to many readers of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD. Chatterton, however, lived to see Shakespeare presented on the stage by such men as Irving, Mansfield, Tree, Lewis Waller and others who made money out of the plays. This proves that the public has a real interest in the plays of Shakespeare—an interest, we mean, sufficiently great to draw them to a theater when a Shakespearean play is properly put on. Shakespeare, in short, is a dramatist as well as a poet, whose works are to be seen on the stage as well as conned in the study or in the class room.

And Shakespeare is a dramatist for the moving picture screen as well as for the ordinary stage. We have long waited for the opportunity of seeing the bard of all time included amongst the band of authors who write for the moving picture stage. We wondered in our own mind who amongst the American film makers would be the first to strike into the rich preserve of material which Shakespeare offers the producer. We congratulate the Vitagraph Company on being prompt to gratify this secret aspiration of ours.

From the purely personal point of view there are many Shakespearean plays that we would like to see on the moving picture screen; in fact we would like to see them all on the moving picture screen because we have seen them on the ordinary stage—many of them in operatic as well as dramatic form. And we go the length of saying that there is not one of them in our opinion which is not adaptable to moving picture purposes.

It was therefore with special interest that we braved the Arctic weather of Christmas night for the purpose of seeing the Vitagraph "A Midsummer Night's Dream" in a New York moving picture theater. The play was very largely associated in our minds with the exquisite music written to it by the late Sir Arthur Sullivan, music which is heard in the concert hall to-day, although the play itself is very rarely produced. Of course, the personal equation must enter very largely into the interpretation of the Shakespearean text. Then again, in such a play as "A Midsummer Night's Dream," the producer is called upon to exercise great skill and judgment so as to compress the scenes into a continuous and intelligible story which does not destroy the narrative—which makes that narrative clear, even to a moving picture audience, which can hardly be supposed to be following the piece on the screen with the text of the play in its hands. Out of this somewhat trying ordeal the Vitagraph people came with great success. They told the story in a word as Shakespeare told it—clearly and intelligibly. None of the salient points of this delightful fairy comedy were missed.

Something of the atmosphere of the play as we saw it acted on the regular stage some years ago was imparted to this beautiful film, a marvel of decorative richness, with well drilled crowds of actors and actresses, a veritable Christmas fairy story and unquestionably a real Vitagraph triumph. The changes marking the appearance and disappearance of the fairies or immortals were managed with singular skill. Indeed, the fairy part of the story was everything that was graceful and charming. Real true comedy marked the acting of Bottom the Weaver and his associates in arranging the play to be performed on the marriage of the Duke. And then again, when Bottom was changed into an ass and Titania the Queen of the fairies was made to fall in love with him, we seemed to be looking upon the scene from the very play itself as we remembered it when seen on the ordinary stage. The acting seemed to be so naturally, dryly humorous.

The court scenes of this magnificent film were superb, but what pleased us as much as anything were the open air scenes, where the mortals and immortals were going through some charming passages of the delightful comedy.

We should like to hear the opinions of qualified Shakespeareologists on this picture. There are many in this country who make the work of the bard their special study. For ourselves, speaking generally, the picture is full of poetical beauty. The Vitagraph actors and actresses have risen to the occasion. The photography of the subject, too, is so good that we seemed to feel that this end of the matters showed a marked advance—a picture having a rich deposit free from mechanical and chemical defects. We look forward to other Shakespearean products from the Vitagraph Company and altogether to our mind the "Midsummer Night's Dream" stands out as the Christmas success of the moving picture stage of the last days of 1909. Bravo, Vitagraph Company!

EDISON COMPANY ENTHUSIASTIC OVER ITS WATERPROOFED FILM.

Exchanges Subscribe to its Superior Quality.

A considerable share of the many complimentary things that are being said these days of the vast improvement in the photographic quality of their films the Edison Company attributes to the waterproofing process to which they are subjected. The company claims that the film is more transparent (and the results seem to substantiate their contention), due to the fact that because of the waterproofed coating both sides of the film are smooth and shiny, and more light consequently is allowed to penetrate the film. This would seem to be a mark of superiority over the ordinary film, the emulsion side of which is dull. There are several other particulars in which the waterproofed film claims superiority, and that makes for a steadier and clearer projection. The very fact that the film can be cleaned at will from any foreign matters that may congregate in any superficial scratches on the surface, thus elminating the possibility of "rain storms" in the projection, is a most potent argument in favor of the treated film. And it should be borne in mind that any scratches occurring on its surface are superficial, the coating offering complete protection to the gelatine or emulsion. It is claimed that the film passes more smoothly through the projecting machine, that there is no sticking at the film gate, and that the loop is steadier; all of which conduces to an improvement in the pictures. The Edison Company feels gratified at the success that has attended their adoption of the waterproofing process. When the first releases of waterproofed film left the factory the company requested its exchanges, in a circular letter, to give these films treatment (soap and water baths) at frequent intervals and to keep the factory advised of their condition from time to time. The reports that have been received up to date are most favorable, and the many claims made for the new process seem not to have been exaggerated in the slightest particular. It is conceded in every instance that not only is the transparency better than in the ordinary film, but the water-proofed films give greater satisfaction in respect to durability and age. In support of the latter attributes the company quotes a letter from the Film and Supply Company, Ltd., of New Orleans, La., under date of December 10, 1909, as follows:

"We have just inspected your film subject entitled 'The Lie' to-day and it is with great pleasure that we inform you that the condition of it is remarkable, not the least sign of wear or tear on it whatever. This film has been in constant use ever since its release date, October 26. We wish to congratulate you on the important strides you are making in this connection."

This letter, the company states, is but a sample of many that have reached them complimentary to the new process, which is in line with the Edison Company's policy of improvement.

A 1910 ATTRACTION OF EXCEPTIONAL MERIT.

With the opening of the new year appears the announcement of an original, novel attraction that has just been introduced to the moving picture trade in the form of "Novelty Puzzlettes." This new feature has been very carefully studied by the originators for fully twelve months, and before placing the same on the market it was thoroughly tested out and put into practical demonstration. The results obtained were so highly successful that it is an absolute certainty that "Novelty Puzzlettes" will become a necessary part of the moving picture show. These puzzlettes are manufactured in weekly series of new subjects; each series or set consists of ten slides and represents important places of the world, famous people or other topical subjects which the public in general is acquainted with. The puzzles are cleverly designed by experienced newspaper artists, but each and every one is strictly original and has never been used before. Furthermore, each puzzle has a meaning, and while simple enough in construction it nevertheless requires a little thought to solve the correct answer. A new series will be released each week, and as each set is intended for a week's use there will be no necessity of exhibitors repeating. An exhibitor who was taken into the confidence of the originators, and who made one of the tests, reports that the following arrangement showed excellent results at his house and increased his attendance 50 per cent: "As each set of 'Novelty Puzzlettes' consists of ten slides, six of which are puzzle pictures, it is advisable to show one different puzzle each day, that is, No. 1 Monday, No. 2 Tuesday and so on through the week. The last day, or Saturday, all six may be reviewed and the same day answers for all six puzzlettes will be received in a closed envelope." The answer slide is delivered in a sealed package and this is not shown until after the contest. Where prizes are awarded the interest is great and the attendance is bound to exceed the highest mark. Not only are "Novelty Puzzlettes" entertaining and amusing, but they are also interesting and instructive both to the young and old, and moving picture patrons will appreciate them. "Novelty Puzzlettes" can be rented from your exchange at a very nominal price, or can be purchased outright from the makers. Further particulars and full information can be secured from the sole manufacturers, The Novelty Slide Company, 221 East Fifty-third street, New York City.

The Peerless Motion Picture Company, 1012 Baltimore avenue, Kansas City, Mo., has joined the National Independent Moving Picture Alliance.

I very much dislike becoming personal in journalistic affairs or deliberately placing myself open to attack for being unduly zealous, but in this instance I must ask the indulgence of the friends who read my little column. While writing this I have before me a moving picture publication. Upon first reading, I thought it was awful nice of the editor to wish his readers "the wide world o'er fraternal greetings," etc. I, of course, detected the egotism in the quoted part of the article, but even then I felt inclined to overlook it. We all know this man. We all know that before he left dear old England and graced this land with the imprint of his precious feet and the radiancy of his brilliant mind nobody knew anything about the moving picture business. We all know the man who claims he has put the business on a paying basis through his sound advice. So, therefore, when his greeting spread his circulation "the wide world o'er" I was inclined to let him get away with it and use it as a relish with his Christmas turkey and plum pudding. But! I couldn't tranquilly pass over the last paragraph of his review of the year. The editor headed the article "A Retrospect," implying that it was a resume of happenings in the moving picture field for the year about to close. Reading showed it was not, but simply a reminder of what his paper had attempted to do, or claimed to have done. Egotism is pardonable at times and I was willing to overlook it in this case until ignorance took control of the pen. I have, many times, during the past twelve months performed the painful duty of pointing out the mistakes —many of them grave ones—of the editor in question. He is a good fellow in his way, but what bulls he does make at times! Let us take up the closing paragraph of the "Retrospect" to which I take exception. To do this a quotation must be made. Here it is: "In November the News did a little towards helping to elect Judge Gaynor as the Mayor of New York City and exhibitors throughout Greater New York are looking forward with a great deal of interest to the period when he assumes the reins of office." To my mind such a sentiment is the acme of bad judgment, if not worse. It is little short of a direct insult to Judge Gaynor. The most charitable view of the matter is that the editor in question became so engulfed in self-importance that he lost control of himself.

* * *

It may be information to the party under indictment that no paper, nor any particular class of men, elected Judge Gaynor. In this particular case our readers will pardon us if we temporarily delve into politics in order to sweep aside a mistaken conclusion regarding the position of the moving picture people in regard to the newly elected Mayor. Judge Gaynor was the only man on his ticket elected. The Fusionists swept all aside but him. Now, did the egotistical editor I have referred to do this? Did he do it with the aid of the many people in Greater New York interested in the moving picture business? Not by a jugful. The fact of the matter is that before any moving picture paper espoused the cause of Judge Gaynor the exhibitors and film exchange men had sanctioned his candidacy and were working for his election. It cannot be disputed that they did excellent work for him and were most highly gratified when his election was announced, but they were neither inspired nor encouraged to a material extent by any publication devoted to the moving picture interests. The papers in question practically and simply reflected the prevailing sentiment. If any credit is due in the line claimed by our worthy friend, we beg that he concede some to the humble Moving Picture World. This claim can be substantiated by the October numbers of that publication. The editor under criticism says: "In November the News did a little towards helping to elect Judge Gaynor." As the election took place on the second day of November, the News confessedly did very little in the direction for which credit is claimed.

* * *

Such blunders, committed in a spirit that overreaches itself for self-praise, do a great deal of harm. I believe I truthfully reflect the sentiments of the moving picture exchange people and exhibitors when I say that their experience in December, 1908, convinced them that Judge Gaynor was a fair-minded, fearless man and they wished to demonstrate their appreciation of these qualities as applied to their interests when they were most sorely tried. I also believe that all these people will endorse my sentiments when I say that they are not looking forward to his inauguration "with a great deal of interest." Their gratification is already acquired. They are content to let future events develop naturally and are not seeking anything that should arouse any undue interest. They are willing to conduct their business in accordance with the municipal regulations and are confident that while they do this their rights will not be abridged if Judge Gaynor remains the same kind of man while Mayor as he was when he held the honorable position on the bench.

* * *

The holidays have hit the exhibitors hard, especially those located in the storm centers, but it is only the newcomers in the field that are complaining. All others know that the Christmas holiday season is a poor one for all lines of amusements other than church entertainments. The second week of January should show a decided improvement if a few blizzards are not dumped upon us. For the consolation of some people who are passing through their first Christmas season as moving picture exhibitors, I refer to the high-class vaudeville houses. See the increased number of acts they offer to try and draw the people during the festive season. Go a step further and see how many legitimate road shows retire a week or two before Christmas and how many good seats may be secured almost at any time on short notice during the holidays. I am confident that during such seasons as the present a census would show the receipts of the picture houses proportionately far in excess of the others.

* * *

The Governor of Iowa has put the ban on moving picture reproductions of fights. He says they are the same as the fights themselves, and are therefore illegal. I do not wish to get on bad terms with the Governor of Iowa, but I cannot refrain from questioning his decision. He says the laws of the State prohibit such fights as Johnson and Ketchell indulged in, and exhibitions of moving pictures of such events are equally illegal. If this Governor's position should be sustained by the other States of the Union the moving pictures would soon go upon the shelf as a lost art. What would become of the story pictures? Something happens in all of them that reflects a violation of law. True, the transgressions are principally fictional, but how can the line be drawn? Take, for instance, the old-timer, "The Great Train Robbery," which was posed in New Jersey. Would the Governor of Iowa bar this picture because train robberies are illegal in Iowa? The theory advanced is a very elastic one, so much that even Biblical stories could be shut out. If the Governor of Iowa rendered the decision which is credited to him, I am inclined to think that his digestive organs need serious attention.

* * *

This is the time of year when the most ridiculous rumors get afloat as to the future of the moving picture business, more especially that branch of it connected with the Motion Picture Patents Company. It is in the early part of February that the program for the year is laid out by that company, and as the time approaches the tongues of the wiseaeres wag vigorously. During the past ten days I have been advised by evidently well-meaning friends to be on the alert and get on the ground floor, for "something is going to happen." One of the rumors is to the effect that after January 1 one-third of the New York City film exchanges will be in the Independent ranks. I believe there are nine exchanges. It does not require much time to make the circuit. I have been over it since the rumor got afloat and, unless I am being deceived, the rumor is a hoax. When I reported this to one of my informants, he said: "Well, you are slow, to be sure. Why, if there is nothing in it, how is it that exchange men from the West and the Eastern States have been in secret session in New York during the past week, and I know some of these men are dying to open licensed exchanges in New York?" I soon settled this argument. The old Film Service Association is still in existence, as a social organization. The time for the annual meeting is drawing near. At the last session, which was held in Atlantic City, N. J., it was practically decided to hold the next one at Palm Beach, Fla. The matter was left in the hands of the executive committee, however, and its members met in New York during the past week. It was decided that New York be the next place of meeting. Palm Beach may be a warm place, but keep your eye on the Great White Way.

OBSERVATIONS BY WIDE-AWAKE EXHIBITORS.

The Editors Invite Contributions for this page from Exhibitors who can Express an Idea that will be Beneficial to the Business.

MORE REFINED AUDIENCES DEMAND A STRICTER CENSORSHIP.

Maybe through your valuable paper you could help change existing conditions. The Motion Picture Patents Company work in conjunction with the Censor Board and the Censor Board wrote the educators of this town asking for reports as to what kind of pictures were being shown. Now we are getting Biograph's "Mountaineer's Honor," "In Little Italy," and Lubin's "Romance of a Rocky Coast." One of the educators happened to drop in and see "The Mountaineer's Honor." A picture that will shock any sensitive or nervous person. Result: educator does not approve of moving pictures for young people. A father of some boys who were good for three times a week happened to see the picture, and has forbidden his children to go to moving pictures. Now, why did the Motion Picture Patents Company endorse the Censor Board and now turn out such pictures after the educated and refined classes are commencing to be good patrons of pictures? Such pictures as "The Lie" turned out by Edison, full of sensation and action, have created nothing but favorable comment. Cowboy scenes and Wild West pictures, with a few Indians and pioneers being shot down, have not lost patronage because of the change, action and scenery; the shooting is humorous instead of revolting, on account of the acting being so bad. But when a talented company of actors like the Biograph produce tragedies and murders you see a distinct shock go through the audience and the percentage is small that like such a picture. It seems to please the foreign and morbid element, and they are loud in praise, but the silent audience are the real critics and are greatly in the majority as patrons. It seems to me that he film manufacturers ought to cater to the majority and let outsiders cater to the lower element, or the minority. If one reads the public right, the loudest clamor comes from the minority and maybe the manufacturer is catering to clamor. I think very few successful exhibitors are clamoring for murders and shocking tragedies, as patronage has increased since such pictures have reduced in number. W. C.

THE COST OF VAUDEVILLE.

The question of vaudeville in the electric theater will not down. It is to-day in a most acute stage and continues to baffle the exhibitor's mind and to deplete the exhibitor's pocket. There are ills and woes aplenty for the exhibitors and some of them are incurable. The vaudeville nuisance, however, though, to be sure, a very serious affliction, is our able and it is the purpose of these lines, based on personal experience and observation, to point out the symptoms and suggest remedies for the disease.

The money paid within the last two years by exhibitors to so-called vaudeville artists runs into hundreds of thousands of dollars. It may safely be claimed that out of this vast amount of money—vast in proportion to the business done—less than 10 per cent. represents a profit to the exhibitor; 90 per cent. came into the pockets of the "artists" and their aiders and abettors, the "vaudeville agencies," directly out of the profits of the exhibitors. As a profit destroyer the vaudeville evil has few equals and positively no superior. In the greatest number of cases the exhibitor, who runs vaudeville, pays out whatever he takes in at the box office to the vaudevillians, being nothing more or less than a convenient channel through which the nickels and the dimes are conveyed to the "artist" and his agent. This may be glorious, it may be charitable, it may be philanthropic, but it is not profitable. As one exhibitor has put it to the writer, "There's no nourishment in it." The percentage of electric theaters able to give their patrons good or at least tolerable vaudeville is so small as to be negligible. Only where an excellent location combines with a large seating capacity is there any possibility of running good pictures and satisfactory vaudeville at a cost of five or even ten cents. The fact that the five-cent houses on Market street, in Philadelphia, have discontinued this vaudeville and that the "combination" houses have raised the price of admission to ten cents is practical proof of the correctness of my assertion.

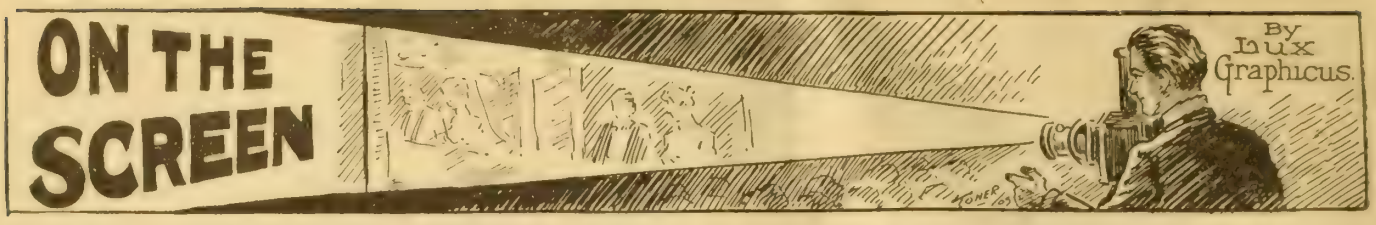
If the exhibitors will pause to consider the origin of this kind of vaudeville, the means and methods by which it is kept alive, its utter failure to maintain even a fair degree of quality and the inherent causes of this failure, they will be better able to resist with unswerving firmness all offers from vaudeville agents and their "artists."

When the vaudeville craze struck the electric theaters the supply of good or passable vaudeville was utterly insufficient to meet the demand. Some shrewd vaudeville agents then eking out a very scant livelihood, supplying but a few good clients, perceived in this growing demand for cheap vaudeville a golden opportunity and they set to work to supply this demand in most unscrupulous fashion. Whether such vaudeville would damage and eventually ruin the exhibitor made no difference to them. They proposed to make hay while the sun shone. In an incredibly short time these agencies increased in number and activity and soon deluged the exhibitor with offers of "refined" and "high-class" and "unique" and "popular" vaudeville. The exhibitors were tempted and many fell and to-day they are suffering from the evil, which, without their support, never had attained its present proportions. Severe as is the strain on the exhibitors in large cities, it is a good deal worse in the country districts. I have known exhibitors in small towns, from 5,000 to 20,000 inhabitants, to pay $50 to $75 a week to "artists" who would not be tolerated in legitimate vaudeville at any price. What I have seen and heard in this line surpasses belief and I hesitate to commit it to paper. I recall the case of a man doing a "character sketch" in some of the mining towns in Eastern Pennsylvania and getting $35 a week for it. He could neither sing nor dance, but he came on the stage, gave a disgusting imitation of a drunken man, fell several times on the floor, tried to sing "My Wife Has Gone to the Country," and made his exit. I saw a fat boy of eleven and his sister of fifteen "sing" a duet in costume, neither of them had any musical training nor any voice, and as to their acting, I have seen children playing in the street act very much better. The exhibitor paid to these people, for three days, $35 and their board. I endured another "male" act, on the whole the most stupid act I ever saw. I was puzzled to know what the man called his act or what he himself thought it was. At the risk of hurting his professional pride, I asked him at the end of his act what he had been doing. He replied: "Oh, just a silly kid act." For this he extracted $30 in good money from the exhibitor. He had been getting $10 per week in a very subordinate capacity with a burlesque, or as he called it a "burlecue" show, when a vaudeville agent captured him for the moving picture field. I must add to this crop of anthropoid or scarcely human vaudeville, the baby nuisance. The agencies are ever on the lookout for babies, mostly girls from four to fourteen years old. If these babies are half-way presentable and look fairly decent in a costume it matters little whether they can sing or dance or act. They are put on "circuits" and reap as high as $50 a week. Of course it would be unreasonable to blame the babies, but the law of the land, everywhere jealous of the rights of the young and incompetent, ought to get after their stout mammas and the unscrupulous vaudeville agent. We will next have babies acting from the cradle.

The people, even in the smaller towns and remoter regions, are disgusted with this sort of vaudeville. A decent and tolerable act is too rare to affect the average, which is either low, vulgar or stupid. It rests entirely with the exhibitors to abate this nuisance. I know of many who have learned their lesson and who have barred "vaudeville" with a crowbar. The evil, however, is far from being extinct. If these lines will help to infuse a little moral courage into the exhibitor and make him come to the rescue of his own pocketbook, their object has been fully gained. If one exhibitor does away with this anthropoid sort of entertainment he may rest assured that the competitor will follow suit, generally much sooner than one would expect.

ECLAIR FILMS.

The well-known productions of this Paris concern, which have hitherto been handled in this country by various concerns, will in future be issued from their own branch office in this city. This is the first of the European manufacturers to adopt this course after the recent investigating visit of their representatives, and we wish all due success to the Messrs. Eclair for their enterprise and commend them on the sensible solution of the difficulties of dealing through agents. We understand that other European manufacturers will follow suit.



Mr. Melies has earned my respect. I was one of those who, for old sake's sake, was glad to welcome his re-entry into the moving picture field. As I said on this page a few weeks ago, I made the acquaintance of Melies work in London some ten years since, and being somewhat of a sentimentalist, as well as a respecter of established institutions, it pleased me to see the name of Melies amongst the lists of American film makers.

* * *

But I was never amongst those who, as soon as his pictures were shown on the screen in New York City, handed them out indiscriminate praise. On the contrary, I saw the promise of better things to come. I saw productions rather below the level of the Independent quality in respect of photographic technique. I saw stories and acting by no means so complete and finished as the public to-day are demanding. In other words, the Melies pictures, though having the renown of an old name, were not up to association standard.

* * *

Melies has been prompt to recognize that the photographic qualities of his work were not so good as they ought to be, and he has made public announcement of the fact. He is "putting his house in order" and making such preparations as will enable him to turn out high-class pictures—high-class, that is to say, from the point of view of technical photography. Therefore, writing for myself, Melies has my intense respect, because of his frank recognition of inferiority of quality, and his determination to raise that quality to the requisite standard—a standard set by his fellow associated manufacturers, who, at the present time, are turning out extremely beautiful photographs.

* * *

It will probably only be a matter of weeks, or it may be two or three months, before Mr. Melies is producing photographs to his satisfaction and the satisfaction of his public. Meanwhile, I would like to say that the example he has set is an excellent one. I would commend it to the notice of many people on the Independent side of things who are trying to make photographs. You cannot for the life of you persuade them to do so. These people seem unable or unwilling to take the judgment of either experts or the general public. They do not know, they will not allow, in their blindness, that anybody else knows. They are invincibly stupid.

* * *

These are the very people, dear brethren in the Lord, who jeer at anybody who like himself goes to the trouble of pointing out the main essentials to success in the making of moving pictures. Those essentials were included in a series of articles in this publication last year called "The Modern Way in Moving Picture Making"—a series of articles which has been extensively reproduced, both with and without acknowledgment, in other publications; the first series of the kind ever written and published, whatever their merits or defects may be.

* * *

Yet the severest critics of those articles are to be found amongst those who are setting up as authorities on the practical making of moving pictures and who have not yet demonstrated their ability to turn out a passable print. Such "critics" as Strechymans and his kidney can be ignored. These people are mere space-fillers—mere penny-a-liners who handle the moving picture simply from the point of view of the cub reporter. Their ignorance is excusable, for they are not concerned, and never have been concerned, with either the practical or the scientific end of things.

* * *

No such excuse attaches to a number of people who have broken into the moving picture making game this last year, and who are wasting their money, because they are too proud to learn from those who make it their business to teach the fundamentals of moving picture making. I shall never forget one of these gentlemen who was the first to deride my writings on the subject. He got into serious difficuitles at the lens end of matters and yet he was glad to come to me and secretly ask me to explain just precisely what the function of a lens was in the taking of a moving picture. Yet another man I know who has distributed thousands and thousands of circulars eulogising his own ability as a maker of moving pictures, is indebted to me personally for all of the data and direct personal instruction in the making of the pictures he is advertising. Yet this man, if you please, recently turned round on me and said I knew nothing of his business.

* * *

Most interesting of all, however, is the gentleman who called upon me personally, and having, something like Hector Jedediah the other day, inflicted himself upon me for a number of hours, was glad at the end of it all to accept my counsel, and I hope has profited by it. If I had as many dollars as people I have taught to make good photographs, I should be buying some of the land whereon to erect that Fifth avenue mansion I mean to have one of these days.

* * *

The moral of this week's "sermon on the screen" is especially addressed to the Independent manufacturers of moving picture films. Let them frankly profit by the excellent example set by Melies, who comes right out and says "my pictures not being good enough for the public, I am going to stop sending them out until I have got up to the requisite standard of quality." This little moral is applicable to the fourteeen or fifteen Independent manufacturers of moving picture films, not one of whom yet can fairly be said to have reached the Biograph standard of quality; simply because, as I know from actual observation, they are not going about the work in the Biograph way, that is, by the scientific way. I beg pardon of Hector Jedediah and people of his kidney for talking science, or, in other words, for talking exact knowledge. They cannot be expected to understand what this means, for, in their work as mere space-fillers, exactitude of knowledge is not called for. They are not even required to know the difference between a negative and a positive. The moving picture film is just to them a mere integer in the amusement game, just as is a Walter De Freece, an Eva Tanguay, or any other excellent person who supplies the theatrical paper with the opportunity of making copy. So that, Hector Jedediah, in his abyssmal ignorance, is, after all, to be excused, if not pitied.

* * *

It stands to the credit of The Moving Picture World that it was the first publication in this country to call attention to the fact that the production of a sucessful moving picture film can only be accomplished by the application of scientific principles: or, in other words, exact knowledge. It is not a question of rule of thumb or trial and error; the picture must be made according to certain fixed definite formulæ; that is to say, after the play or whatever it is has been put on the stage and the crank of the moving picture camera is turned for the taking of the photographs, it is only the application of rigid scientific methods which will produce a good negative and positive. If Hector Jedediah and his ink-slinging associates will grasp this fundamental fact and turn to The Moving Picture World for the year 1909 and read what I have written on the subject, there is hope that they may yet learn something about the theory and practice of moving picture making.

DEERFIELD, MASS., IN MOVING PICTURE FILM.

Edison Company to Picture Colonial Massacres.

Through the efforts of Herbert F. Streeter, manager of the Bijou Theater, of Greenfield, Mass., the two great tragedies of Deerfield—the attack on the town by the French and Indians, in 1703, and the massacre at Bloody Brook, in 1675—will be portrayed in moving pictures some time this year. Manager Streeter has for some time been in correspondence with the Edison Company and has secured the concern's promise to send a representative there within a week or two to secure the necessary material. The matter has also engaged the attention and interest of George Sheldon, the historian of the town, who has promised to collaborate in the work in every way possible. The scenes will be staged at the company's studio in New York, but all out-door views will be given natural settings to correspond as nearly as possible to those of the original events. The burning of the town, which occurred in the Winter, will probably be in pictures within a few weeks in order to take advantage of the snow. The Bloody Brook massacre, which occurred in Summer, must await the Spring foliage.

Special Meeting of N. I. M. P. A.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The executive committee of the National Independent Moving Picture Alliance held a meeting at the Imperial Hotel, New York City, December 21, 1909. The action of the committee at its previous meeting was unanimously approved. The charter of incorporation under the laws of the State of Illinois was accepted, and the adoption of all by-laws and regulations in taking over the National Independent Moving Picture Alliance. The manufacturers' projecting machines were dropped from the membership of the Alliance. It was decided at this meeting that all delinquent exchange members, manufacturers and importers who were members, who have not paid up their dues in the Alliance before December 31, will be dropped from membership. It was also decided at this meeting that the Independent manufacturers be notified to attend the adjourned meeting at the Imperial Hotel, on December 21, and that the executive committee and the Independent manufacturers take some action in regard to the output of the Independent manufacturers. After some discussion, it was fully decided by the Independent manufacturers who are members of the Alliance and the executive committee, that on and after January 1, 1910, all rules and regulations governing manufacturing, importing and exchange members of the Alliance would be strictly lived up to. The resignation of the secretary was tendered at this joint meeting and, after some discussion, it was finally decided that the resignation of the secretary could not be received at this meeting, as there was much work to be done to perfect the organization. Finally the resignation of the secretary was withdrawn. It was decided at this meeting that a uniform selling price should be made for film. This price was set at eleven cents per foot ,less 10 per cent. dscount; on condition, however, that the purchaser return an old reel of film to the manufacturer from whom he purchased the new. It was also agreed at this meeting that no film should be sold at a lower price, until the subject was at least thirty days old. The following release days were allotted to the various manufacturers and importers:

Monday—"Imp," 1 reel; International Projecting and Producing Company, 4 reels.

Tuesday—Powers, 1 reel; Bison, 1 reel.

Wednesday—Columbia, 1 reel; New York Motion Picture Company, 1 reel; Ambrosio, 1 reel; Actophone Company, 1 reel.

Thursday—Centaur, 1 reel; Exclusive, 1 reel of American product; Great Northern, 1 reel.

Friday—Bison, 1 reel; Pantograph, 1 reel.

Saturday—Great Northern, 1 reel; Phoenix, 1 reel.

Sunday—New York Motion Picture Company, 1 reel; Itala, 1 reel.

It is with pleasure that I report that the Alliance is in a prosperous condition, and that members, both manufacturers and exchanges, are living up to the spirit of the by-laws and constitution.

WM. H. SWANSON, Secretary.

ELABORATE NEW MOVING PICTURE THEATER IN THE SOUTH.

The Princess Amusement Company, of Louisville, Ky., composed of the following: Irvin Simon, president and manager, Louisville, Ky.; O. T. Crawford, vice-president, St. Louis, Mo.; W. A. Kinney, secretary and treasurer, Louisville, Ky., now owning and controlling the Casino Theater, Princess Theater, Dreamland Theater, Columbia Theater, all in Louisville, as well as a circuit of houses in that territory, have just closed a deal with the Whallen Bros., of Louisville, whereby they are to build the finest moving picture theater in the South, same to cost $35,000, seating 700, and to be built of concrete and steel, with upholstered chairs, etc.; front to be of marble and glass, concrete floor, and, in fact, to be complete in every detail. Mr. Simon, the president and manager, is the pioneer picture show exhibitor in the South, having opened the first picture show south of Chicago six years ago, and the progress of this line of business can best be shown by anyone that remembers the first one opened by him visiting the Casino (now running); he would be thoroughly convinced that this branch of the amusement business is only in its infancy, and has come to stay. At any rate, the members of the Princess Amusement Company certainly have confidence in the moving picture show, as they have just signed a ten-year lease for the new house now being built.

THE "IMPS" HAVE A JOLLIFICATION.

At the invitation of T. D. Cochrane, the general manager of the Independent Moving Pictures Company, manufacturers of the "Imp" films, the employees of that concern met at the Cafe Boulevard on Christmas Eve and spent a jolly time together. L. J. Rubinstein, who had been elected toastmaster, sprung a genuine surprise on Mr. Cochrane by presenting him with a handsome silver-handled umbrella as a token of the appreciation of his subordinates. Mr. Cochrane feelingly replied and spoke on the necessity of the spirit of good-fellowship existing among all the members of any company if that company was to be successful, and he believed in having the employees consider him as a "pal" instead of the august, austere manager. "Bill" Ranous told some of his reminiscences of moving picture making. "Silent" Harry Solter told in his peculiar way how glad he was to be there, and "Doc" Willard also waxed eloquent under the influence of the wine and cigars. The health of their absent host, Carl Laemmle, was toasted in a spirit that showed the good feeling among the members of the "Imp" company extended even above the general manager.

MR. T. D. COCHRANE

With the mention of this little love feast it is opportune to drag into the limelight a little more the man who is responsible for the phenomenal strides made by this new manufacturing company. T. D. Cochrane entered the moving picture business a few months ago with no previous knowledge of the business. A newspaper and commercial training, a level head and untiring energy, fitted him for the organization of a film producing company. Within a short time he marshalled his company and procured temporary quarters, where in the intervals of overseeing the production of several films a week, he designed the layout of a complete studio and plant in a large building in the upper West Side of New York City. This plant is now almost completed and will be in full swing in another week. There is not, to our knowledge, in the whole history of film making a similar case where a company has been organized and made such great strides in such a short space of time. The good team work of every employee was no small help toward success, but if the autobiography of the "Imp" is ever written by another besides Cochrane himself, and credit is given to whom credit is due, we will learn something more of the man whose hard work, long hours, and indomitable energy is very largely responsible for the present position of the Independent Moving Pictures Company.

"In a Hempen Bag" (Biograph).—An interesting picture of a barely averted tragedy. A baby is exchanged for a cat in a bag and a deaf gardener, believing he has the cat, starts for the river where puss was to be drowned. The complications result in some lively acting before the film ends. To add to the nerve-racking effects of the picture, two boys with rifles want a shot at the baby. All these exciting features add to the interest with which the picture is viewed and a sigh of relief rises from the audience when the frenzied mother rushes up and seizes the baby.

"The Test" (Biograph).—Another interesting episode in the Wright family. Harry writes Bessie that he looks at her picture constantly, but she knows better, because he left it at home. But fortunately for him he discovers his loss and sends for one his mother has, and so works out his salvation satisfactorily. The subject is handled very humorously and develops much fun as it runs. It is, perhaps, one of the most amusing pictures the Biograph people have yet offered.

"Romance of the Rocky Coast" (Lubin).—A strongly dramatic film, representing a young woman married to a man twice her age. The husband commits a murder, of which the young wife knows, but she keeps silent until a former sweetheart is accused of the crime. After a fierce struggle between duty and love, every fluctuation of which is graphically depicted in her countenance, love conquers and she tells the truth. The dramatic features of this picture are strong, and the company develops them in a way which graphically interprets the thought of the author. The photographic and pictorial qualities of the film are both of high quality.

"The Indian" (Selig).—A strongly dramatic picture, breathing the rugged, semi-savage spirit of the plains, the Indians and the cowboys. There is a fight with Indians, resulting in several deaths, protection by a friendly Indian, and toward the last a battle on horseback with bowie knives, between the friendly Indian and a rough, unreasonable cowboy. The white man falls dead, and the Indian dies soon afterward. The strength of the picture lies in its dramatic situations and its graphic representation of the wild, unrestrained life of the open plains. Like others of Selig's Western dramas, it is lifelike, and suggestive in its general effects. Photographically the picture is clear and the acting is convincing.

"To Save Her Soul" (Biograph).—A picture which might easily be made a sermon without much change. It purports to give the experience of a beautiful girl in the country who is offered an attractive opportunity by a noted vaudeville manager. Her lover, the curate, follows her after learning of her success and arrives in time to find her at a banquet tendered by some young swells in her honor. The dramatic scene when he draws his revolver to shoot her to save her soul is startling in its vividness and causes a chill to strike one. But it likewise arouses her from her false dreams and they are next seen kneeling at the little altar of the church back home. This is a picture of the possibilities of the fast life of a city which may, or may not be always true. Sometimes the allusions to it are overdrawn, though perhaps that is no fault, since it might often be the means of preventing some moths from being attracted by the flame. The dramatic qualities of this film will depend upon the point of view of the one who sees it. If one believes the story, or believes that it represents real possibilities, then it will appeal with a strong dramatic impression; but if one does not believe those stories, then it will not appeal. But at least it will always be interesting and the situations will attract by the power with which they are developed. The acting and photography are both up to the Biograph standard, indicating that the play has had careful attention in its preparation.

"A Bad Bargain" (Pathe).—A farce which will raise a hearty laugh in all audiences. The difficulties of the individual who drives a bad bargain will appeal with irresistible force to everyone who sees the complications. The picture is characterized as a scream, but perhaps that is extravagant praise. It is funny and will keep the audience in good humor throughout. No manager could reasonably ask more.

"Marvelous Garlands" (Pathe).—One of those magic pictures from the Pathe studio which make such marvelous and beautiful changes, one thing dissolving into another with such a degree of smoothness that one cannot see where the changes begin and end. The work on a film of this character must be of great precision and the coloring must be done with consummate care. It is one of the triumphs of motion picture art to be able to accomplish such beautiful things. These magic pictures are always attractive and are watched with a greater interest perhaps than almost any other variety of pictures which can be shown. Such pictures are none too plentiful and the addition of another successful one to the list should be hailed with pleasure by lovers of motion pictures.

"The New Chief" (Lubin).—A comedy which represents the boys fixing up to show the chief what wonderful things they do in the institution of which complaint has been made. A tramp is mistaken for the new chief and gets all the attention intended for the chief. The chief is mistaken for a tramp and gets what was intended for that unfortunate individual. The combinations are funny and bring about sufficient complicated situations to keep the audience laughing most of the time. It has the Lubin quality for fun, which is, in some respects, the best of them all.

"The Persistent Poet" (Lubin).—Here is a picture which represents a poet so persistent with his productions that he is taken by the police for his determination to read his poems. But even then he does not cease. On the contrary, he continues and when the film closes he is shown still insisting that the people near hear his poems.

"Buried Alive" (Selig).—A mining picture supposed to represent that section of the country in the forties. There is an attempt to steal gold, fake love making on the part of a wily miner who wants to secure possession of the rich claim of one miner who has a pretty daughter, a Chinaman who is variously abused, but turns up at the right time and holds a miscreant at bay with an axe until help arrives, an explosion which throws down huge piles of rock, closing the mouth of a mine and entombing the miners inside, their rescue and various other characteristic scenes which help to make the story interesting. The picture is very exciting and holds the audience from beginning to end. It is remarkable because it permits a Chinaman to play a decent role. The picture is worked out with careful attention to details and the photographic quality is quite satisfactory.

"The Cardboard Baby" (Kalem).—A modern fairy story that will please the little people, and is the first in the series of releases which are to be provided especially for the children. Perhaps some little folks will get a valuable lesson from Elsie's experience, but probably the fairy story will interest them most, and the company that worked out this story deserves congratulations. The conception of vivifying a cardboard baby is odd enough to attract attention, and the suprising adventures serve to keep up the interest throughout the film. The company has advanced in its photography, too, a feature which deserves the heartiest commendation. A lively picture like this is certain to attract much favorable attention and a long and successful run is predicted for this release.

"The Birth of Jesus" (Pathe).—A beautifully colored picture, following closely the story as given in the Bible. It is unnecessary to go over the story in detail. Everybody knows it. And at this season when the thoughts of everyone are directed toward the story, and what it means, it is all the more useless to repeat it. Perhaps it might be said that the patron of motion pictures who has missed this has missed an extraordinarily attractive film. The picture itself is good. That is certain at the beginning, but what it represents and the impressions it creates serve to make it appear better. It brings vividly before one the great central thought upon which the Christian religion, the most vital moral and ethical force in human history, is founded. Perhaps these impressions influence those who see the picture more than the picture itself, but even if they do they at least assist in creating a wondrously attractive and satisfying illusion, thereby adding to the effect of the film upon the audience. Perhaps technically the picture is no better than very many other Pathe releases; it would, indeed, be difficult to improve upon some of them, but the character of the story and what it means to each individual is so subtly impressed upon one's consciousness that the film itself seems to be better than some which have gone before, partaking of the character of the narrative in developing this impression. This picture would be very valuable in Sunday school work, and those institutions could use it very effectively in connection with the new year's lessons.

"Agriculture in Hungary" (Pathe).—One of this firm's attractive industrial releases, breathing the very spirit of rural life. The magnificent stretches of wheat, the peasants at work, the operation of threshing and all features which go to make country life picturesque and practical are clearly represented. While the film is entertaining it is also educational and will give a good idea of the appearance of the agricultural districts of Hungary.

"The Christian Martyrs" (Selig).—A strongly dramatic picture dealing with events in Roman times, when it was almost a death warrant to be known as a Christian. The story is based upon the love of a noble Roman citizen for a Christian slave girl, and the jealousy of a Roman woman, an empress, who has the girl given to the lions. All this is worked out in accordance with the best information obtainable of the times and what occurred while they were in progress. The realistic scenery in the arena and the horror of what it means are rather trying, though if one can divorce one's self from the impression that it is real it can be looked upon merely as a picture, and as such is marvelous. The fidelity with which it has been worked out and that indefinable something which cannot be described, but can be felt, is sufficient to cause one to stop and think what it might have meant to be a Christian in those days. As a Christmas picture this has merit because it graphically represents the contrast after the passage of 2,000 years.

"The Good Doctor" (Pathe).—A pretty love story, which introduces the novelty of a lover actually chased up a chimney by the flames and smoke from the fireplace. Aside from this the film carried nothing especially new, and scarcely needs extended description or criticism. It may be said, however, that technically the picture is well worth while and the work is done with careful attention to working out the details.

"The Happy Widower" (Pathe).—A bit of comedy which represents an unfortunate widower haunted by a ghost of his former wife, who pitches him headlong to the ground whenever he undertakes to make love to another woman. He finds that he must obey his first wife's will and renounce all claim to her fortune, otherwise he will not be permitted by her ghost to marry again.

"The Greek Slave's Passion" (Gaumont).—A story of slavery and the love of a female slave for her master and owner, which is finally discovered and reciprocated. The suggestiveness of the picture is the most prominent feature, causing one to imagine a great many things which perhaps had no place in the original conception of the film. The technical work is highly satisfactory, and some of the scenes are attractive. The picture is a bit novel and perhaps for that reason deserves more than ordinary commendation. It is recommended to the lovers of motion pictures who want to see something a bit out of the ordinary.

"The Heart of a Cowboy" (Essanay).—A dashing cowboy story with all the spirit the Essanay people put into a play developed and brought into effective play. The knave wins the girl, but she discovers the man's character in time to save the man who has made a noble sacrifice for her sake from lynching, and the two thieves get what they deserve. There is much of the true Western snap and go in this film, which is worked out with attention to details which makes it seem realistic in some scenes. The photography is clear, with good tone quality, and the scenery is picturesque and apparently as accurate as it could well be made.

"Blissville, the Beautiful" (Lubin).—An experience with the enthusiastic agent of a suburban property, which, while it may be exaggerated, will appeal to a good many persons who have been duped as close to the real thing. The little comedy is laughable, and the escape of the young couple on a handcar, leaving the voluble agent still talking, is a lively ending for an amusing and somewhat sarcastic picture.

"In Little Italy" (Biograph).—A good study, illustrating the tenacity of purpose which is such an important component of average Sicilian character. There is plenty of stiletto work, some shooting and a dogged persistence in trailing which would do credit to a Sherlock Holmes. The story is a simple one of love and jealousy, with the peculiar characteristics of the people represented carefully worked out. As one watches the pictures, noting the work of the separate actors, it seems like one of the most consistent films the Biograph Company has ever put out. Costuming and surroundings are faithfully reproduced, with details introduced which add materially to its attractiveness. It is an example of making a somewhat repulsive subject interesting, and, as such, reflects credit on the producers; but judging from the comments we have heard, the subject itself and the graphic portrayal is a bit too repellant for select audiences. In most Biograph pictures there is a good moral or an episode of real life that is made interesting and instructive, but we cannot see any reason for portraying such sentiments as are expressed "In Little Italy."

"A Clever Sleuth" (Gaumont).—A comedy in which a species of travesty upon so-called sleuthing is enacted. When the police fail to locate a thief the detective accomplishes it through discovering a cigar butt of very rank smell. The picture possesses no particular feature, but is not unpleasant and will amuse an audience without arousing any remarkable degree of interest.

"Hush Money" (Gaumont).—A story of how an ingenious thief succeeded in securing sums of money from unsuspecting people. Fortunately he is detected and hurried away to prison. The first part of the picture might have the effect of inciting some weakminded person to undertake the same thing; but the last part is sufficiently emphatic in showing what happens to all such individuals.

"The Power of the Press" (Vitagraph).—A splendid picture from the Vitagraph studio representing how a clever newspaper man succeeded in breaking up a corrupt political gang, won the love of the ringleader's daughter, who saved him from lynching, and ending happily in a reunion which demonstrates the oft-repeated fact that true love doesn't have an especially smooth pathway. The film is well staged and reproduced, and the actors perform their various parts with success. Several of the scenes are particularly good, and show touches of art that can only come by long study and practice of the art of picture making. When incidents of daily life can be thus cleverly and profitably portrayed it shows that there is an inexhaustible supply of subjects for the adept producer.

"Tobacco Mania" (Edison).—While this film is received with laughter, one may well wonder whether it is advisable to picture a mania of any kind. Insanity, no matter what its cause or its source, is scarcely a proper subject for a motion picture, particularly if the film is a comedy. And the tobacco tremens here represented is a species of insanity; and while dramatically no fault can be found and technically the film is up to the required standard, some doubt exists respecting the advisability of presenting such a subject.

"The Fallen Idol" (Edison).—Even matinee idols are human, and the comedy in this one consists in the disillusionment of the girl who had worshipped him at a distance, but found to her sorrow when employed in his home that he was anything but what he appeared to be. As a clever bit of acting, and as a suggestion of a good method of curing matinee idolators this film is a success, while the comedy is sufficiently emphatic to obscure in some degree the rebuke it really administers.

"The Cap of Fortune" (Edison).—A pretty fairy story, representing a man's reward for assisting an old woman who proved to be a fairy in disguise, and who presented him a magic cap that would always keep money in his pocket. He loses it, which affords opportunity for some clever work, and finally it is returned by the children. It is a pretty film, sufficiently interesting to hold atention, yet possessing no features of greatness.

"The Outcast's Christmas" (Great Northern).—A film suitable for the season, representing the touch of kindness at the hands of a little child for a poor, wandering outcast. Dramatically strong and powerfully suggestive, this film, pathetic in its appeal to humanity, deserves a wide circulation. While it is peculiarly adapted for the Christmas season, its lesson would prove equally effective at any season, and it surely must do much good wherever it is shown.

"The Deceiver" (Centaur Film Company).—A picture of Western life, comprising gamblers and other types, lovemaking, marriage, a jealous deceiver who succeeds in causing trouble between husband and wife, but whose designs are frustrated, and a reconciliation is brought about by a little girl, who looks as though she might have dropped from the skies especially for the purpose. While the film is full of action and is strong in its main features, the child wins the sympathy of the audience and as she kneels after bringing her father and mother together the scene actually brought tears to the eyes of many. The photography could be improved in places, but the excellence of the acting in a degree compensates for whatever loss may exist in this direction.

"Contest for a Handkerchief" (Pathe).—A bit of comedy which illustrates the importance of the possession of a pocket handkerchief at critical junctures. It is said in the old rhyme that a horse shoe nail once caused the loss of a kingdom. In this picture the absence of a pocket handkerchief as a lover was on the point of sneezing caused the loss of what was of more importance to him than a kingdom, even, a girl. The mixups are funny and the absurdity of the situations causes a great deal of amusement.

"The Love Token" (Pathe).—While a love story is always interesting, particularly where a poor lover is persecuted by a wealthy one, this picture will attract more by its picturesque scenery and its clear photography than by the story it tells. The picture was all made in the open air, and is a marvel of photography, showing clearly the possibilities of the motion picture camera when handled by an expert.

"From the Fighting Top of a Battleship in Action" (Urban).—This picture will make the audience take notice. While, of course, it is classed under the head of scenic, still it has much dramatic attractiveness. It affords a good representation of what can be seen when one is elevated above the contest in a battleship action, and graphically illustrates the appearance of a battle of that type. The photography is wonderfully good when the conditions under which the negatives were made are clearly understood. Any audience will get many thrills while watching this picture.

"The Winning Punch," an "Imp" film, departs from the usual thing, in that it contains a double climax. There is the happy termination of a little love episode and there is a real enough boxing match between two prize-fighters. The "Imp" stock company furnished the clever actors in the story part and two professional pugilists were engaged for the heavy work. A college chap, who is the champion of his college with the gloves, is in love with a girl who is also the victim of the attentions of a French count who is after her money. The girl's father likes the college chap, but thinks he is good-for-nothing, and tells him that if he can prove that he can earn $1,000 inside a week he will be accepted as a son-in-law. The opportunity presents itself when the manager of a fighting bout gets a message that one of the principals cannot appear, and the college fellow takes his place and wins the $1,000 and the girl. As a subject it is well handled; the fighting is fast and furious, and everything appears real except a painted scene which unfortunately detracts from the effect of an otherwise meritorious picture.

SELIG ACTIVITIES.

Harry Gordon, for many years the head of the firm of Gordon & Bennett, producers of "The Holy City," "Royal Slane" and various other productions, succeeds Thomas Quill as special press representative and advertising agent for the Selig Polyscope Company, Inc., with offices at 45-49 Randolph street, Chicago.

* * *

The following well-known producers are under contract with the Selig Polyscope Company, in Chicago: Francis Boggs, Otis Turner, Lorin J. Howard, Frank Beal, and Frank Baum, the "Wizard of Oz" man, together with the original M. B. Curtis in special films of all Mr. Curtis' plays, including "Samuel of Posen."

* * *

Tom Nash, one of the chiefs of staff of the Selig Polyscope Company, made a hurried trip to Los Angeles last week. There are rumors that his gun was loaded for big game—well, Tom has that reputation and we can expect some announcements upon his return.

* * *

Wm. N. Selig, having returned from Europe much enthused over the popularity of the Selig films in the continental cities, has only been spurred on to even greater ambitions and will soon announce some picture subjects that will revolutionize the film industry of this country.

EDISON MANUFACTURING COMPANY NOTES.

The Edison Manufacturing Company recently dispatched a camera operator upon a trip to Jamaica, Hayti and through the greater part of South America, which will take several months. It is expected that he will bring back some film of exceeding interest, showing the various cities and towns, the inhabitants, the peculiarities and modes of living, different tropical fruits and vegetables, the principal industries and scenes of historical and geographical interest. In taking pictures of different lands, this country has so far been somewhat backward, but the announced plans of the Edison Company may be taken to indicate that they intend from now on to make this a part of their regular operation. The Edison Company is displaying commendable foresight in planning along these lines, as unquestionably the scope of motion pictures in the future will comprehend the educational field more so than it has in the past. Some of the negatives are due to arrive in the near future, and it is expected that they will be of very unusual excellence, the tropical countries offering such exceptional and abundant opportunities to the skillful photographer. Due notice will be given by the company as soon as they are in a position to make a definite announcement as to release dates of any of these subjects.

* * *

The Edison Manufacturing Company is beginning to receive flattering comments on the improvement in the photographic quality of their films of late, not only from professional critics, exchanges and exhibitors, but from the public generally. One of their recent releases that came in for much favorable criticism was "The Keeper of the Light," released December 3. This film was pronounced generally to be one of the best examples of splendid photographic clarity that has been placed on the market in many weeks. A Chicago exhibitor, George J. Gilmore, who pays a higher price for service than any exhibitor in that city, with one exception, said of this film: "'The Keeper of the Light,' an Edison release of December 3, is in matter of subject, photography, steadiness of the picture, accurate perforation and general qualities, by far the best picture of its kind I have ever seen. Its realism is such as to command the admiration of the most exacting audience."

* * *

Edison Company Photographs Actual Bear Hunt for Their Films.

The expense to which moving picture men will go in order to obtain new subjects for their films is shown by the release which the Edison Company announces for January 11. The film portrays an actual bear hunt which took place on the Big Muddy, about twenty miles from Marble, Col., in the Rocky Mountains. The idea of photographing the bear hunt originated with Frank Dickens, the famous mountain scout and pathfinder, who is a Coloradoan and who believes in advertising his State. Thinking that a moving picture of a bear hunt in the mountains of that region would bring that particular section of Colorado into prominence, he got into communication with the Edison people, who eagerly grasped the opportunity, although at first of the opinion that it would be difficult to get such a photograph. In the picture that was secured there is not the slightest departure from absolutely natural conditions, nor is there any attempted acting. An actual bear hunt is reproduced just as it occurred from beginning to end. The start of the hunting party is shown, and its journey through the indescribably beautiful scenery of Colorado, through gorges and over mountains, penetrating forests and following mountain trails where safety lies only in the surefooted horses; and all this in the very heart of the Rockies, with the snowcapped peaks showing in the distance. The conditions under which this picture was taken were perfect from a photographic standpoint, and the beauties of the scenery, as well as every detail of the hunt, are shown so vividly as to leave naught to be desired. The operation was laborious, expensive and not without danger, but the Edison Company feels well repaid in having secured a picture so full of interest and absolutely novel.

VITAGRAPH NOTES.

The date for the third reel in the "Life of Moses" series has now been fixed for January 25, the two closing reels to follow in February, so that all five will be in the hands of the exchanges before Lent. The Vitagraph Company is expecting great results from this series, as there are numerous ways in which it can be used by exhibitors to their advantage, especially during Lent. In large houses the entire five reels may be run in one day, preferably Sundays, or they can be run on successive days, one each day. By advertising the series it is thought that largely increased business can be attracted to the houses so employing them. It has been also suggested that the series will be found available for exhibition in churches.

* * *

During the present month of January the program of releases by the Vitagraph Company shows the largest number of big feature subjects ever issued by this company in the same period of time. It is one of the indications of the constant progress being made by this enterprising company.

* * *

The Vitagraph Company is now issuing its own lithograph posters, and as they are of special designs, differing in appearance from the posters of other firms, they will undoubtedly be welcomed by exhibitors.

* * *

"The Twelfth Night," the magnificent Shakespearean film announced for January 25, will not be issued until some time in February, the date being advanced to make room for the third reel of Moses.

* * *

Vitagraph employees are looking forward with lively anticipation to the dinner, dance and entertainment which the company tenders them Saturday night, January 8.

* * *

Every Vitagraph employee received a fat turkey for Christmas, and a group photograph was taken showing the event.

Special Lectures on Notable Films.

LA GRANDE BRETECHE.

Pathe Film of Art. Released December 12th.

W. STEPHEN BUSH.

After darkening the house this brief and general explanation of the film may be offered with advantage:

La Grande Breteche is the name of a castle in the beautiful and historic French province, Vendome, and made famous by the celebrated French story-teller, Honore de Balzac. It is now nothing but a mass of ruins and weeds, but at the time in which the story is laid, it was noted for its wonderful flowers and gardens, a fact, which in the running of the film, will be observed by you with pleasure.

As soon as this preamble is finished and the moment the title is flashed on the screen, the following lecture may be found useful:

Scene I.—The first picture takes us back to the time of the great Napoleon. In the war which he had waged against Spain among the many captives was a noble prisoner, Count Ferredia. An adjutant from Napoleon's military staff has come to the Vendome and is now calling at the office of the sub-prefect, announcing the coming of the Spanish Count. The latter, a perfect type of the young Spanish grandee, enters and the adjutant hands the order concerning the prisoner of war to the assistant in charge of the office. (Order appears on the screen.) The assistant reads the order which commands him to exact his parole from the Spaniard and obeys by asking the latter for it. Slowly, proudly the parole is given, the prisoner is politely dismissed and leaves, while the adjutant continues his report to the assistant sub-prefect.

Scene II.—A scene in front of the splendid gardens of the Grand Breteche, where the people gather evenings to play and promenade. The Spanish Count is in the throng, and presently observes with unfeigned admiration a strikingly handsome woman promenading with her maid. She is the wife of the sub-prefect, accompanied by her maid. She has lost the fragrant white rose she carried and gallantly the Count picks the precious flower from the ground and with a graceful bow hands it to the wife, who regarding the prisoner with ill-concealed favor, bids him with her eyes rather than her words to keep the flower. The adjutant and the assistant pass at this moment and meet the sub-prefect himself, Count Merrett, the husband of the handsome woman. All this has been quickly observed by Ferredia, who asks the assistant for an introduction and is thereupon introduced both to the prefect and his wife.

Scene III.—In the gardens of La Grand Breteche the Spanish prisoner and Countess Merret are sowing the dragon seed of sin at many a secret meeting, guarded by the faithful Rosalie. It was well to have her on the watch, for she has time to give the lovers warning, the Spaniard disappears with the maid through a rare path in the shrubbery, not a moment too soon, for it is evident that beneath the husband's formal politeness there lurks suspicion. He finds it strange to see the wife in the gathering darkness busy with needlework and when she, still hoping for another glimpse of her lover, hesitates to come in, he forces her with scant ceremony to come with him.

Scene IV.—Two masons from the village have been ordered to do some work about the castle and have come for further instructions as to where to begin. (Short pause.) Count de Merrett, more suspicious than ever of his wife's fidelity, now seeks to test it. He pretends to go away on a journey and the Countess falls unsuspectingly into the trap. When the clumsy, stupid masons have at last been gotten rid of, the wife sends her maid with a message to Count Ferredia asking him to come to Grande Breteche at once. (Message appears on the screen.)

Scene V.—The message has been delivered, the maid signals to Ferredia hiding in the bushes and at the very same moment appears in a different part well able to watch all the Count Merrett. The latter observes with bitter rage how the Spaniard is admitted into the house, cautiously walks over the lawn observed only by the clownish masons, who little realize what tragic part they will soon be called upon to play.

Scene VI.—The maid brings the happy lover into her mistress' room, he fervently kisses her hand, but is uneasy at the presence of the maid, who, however, is presently dismissed from the room. Their cup of happiness seems full, she, gently restraining his ardor, takes his mantle and hat and hides it in the closet next to her room and then returns to her lover. He sees a small crucifix on her bosom and she, to show him her love, takes it from her neck and gives it to him. He in turn bethinks himself of an ancient crucifix of silver and ebony and offers it to her, but in the impatience of his affection lays it on the table to devote himself to his new found love.

Scene VII.—Faithful Rosalie is guarding her mistress' door, an evil office and an useless one as the event will show.

Scene VIII.—The lovers have drunk their fill of the cup of sweet venom, the lover draws the trembling hands of his mistress from her glowing face, turns the key and still lingers.

Scene IX.—Rosalie still on guard is found and pushed aside by the enraged husband, now sure of his prey and trembling in his eargerness for revenge. (Short pause.)

Scene X.—The knocking at the door strikes terror into the guilty lovers—they start and tremble and in their confusion they retain enough presence of mind to hide the Count Ferredia in the closet

Scene XI.—A moment later the furious husband bursts into the room. No one there but the wife. He turns here and there, the wife is pale but self-possessed, he starts for the closet, she bars the way, the husabnd is in doubt as to his next step, when his eyes fall upon the crucifix on the table. "Who is in the closet?" he cries. "Speak." "No one." "No one? Then swear to it now on this crucifix." "I swear." Scarcely have the words dropped from the woman's faltering lips, when the husband summons the maid and orders her to bring the masons into the room at once. "I will show you," he says to the wife, "how much I trust in your words." The masons come and are ordered by the Count to wall up the closet and do it at once and in his presence.

Scene XII.—The ill-starred prisoner is in an agony of suspense—he only can fear and suspect, when the blows from the masons' tools rouse his worst fears. Are they digging his grave in which he must die?

Scene XIII.—Still the husband watches the work with feverish attention, the maid announces a visitor. He keeps his eyes on the work—at last he rises. Hope for one brief moment flames up in the Countess' breast—"Here, take this, money, gold, jewels and more later, break a pane in the door. Be quick about it. Quick." One of the masons does as he is bidden and the Count peers out, the terror of death in his eyes—the sub-prefect returns, summons the masons back to their work.

Scene XIV.—And now the dim light of the closet has turned to darkness and in this darkness of death the prisoner gropes about, every moment making it clearer to him that he is to die within the narrow walls.

Scene XV.—The work of the masons is complete, they have gone. Never for a moment does the remorseless husband change his cold, formal politeness and bows to go.

Scene XVI.—Scarcely has he gone, when the wife seizes a pick to free the lover.

Scene XVII.—But the husband suspected this. He runs back, seizes the wife, crying out: "Madam is ill, she must to bed and it is my duty as her husband to stay right here with her." Suiting the action to the word he has his slippers and his house cloak brought into the room and makes himself ready for a long stay. She rises on her couch, begging the husband to believe her and go and he tells her he believes her and that's why he stays.

Scene XVIII.—Count Ferredia realizes that his end has come and dies with a last look at the fatal crucifix.

Scene XIX.—The doctor, called to attend the wife, after a brief examination, pronounces her speedy dissolution very probable and, after a word of sympathy to the husband, leaves.

Scene XX.—In her dying moments, quite forgetful of the presence of the stern husband, with the precious token before her eyes, the wretched wife strives and struggles with a last effort to rise and, gathering all her feeble strength together, seeks with faltering steps the wall of death and gently, with the last remnant of her life, strikes the cross of silver and ebony against the cruel stones—a glance at the husband, still unbending, and she falls over—dead.

Scene XXI.—And separated from her but by an inch or more of stone lies stark in death the partner of her guilt.

THE BIRTH OF JESUS.

Released by Pathe Freres December 24th.

Scene I.

When in the fulness of time God had decreed to redeem mankind, He chose as the instrument of salvation a spotless Virgin, Mary, dwelling in the little village of Nazareth in Galilee. There at eventide Mary returns from the fountain, where she has drawn water, and seeking the seclusion of her chamber, she bends her knees in prayer to the Lord, when presently there appears unto her a messenger from the throne of the Almighty and addresses her in these words of sweet and tender promise: "Hail thou that art highly favored. the Lord is with thee, blessed art thou among women, thou shalt conceive and bear a child, which shall be called Jesus. He shall be a King in Israel and of His Kingdom there shall be no end." The archangel having delivered his message, Mary arose and exclaimed: "Behold the handmaid of the Lord, be it done unto me according to Thy word."

Scene II.

Bethlehem! A name of magic sound. The city is thronged with people and soldiers, for a decree has fone forth from Rome, then the mistress of the civilized world, that all the people of Palestine shall be counted and taxed. Mary and Joseph belonging to the tribe of David, have left their home in Nazareth and after passing through Galilee and Samaria at last arrive in the city of their royal ancestor David. The journey has been long and hard and as Mary feels that her hour is drawing nigh, Joseph looks about for a shelter in the night. He applies to one of the inns, but alas, every inn in Bethlehem is crowded to overflowing and they are turned away, when in their distress a little child comes to their rescue and directs them to a stable, now forever famous, just beyond the walls of Bethlehem.

Scene III.

Hallowed and gracious were the days that heralded the coming of our Lord. Signs and wonders were seen in many parts of the world and in the eastern sky, near Bethelehem, shone forth a wonderful star. (Here interrupt the lecture and render a suitable song, such as "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night," until the title for appears on the screen, when you resume the lecture as follows:)

Scene IV

Close in the wake of the shepherds, now on their way to the stable, likewise following the star, came the magi, wise men from the East. They, too, in their far distant lands have seen this great, strange star, telling them of the birth of a new King of Israel. They are now on their way toward Jerusalem to ask Herod and his scribes and priests, where, according to ancient prophecy, the new King of Israel was most likely to be born. And they bear in their train many precious gifts to lay at the feet of the new king—gold, frankincense and myrrh.

Scene V.

Every door in Bethlehem being barred against them, Joseph and Mary at last find refuge in this most humble of all abodes, and here, in poverty, in a manger, even on a bundle of straw, there is born into the world the new King of Israel, Jesus Christ. (Sing here one verse from the hymn, "Come All Ye Faithful" and then resume lecture as follows:) And as you see the golden glitter of the star shine again above the crib, so likewise does the star shine again unto the wise men from the East. They have been to Jerusalem and there they have learnt from Herod and his priests and scribes that the new King of Israel was most likely to be born in Bethlehem in Judaea, as foretold by the Prophet Micah. And the star has again appeared before them and they are now on their way to the stable. (Here end the lecture and bring the picture to a close with one or two more verses, sung or played, from the hymn, "Come All Ye Faithful.")

THE WEEK'S RELEASES OF LICENSED FILM.

Monday, January 3.

BIOGRAPH—The Rocky Road (Dramatic).
LUBIN—Their Chaperoned Honeymoon (Comedy).
SELIG—The Smuggler's Game (Dramatic).
PATHE—The Marriage of the Cook (Comedy).
PATHE—A Victim of Circumstances (Dramatic).

Tuesday, January 4.

EDISON—Pardners (Dramatic).
GAUMONT—The Wreck at Sea (Dramatic).
GAUMONT—The Avenging Dentist (Comedy).
VITAGRAPH—The Life of Moses (Biblical).

Wednesday, January 5.

URBAN—Tragedy at the Mill (Dramatic).
URBAN—Shanghai of To-day (Scenic).
ESSANAY—The Adventuress (Dramatic).
ESSANAY—How Hubby Made Good (Comedy).
PATHE—The King's Command (Comedy).
PATHE—The Overzealous Domestic (Farce).

Thursday, January 6.

BIOGRAPH—The Dancing Girl of Butte (Dramatic).
LUBIN—The Tattooed Arm (Dramatic).
SELIG—The Highlander's Defiance (Dramatic).
SELIG—Alderman Krautz's Picnic (Comedy).

Friday, January 7.

EDISON—The Engineer's Romance (Dramatic).
EDISON—Ashes (Sentimental).
KALEM—The Deacon's Daughter (Dramatic).
PATHE—Modern Highwayman (Dramatic).
PATHE—An English Boxing Bout (Sports).

Saturday, January 8.

ESSANAY—His Only Child (Dramatic).
GAUMONT—On the Bank of the River (Dramatic).
GAUMONT—A Seat in the Balcony (Comedy).
PATHE—The Last Look (Dramatic).
PATHE—His Opponent's Card (Comedy).
VITAGRAPH—Richelieu, or the Conspiracy (Dramatic).

THE POWERS COMPANY.

A trade paper headed a misleading paragraph last week with the words, "Has Powers Got Enough?" Evidently the writer did not know the genial "Pat" Powers, or else he wilfully tried to convey a damaging impression of the company of which "Pat" is the head. The paragraph says that P. A. Powers has "got his fill of the manufacturing business and gone home to Buffalo." It is true that Mr. Powers went to Buffalo, where he has other interests that occasionally require his attention, but so far from him being "tired" of the manufacturing business, he says that he is only commencing. Extensive alterations and improvements are being made in the Powers Company factory at Wakefield, and this week a contract was let to Mr. Willard, of the Cooper Hewitt Company, for an equipment of Cooper Hewitt lights that will run into thousands of dollars. The bustle and activity and new blood around the Powers place indicate anything but a tired feeling.

THE "IMP" FILMS.

The Laemmle Company Establishes a Record.

"The best picture we have ever had," said Mr. Rosenquest, of the Fourteenth Street Theater, when we inquired of him as to the reception of the December 27 release of the Independent Moving Pictures Company of America, otherwise the "Imp." This is called "The Awakening of Bess," and so popular was it amongst the Independent theaters that within a few hours of its release we were unable to see a copy of it in New York City. So that, without warning, we sought the opinion of Mr. Rosenquest, who was good enough to tell us, though he was full of business and his house was crowded in the afternoon. He gave us this opinion voluntarily and we pass it on to our readers with regard to the Laemmle picture.

We have all along taken a very great interest in the progress of the "Imp" pictures, because the Independent Moving Pictures Company of America, of which Carl Laemmle is president, have to our mind established a record. Though only working for a few months, they have got down to the production of the moving picture in its best technical aspects. They are making good photographs, which many of their Independent competitors are not. Hence, in this respect they earn the approbation of The Moving Picture World, which always puts in the forefront of its criticisms the photographic qualities of the pictures. It is really wonderful to reflect that a year ago there was no such company as the "Imp" in existence, and that now the company is a strong factor in the American moving picture field.

THE EDISON COMPANY WILL RELEASE "IN THE NICK OF TIME," A THRILLING MELODRAMA, ON JANUARY 18.

On January 18 the Edison Company will release a novel and thrilling melodrama, entitled "In the Nick of Time," in the production of which they were ably assisted by Company "K," 22d Regiment, Corps of Engineers, N. G. S. N. Y. The story of the film deals with the defalcation of a bank cashier, and the action includes a run on the bank, an exciting auto ride, the blowing up of a bridge with dynamite, the building of a pontoon bridge by the engineering corps, over which structure an auto dashes to safety and the relief of the banks, a cross-road fight between the occupants of the auto and the guilty cashier, with the inevitable happy ending of all melodramas. For dash and go and genuine dramatic situations, this picture is bound to appeal to all lovers of romance and spirited action. There is not a moment in the film when the action lags, and the introduction of a martial atmosphere makes the film more interesting. The novelty of witnessing the erection of a pontoon bridge will appeal to any audience and will insure great popularity for this film. The Edison Company feels greatly indebted to the 22d Regiment, Company "K," Engineer Corps for their able assistance in carrying out the plot and workings of this melodrama.

THE LUX FILMS.

This week the celebrated Lux films, which have long had the greatest success in Europe, take their place amongst regular American releases. This fact in itself is of sufficient importance to deserve particular mention in our pages. For the Lux film is the second brand of European films to find its way on this market in the hands of its own agency. We pointed out in the Moving Picture World weeks ago that such a development of the business was likely to take place and we have information that the example set by the Lux people is likely to be followed in other directions.

Meanwhile we think that the productions of this house should be accorded a welcome to this market on two grounds: the first of them purely commercial—because intertrade and intercommerce are recognized factors in the business of the world, and secondly on the grounds of quality. There is no occasion to doubt that Lux films, writing generally, are of a high order of merit both dramatically and photographically. The American public has always shown a wide appreciation of the best products of the old world, as a glance around the industries of the country will show. American products, as we know, are popular in the outer markets of the world and purely on reciprocative terms those who give should also be prepared to receive. This is the truest state of mind for your modern man of business to be guided by.

The Lux films show the French school of moving picture making in those aspects which are popular more or less with moving picture audiences in this country. They are dramatic, as is only to be expected when the work of the French producer is concerned; equally so they touch a high level of excellence indeed in respect of their photographic qualities. Their general success will of course depend upon the suitability of each individual subject for American audiences—a test, of course, by which all imported subjects stand or fall. Last week we had the pleasure of examining two pictures which are down for early release, and if these are to be accepted as fair samples of the kind of pictures which the Lux people are to release, then these subjects are tolerably sure to make a strong bid for success on their merits. One of them is entitled "How the Dog Saved the Flag," and it shows an episode in French history of last century in which a wonderfully trained dog becomes the savior of the flag in time of warfare. The cleverness of this animal, who is virtually the hero of the piece, is sufficient to stamp this particular film with the mark of success. We have observed over and over again that "doggy" subjects are always popular with an audience. Yet another subject was called "The Rivals." This is of an entirely fanciful, not to say fantastic, nature. It shows how a man gets rid of the hump on his back by the aid of the fairies and so wins the embraces of a charming girl. The setting of this picture is decidedly beautiful. The story is clear, the acting good, and the photography of a very high class. The impression made on our minds by these films is this: that Lux films on their merits have a strong chance of succeeding with American audiences. It is the determination of Mr. R. Prieur, the American agent, to release as far as possible suitable comedy subjects. In this respect Lux films, we think, will be acceptable to the American moving picture public.

EYE TROUBLES FROM MOVING PICTURES.

[From The Optician.]

The illusion produced by the cinematograph is explained by the persistence of luminous impressions on the retina. The duration of the impression varies according to the intensity of illumination, the frequency of interruption, and various other conditions. Its average value is 2-45 second. In order that the moving scene shall be reproduced in a life-like manner before our eyes, the pictures must move before the lens and follow each other at intervals a little smaller than 2-45 second, so that one impression still remains when its successor arrives, and thus the pictures blend together.

This series of rapid and brief excitations produces, in time, a certain fatigue of the eyes and more or less persistant ocular troubles. A French physician, Dr. Ginestous, has studied these troubles, and given the name of cinematophthalmia to affections of this character. These troubles are, fortunately, not very serious. Dr. Ginestous describes several forms. The first form is essentially temporary, and consists chiefly in lachrymation and photophobia, which compels the patient to close his eyes. The trouble begins with the passage of the first picture across the screen. In most cases the closure of the eyes for a few seconds is all that is required. The spectator appears to accustom himself, and adapt his retina to the new task which is imposed upon it.

In a second and more lasting form of the malady this retinal adaptation is impossible. As soon as the eyes are reopened, the symptoms reappear. Some watering of the eyes and slight redness of the conjunctiva persist after leaving the hall, but in most cases the symptoms rapidly disappear. In a third and still more prolonged type, a true conjunctivitis persists for two, three or four days. It is usually accompanied with redness, burning and itching, lachrymation and photophobia, but without agglutination of the eyelids. Finally, in rare cases, there are troubles of accommodation, accompanied by headache and great difficulty in reading, writing and seeing near objects.

Ophthalmias of this sort are not usually alarming, and the most obstinate cases yield to very mild treatment. The best remedies are rest and eye-washes containing cocain and adrenalin. The principal causes of the difficulty must be sought in the operation of the cinematograph.

Defects in sharpness of the pictures or in focussing the projecting apparatus make the seeing of moving pictures difficult and painful. The negatives should be as sharp as possible, for the corresponding positives are magnified to nearly a hundred thousand times their area, and the defects of sharpness are magnified in the same proportion.

Charpentier has proved that the persistence of impressions on the retina depends upon the size of the retinal image, and that the persistence is less for near than for distant objects. Consequently, in a moving picture hall, the seats nearest the screen are not the best.

Fatigue is caused by luminous impressions, which are too strong or too weak. According to Charpentier's researches, the persistence of luminous impressions diminishes as the illumination increases and conversely. This law is confirmed by the phenomena of moving pictures. Bright and strongly illuminated images are more fatiguing than others, and most fatiguing of all is the abrupt transition from black to white or from dark to bright.

In order to prolong the spectacle, some operators move their films with the minimum speed physiologically necessary to produce the persistence of the retinal images. Hence the eye is compelled to make an effort to retain and superpose the successive pictures, and this effort necessarily causes retinal fatigue. The wearing of blue glasses has been recommended in order to reduce these inconveniences.

MOVING PICTURES TAKEN IN AEROPLANE.

Moving pictures were taken in an aeroplane near Paris last week. Latham, the well-known-aviator, made a seven-minute flight, carrying a cinematograph and an operator, who worked the camera throughout the trip, which was made at the height of eighty feet. The lens was pointed earthward. The operator noticed no vibration and says the pictures will be as good as any.

Make This Your New Year's Resolution

"GET A

Hallberg"

Automatic Electric Economizer for electric installation, and save two-thirds on your current bill and besides improve your light about 100 per cent. on the sheet.

You have undoubtedly noticed that the "HALLBERG" Economizer which was the first reliable current saver on the market, was advertised over two years ago, and I at that time made the same claims which I am now making, and that the price of the "HALLBERG" Economizer has been the same during the past year.

Do you know what this means? I will tell you—It means that quality has been considered first, and that I have not reduced the material put into the Economizer since it was first made—In other words, it is today just as heavy and good as it ever was, and notwithstanding the fact that my competitors are selling would-be current savers at all the way from one-third to one-half less than I have to get for the "HALLBERG", I am putting in more of my Economizers than all of the rest put together.

There are reasons! ! ! This letter is one—

Archbald, Pa., Oct. 21, 1909

Mr. J. H. Hallberg,

Dear Sir:-

Since installing the "HALLBERG" Automatic Electric Economizer, the illuminatlon is 100 per cent. brighter on the screen. Last evening an exhibitor from an neighboring town visited our theatre, and almost his first question was "where do you get all the light?" He is using an economy coil of another make, but confessed that we are getting far better results with your machine.

I regard the purchase of your Economizer as the very best investment we have made, as our patrons continually comment upon the brightness of our pictures compared with those shown in other places.

Yours very truly.

LYRIC AMUSEMENT CO.

Richard F. Foote, Manager

Let me have your order now—I make an allowance in trade for your old rheostat on current saver.

My stock of moving picture machines and supplies is complete.

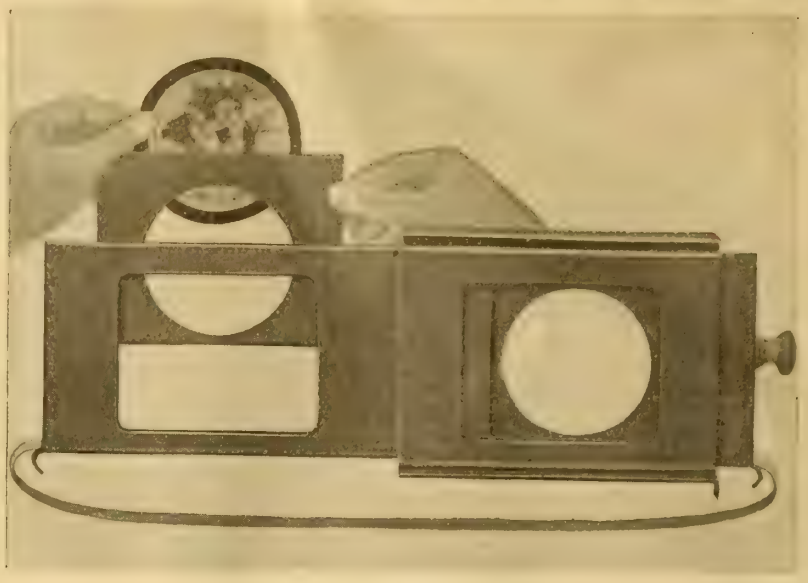
Write for Free Booklet 14-W.

J. H. HALLBERG, 28 Greenwich Ave., N. Y.

PUZZLE PICTURE SLIDES

FOR

Moving Picture Exhibitors



PATENTS PENDING

Show Puzzle Pictures in your theatre by using our

Roto Combination Song Slide and Puzzle Picture Carrier

The Puzzle Picture Slides are handsomely colored, and your patrons can solve the puzzles in the same way as if they were handling a newspaper and turning it around.

Roto Puzzle Pictures in Colors

Are a real novelty. Your audience will like them. Children will talk about them. They will bring you business because like moving pictures they interest as well as amuse.

Two sets of new slides issued each week. Six Puzzle Picture Slides and one Announcement Slide in each set. Price $5.00 per set of seven slides. Price of Roto Combination Carrier $1.00.

Write for circular giving full description

ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES

Puzzle Picture Slides and Roto Combination Carriers can be had from all Film and Song Slide Exchanges or from the Manufacturers.

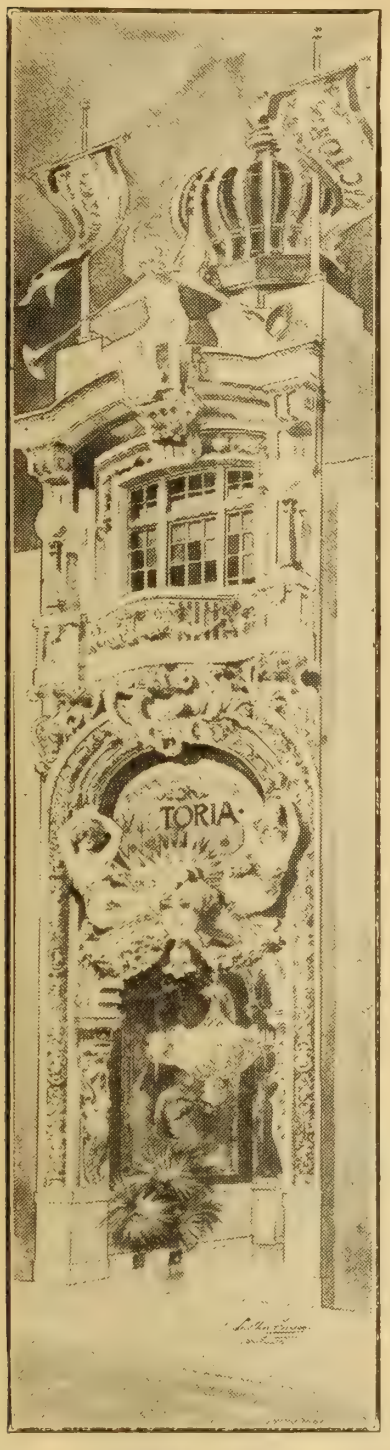
National Slide Company

53 State Street

Boston Mass.

PUZZLE PICTURE SLIDE

Among the Exhibitors.



PEARCE & SCHECK'S VICTORIA THEATER, BALTIMORE, MD.

From an artistic standpoint the Victoria Theater is one of the handsomest theaters in the country. There are two floors—main floor and balcony—filled with comfortable chairs and eight beautifully decorated boxes. It is of unusually solid construction and elaborately adorned both inside and out. On the top of the building sits an enormous plaster figure that easily attracts the glance of the passerby. The auditorium and stage are fitted up with many modern conveniences. The decorations of both exterior and interior are handsome, the scheme being terra-cotta and dark green. Much additional beauty is procured by the lavish use of hundreds of electric lights. The house was designed by A. Lowther Forrest, architect. It is very commodious, having a seating capacity of 1,500, and is equipped with an unusually large stage. Mass & Co. were the builders and Henry L. Arntz was the decorator.

Jackson, Tenn.—The Elite Theater here has closed on account of being remodeled.

Buffalo, N. Y.—D. E. Meyers will erect a moving picture theater at 1209 Jefferson street.

Columbus, Ohio.—A new moving picture theater is being erected at 444 South Deeke street by I. Yanko, L. Barbanell and Benjamin Cohn. It will cost about $10,000.

Cassopolis, Ind.—The Osborne Building is being converted into a moving picture theater for Bert Ayres.

Porthmouth, N. H.—The Orpheum Theater, 37 Market street, has again opened its doors and is under new management. The Orpheum was formerly known as the Premier.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A new moving picture theater is being erected at Frankford avenue and Ontario street, which will cost $18,000.

Worcester, Mass.—The Pastime Theater has been sold to Edward Massie by Max Grat.

Norwich, Conn.—A new moving picture theater is being built here.

Manchester, N. H.—A new picture palace has been erected here and will be under the proprietorship of M. Gallagher.

Jersey City, N. J.—The Parmly Memorial Baptist Church, in Grove street, is being converted into a moving picture and vaudeville theater.

Scranton, Pa.—Joseph Stein will erect a new picture theater in the McCarty Building, on Chestnut street.

Morristown, N. J.—The Bijou Moving Picture Theater has been purchased by H. A. & G. E. Babbitt.

Manchester, N. H.—A new moving picture theater is being erected by Roy W. Joselyn.

Hartford, Conn.—Stevens & Jackson, proprietors of the Imperial Theater, have engaged Frank Wheeler to manage it.

Spring Valley, N. Y.—A new moving picture theater has opened in the Comsky Building, corner of Lafayette and Orange streets.

Springfield, Mass.—James J. Mackay and John Summer have bought the moving picture theater that has recently been erected on Elm street, opposite Bartlett street.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Arrangements have been filed for the erection of a new moving picture theater on the north side of East Geramntown avenue for the Leigh Palace Amusement Company.

Newark, N. J.—F. F. Proctor has filed plans for the erection of a new moving picture and vaudeville theater, at 114-116 Market street, which will be one of the finest here. The seating capacity will be about 2,000.

Coatsville, Pa.—George W. Bennatham hns purchased the Dreamland Moving Picture Theater, at Third avenue and Main street, from J. W. Dettra.

St. Paul, Minn.—Jack J. Flynn has been granted a license to run a moving picture show, at 447 Wabash street.

Stafford Springs, Conn.—John Sena has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—The Star Theater is the latest moving picture house opened here.

Centralia, Ill.—The Gem, formerly known as the Casino Theater, on South Locust street, has opened here.

Birmingham, Ala.—A new moving picture theater, The Amuse U, has opened here and it is stated that it is one of the prettiest of picture theaters in this town. It is located at 209 North Nineteenth street

Waukesha, Wis.—The New Olympic Theater is a new picture house, which has been opened on Clinton street.

Asbury Park, N. J.—Joseph Vet is planning for the erection of a new moving picture house, to be erected at Mattison avenue.

Thompson, Conn.—A new moving picture theater is being erected in the St. Jean Hall and will be managed by William L. Brown.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—The Dreamland Moving Picture Theater has changed managers and proprietors. William Le Roy will be the future manager.

Fitchburg, Mass.—W. C. Blythe has leased the Taunton Opera House and will run first-class moving pictures and vaudeville.

Baltimore, Md.—Herman S. Hacker will erect a new moving picture theater, at 1202 Patterson avenue. The seating capacity is 265.

Jamaica, N. Y.—Another moving picture theater is being erected here and will be under the management of Henry W. S. Bangert and Frank X. Bangert. The theater is located at 312 Fulton street.

New York City.—The Reformed German Evangelical Church, located at 141 East Houston street, is being converted into a moving picture theater for the New Houston Street Amusement Company and will cost about $25,000.

Pittsburg, Pa.—A new moving picture theater is being erected at 6212 Franktown avenue for L. Leiberman, which, when finished, will cost $2,500.

Roanoke, Va.—Mr. Ebert is the new manager for the Elite Theater.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—Popp Brothers have been granted a license to erect a moving picture theater, between Mellndy and Liberty, which will cost $3,000 when finished.

Buffalo, N. Y.—D. E. Meyers will build a new moving picture theater at 1200 Jefferson avenue, north of Hampton street.

West Somerville, Mass.—The Day Street Congregational Church has been converted into a moving picture theater.

Newark, N. J.—A new moving picture theater is being erected in the Old Machinery Hall, in Washington street, which will cost $30,000.

Putman, Conn.—A new picture house has been erected in the Labby Building, corner of Pomfret and Canal streets. It will be called the New Park.

New York City.—Penny arcade, on Fourteenth street, to be opened as M. P. theater; amount invested, $55,000.

New York City.—Academy of Music, on Fourteenth street, to be opened, in two or three weeks, as M. P. theater under direction of the Shuberts, renting for $125,000 per annum.

Bushnell, Ill.—The Bushnell Amusement Company is preparing to open a new moving picture theater here.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—Walter Brown is having plans prepared for the erection of a new moving picture theater at 2621 Vince street.

Washington, Ill.—M. Silvermaster is preparing to establish a new moving picture show here.

Portland, Ore.—The Victor Vaudeville Circuit has been incorporated with a capital stock of $5,000. The incorporators are: A. L. Sutton, Geo. W. Ring and M. F. Lorenz.

Kansas City, Mo.—C. H. Carter has purchased the Peerless Moving Picture Theater, at 1224 Grand avenue.

Tower City, Pa.—Solomon Schoffstall and B. J. Yoder are preparing to open a new moving picture theater in Reinerton.

A New Independent Manufacturer

THE GREAT WESTERN FILM COMPANY

1441 Fillmore Street :: :: San Francisco, California

STRICTLY CALIFORNIA STORIES

TWO SUBJECTS ON ONE REEL

Our First Release

"The Two Soldiers"

A Stirring California Military Drama

LENGTH, ABOUT 750 FEET

Our First Real Comedy

"The Devil is Loose"

Get on our mailing list Order Quick

Pottstown, Pa.—The Pastime Theater Company is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Murphysboro, Ill.—The Arc Moving picture Theater, here, was comple ely destroyed by fire.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—Eugene Sweeney is planning to erect a moving picture theater in Hyde Park.

Stillwater, Minn.—Wesley Archer has opened the Gem Moving Picture Theater here.

Trenton, Mo.—Will F. Newlan has purchased the Gem Moving Picture Theater here.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—Fred Schottmiller will erect a new moving picture theater at 2406 Vince street.

New Castle, Wyo.—Gross & Ostrom, of Deadwood, have opened a new moving picture show here.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Bijou Dream Moving Picture Theater, at 1205 Market street, was destroyed by fire.

Chicago, Ill.—The Republic Theater Company has secured a permit for the erection of a new theater at 3918 Lincoln avenue.

St. Louis, Mo.—George Kiefer has purchased a lot, on Towe Grove avenue, as a site for a new moving picture theater.

Mansfield, Ohio.—Fred Lewis is making arrangements to start a new moving picture show here.

Alton, Ill.—Jack Herman has purchased the Nina Moving Picture Theater on West Third street.

Alliance, Neb.—R. R. Ruggles, of Ravenna, is making arrangements to start a moving picture show here.

Glen Cove, N. Y.—A new moving picture theater is being erected here, at the Central Hall. This picture house will be an up-to-date theater and will run all the latest films that the Empire Film Company, of New York, can produce.

Houma, La.—The Bijou Theater, a moving picture and vaudeville resort, has been purchased by Henry Breaux.

Stroudsburg, Pa.—Bert B. Palmer has purchased the Nickelette Theater, from O. F. Kock, and will conduct it as a first-class moving picture theater.

Baltimore, Md.—A new moving picture theater is being erected at the northeast corner of Light and German streets. The persons holding an interest in this theater are A. A. Brager and Robert H. Baum.

New Orleans, La.—H. White is having a new moving picture theater erected here which he will manage.

Niles, Ohio.—Manager Stafford, of the Niles Theater, announces that he will run all of Pathe Freres and Biograph films.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—The Church property, 1929 Elm street, south of Findlay street, is to be turned into a first-class moving picture theater. F. L. Emmert will be the manager and states that it will cost about $5,000 for remodeling and fixing.

Haverhill, Mass.—A new moving picture theater will be erected in Mechanics' Hall under the management of Orlando Sargent.

Canaan, N. H.—The building near the Lebanon depot has been purchased for a moving picture theater.

Laconia, N. H.—Charles H. Bean opened his new moving picture theater, The Pastime, in Hill Block, with the greatest success, and it has been fitted up with the latest opera chairs and is well provided with exits in case of fire. Joe Collins, of Boston, is the song slide singer.

Somerville, Mass.—The West Somerville Congregational Church, on Day street, has been sold and will be used as a moving picture theater.

New York City.—A new moving picture theater has been erected on the west side of Third avenue, north of 174th street, and will be under the management of L. Guttag.

Boston, Mass.—Three moving picture theaters here were closed by the Mayor.

Hartford, Conn.—The Casino, a new moving picture theater, will open in the Stone Block, near the corner of Chestnut street, this week.

Cambridge, Mass.—The Old Union Hall, on Temple street, is being converted into a moving picture and vaudeville theater.

Honesdale, Pa.—Mrs. Ida Hittinger has purchased from Joseph Graziano the moving picture theater, known as the Dreamland, on Main street.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—Fred Schottmiller is erecting a moving picture theater, which will have a seating capacity of 250, at 2406 Vine street.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—A new moving picture theater is being erected for the Popp Brothers on the west side of Main street, between Melindy and Liberty streets. The estimated cost of the structure is $3,000.

Norwich, Conn.—The Academy of Music has been leased to Butler & De Lany, who will operate it as a moving picture theater, and it will be hereafter known as the Happy Hour Theater.

Annapolis, Md.—Cooper & Hunter have opened a new moving picture theater, called the Magnet, on Main street, near Conduit. It has a seating capacity of 300.

Spencer, Mass.—The Park Theater is now being used as a moving picture theater.

New York City.—A new moving picture theater is being erected for P. Benfighi, at 689 Amsterdam avenue.

Baltimore, Md.—Arrangements have been filed for the erection of a new moving picture theater, at 1202 Patterson avenue, by H. Haskerman.

Skowhegan, Me.—The Empire Motion Picture Theater has been sold to Charles F. Ward and Walter Hight.

Paris, Tex.—John Sniverly will open a new moving picture theater in the Clement Building, on South Main street.

Trenton, Mo.—The Gem Theater is under the new management of William F. Newlan.

Paterson, N. J.—A new moving picture theater will be erected, at 293 Main street, by Max Gould and William H. Metz, which will cost $55,000 when the construction is finished.

Long Beach, Cal.—The Amusement Company has erected a moving picture theater at 135 East First street.

New York City.—Charles Knichrihm has leased the property at 864 Langwood avenue for a moving picture theater.

Mahalla, N. C.—A new moving picture show will be opened in the Darby storeroom by George L. Wilson.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—Col. W. S. Butterfield has leased the Jeffries Theater here and will run only first-class moving picture films.

Attleboro, Mass.—P. H. Toby has filed plans for the erection of a new moving picture theater on Richards avenue.

Phoenixville, Pa.—The Phoenixville Theater, on South Main street has changed hands. The Gem Amusement Company will be the proprietors and it will be under the management of J. B. Sturgis.

St. Louis, Mo.—The northeast corner of Vandeventer and Mahtt avenues has been sold, where there will be an erection of a moving picture theater, which will cost the proprietor the sum of $30,000.

Mauch Chunk, Pa.—The Orpheum Moving Picture Theater was closed by the Deputy State Inspector on account of not complying with the laws.

Bay Shore, N. Y.—Max Mittenleiter and M. Tennenberg have leased the Casino Theater, which they will convert into a first-class moving picture opera house.

Manchester, N. H.—The Clemeont Theater, one of the latest of moving picture theaters to open here, was compelled by the Mayor to enlarge their Broadway entrance.

West New Brighton, N. Y.—The New Cosmopolitan Hall, formerly the Union Opera House, has at last opened its doors to the public. Christian Troebner is the present manager.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Work has finished on the Children's Moving Picture Theater, which will be conducted by the Long Beach Parent-Teachers' Federation, on East Fifth street.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—A new moving picture theater is being built at 125 Summer avenue. Frederick Weiss is the proprietor.

Lewiston, Me.—A license to run an amusement house at the Empire Theater, petitioned for by Julius Cahn, was granted by the city authorities.

Winchendon, Mass.—Manager W. A. Wesley, of the Garden Theater, opened his moving picture theater in the National Hall. The hall has been remodeled and an asbestos booth put in to comply with the law.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—The Unique Theater, on Public square, has met with a robbery. Mr. Egelston states that a part of the machine and a large amount of film was stolen.

Lawrence, Mass.—A new moving picture theater has been erected in the new Truell Building, on Essex street, and will be under the management of Samuel Kopelman.

Duluth, Minn.—F. W. Hillier will open a new moving picture theater here.

Blissfield, Mich.—Mr. Edwards is planning to open a new moving picture theater here.

Philadelphia, Pa.—J. Dunlap has secured a permit for the erection of a moving picture theater here, at 2730 Federal street.

Camden, Ark.—S. W. Wilhoit has disposed of his moving picture theater here to Shorty Lewine.

Youngstown, Ohio.—Mr. Welsh is preparing to open a new moving picture theater in the Kroeck's Hall.

Meriden, Conn.—The Crystal Theater, on Colony street, has changed hands. It has been sold by E. J. Herlan, who has successfully conducted it since last Spring, to Pindar & Rudolph.

Lancaster, Wis.—The Grand Moving Picture Theater opened again and is now under the management of Mrs. W. N. Tiffany.

A Drawing Card for Moving Picture Theatres

Louise M. Marion

IN

Illustrated poems, is now booking a series of views on Christmas and Santa Claus; Also other poems at picture theatres, in and out of town.

Terms Reasonable

LOUISE M. MARION

321 West 23rd Street New York City

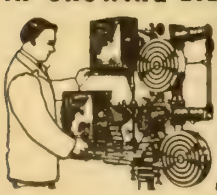
Can furnish Operator and Music for Church and Lyceum Entertainments

Please mention The Moving Picture World when corresponding with advertisers.

BIG MONEY IN SHOWING MOTION PICTURES



but when you need a Machine or supplies write to us. We are Specialists on Machines and Supplies, and we can save you money and increase your profits. C.H.D. writes: "Making a Big Hit, Business increased wonderfully." Astonishing opportunity in any locality for a Man with a little money. Experience not necessary. Easy to start. We tell you how. We sell the MOTIOGRAPH, Powers, Edison and all other Machines and Supplies. We negotiate a first class Film and Song Slide Rental Service. Write for Catalog.

Amusement Supply Co., 833 Ill. Bank Bldg., Chicago

IMP

Two gals are in love with the same fellow. Both of them are pippins. What would you do if you were the fellow in such a case? You'll find the answer in the next Imp film, released January 10th. And you'll also see that Imp films are getting better and better every week and that they'll help pack your theatre. The demand for Imp films is something tremendous. If you want 'em keep dingdonging at your film exchange until you get 'em. If you are not getting 'em, write to us and we'll tell you which exchanges are buying every week. Get what you ask for. Don't take substitutes.

"BY RIGHT OF LOVE"

Independent Moving Picture Co. of America

CARL LAEMMLE, President

111 East 14th Street

New York

STORIES OF THE FILMS

BIOGAPH COMPANY.

THE ROCKY ROAD.—The truth of the expression, "It is a long lane that has no turning," has often been verified, but in this instance the road terminates in a cloud, the darkness of which is impenetrable. The story shows the relentlessness of justice and the cryptic prepollence of Providence. Coincident as the episodes may appear, they are evolved with a convincing consistency rarely found in dramatic stories of this type, making it, on the whole, one of the most heart-stirring and thrilling productions ever made by the Biograph. Ben Cook had been a man of intelligent energy, but meeting with reverses, went the way of so many others, that is, became addicted to drink. Falling lower and lower, we first see him a drunken loafer. In return for his wife's tearful entreaties he gives abuse, and finally desertion; leaving his native town for parts unknown. Landing in a strange village, he seeks and obtains employment in a sawmill, where he resolves to brace up. Meanwhile, his poor wife, learning from her husband's companions of his flight, becomes unbalanced in mind, and taking up her little three-year-old child, starts out in search of him. On she wanders, cold and hungry, meeting a kind-hearted Italian on the way, who compassionately gives her an old shawl to wrap about the child. Further on she falls exhausted beside a haystack. Here the hallucination of hearing her husband's voice calling seizes her and she leaves the child to go in answer to the imagined call. The child is found later by an old farmer, who adopts it. The poor woman staggers on until she falls helpless in the road. She is found by a benevolent couple who take her in and care for her, she performing light housework in return for their kindness. Years later Cook, through his close application to work, has become manager of the mill, and is enjoying the best of fortune. A search for his deserted wife has proved fruitless, hence he assumed her dead. One day while out in his auto, it becomes temporarily disabled, and he rests up at a farm-house, where they are celebrating their daughter's eighteenth birthday. The meeting with the daughter incurs mutual love at first sight. Later they are betrothed and the wedding day set. It is now the day of the wedding and Cook is speeding to the house to meet the wedding party when his machine passes the place where his wife has lived all these years. She recognizes him and dashes after him, but, of course, is far distanced. Continuing, she comes to the house shortly after the party, of which she knows nothing, has left. She asks for a drink, and while waiting sees her husband's picture in a frame on the table. To her queries the maid tells her in detail about the little foundling, the adoption, the birthday party, and now of the wedding, which may at this moment be taking place. It is for her the awakening. She realizes the horror of the situation, and asking the direction to the church dashes madly out, hailing a passing wagon, begs the man to drive in haste to it. The ceremony has just begun when she rushes in. Oh God! What a terrible revelation. She has just strength enough to make the truth clear when she falls into her husband's arms dead. Thus, in a flash he is made to feel the weight of the hand of Divine Justice in the horror and mortification of the situation.

THE DANCING GIRL OF BUTTE.—Some of the most important triumphs in the world's history were attained through an accident, and very often the whole course of one's future is induced by a slight mishap. Such, indeed, was the experience of the hero and heroine of this Biograph subject. Bella is a dancer in a music hall at Butte. She is pretty, light-hearted, and yet possessed of a refined nature that commands a respect not looked for in such surroundings. Strolling through the city park one morning, she steps on an uneven spot in the path and turns her ankle. Her cry of pain brings to her aid Howard Raymond, who assists her to her home. Bella's demure manner and pretty face appeal to Howard, and he realizes it is a case of love at first sight. Bella, herself, is deeply impressed with the young man the accident has caused her to meet. However, she realizes her position and dissipates all serious thoughts on the matter. Howard, who is a newspaper artist and an enthusiast in all respects, tells his fellow artists of his love for the unknown girl. They, being used to his impetuousness, simply smile. On this occasion he is in earnest, and hastening back to the girl's house, he surprises her in her dance hall attire. This she explains by making him believe that she is a member of a traveling dramatic company. Well, it is the old story. The accident was simply a trick of Cupid to bring two hearts together, and they are betrothed. They exchange photographs, and when he shows her picture to his friends they recognize in it the dancing girl. So they go to the girl and ask her to give him up. This she is loath to do, admitting that while she has danced at the hall, the work was detestable. Finding her unwilling to repulse his suit, they tell Howard of her calling, which he does not believe, and knocks one of them down for what he regards an insult. The girl, however, in honesty enters and admit the truth, taking the artist to the place where she works. What a blow to the poor fellow, and he turns from her with a crushed heart. Cut to the quick by his repulsion, she tells him that although she has been forced to earn a living in this fasion, she is through with it all, and while her soul is pure she will leave it. The sincerity of her tone softens the young man, and turning, he takes her in his arms. His friends smile derisively and leave the hall. Two years later the artist's two friends are sitting in the park, when a young couple pass pushing a perambulator containing a baby. One of them exclaims: "Look! Raymond and the dancing girl. Well, I'll be blowed!"

EDISON MFG. CO.

PARDNERS.—It is almost unnecessary to give any description of this film, as it follows closely the widely read story as written by Mr. Beach. For those who are unfamiliar with the narrative it might be well to say that the picture deals with the fidelity and loyalty of Bill Joyce, a rough, rugged character in the mining camps of Alaska, who had formed a partnership with a young tenderfoot of the East, Justus Morrow.

Through the machinations of a magazine writer and photographer, R. Alonzo Struthers, who has misrepresented Morrow's actions in the North, a breach is caused between him and his beautiful wife, Olive Troop Morrow, an actress in the States. Struthers has been entrusted by Morrow with letters to his wife, which Struthers deliberately fails to deliver and, instead, shows a forged photograph to Mrs. Morrow, which is so compromising to her husband that she institutes divorce proceedings. Morrow is heartbroken when, after receiving no mail for a whole year, he finally receives a summons in the divorce suit. The thought of separation from the woman he loves and from his baby boy crushes the heart of the man, who has been sustained throughout his long, weary struggles in the gold-fields by the thought that the wealth for which he was striving would insure his little family a happy future. From this time forward his rugged "pardner" devotes his energies to righting Morrow's wrongs. How he succeeds is unfolded by the picture.

THE ENGINEER'S ROMANCE.—Jim Black, a handsome young locomotive engineer, is in love with Mary Stevens, the pretty telegraph operator at Clay Junction. Mary's father is the section foreman at that point. One morning after her father has left on the handcar with his men to repair some track at a distance, Mary, with her two little sisters, is left in charge of the station. Some rough characters, seeing her isolated position and suspecting that there is money in the safe, determine to rob the place. One of them enters the station and engages Mary in conversation. She mistrusts him because of his suspicious movements and locks the safe. While he is in the station the train dispatcher informs Mary that Jim Black will be at Clay Junction in a few minutes and to order him to proceed immediately to Rockland Siding, ten miles away, for special service. The stranger leaves the station.

When Jim arrives at Clay Junction Mary tells him of her fears. He tries to allay them—looks about for strange men—they have gone. After kissing his sweetheart Jim jumps on the engine and starts for Rockland Siding. The ruffians, seeing that the coast is clear, try the door of the station and find it bolted on the inside, but this does not deter them. They attack the door with a crowbar, the resistance offered serving only to excite their fury. Mary sends a desperate call for help to Rockland Siding, where Jim has just arrived and is about to start out with the passenger train. After sending the message she flees to the upper apartments of the building with the children, bolting each door behind her to impede the progress of the robbers, who, after gaining admittance to the station, are unable to open the safe without the combination. Jim, his fireman and conductor are conversing with the agent at Rockland Siding, when he (the agent) hears the ticker inside the station giving an emergency call. He darts into the office, receives Mary's message, and calls Jim and the conductor into the room. The question is, what is to be done? Jim is in an agony of suspense, when the thought flashes into his mind, "Give me the right of way to Clay Junction." The agent wires desperately to the train dispatcher. The answer comes, giving Engineer Black the right of way.

The rest of the picture shows, alternately, the thrilling adventures of Mary and the children as she tries to baffle the ruffians, and the equally thrilling progress of Jim Black's engine as it bears him and his companions to the rescue.

ASHES.—A millde-aged bachelor in his apartment, or den, lights his pipe and, after looking fondly at a photograph on the mantel, sits smoking in his arm-chair near the open fireplace. As the logs smoulder his fancy wanders to the one love story of his life. The face of his first and last sweetheart looks out of the rising smoke, and the scene dissolves into the incidents of the love story which pass before his mind. As the simple, pretty and pathetic story is unfolded and finally dissolves into the bachelor's den again, the fire dies out and the lonely bachelor stands looking into the ashes, which typify his life's story.

ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.

THE ADVENTURESS.—The story is founded on a real episode, a chapter from the life of a great English army officer. The scene of the story is in a compartment of an English railway train.

The English railway carriage is differently constructed than the more capacious American car. The car is divided into several compartments, the exits through doors on the side, while the conductor or guard collects the tickets from the outside. Travel on English railways is perhaps not so comfortable as on the more elaborate American trains, but the distances are not so long.

The afternoon train, leaving the Great Northern depot in London for Epsom Downs, a famous English race track, is about ready to leave. A fashionably dressed woman, followed by a boy carrying her handbag, enters a compartment in one of the carriages. She makes herself comfortable and begins cutting the leaves of a periodical. A moment later, a gentleman, tall and portly, enters and seats himself in a corner near the door. The guard collects the tickets. The gentleman, who is smoking a cigar, turns to the lady and politely asks her if the cigar smoke is offensive. "Not at all," she answers and enveavors to continue the conversation by asking him to please open the ventilator. He does so, bows and returns to his paper.

The woman, after some difficulty, starts a conversation. He is on his way to Epsom Downs to attend the afternoon's races. He brings out his purse and shows her his racing ticket, at the same time exposing a pretentious roll of banknotes.

The woman sees the money and immediately lays plans to separate him from it. He is dumbfounded when she unceremoniously demands him to hand over the money. "If you don't," she says, "I will call the guard and make it appear that you have attempted to assault me." He laughs indifferently and enraged by his supreme self-confidence, pulls down her hair, tears her waist and running to the door, screams and pounds on it furiously. The gentleamn remains immovable.

The guard enters and finds the woman crouching on the floor, an accusing finger pointed at the gentleman. The guard whistles and a detective enters. The gentleman is questioned. He stoutly denies having touched the woman. The detective points out the woman's torn tresses and generally disheveled appearance. The gentleman, who through the scene, had remained in quiet obliviousness behind his paper and his cigar, takes the weed from his mouth and holds it up for their inspection. The ashes of the half burned cigar have not been disturbed, convincing proof that he could not have left his seat.

The detective nods his satisfaction and turns to the woman. He scrutinizes her face carefully, then draws a photograph from his pocket. "Kate Morrison!" he exclaims, comparing the face with the photograph, "London's most famous confidence woman. Come, the police want you, milady!"

A moment later the woamn is dragged from the compartment and our friend of the cigar flips off the ashes and diffidently returns to his paper.

HOW HUBBY MADE GOOD.—Isn't it provoking when one settles down in one's comfortable arm chair and house slippers, with the evening paper and a good after dinner cigar, to be suddenly called to the office by some belated "country customer"? It is usually a most pressing appointment and wifey is led to believe that millions are involved in the deal.

In this instance the "Boys" at the club call up our friend, Bailey, and tell him his presence is needed to fill a vacant chair at draw-poker. Bailey turns from the 'phone, mutters something about "big deal," "country customer," etc., and hurries out of the house before wifey can register an opinion.

An hour later the 'phone rings and a gentleman's voice inquires if Mr. Bailey is at home. Mrs. Bailey informs the gentleman that her husband is at his office. "But," says the gentleman, "I have just left the office. There is no one there but the janitor."

Mrs. Bailey, bubbling over with indignation, calls the club. The conversation between her and her spouse is a heated one, containing the old time-worn phrases: "wretch, scoundrel," "but, my dear," "back to mother, divorce," etc.

Bailey returns to the boys and tells them that inasmuch as they got him into the trouble they've got to get him out of it. One suggests that two of them disguise as burglars, enter the Bailey house, frighten Mrs. Bailey and let Bailey do the hero stunt, thus winning Mrs. Bailey's admiration. No sooner said than done.

But, in the meantime, a real, legitimate, "second-story man" is on the job. Mrs. Bailey hears him and telephones the police. The burglar hears the 'phone ring, surmises he has been heard and beats a hurried retreat. The police arrive just as the deputation from the club are entering the

Our hero comes on the scene and after a desperate struggle, captures the two thieves just as the police enter. There is no other way out of it but to turn the thieves over to the bluecoats. The clubmen appeal to Bailey, but he is obdurate and they are taken struggling away.

Bailey takes his trembling wife in his arms and she praises him for his bravery.

HIS ONLY CHILD.—Phillip Strong a millionaire railroad magnate, is so thoroughly enwrapped in

Renew Your Films

EXCHANGES!

A clean film is more important to an exhibitor than a recent release. First run spells good condition.

WE REMOVE DIRT AND SCRATCHES

and put a lustre on the film that makes it

BETTER THAN NEW

Put your old film to work at advanced prices by having it renovated.

OLD RELIABLE FILM RENOVATING CO.
134 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
J. S. SPEER, Manager

All kinds of References furnished

NEW YEAR RESOLUTIONS

Resolved:

1. To continue treating our customers in the future as in the past, and thus retain their good-will.
2. To continue making every effort to give the Exhibitor shows that will improve his business and increase his profits.
3. To continue giving better service at lower prices than any other Exchange in the country
4. To continue living up to every promise, and retain the title conferred upon us by our customers; "The Square Dealer."

Write to us for all machine supplies and our special $12 to $15 service, including song slides and banners changed every day

Remember: WE LIVE UP TO EVERY PROMISE

UNION FILM EXCHANGE
23 N. Third Street, Harrisburg, Pa.

Films For Sale 50 new reels of perfect film, extra good condition, to close out, at $18.50.
Second hand Edison machines for sale at a bargain. Parts to fit all machines in stock.
MAYER SILVERMAN, 322 Fulton Bldg., Pittsburg; Pa.

Films I have a system of keeping away from Repeaters. No reels older than one year. This sounds bad but not half as bad as it is to hand you gunc three years old.
I am open and frank and tell you what you get for your money—Try me for a week anyhow. You can't lose.
PURDY'S FILM EXCHANGE
300 EAST 23d STREET, Cor. 2nd Ave., NEW YORK CITY

WILL sell one half interest in film exchange in busines three years for $4,000.00 cash. Those meaning business only—write. Address Giles : M. P. World

BIOGRAPH FILMS

TRADE MARK TRADE MARK

RELEASED JANUARY 3, 1910

The Rocky Road

A Story of Fate's Capriciousness

This Biograph subject probably tells the most powerful story ever depicted in motion pictures. The husband through association becomes addicted to drink, deserts his wife and child and goes to a distant village. The wife learns of his departure from his former companion, and her mind becoming unbalanced, takes up her child to follow.

The husband secures a position in a sawmill and determines to brace up. All trace of his wife and little child is lost to him. Meanwhile, the mother and child become separated and the child is adopted by a prosperous farmer, while the mother receives succor in another section. Some years after the man meets his daughter, and being unknown to him, they are betrothed. The wedding is just about to take place when the mother appears and prevents it.

Length, 990 Feet

RELEASED JANUARY 6, 1910

The Dancing Girl of Butte

Romance of a Western Dance Hall

The Biograph here presents a story of real life, showing how a mere accident may change the course of a life. The girl is forced to earn a living by dancing in a Western hall, and while strolling through the park turns her ankle. Her misfortune brings to her aid aid a young newspaper artist. It is love at first sight. He knows nothing of her occupation, and when his friends reveal to him her calling he is inclined to repulse her. This she takes with resignation, but she makes it clear that while she was forced to do this work, it was repugnant and expresses a determination to leave it all while her soul was pure. So sincere do her words sound that the young man relents and takes her to his heart. Later we find them strolling through the same park the happy parents of a young and hopeful.

Length, 984 Feet

A Full Description of these Subjects will be Found on Another Page

Release days of Biograph Subjects—MONDAY and THURSDAY

Get on Our Mail List and Keep Posted. Write for Our Descriptive Circulars

BIOGRAPH COMPANY
Licensee of the Motion Picture Patents Co.
11 EAST 14th STREET :: NEW YORK
GEORGE KLEINE, Selling Agent for Chicago (52 State St., Chicago, Ill.).

ROLL TICKETS

YOUR SPECIAL TICKET
PRINTED BOTH SIDES
NUMBERING GUARANTEED

50,000	-	$ 6.50
100,000	-	10.00
500,000	-	35.00

Prompt Shipments—Cash with Order—No C. O. D.

THE CARTER PRESS PEABODY MASS.

Special Quotations for Large Quantities

his business that he has little time for his motherless little son, who, consequently develops bad traits, is wilfull and disobedient. Prompted by an abnormal curiosity, and pampered by his father, the youngster causes no end of trouble to the servants.

One evening Strong receives a telegram from the board of directors of the railroad of which he is president that a special meeting will be held in Milwaukee the next morning and that his presence is required. Strong is in his study packing his grip when his son comes into the room to bid him good-bye. Unaware that his son is in the room, Strong removes a revolver from his grip and places it in a lower drawer of a cabinet. The boy has made mental note of the hiding place and when his father bids him an affectionate good-bye he runs for the drawer and is about to remove the revolver when his nurse runs into the room and takes him off to bed.

The next day the youngster slips into the library and procures the weapon. It is accidentally discharged and the little fellow is severely wounded. The excited maid and frantic butler call the doctor and a telegram is immediately dispatched to the father.

Strong is at the directors' meeting when the message arrives. Immediately he orders a special train made ready, and after a record breaking trip he arrives in Chicago, where an automobile whisks him quickly across the city to his home.

The doctor is working over the little one when Strong comes into the room. The boy has passed the critical period and is now peacefully sleeping. The doctor, however, makes it plain that great care will have to be taken to avoid a relapse and says he has arranged for a trained nurse to attend him.

Strong, now assured the boy will recover, returns to his work, oblivious to everything except that which pertains to the great business over which he presides.

Miss Norton, the nurse, is a very pretty little woman with an affectionate disposition and soon wins the love of her charge. Indeed, so attached do they become to each other that when the time draws near for her to leave, she dreads the parting. Strong has been too busy to notice the change that has come over his son, the boy has never expressed a desire to see him, until one day the crisis comes. The boy repulses his father, who has endeavored to take him in his arms, and runs to his nurse. Incensed in his belief that the nurse has estranged his son from him, Strong calls Miss Norton into his study, writes her a check for services rendered and peremptorily discharges her.

When the nurse returns to say good-bye to the little boy he cries bitterly and denounces his father for taking his dear nurse away from him. After a moment the father comes on the scene and the boy pleads with him to let Miss Norton stay. Strong is finally won over.

"I must confess," he says, apologetically, "I have been foolish. I have worked hard, but I have worked for the boy, not for myself. Since his mother died, I—it's been nothing but steel rails and market quotations. The boy needs a mother—I beg your pardon, Miss Norton, I mean—won't you stay with us—make your abode with us? We really need you?"

After a moment she snatches the little fellow to her heart and answers: "Yes."

GAUMONT.
(George Kleine.)

THE WRECK AT SEA.—Mary, the beautiful daughter of an old fisherman, is secretly in love with a poor young sailor. Arthur, a rich farmer's son and heir, sees her and, falling in love with her, asks her father for Mary's hand in marriage.

The old man is attracted by Arthur's riches and gives his consent.

The poor girl goes to break the bad news to her lover, who decides to go to sea and endeavor to forget her. Directly Mary is married to the rich farmer's son, though needless to say it is not a love match as far as she is concerned. Soon after, there is a storm and a shipwreck on the coast.

Among the corpses of the dead brought ashore is that of Mary's poor sailor.

Mary is among those present and recognizes the features at once and is quite overcome with grief. This distresses her young husband so much that he loses his reason.

THE AVENGING DENTIST.—A pair of burglars enter the home of a dentist by way of the parlor window. There they lay their plans. One enters the adjoining room, which is the dentist's office, and engages that gentleman in conversation regarding the condition of his teeth. While this is going on, his confederate proceeds to gather together the valuable portable bric-a-brac in the parlor.

Unfortunately for the arrangements of the two burglars, the dentist's servant discovers their presence and becomes familiar with the whole scheme, without their being aware of it. He quietly informs his master.

The dentist, having secured one of the burglars in his operating chair, proceeds to pull out his teeth. After this, he and his servant capture the other burglar and make him disgorge his ill-gotten plunder.

The pair of thieves are then forced to rearrange the valuables just as they were originally. As soon as they have done this they are allowed to depart, which they do in a most shamefaced manner.

ON THE BANK OF THE RIVER.—Helen and Mynette are two ill-matched sisters who keep house together.

While Mynette industriously cooks, washes and sweeps, Helen lolls in a comfortable chair and twangs a guitar.

This leads to a quarrel, resulting in Helen being turned out of doors to shift for herself. Mynette has no pity for her when she returns to the house after experiencing rude rebuffs and getting very little money for her musical efforts.

Poor Helen faces the cold world once more, but this time she meets Mr. Ellsworth, a wealthy artist, who takes it upon himself to introduce her into society as a musical genius.

Success is now her portion. In the meantime, things have gone badly with Mynette, who, failing to pay her rent, is threatened with eviction by her heartless landlord. Just as the auctioneer arrives to sell her furniture to satisfy her creditors, the now prosperous Miss Helen steps in, pays the landlord and rejoices the heart of Mynette by restoring her home and property to her.

A SEAT IN THE BALCONY.—Percy is a smart young man who, strange to say, has never seen a play.

He hangs around the lobby of a big theater, where a very successful show is being enacted and manages to get hold of a return check from a gentleman, who, having seen the first act, is unexpectedly called away on business. Percy seats himself with much satisfaction in the second row of the balcony in the excellent seat to which his check has entitled him. Now the fun commences. The opening scene of the second act being very comical, Percy rolls in his chair, roaring with laughter and in his exuberance slaps the bald head of an old gentleman in front of him.

Then as the plot thickens and the scenes depicted become melancholic, sentimental Percy weeps and howls, shedding tears of sorrow on the unfortunate bald head in front.

As the story continues, Percy is more and more wrought up and makes things uncomfortable for those below and around him. The "gods" in the gallery join in the general excitement and pelt Percy and his neighbors with peanut shells, paper bags and general refuse. Finally the ushers evict the cause of the uproar and Percy learns a lesson in proper behavior when in a theater.

KALEM MFG. CO.

THE DEACON'S DAUGHTER.—Scene I.—The Minister's Dissatisfied Child Meets Morton, the Stranger. The opening picture shows us the broad side verandah of the parsonage. The old minister has seted himself out in the yard where he can bask in the warmth of the sun. Down at his feet is Ruth, his youngest daughter, a slight, gentle slip of a girl of sixteen. The old minister is helping her with her rhetoric lesson, stopping every moment or two to stroke her head. Along the path from the gate comes Estelle, the minister's elder daughter, a dashing, handsome girl, and with her the curate attached to the parish. The curate is very much in love with Estelle and they are accepted sweethearts, although Estelle is merely attracted by the young curate's handsome face. Now she is annoyed by something and the curate is trying to pacify her. His attention attracted by Estelle's angry voice, the old minister rises as they approach. He inquires what the trouble is. Estelle tells him nothing. With a sigh the curate enters the house. The minister remonstrates with Estelle for her show of temper and as his wife calls him, he leaves the two daughters together. Now Estelle pours out to Ruth her dissatisfaction with the quiet, peaceful life of the parsonage and tells how she longs to go out into the world and become a dancer. Seizing the horrified Ruth by the waist she whirls her around in a mad dance. At this moment there appears coming up the path a tall, gentlemanly man, evidently a stranger to the town. Ruth flees to inform her father. The stranger compliments Estelle upon her dance and is telling her she should be on the stage, when the old minister descends the steps. Morton, the stranger, displays the card of the man he is seeking. The old minister informs him he is going in the wrong direction. At this Estelle volunteers to show the stranger the house. The old minister assents. As they start down the path together the curate comes from the house. The minister tells him of the stranger and exhibits the card. As he goes up the steps Estelle returns from the gate. At sight of the curate her chin goes up in the air and she crosses to the empty bench. The curate stands with a resigned look on his face.

Scene II.—The Villain Winning His Way. The course of the curate's love has not been running smoothly lately. Seated out in the garden he is endeavoring to prepare his sermon. But his mind constantly wanders to Estelle and the stranger. Across the lawn comes Ruth. She seats herself on the hassock near the curate. Gentle little Ruth loves the young curate, although he has never suspected it. She is ever near him ready to do him any little service in her power, now replacing his papers when he brushes them from the table, now giving him a glass of water. Down the path from the house comes Estelle. The curate's eyes light up and he leaps to his feet. She tells him she is going for a walk. And may he accompany her? No, she prefers to go alone. Down towards the gate she goes. The curate looks after her, then returns to his seat. With his chin in his hand he watches her depart, while back of him stands Ruth, her eyes filled with comprehending pity. At their starting place down the lane, Morton is waiting impatiently for Estelle. Ah, here she is. He greets her eagerly and pours compliments into her ear. He attempts to kiss her. Estelle prevents the caress. But she is not adverse to taking the walk with him that he is begging for, so off they stroll together. For an hour they wander through the pine trees. Across their path is the trunk of a young pine the wind has hurled down. Morton invites Estelle to sit. From his pocket he draws a handsome necklace and holds it towards her. At first, instinctively true to the teachings of her father, she refuses it, but Morton insists and clasps it aroung her neck. As he pours protestations into her ear Estelle believes him and gives him the kiss he is pleading for. Now Morton's infatuation for her leaps all bounds. In impassioned words he tells her of his love, begs her to come with him to the city. Clasping her in his arms he crushes her to him. But his vehemence frightens Estelle. Wrenching herself free she flees from him. He stands for a moment, calling her back, then hurries after her.

Scene III.—Estelle Determines to Marry Morton. Back to the parsonage come Morton and Estelle. Morton has been forgiven for his impetuosity, although Estelle refuses to go with him to the city. As he is bidding her good-bye he holds her hand, then tenderly kisses it. This is seen by the curate who is approaching. Upon Morton's departure he remonstrates with Estelle. She answers angrily. He appeals to her in behalf of their engagement. Estelle, now thoroughly enraged, draws the engagement ring from her finger and holds it towards him. The curate gently refuses to take it. But Estelle throws it to the ground. At this moment the old minister comes slowly across the lawn. He greets Estelle fondly and calls her to a seat on the arm of his chair. Happening to glance up, he notices the necklace she is wearing. He asks where she got it. She refuses to tell. The old minister sternly demands an answer to his question. Estelle finally falters Morton's name. At this the old man's face hardens with stern anger. He holds out his hand for the necklace. Estelle, now thoroughly aroused, storms in anger, but finally gives it to her father. He orders her to go to the house. But Estelle, sobbing passionately, throws herself in a chair. The old minister crosses to the curate, who has been a silent, suffering witness to the scene, and begs him to come to the house. As they move away the curate turns in silent love to Estelle, but the old minister leads him on. After they have gone Estelle lifts her head. She is still violently angry. Across her face comes a look of determination. Drawing paper and pen to her she writes to Morton, telling him she will go with him out into the world and become a great dancer. To-night at twelve he must come for her.

Scene IV.—The Elopement. That night at twelve Morton comes cautiously up to the front gate of the parsonage. Glancing about he whistles cautiously. Down the walk comes Estelle carrying her satchel. Morton greets her fondly. Estelle glances back longingly towards the silent house, but Marton picks up her grip and they move silently away. The next morning the old minister is out in the garden before breakfast walking up and down slowly thinking of the scene he had with Estelle, his favorite daughter, the day before, when Ruth comes rushing excitedly from the house. She holds out to her father a note telling him she found it pinned to the pillow in Estelle's room. It is Estelle's farewell note to her father. The old man, with a moan of anguish, sinks into a chair. At this moment the curate comes up and inquires what the trouble is. Ruth hands him the note. He reads it and stands stunned and grief-stricken. As Ruth is consoling her father the wife arrives. To her question of inquiry the old minister points to the note with trembling finger and brokenly bids her read it.

Scene V.—One Year Later—Estelle the Queen of the Midnight Revellers. It is midnight just one years after that night Estelle stole away from the silent, peaceful parsonage. What a contrast is presented. In a suburban cafe where the fastest set amongst the Bohemians of the great city are accustomed to meet for their late revels a champagne party is in progress. Scattered about are numerous overturned and empty bottles. At one of the tables an artist, who genius, before dissipation dragged it down, gave promise of great things is drinking with one of the city's celebrated demi-mondes. Two other habitues of the cafe arrive. Now across the gardenl come Morton and Estelle. Gowned in a long clinging frock Estelle offers a striking picture, but already the story of the life she is leading is beginning to be told in the lines of her face. Boisterous greetings mark their arrival and her health is drunk as the queen of the party. A dance is proposed and to the passionate strains of a wild Hungarian waltz the party whirl about in a delirium of drunken hilarity.

Scene VI.—The Curate Finds His Soul Mate. Back at the parsonage the life of the family has fallen into still more quiet and peaceful routine under the saddening influence of the absence of the

S. R. O.

When you start in the motion picture business you want to get a "Standing Room Only" sign before you open your show, if you start with an

EDISON KINETOSCOPE

The Edison Kinetoscope is the one machine you can depend upon to pack the house to the doors, night after night, to bring back the same crowd constantly and build you up a steady, dependable patronage. The Edison Kinetoscope costs less to operate, demand fewest repairs and is the most durable motion picture machine made.

Write to-day for booklet giving full particulars and copy of the Eidson Kinetogram.

EDISON FILMS

Release of January 4

PARDNERS

Rex Beach's famous story dramatized by the author. A story of human interest whose scenes are laid principally in the Alaskan gold fields. An exceptional film. Photography of the highest order.

No. 6569 Code, VERZANO Approx. Length, 995 feet

Release of January 7

THE ENGINEER'S ROMANCE

Dramatic. A thrilling story whose theme is the defense of a railroad station against burglars by the station agent's pretty daughter, while her engineer lover is coming to her assistance on his engine. Intensely dramatic throughout.

No. 6570 Code, VERZAPFT Approx. Length, 670 feet

ASHES

Sentimental. A lonely bachelor, seated before his fireplace, sees in the ashes the one love affair of his life enacted again. A pretty story, splendidly photographed.

No. 6571 Code, VERZAPFUNG Approx. Length, 610 feet

Release of January 11

BEAR HUNT IN THE ROCKIES (Descriptive)

No. 6572 Code, VERZAUBERT Approx. Length, 975 feet

Release of January 14

A WARRIOR BOLD (Comedy)

No. 6573 Code, VERZEEPEN Approx. Length, 475 feet

THE PARSON'S UMBRELLA (Comedy)

No. 6574 Code, VERZEGELEN Approx. Length, 220 feet

TROOP "B," 15th U. S. CAVALRY, BAREBACK DRILL SQUAD IN THE "MONKEY DRILL" AT FORT MYER, VA. (Descriptive)

No. 6575 Code, VERZWHRBAR Approx. Length, 285 feet

EDISON MANUFACTURING CO.

MAIN OFFICE and FACTORY: 72 LAKESIDE AVE., ORANGE, N. J.

New York Office: 10 Fifth Avenue. Chicago Office: 90 Wabash Ave.

Office for United Kingdom: Edison Works, Victoria Road, Willesden, N. W., England.

Selling Agents

P. L. WATERS, 41 E. 21st St., New York. GEORGE BRECK, 70 Turk St., San Francisco, Cal.

Dealers in All Principal Cities

FILMS HOWARD MOVING PICTURE CO. FILMS

Repair Work a Specialty. Agents for Motiograph, Power's and Edison Machines. Supplies and Sundries.

564 Washington Street, - - Boston Mass.

Established 1894. (Opposite Adams House). Incorporated 1908.

LATEST AND THE BEST

French, Italian and American Subjects

NEW JERSEY FILM RENTAL COMPANY

F. PENNINO, Proprietor

Main Office: NEW YORK, N. Y. 214 6th Avenue, near 14th Street Telephone 2442 Chelsea

Branch Office: BRIDGEPORT, CONN. 1188 Main Street, near Depot

Member of the "National Independent Moving Picture Alliance"

O. T. Crawford's Film Service

ACKNOWLEDGED

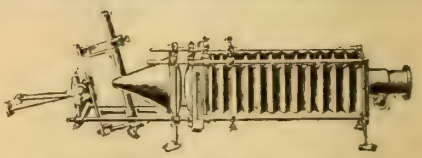
"BETTER THAN THE BEST"

Let us convince you that we can give you just the service you require. Better write to-day.

O. T. CRAWFORD FILM EXCHANGE CO.

1401 Locust Street ST. LOUIS, MO.

319 Fourth Avenue LOUISVILLE, KY.



Stereopticons $10, 50,000 Tickets $3.50; Automatic Arc Lamp 15c; Slide Mats 1c; Stereopticon Lenses 50c; Economizers $30; Slide Carriers 40c

FILMS RENTED, SOLD OR EXCHANGE

L. HETZ, 302 E. 23d Street New York

Special prices to the trade

CHEAP

Steel Frame Theatre Chairs

ABSOLUTELY Non-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small theatres and Moving Picture shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also Seating for Out of-Door Use.

Address Dept. W,

STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich.

New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue

Boston Office: 224 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

WILL BUY moving picture theater in good condition with established trade in New England States. Give full particulars. Address, THEATER, care M. P. World.

FOR SALE—Paying moving picture theater, full stage; reason for selling, have other business to attend to. SCENIC THEATER, North Towanda, N. Y.

elder daughter. In the garden Ruth is swinging idly backward and forward humming a little ditty. Up behind her the young curate steals and sends her swinging up into the branches of the tree. Laughing at her cry of fright, he stops the swing and releases her. As they start forward he invites her to take a seat on the empty bench. In the year that has passed the curate has learned to know his own heart and he realizes it was not to the dashing Estelle the deepest feelings of his heart were given, but in gentle Ruth he has found his true soul mate. In a few simple fervent words he tells Ruth of his love. Ruth glances up shyly into his face, her eyes shining with devoted love, then she turns to him and is folded in his arms.

Scene VII.—Two Years Later—The Young Wife Deserted. Two years have passed. Out on the porch Estelle and Morton are having noon breakfast. Even Estelle's splendid heritage of health, given her by her healthy, wholesome girlhood in the parsonage, was unable to stand the strain of dissipation. She is now an invalid. The maid enters with a letter for Morton. Estelle sees the address is written in a woman's handwriting. Snatching it from his hand she demands the name of the sender. Laughing tauntingly, he tells her to read it, and goes into the house for his coat and hat. Estelle opens it and reads of Morton's plan to leave her for another woman. She reels at the shock. At this moment Morton returns ready for his trip. Coolly disregarding her passionate appeals he throws a roll of bills in her lap. She orders him from her sight. He goes laughingly, sneering. Estelle, left alone realizes how desolate is her plight. Sick and alone with no one near her that cares whether she lives or dies. Across her brain, satiated with the dissipations of city life, comes the thought of the quiet, peaceful parsonage. It seems like Heaven to her. She will go back. Back to the patient, loving ones she left so eagerly three years before.

Scene VIII.—Estelle's Home Coming. Out in his garden the old minister is reading. Except for a more pathetic stoop to his shoulders the three years have passed lightly over his head. As he looks up he sees Ruth being slowly led down the path by her husband. This is the first time the young mother has left the house. The minister helps her to a chair. His wife follows with the baby. The old man stoops beside the sleeping baby, then after a word of congratulation to the proud young father, returns to the house with his wife. Ruth begs for a drink of water and the curate goes for it. Left alone she closes her eyes, a happy smile on her face. From the arbor beyond comes Estelle. She has come home. But the sight of Ruth's happy sleeping face is too much for her to bear and she starts to go. At this moment Ruth awakes, sees her and calls her. The curate, as he is returning with the water, sees Estelle. Dropping the glass he rushes towards her, calling excitedly to the old minister and his wife that Estelle has returned. The mother folds her lost daughter to her arms, but the old father's face darkens with anger, He cannot forgive Estelle for having disgraced him. Estelle drops to his feet and kisses his hand. At the well-remembered touch of the fingers of his best loved daughter the old man's face relaxes slightly. The struggle is a bitter one, but finally he turns and holds out his arms in forgiveness. Estelle rushes into them while the remaining members of the now reunited family with happy tears filling their eyes, look on in thankful silence.

PATHE FRERES.

A BAD BARGAIN.—Mr. Moore, who is very much in need of money, puts an "ad" in the paper offering his house for sale and giving ill health as his reason for disposing of the property. The truth of the matter is that Mr. Moore was never better physically in his life, but financially his condition is desperate. A Mr. Hand finally makes a bargain with Moore for the property and the latter agrees to let him have it for $6,000 a year during his (Moore's) lifetime, payable every three months. When the papers are signed and Hand leaves, Moore kicks his heels together for joy. Poor Hand, however, by the time the first payment is due, regrets very much taking the place and decides that his only hope of being relieved of the responsibility is to kill off Moore. When the latter comes for his rent, therefore, Hand invites him into a cafe hoping that he will drink himself to death. But the wine fails to take effect on Moore, although he has consumed a goodly portion of it, but Hand becomes hopelessly intoxicated and while he is in this condition his wife who has been looking for him happens in and gives him a good drubbing with her umbrella. Seeing that his plan has failed, Hand thinks of another; perhaps if he gets Moore interested in gambling the excitement might kill him. Again, however, Hand is the victim, as Moore wins every cent of his money and leaves the place as cool as a cucumber. At last desperate, Hand draws a rope across the street, hoping to trip Moore and thus get rid of him. But not so. Moore sees the rope and jumps lightly over it and when Hand sneaks around to see what has happened to friend Moore he himself gets mixed up in the rope and goes sprawling on the ground. He gives his head such a bump that it brings on an attack of fever and during his ravings he meets Moore in a cafe and disguising himself as a waiter puts poison in his enemy's glass. When it takes effect he cuts off Moore's legs and arms, but to his horror the latter quietly join themselves to the trunk again and there stands his landlord before him asking for his rent. The last part of his nightmare is cold reality, however, and Hand pleads with Moore, asking him to let him off and take the property back. Moore finally consents when Hand promises to let him marry his daughter.

Removal Notice

After Jan. 1, 1910, we will be in our new, commodious quarters. Exhibitors are invited to visit us whether you take service from us or not. Come in and get acquainted with our methods. Start the New Year right by using our Feature Service.

THE SERVICE THAT ATTRACTS

"Best in America"

AMERICAN FILM SERVICE

NEW OFFICES

Bank Floor, 77 Clark Street, CHICAGO

MARVELOUS GARLANDS.—We have all heard of the wonderful things they do in India, such as makign flowers grow before our very eyes. Well, this film shows something quite as wonderful. We see the pretty flowers forming themselves petal by petal and when the wreath is complete we are astonished to see a pretty girl's head in the heart of each blossom. The coloring is beautiful and all sorts of flowers are shown: roses, daisies, carnations, etc. It is amusing to watch each petal with military exactness go right up to its proper place, and we sit wondering just waht kind of flower this particular one is to be. Sometimes it is hard to guess because so many tiny different parts go to make the complete flower as we know it.

OH, YOU DOGGIE.—Tom is a mischievous little fellow. There is not the slightest doubt about that. But he is such a cute little doggie and plays such awfully clever tricks that one could not have the heart to give him the punishment he richly deserves. In the first scene he is sitting in his mistress' room comfortably fixed on a steamer chair, wrapped up in a blanket and even has a cute little night cap on his wooly head. His mistress is in great distress because she imagines her pet is not quite as well as he might be. Leaving him for a moment the sly little pup jumps up, throws off the blanket and goes trotting down the road. He meets two men carrying a big framed picture between them. And what should Tom do but jump right through it and is off before the men can give him a thrashing. Seeing a billposter perched on a ladder posting some bills, Tom runs up the ladder on to the man's shoulder, making him drop his paste, and then skips down the other side of the wall and falls right in the middle of an improvised table where some friends are enjoying a picnic. On he goes until he sees a laundry boy's tricycle and basket standing outside a door. He lifts the lid of the basket with his nose and jumps in. The boy, unconscious of the fact, takes Mr. Tom for a nice long ride; arriving at the next customer's, the boy stops and goes in and Mr. Tom jumps out and flies along looking for more sport. Some children playing ball in the road are much amused when Tom dahhes up and, hitting the ball with his nose while it's in the air, sends it flying. He next rushes at an old woman sit-to continually patronize one Picture Theatre in preference to another? Of course, location, appearances, films, etc. have a great deal to do with it, but quality of the picture is what builds up a steady patronage that makes the business profitable.

From the Patrons View Point

What Causes People

This depends largely on your light and if you are using any other device than a to step down your current you are not getting best results.

FORT WAYNE COMPENSARC

With our machine you can produce a clear, white, steady light that won't worry your "house" by continuous flickering and will surprise you with the difference it makes with the films.

It is the only device that can be changed instantly to any of the three intensities without breaking the circuit between adjustments.

But this is not all. We will guarantee that our Compensarc

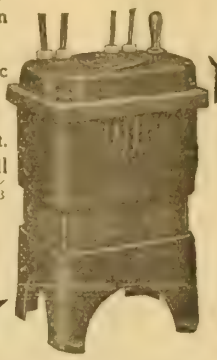
Will Cut 65% from Your Light Bill and we'll send you one on 30 days' free trial to prove it.

We have a little 22 page booklet that explains all the reasons why If you want a better light at ⅓ your present cost, send for it today. It's free.

FT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
1402 Broadway, Fort Wayne, Ind.



C5

SLIDES
of Highest Quality

LATEST SONG SETS

I Love My Steady, But I'm Crazy About My Once In Awhile.
If I Thought You Wouldn't Tell.
Anywhere.
Michael Angelo.
Before I Go and Marry, I'll Have a Talk With You.
Sometime In Springtime.
I've Got Rings On My Fingers And Bells On My Toes.
Take Me Back To Kidland.
Amina.
The Star; The Rose, The Dream.
My Irish Caruso.

High class slides made and colored to order from prints and negatives

Scott & Van Altena
59 Pearl St., New York City

NEW SLIDES

For the Following Songs—JUST OUT

There's Nothing Else in Life Like Love, Love, Love.
Take Me Back to Sunshine Land.
Mary you're a Big Girl Now.
My Dream of Long Ago.
When I Fell In Love With You.
Rosenbaum
When You've Won the Only Girl You Love.
Just a Girl Like You.
In the Harbor of Sunshine and Love.
Round Up.
Would You be Satisfied, Sally?
You'll Come Back.
Put On Your Old Grey Bonnet.
Heinz.

DeWitt C. Wheeler
120 W. 31st St., N. Y. City

Immediate Shipment

WE CARRY OPERA CHAIRS IN STOCK

If you want a GOOD CHAIR, at a LOW PRICE, we have it. Inquiries answered same day as received.

Ask for Catalog No. 305

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Neosho Song Slides

$3.50 the set

These NEW ones are ready for immediate delivery:

Darling Make Me Dreamy
Name the Day, Honey, Do
Sue
Only a Dream of You
Mary Brown
Give Me a Spin in Your Mitchell, Bill

Write for our special standing order proposition

The Neosho Slide Company
100 S. Wood St., Neosho, Mo.

Films For Rent

SONG SLIDES FOR RENT

SEND FOR LISTS

Prices to Suit the Times

Expert Machine Repairing

LOWEST PRICES

HUDSON FILM CO.
138 E. 14th St., New York City

CALEHUFF

A Member of the
FILM SERVICE ASSOCIATION

Headquarters for only the best of latest FILMS and SONG SLIDES. No junk. MACHINES, SUPPLIES, Etc.

LATEST SONG SLIDES
$5.00 per set

N. E. Cor. 4th & Green Streets,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

ting among the grass and flowers in a big field and pushes off her hat, which also takes her wig along, and leaves her with her mouth wide open with horror. Tired now of skylarking, he returns to his home and we get a good view of him sitting on the same steamer chair with his little red tongue hanging out and puffing like a steam engine.

A WELL EARNED MEDAL.—This is a sweet, pretty picture of simple country life in Brittany. The only son of a picturesque old couple has just become engaged to the love of his boyhood and the families and friends of the happy young pair are celebrating the occasion with a dinner. In the midst of their gaiety news comes that the brave young fellow must leave at once for Tonquin, China, and we see him starting out 24 hours later to join in the fight against the Chinese pirates and smugglers. His dear old parents and his heartbroken sweetheart wait patiently for news from their boy. A letter finally comes, hopeful and affectionate, bearing the glad news that the campaign will be of short duration and he will soon be able to join his dear ones once more. Way off in China however, the French troops are firing their last cartridges, but John, who is doing sentinel duty, has been attacked by the enemy and falls with a treacherous spear in his back. As he lies dying in the hospital there come to him visions of his home and the loved ones that he is never to see again. A few hours before he passes away he is presented with a medal for his bravery. One of his comrades who has been ordered to convey the sad tidings of the brave boy's death to the little home in Brittany, takes with him also the medal, bought so dearly. The grief of the old couple and the young girl whom the dead man loved is more than touching. The shock proved too much for the old father, however, who drops dead soon after he hears the news, clasping tightly in his hand the medal his boy won on the field of honor.

CORSICAN HOSPITALITY.—No verbal description can ever picture a scene as can pictures themselves and so, too, customs and manners can be shown better than told. This film presents a vivid picture of the hot, revengeful nature of the Corsican and how, in spite of this, they never violate the laws of hospitality.

A LIVE CORPSE.—Poor Billie has been celebrating and when he comes home falls into a swoon from which it is impossible to arouse him; his physician therefore finally pronounces him dead. After spending some hours in weeping beside the dead body of her husband, Genevieve finally pulls herself together and sends a note to an old admirer of hers informing him of her husband's death and telling him she would like to see him. The latter soon arrives and the widow and her visitor go into another room to have a heart-to-heart talk. In the meantime Billie comes to and finds the letter his wife wrote to her friend Jack telling him that she is free. Deciding to give the couple, who apparently are so glad to get rid of him, a good fright, he arises from his bed and approaching the two who are now making love to one another, he captures them in a funeral wreat hand, with the butler's aid, after beating them both with the floral tributes, throws them out of the house.

TRIALS OF A SCHOOLMASTER.—A country school with its bright faced little pupils and patient, anxious-looking master. From a twinkle in the black eyes of the two scholars sitting together in the front desk one knows that these two are not quite as sedate and demure as they would have one think. And so it is. As the teacher goes to the blackboard to demonstrate some lesson, these two rascals send a volley of spit balls at his head. At first he does not suspect them, but on the third volley he turns and grabs the taller of the two who has justly won for himself the title of the bully of the little school. Next on seeing the teacher about to regain his seat, the bully places his best and only top hat on the chair, which is smashed of course as soon as the teacher unsuspectingly sits down. One can see that the spoiling of his hat has a terrible effect on the poverty stricken teacher who, to add to his troubles, has also had his only coat badly torn by the unruly boys. He presents a pathetic figure indeed as he sits in the empty schoolroom after the boys have gone home trying, with awkward fingers, to mend the only coat he has to his back. He brushes the tears from his eyes as he counts his money and finds his store so low. In the next scene the school is out for a walk in a beautiful part of the country, through which winds a picturesque river. The teacher tells the boys to have all the fun they want, but not to go too near the water. He then proceeds to read his paper, but the bully seeing a good chance for playing a brand new trick on the long suffering man, steals up quietly, and striking a match, lights the newspaper he holds in his hands. As the flames and smoke burst into his face the teacher leaps into the air and throws the burning paper from him. He then grabs the bully who, in trying to free himself from the teacher's grasp, tumbles headlong into the river. Without a moment's hesitation the brave man pulls off his coat and swims after the terrified boy. He succeeds in bearing him up until help arrives and when the two are brought on shore it is seen that the teacher is in a bad way indeed; while the little urchin is none the worse for his ducking. A view is given of the humble little room of the professor, where he lies helpless on his bed and whispers to the doctor that he can die in peace now as long as the boy is saved. He recovers, however, and the last scene shows the Mayor of the town presenting him with a medal for his bravery. And kneeling down beside him his old enemy, the bully, begs his forgiveness and presents him with a beautiful new broadcloth coat.

SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.

ALDERMAN KRAUTZ'S PICNIC.—Alderman Krautz was a philanthropist as well as a cafe owner; he loved children and, as he had none of his own, he fathered all the kids in his ward at every opportunity. Once a year he gave them a picnic. The great day arrives, the alderman is the busy man. Two big four-horse converted express wagons filled with howling youngsters, all waving the star spangled banner, munching ginger snaps and keeping a longing eye on the big baskets that are the especial care of the alderman and his wife. At the picnic grounds and the fun starts. A game of I-Spy is in progress, the alderman is it. He catches a pretty miss of sixteen and his wife catches him. He escapes. The kids banter him for a swing. The swing is a thriller, that is, the grove owners have so arranged it that at the highest point the occupant is poised for a second over a convenient lagoon. Little Patsy Crogan ties a string to the swing board and the alderman takes an involuntary bath. "After dinner" the alderman has had time to dry his wardrobe and the kids, led by Crogan, inveigle him into another game, "London Bridge Is Falling Down"—it does, and the alderman is buried under a shower of kids. But he is game, and "Blindman's Buff" comes next. Crogan discovers a hornets' nest, "and the alderman finds it, too" (with Crogan's assistance) and the busy insects put the picnic out of business.

"Home again," the alderman is swathed in bandages and the family doctor advises, among other things, absolute rest and no more picnics for another year at least. The alderman falls asleep and has a happy vision of Crogan and the kids. "Stung." It's a busy comedy, told in the Selig way, a joy bringer sure, new, novel and pleasing. Just clean, pure fun every foot of the way.

THE SMUGGLER'S GAME.—Tom Lawton is married to a trusting and devoted woman, who in her implicit faith is ignorant of the fact that her husband is at the head of a gigantic organization in the unlawful traffic of opium, with quarters in the notorious joss house of King Yen Lo, of 'Frisco. Lawton engages as his house servants Chinese, in order that he may carry on his work with a surer degree of safety.

One day as he was walking through a public park he chances upon Margarie Ward, to whom he previously made overtures, and who, not being aware that he is married, is cordial in her treatment and falls an easy victim to his pretended admiration.

John Mason, a suitor for Margarie's hand, meets them on one of the lawns and plainly shows his keen disappointment that a man known to him as was Lawton and his reputation should force, as the thistle and the thorn, its way into undefiled innocence, and he vows to place Lawton in his proper light. Accordingly he calls on Lawton the following day. Desperate that he may be exposed, Lawton attempts to put Mason out of the way. The wife comes upon the scene and plainly shows her first waning faith in her husband, but is cowered before his threats. The servants hurriedly notify the thugs in the joss house and preparation is made to remove and confine Mason in the smugglers' den on Ponca Island, in the 'Frisco Bay. An old sea captain is summoned and soon a bargain is struck, whereby within a few moments he has the tug Arrow under steam and the trip across the bay has begun. The wife, through threats, is compelled to be a party on the boat. She overhears a conversation between the captain and her husband, in which they said Mason would easily be lost sight of at the bottom of the bay. In an unguarded moment she hastily unties Mason that he may defend himself, but he is unable to rally from the stupor.

Discovering the attitude of his wife, Lawton again threatens her. The scene quickly changes to the arrival at Ponca Island, the home of the smugglers, where escape seems a forlorn hope. The ringing of the warning bell is a signal for consternation; however, the new arrivals prove to be only the Orientals with a new shipment of opium.

The time for payment and division of spoils is at hand, attended with the usual dissatisfaction and argument. The sea captain and Lawton become involved in an altercation and part company. For revenge Mason is, with much difficulty, rescued by the sea captain and taken aboard the Arrow and returned to Margarie, she being convinced of the true character of Lawton. As soon as Mason is sufficiently revived, he, together with Margarie and his rescuer, return to the smugglers' den with officers, that they may rescue the wife, who is a prisoner in the den, and place Lawton within the pale of the law. The capture is effected, Margarie and Mason are reunited and the broken-hearted wife is taken back to her little home, where sunshine and flowers will hide the cloud under which she was an unconscious victim.

THE HIGHLANDERS' DEFIANCE.—This story deals with the lives of two Scotch lads, Hector MacDonald and Laren MacDougal. The call for volunteers for the Boer War had reached their out-of-the-way home in Scotland and they determined to answer the call.

In the first scene we see the Scotch lads breaking the news of their determination to their sweethearts. Two weeks later they bid good-bye to their fair lassies aboard the warship that is to bear them on their long journey to South Africa. It is then that the colonel of the regiment in which they have enlisted grants MacDonald and MacDougal a great favor, little thinking how soon and under what strange circumstances the lads will repay him for his kindness.

Six Months Later.—We find the colonel and his staff inspecting the enemy's earthworks through their field glasses. They are accompanied by troopers among whom are our friends, MacDougal and MacDonald. As the colonel stands apart with glasses raised, there comes the ominous "spit" of a Mauser bullet and the colonel's arm drops useless to his side. With a yell, a company of Boers rise from ambush and dash onward toward the helpless man, intending to make him prisoner. With full realization of the situation, the two Scottish lads, full of enthusiasm, spring to their commander's aid and immediately open fire on the Boers and then, with the rapidity born of intense excitement, they carry the colonel over the brow of the hill, beyond the view of and much to the surprise of the advancing enemy. And that surprise is accelerated by the sudden and unexpected appearance of a half regiment of English cavalry, who drive them from the field.

In recognition of the heroic efforts of our two Highlanders, their colonel requests and is granted a commission for them both, in token of appreciation of the work they have done in braving the enemy's fire.

Our scene changes. We are on the mountain known as "Spion Kop." Three companies of Gordon Highlanders have been left to hold the side of Steep Hill, while the artillery is planting batteries above their heads. Cronje has outwitted the English commanders and made a flank movement and our little band of Highlanders find themselves isolated, retreat cut off and under heavy fire. Cronje, seeing their helpless position, sends a messenger to the officer in command demanding surrender. Hector MacDonald, though only a lieutenant, finds that he and MacDougal are the only officers left alive. He reads the demand to the Gordon troopers, and to a man they express the wish to die rather than suffer disgrace. Surely help will come. Then Hector writes the Highlanders' defiance:

"To h—l with you, the Gordons never surrender."

The Boers open fire again, and the last hero of that little band sells his life for the flag he loves. Without patriotism, manhood lies dormant. Even Cronje is touched by such bravery, and he himself sends forward to Lord Roberts the last written words of the brave Scotch lads who preferred death rather than bring disgrace on their famous regiment.

Our scene shifts to the cottage home in Scotland where we first met the lads. Their sweethearts' mother returns from the postoffice and the girls eagerly asks: "Mother, any news?" She sadly shakes her head. The youngest girl, with that hope that springs eternal in the human breast, places a light in the window, and so our story ends with this little group of fond hearts waiting for the loved ones who will never return.

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

(George Kleine.)

TRAGEDY AT THE MILL.—The scene of the story is laid in France at the time of the wars of the First Empire. A detachment of Hussars is quartered at a mill. The commander loses no time in falling in love with the miller's daughter. As the love affair develops, a peasant, who is also in love with the girl, attacks the officer when off his guard and wounds him seriously.

The crime is discovered and the Hussars pursue the murderer, who escapes into the woods. Upon reaching the banks of the river, the fugutive endeaves to cross it, but his strength fails him, the current carries him away and his body is mangled in the mill-wheel.

SHANGHAI OF TO-DAY.—Progress in Western civilization has advanced with marvelous rapidity in China since the Russo-Japanese war and the film here presented gives a perfect idea of existing conditions in Shanghai to-day. The picture shows a modern Chinese soldier in a "Joss" house—First we see the European quarter—Traffic of all sorts; jinrickshas, automobiles, cabs and street cars—A mixture of East and West—The Bund or river front—The Chinese town—Picturesque pagodas—Youngsters at play—Streets of the native quarter with their traffic—Long strings of jinrickshas awaiting passengers—Chinese industries—An itinerant restaurant—Serving refreshments—Cooking and eating food.

Canadian Exhibitors

Looking for a first-class film service, write the Crystal Palace Film Exchange for particulars. We handle both Licensed and Independent films and can give you a right up-to-date service. We own and operate the most successful Moving Picture Theaters in Canada.

Located at

141 Yonge Street, Toronto.
331 St. Lawrence Blvd., Mont.
27 King Street East, Hamilton.

Agents for Power's and Edison Machines.

Crystal Palace Film Exchange
141 Yonge Street. Toronto, Can.

SAVE MONEY

Any Leading Manufacturers

Announcement Slides 28c Each

Post Paid or 4 for $1.00

Colored of Course

Same Slides you pay 35c for

TICKETS "ANSEL" MAKE

Single 5 cents, 10 cents—Admit.

All Colors

10,000 90c; 20,000 $1.75; 20,000 $4.00

Coupon Tickets, Prize, Late Checks, Baby Show, Young Lady Contest. 2,000 dbl. Each Roll

6,000 $1.50; 10,000 $2.25; 50,000 $10.00

SEND FOR SAMPLE TICKETS

Slides made for every purpose

ECONOMY SUPPLY DEPOT
79 So. Clark Street :: Chicago

SCENERY

For M. P. Theatres

I am making a specialty of small sets of Wood Scenes consisting of Back Drop 4 Wood Wings, 2 Cut Wood Borders, which is all you need for Vaudeville Acts between Pictures. This scenery is all fireproof to meet the demands of the Fire Underwriters. All packed ready to express to any part of the United States in the following sizes according to price.

Set No.	1	Drop	8x10	Wings	3x8	Borders	2x12	$ 50.00
"	2	"	9x10	"	3x9	"	3x12	65.00
"	3	"	10x12	"	3x10	"	3x14	80.00
"	4	"	11x12	"	3x11	"	3x14	90.00
"	5	"	12x14	"	4x12	"	3x16	125.00
"	6	"	14x24	"	4x14	"	4x30	175.00

These Sets are ALL READY to set up and GIVE SHOW

Send deposit of one THIRD
Balance C. O. D. subject to Inspection

TURNER CO.
Theatrical Stage Properties
Paper Machie Work
552 7th Ave. New York

References: T. M. A. No. 1 N. Y.
T. P. U. No. 1 N. Y. or T. P. U. in Theatre of your own town or city

LUBIN FILMS

RELEASED MONDAY, JANUARY 3, 1910.

"With Aunt Emaline Along"

Jack Shafer gets married and his Aunt Emaline decides that Jack is entirely too young to go roaming about the country on an unchaperoned honeymoon, and, anyway, Aunt Emaline likes to travel. She wires the new Mrs. Jack that her nephew insists that she travel with them and like a dutiful little wife the latter assents. It is just as easy to tell Jack that his wife wants a companion and it is not until they have started on their wedding journey that they discover the imposition. Then they try to run away, but Aunt Emaline is on the alert and she bests every move until they lock her in her hotel room and head for home. But even then they have time only to lock the door until Aunt Emaline is pounding for admittance and not until they pour a couple of buckets of water upon her from an upper window does Aunt Emaline realize that she is not welcome. It is a screaming farce, played with the spirit and dash that have made the Lubin comedies in world-wide demand.

LENGTH, ABOUT 816 FEET.

RELEASED THURSDAY, JANUARY 6, 1910.

"The Tattooed Arm"

A dramatic story tersely told, that holds the attention from the opening scene until the happy ending. Two kiddies are out to spend a whole half dollar. The boy decides to have his initials tattooed on his arm and ends by having those of his little playmate beneath them. He pursuades her to submit to the ordeal as well. With childish solemnity they accept this as their pledge of love. On the way home a discharged workman abducts his employer's son in revenge, and when the police hunt becomes too active he ships Jack as cabin boy on a schooner in the Australian trade. The ship is wrecked and Jack is captured by a savage African tribe. It is fifteen years before he effects his escape and is able to work his way back home as a common sailor. Meanwhile the girl, grown to womanhood, has become a trained nurse. Jack is assaulted and robbed by thugs and is carried to the hospital for treatment. There he is recognized by the tattoo marks and the pledge of childhood is renewed. Capital acting, novel settings and a story that grips combine to make this an unusual subject.

LENGTH, 876 FEET.

Send for catalogue of our 1910 machine

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY 926-928 MARKET STREET PHILADELPHIA, PA.

PHOENIX FILM COMPANY

"THE CELEBRATED CASE"

2 Parts—One Reel Each

First part—"CONVICTED BY HIS OWN CHILD"—Jan. 6, 1910
Second part—"SAVED BY HIS OWN CHILD"—Jan. 13, 1910

Each part a complete story

100 per cent better than the best—we ever made

Write Your Exchange About it

Full Sheet Lithographs and Illustrated Booklets Sent Free on Request

PHOENIX FILM COMPANY, Mossler Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

VITAGRAPH COMPANY.

CALL BOY'S VENGEANCE.—At the entrance to a theater, around which a mob is gathering, is the following hand-bill:

To-Night—The Idol of Europe!
Prof. Wiener Schnitzel!
First Time in America!
Hear His Famous Rendition of "Die Wacht Am Rhein."

A theater program boy, with time heavy on his hands, is next seen trying the various band instruments. Prof. Schnitzel hears him, and, running out of the wings, gives the lad a thorough trouncing. Feeling his sore places, he looks for vengeance. He gets a lot of chalk and a bucket of water and a pot of paint and various other things, and empties them into the wind instruments. He also re-arranges the music. The audience files in, the music starts, or is about to start, when trouble begins, and continues fast and furious until Herr Schnitzel is driven from the theater by the angry crowd, and only the boy, like Casabianca on the burning deck, is left waving a baton and directing an imaginary band.

THE OLD MAID'S VALENTINE.—Miss Simpkins, a lady of uncertain age and a pronounced cast of features, which has kept admirers away, supports herself by dressmaking. An expressman leaves her a large bundle and a note which says:

My Dear Miss Simpkins: I am sending you this Valentine and trust same will please you, the dear old girl that you are.

Very truly yours,
GUESSWHO.

Much elated, she opens the bundle to find the life-size stuffed dummy of a man. Angered, she throws it to the floor, but its form appeals to her, and she picks it up and places it at one side of her tea-table, where she fondles and caresses it while she sips her tea. She goes out shopping and Spike Hennessy, a bold, bad burglar, crawls in through the window, but starts back when he sees a man sitting at the table. Spike discovers it is a dummy, and better dressed than he, so he hastily changes clothes and is about to rob the house, when he hears footsteps. He takes the dummy's place at the table.

Miss Simpkins enters, and in caressing the supposed dummy discovers her mistake. She seizes a revolver, and, holding Spike at bay, calls up a policeman, also a minister. She tells Spike that he must marry her or go with the policeman. Spike throws up his hands in despair and falls into the arms of—the policeman. The minister, seeing he is not needed, starts to go, but Miss Simpkins makes advances and the minister leaps through the window.

A SISTER'S SACRIFICE.—Helen Lowell and Ruth, her younger sister, live alone in a handsome New England cottage. Helen is the principal of a girl's seminary, and the supporter of the small household, while Ruth is but a pupil. The love and confidence between the two sisters is shown in their evening talks by the firelight. At one of these Ruth jumps up and tells Helen that she is in love with a handsome man, but will not tell his name. The elder sister scents trouble.

Professor Rutter, a teacher of languages at the seminary, makes frequent calls at Helen's home to discuss business, and begins to love the fair principal; while she begins to realize that these meetings are equally pleasing to her. Helen begins to realize that she is in love. But it is this same professor, who, unknowingly, has stolen the affections of Ruth and she, when she finds the professor favors her sister, goes to bed and cries herself to sleep over his photograph, which he has presented to Helen.

After dismissing Professor Rutter, Helen tip-toes to her sister's bedroom, and, in smoothing the pillows, finds the tear-stained photograph. Suddenly it dawns upon her that this is the man her sister loves, and her emotions are perplexing. She goes out into the night to decide what shall be her course. Sisterly affection overpowers her selfish love, and she decides to make way for Ruth. Thereafter she contrives to absent herself and let Ruth entertain the professor, and her impetuous wooing soon wins the affections of Professor Rutter. When Ruth and the professor tell Helen that they are engaged she hides her feelings, but gives way to sorrow when alone.

Independent Films.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

RED GIRL'S ROMANCE.—The scenes of this Bison film treat of the wild and woolly West—that speaks for itself, interest from start to finale. Marna is seen dancing with Petro when they are unceremoniously separated by Jacques, who suffers for his discourtesy by a blow from Petro, who leaves the dance hall. Jacques, after reviving, goes after him, accompanied by Marna. When Petro comes along a rough path, Jacques fires from behind a shelter and wounds Petro. Jacques joins Marna and they jointly exult over his victory. An Indian girl comes to Petro's aid and leads him to a lake where she tends to his wound and gives him drink. She then rides off and comes to a Western inn, where Jacques and Marna are, who recognize Petro's horse and go in the direction the red girl came. They lie in waiting and when they see the girl riding carefully over the rocks, they follow after her. She reaches Petro and succeeds in reviving him, when Jacques comes upon the red girl and carries her off. After binding her and leaving her suspended from a tree, over a sheet of water, he returns to abuse Petro. The red girl struggles until she frees herself and cautiously returns to the spot where she was taken from, gets a revolver belonging to Jacques, and with Petro's assistance they bind Jacques and Marna, putting them on either side of a tree. The red girl and Petro leave the unhappy pair and go to a more beautiful spot where they plight their troth. We leave Jacques and Marna provoked with each other and all else.

INDEPENDENT M. P. CO.

THE WINNING PUNCH.—It's pretty hard for an American girl to make up her mind to marry a daintily rigged French count under ordinary circumstances, especially when she's a good scout herself and in love with a college youth, a typical "rah-rah" boy, who even holds a medal for two years' boxing championship at the college. Then, to think that father actually objects to him, preferring the count.

She has long ago made up her mind what to do, however, and so persistently does she snub the count, that finally father says she can have her college boy lover if he shows himself able enough to earn—well, about $1,000 a week. Innocently, not knowing what that amount means, she tells her sweetheart of it, and so confident is she that it is a real "cinch" for him, that she almost makes him believe he can do it.

Together with a pal of his, we see him bemoaning his ill luck, when they come to an athletic club, where a big boxing bout is scheduled for a purse of $1,000. And as they stand looking at the big announcement, the manager is seen to throw his cigar and hat down to the ground in disgust as he reads a telegram. They soon learn that one of the principals in the main bout cannot show up. It takes only a minute for the athletic lover to convince the manager that he can put up a good fight, and the deal is on. He lets the girl know about it quickly, and she comes to the club. The manager bores a hole in the wall between the dressing room and the ring and she just glues her eyes to it.

The fight is on! Round after round goes the battle, the girl behind the wall seeing her lover now being beaten, now the aggressor. Every blow he receives strikes her heart, too, and at every rally she becomes hysterical with joy. Twice he is beaten to the ground, only to arise and sail into a furious sally. Suddenly he gathers his energies for a last attempt. And just when it seems that the strain is too much for his sweetheart he lands one terrific uppercut, and victory is his—so is the thousand dollars, earned just as stipulated by father.

Of course he wins the girl. But does it not add joy when the pair learn that both father and the count each had a little bet on the winner?

GREAT NORTHERN.

A REFRESHING BATH.—The sun is burning, the air is as hot as in a baker's oven and it is no wonder that Mr. Brown, when taking a walk and suddenly finding himself at the bank of a brook, feels an irresistible inclination of diving in the cooling waves. Rapidly he takes a look round in the neighborhood, and not seeing a single soul, he starts undressing, but, "by Jove," as he has come as far as the underwear, he hears the sound of steps coming up in his direction. Quickly he steps behind a small shrub, and here he is a most unwilling witness to an intimate rendezvous, which he against his own good will abbreviates by a rather inconvenient sneeze.

This sneeze is the introduction to a row of adversities to which Mr. Brown is the subject, and the result is self-explanatory: From this day he swears to confine his bathing to a tub only.

VENGEANCE, OR THE FORESTER'S SACRIFICE.—Evans, a forester, is seated one evening in his comfortable home, as his young employer, Count Roberts, who owns the estate of which the forest is a part, rushes in, explaining that he had just been assaulted by a poacher, known as Black Jim. The forester has to leave immediately in search of the man, and as soon as he has left, his wife and Count Roberts embrace and kiss one another. They do not notice the forester watching them, and when he comes in again, he appears as if nothing had happened, although his heart is nearly broken with grief and anger. He goes out once more in search of the poacher, and finding him, he gives way to his anger, and proposes that he shoot Roberts. Black Jim, who also bears the gentleman a grudge, agrees to do this, and the forester agrees to take Count Roberts to a certain place in the forest on the following day. The forester now tells Count Roberts that he did not find the poacher, and they decide to go out and look for him. Count Roberts' mother and young wife try to persuade him not to go, but he has now made up his mind to hunt up the man, and he will not listen to their entreaties. After the two men have left for the forest, the Countess runs after them, and once more tries to persuade her husband to give up the pursuit, but he will not listen, and at last, he angrily tells his wife to go home. This is too much for the forester, he repents of his evil scheme, and the Count, who does not understand his actions, is made to change clothes with him. He was just in time, for a moment later, a bullet goes through the forester's brain and he falls to the ground dead. He is carried home, and his death effects what his life could not do, showing his wife that he was all the world to her, although carried away by the glamor of his employer's admiration. Count Roberts follows his wife home, and the forester's wife throws herself heart-broken on the bosom of her husband, whom she had formerly slighted, but now misses deeply and earnestly.

PHOENIX FILM CO.

CONVICTED BY HIS OWN CHILD.—A small skirmishing party is seen engaged with the enemy. A nobleman endeavoring to pass the lines is mortally wounded and is seen to fall on the field. A ghoul of the battlefield stoops over the prostrate man and is about to rob him, when a soldier comes to the fallen man's aid and drives the robber away. The dying man entrusts the soldier with jewels and family papers to deliver to his prescribed father and at the same time gives the soldier a large purse of gold for himself. The soldier swears to carry out the dying man's wishes and taking a parting shot at the enemy, leaves the wounded nobleman, who falls back apparently dead. The robber returns and finding that there are no valuables on the dead man, follows the soldier, evidently with the intent of securing the jewels and papers in his possession.

The soldier stealthily visits his home, which is in the vicinity, and leaves the jewels and papers with his wife, telling her that in the event of his falling in the expected battle of the morrow, that she should see that they were delivered as he directed. His little child is present and kisses her father good-night. The soldier leaves, taking an affectionate farewell of his wife, and with a few words of admonition, hurriedly leaves to rejoin his regiment. As the wife steps outside to say a few extra parting words to her husband, the robber who has followed the soldier, enters the room through a window and tries to secure the valuables, which the wife had placed in a drawer and locked. The wife returns and is confronted by the robber, who demands the key. She refuses and a struggle takes place between them. The child who has been asleep in an adjoining room cries aloud for her mother. The robber forces the mother to tell the child she is with her father. The child, reassured, is seen to return to her little bed. In the struggle that again takes place, the mother is wounded to the death, and the robber escapes with the box containing the money, paper and jewels. He has also taken with him a very valuable necklace belonging to the wife. This necklace has a locket attached to it. The locket opens with a secret spring and discloses the name of herself and child. The mother opens the door of the child's room and tells her to run and bring help. When the neighbors enter they find the wife upon the floor dying. She tries to tell them who has committed the deed, etc., but dies without doing so. The neighbors ask the child who was present and the child innocently declares that it was her papa.

On the following morning the famous battle of Fountenoy having been fought and won, the headquarters of the soldier's regiment is seen and the Colonel is seen emerging from his tent. He calls for the soldier and congratulates him for his bravery upon the battlefield and extends his hand in doing so. The soldier is likewise congratulated by his comrades. The sentinel is seen to challenge a party approaching the tent. The party is allowed to pass and informs the Colonel of the robbery and more serious crime that has been done at the home of the soldier. He also informs the Colonel that the soldier himself is suspected of doing the deed. The Colonel resents the imputation but sends for the soldier and tells him all. The soldier is overcome with horror. The Colonel asks him if he was at home the night before. The soldier reluctantly admits that he was. This fact itself, being absent from his regiment without leave in the presence of the enemy, being a serious military crime. He tries to explain the cause of his absence but the Colonel will not listen to him and orders the soldier's child to be brought forward. Upon the child's appearance, the soldier holds out his arms to her but both child and father are restrained by the officer. The Colonel questions the child and the little one answers that her mother said to her: "Hush, child, I am with your father." This horrifies the father and convinces the Colonel of the soldier's guilt. The soldier is placed under arrest but begs the Colonel to allow him to kiss his little girl good-bye. The Colonel assents and the child rushes to father's arms. The soldier caresses her. The child asks if she has done wrong and reminds her father that he always told her to speak the truth. The father tells her not to let her little heart blame itself. His last words to her are, "You have killed me, my poor child, but I love and I forgive you." Telling her not to forget these words and asking his old comrade-in-arms to care for her, he is marched off to prison between a file of soldiers.

The soldier is later tried by court martial, sentenced to be shot, but on account of his bravery in the recent battle, his sentence is commuted to twenty years in a military prison. The testimony of his own child convicted him.

The sequel to the above thrilling story is shown in Part II. of "The Celebrated Case," entitled "Saved by His Own Child."

EXCLUSIVE FILM CO.

A ROMANCE OF THE SOUTH.—Major Davis, his daughter Evelyn and the Overseer are the principals in this intense dramatic production. Evelyn is loved by the Overseer and though she is not indifferent to his attentions, she is turned away from him through a display of brutality of which Uncle Ben (the favorite darky on the place) is victim. The Overseer is severely chided for his brutality and his chagrin prompts him to seek revenge. With the assistance of a negro he carries Evelyn away with the idea of forcing her to marry him, but chance intervenes to expose the plot and justice is meted out to the Overseer. Length, 875 feet.

NEW CORPORATIONS.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Delmar Theater Company; capital, $50,000. Incorporators, Harry Pipe and Edna C. Pipe.

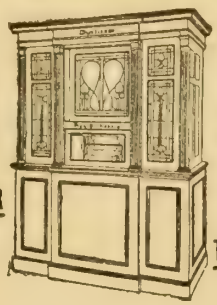
Hot Springs, Ark.—The Southwestern Amusement Company; capital, $25,000. Incorporators, J. G. Higgins, J. C. Wolf and J. F. Head.

Chicago, Ill.—The Grand Theater Company; capital, $2,500. Incorporatrs, F. L. Brooks, David Jetinger and Henry M. Seligman.

Chicago, Ill.—The President Theater Company; capital, $2,500. Incorporators, Isaac A. Levinson, Henry Levinson and Lewis F. Jacobson.

Wurlitzer
55 YEARS LEADERS IN MUSIC

BETTER MUSIC AT SMALLER COST



FOR ALL MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

Have you investigated the Wurlitzer PianOrchestra?

The leading Nickelodeons are putting in this marvelous Automatic Orchestra. It furnishes better music than a regular orchestra of 5 to 25 pieces, is always "on the job," and cuts out the enormous expense of musicians. The money saved pays rent.

Easy terms, less than paid to musicians. We supply the U. S. Gov't. with musical instruments. Write for big 96-page catalog & testimonial booklet showing Wurlitzer PianOrchestras in leading Nickelodeons.

The RUDOLPH WURLITZER Co
World's Largest Mfrs. Automatic Mus. Insts.
NEW YORK CINCINNATI CHICAGO
25-27 W. 32d 117-121 E. 4th 266-268 Wabash

KALEM FILMS
Issue of January 7, 1910

THE DEACON'S DAUGHTER

LENGTH 950 FEET

"THE DEACON'S DAUGHTER"

is a strong melodrama, produced by the KALEM Southern Stock Company, a story of real and thrilling heart interest, taken among the roses and palms of sunny Florida. It is full of action from start to finish, and of that beautiful photographic quality which characterizes all of our Southern negatives.

Our Issue of December 31st

A SLAVE TO DRINK

was erroneously advertised in The Film Index of last week. Please note that "A SLAVE TO DRINK" is to be released on December 31st. A great temperance lecture told in moving pictures.

COMING JAN. 14, 1910

The Romance of a Trained Nurse

An exquisite tale of real life, showing how sympathy so often leads to love.
And do not forget our coming feature for children—a new fairy story entitled:

THE MAGIC FLOWERS

TRADE KALEM MARK

Kalem posters can be obtained from your exchange or by mail from the A. B. C. Co., of Cleveland, O.

Free Descriptive Lectures Sent to all Applicants

KALEM CO., Inc.
Eastman Kodak Building
235-237-239 WEST 23rd STREET
NEW YORK CITY

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows Grand Stands. Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2.

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

"TITLE POSTERS"

The Only Practical and Economical

Moving Picture Posters

A POSTER FOR EVERY PICTURE

$7.50 a Month. Express Prepaid

SEND FOR FREE SAMPLE

TITLE POSTER CO.
231-233 Bowery, New York

Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theatre For Sale

Palace Theatre, Steelton, Pa.

House seats 300, with standing room for 100. Steelton has population of 18,000. The great steel works has over six thousand employees on pay-roll. Palace is only vaudeville house, and is now doing good business. Long lease and cheap rental. Reason for selling partnership. Half interest can be secured by experienced man who can qualify as live manager. This is a live wire business proposition and will prove highly profitable for capable manager. Additional information to those meaning business. Address

The Harrisburg Amusement Exchange
26 North Third Street Harrisburg, Pa

We buy and sell moving picture theaters anywhere, everywhere.

INDEPENDENT FILMS

FILM IMPORT AND TRADING CO.

Dec. 20-27—Macnabb Wants to Get Arrested (R. & R.) 425
Dec. 20-27—A Little Disagreement (Itala).....280
Dec. 20-27—The Prisoner's Strategy (Eclair)..580
Dec. 20-27—Admiral Nelson's Son (Itala).....890
Dec. 20-27—Mother-in-Law-Must Fly (Meester).573
Dec. 20-27—The Drunkard's Christmas (Carson).400
Dec. 20-27—Lorenzi de Medica (Comerio).....650
Dec. 20-27—Explorer's Dream (R. & R.).....350
Dec. 20-27—The Latest Fashion (Aquila).....300
Dec. 20-27—Granny's Darling (R. & R.).....400
Dec. 27-31—The Rheumatic Bridegroom (Le Lion) 365
Dec. 27-31—The Strolling Players (R. & R.)....665
Dec. 27-31—The Story of My Life (Ambrosio)..850
Dec. 27-31—The Emperor's Staff Officer (Eclair).700
Dec. 27-31—Mugchump's Early Morning Excursion (R. & R.).....400
Dec. 27-31—Foolshead Pays a Visit (Itala)....440
Dec. 27-31—A Christmas Legend (Itala).....300
Dec. 27-31—Madam's Favorite (R. & R.).....300

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY.

Nov. 6—The Destiny of Paul Wang (Dr.)....840
Nov. 10—The Suicide Woods (Com.).....426
Nov. 10—The Short-sighted Governess.....272
Nov. 10—Yachting on the Baltic.....230
Dec. 1—A Boy Hero.....600
Dec. 1—Trollhattan 380
Dec. 4—Little Willie's Trip to the North Pole.407
Dec. 4—Wrestling 420
Dec. 8—Temptations of the Gold Fields (Dr.).750
Dec. 8—Gerhardi Mohr (Com.).....194
Dec. 18—Mother-in-Law Crazy with Music.....460
Dec. 18—The Butcher's Bill.....230
Dec. 18—In Southern Sweden.....292
Dec. 25—An Outcast's Christmas.....495
Dec. 25—Father Busy Papering.....360

"IMP."

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURE CO. OF AMERICA.

Oct. 25—Hiawatha .....about 988
Nov. 1—Love's Stratagem.....954
Nov. 8—Destiny 864
Nov. 15—Forest Ranger's Daughter.....700
Nov. 15—Brave (?) Policeman.....300
Nov. 22—Levitsky Sees Parade.....704
Nov. 22—Honor Among Thieves.....296
Nov. 29—Her Generous Way 970
Dec. 6—His Last Game 941
Dec. 13—The Two Sons 955
Dec. 20—Lest We Forget .....about 920
Dec. 27—The Awakening of Bess.....950
Jan. 3—The Winning Punch.....950

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

Sept. 10—The Paymaster (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 17—A Kentucky Planter (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 24—A Squaw's Sacrifice (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 1—Faithful Wife (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 8—Dove Eye's Gratitude (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 15—The Gold Seeker's Daughter.....1000
Oct. 22—Iona, the White Squaw.....1000
Oct. 29—Mexican's Crime 1000
Nov. 5—Young Deer's Bravery.....950
Nov. 12—The Ranchman's Wife.....950
Nov. 19—An Indian's Bride.....1000
Nov. 26—The Parson's Prayer (Dr.).....550
Nov. 26—Dooley's Thanksgiving Turkey (Com.).400
Dec. 3—The Message of an Arrow.....1000
Dec. 10—Reunited at the Gallows (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 17—The Love of a Savage (Dr.).....990
Dec. 24—An Italian Love Story (Dr.).....900
Dec. 31—The Red Cross Heroine.....1000
Jan. 7—Red Girl's Romance (Dr.).....990

THE POWERS COMPANY.

(Columbia Film.)

Nov. 2—Change of Complexion.....950
Nov. 9—All for the Love of a Girl.....950
Nov. 16—The Gypsy's Regret.....925
Nov. 23—A Red Man's Love.....830
Nov. 30—Pressing Business 850
Dec. 7—A Run for the Money.....950
Dec. 14—Manhood's Reward.....950
Dec. 21—Reunited by Santa Claus.....950
Dec. 28—Excelsior (Comedy) 950
Jan. 4—A Frozen Ape.....950

PHOENIX FILM CO.

Jan. 6—Convicted by His Own Child (1).....1000
Jan. 13—Convicted by His Own Child (2).....1000
Nov. 18—Millionaire Bootblack (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 25—Delayed Telegram (Com.).....900
Dec. 2—Answered Prayer (Dr.).....850
Dec. 9—Bad Case of Grip (Com.).....750
Dec. 9—July 4th, 1910 (Com.).....250
Dec. 16—Her Mother's Mistake (Dr.).....850

CENTAUR FILM CO.

Dec. 11—Santa Claus and the Miner's Child.abt. 950
Dec. 18—Beyond the Rockies .....abt. 950
Dec. 25—The Deceiver 1000

EXCLUSIVE FILM COMPANY.

Dec. 30—A Romance of the South.....875

Classified Advertising.

Rate 3 cents per word, Cash with order.

OPERATOR wanted with Massachusetts license. Must be reliable and sober man. A snap for the right man. For particulars address A. L. REEVES, Danielson, Conn.

FILMS FOR SALE—From $5.00 per reel and up. Song slides at $1.00 per set. Edison machine, $65.00. All goods shipped for examination. J. FRIST, 138 East 14th St., New York, N. Y.

MR. MOVING PICTURE MAN—In answer to this ad we will sell you 4 beautifully colored, artistic announcement slides for $1.00. Send for list, every one new, a work of art. NIAGARA SLIDE CO., Lockport, N. Y.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

CAMERA AND DARK ROOM MAN desires position; has had five years' experience. P. W. A., 602 Third Ave., N. Y. City.

A-1 MANAGER AND ADVERTISING AGENT—At liberty; first class poster artist, sober, hard worker and thoroughly understands his business. Salary, reasonable. Address with particulars ARNOLD, 10 Bruce place, Rockaway Beach, L. I.

AT LIBERTY—Licensed operator and wife, A1 pianist. Best references. Address G. L. PALMER, Box 307, Sidney, N. Y.

OPERATOR—Moving picture machine operator to travel. Must thoroughly understand all electrical requirements and hold New York license. Good position for right party. Address, stating age, experience and references, S. W. F., care Moving Picture World..

MANAGER—Competent to handle M. P. vaudeville or combination houses. Desires to make a change. Specialist in advertising with ideas that get the money. Results guaranteed. Address P. O. Box 290, Fort Wayne, Ind.

An EXPERIENCED MANAGER, RELIABLE, up-to-date, desires connection with going concern. Salary and commission will be considered. A1 references. EXPERT.

THEATRES FOR SALE.

FOR RENT—Up-to-date picture theater. Slant floor; fine opera chairs; good location; seats nearly 300; hustling New England city of 30,000 population. For further information inquire A. L. REEVES, Danielson, Conn.

FOR SALE—Good paying 5c. theater in city of 85,000. If interested address R. Z., care Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE—A handsomely decorated motion picture house. Best location in New York City. A money maker. Reasonable terms. Quick action. F. W. MOORE, 18 West 108th St., New York City.

FOR SALE—A newly equipped moving picture theater and vaudeville house. Good paying business. Reason for selling, other business. Town of 2,500 population. For particulars address, L. RUPPERT, Spring Valley, Ill.

The "A B C OF MOTION PICTURES" just out. What, when, why, where, how. Everything pertaining to the biggest money-making business out. How to run machines, equip theaters, build stage, install lighting, make rheostats, paint banners and signs, make slides for 3 cents each, what to charge, how to handle help, details of phonographic instruction, where to get film cheapest, how to save on supplies. 5,000 facts, pointers and suggestions which will save anyone going into the business $500.00 at the lowest calculation. Postpaid for a dollar. GARRETT SWIFT, 238 20th Ave., North, Minneapolis. Minn.

FOR SALE—Moving picture theater; 23 minutes from New York City. No competition. Little cash needed. "REASONABLE," care Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE—A newly equipped moving picture theater and vaudeville house, seats 600. In city of 38,000 population. Theater three stories high. Will stand investigation. FRANK I. WILSON, 36 East Third St., Williamsport, Pa.

LECTURER and manager, four years' experience; can deliver the goods. EMPIRE, care Moving Picture World.

OPERATOR—Expert operator, electrician and machinist, desires position. Best of references furnished. Willing to go on road. L. FISK, 133 West 127th St., New York City.

FOUR YEARS' EXPERIENCED OPERATOR desires position. Will go anywhere. HOMER DENNIS, 2350 Lynn St., Newberry, Pa.

THEATER WANTED.

Will buy whole or half interest in good moving picture theater in or near New York City. Address, SINCERITY, care of Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE—1,000 ft. reels film, released to Nov. 1, $5 and $10 per reel; odd song slides, 5c.; sets, $1.50; 2,000 ft. Damon & Pythias, $20; 2,000 ft. Parsifal, $20; Model B, gas outfit, $25; Edison, Lubin, Power's machines, $60; new $100. For Rent—6,000 ft. film, $10; 9,000 ft., $12, one shipment. Will Buy—Film, machines. H. DAVIS, Watertown, Wis.

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a space saver, life saver and money saver. Shipped built up. It is the only sanitary theatre chair. Used by Keith, Proctor and Poli. It folds up automatically and is revolving, making the theatre all aisles. It is a friend to the public.

Send for our circular A. Write today.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO.
CANAL DOVER, OHIO

Everything Pertaining to the Moving Picture Trade

Federal Film Service

13 East Fourteenth St., New York

Telephone Connection 2466 Stuyvesant

Ring up or drop us a line and let us quote you prices that will startle you

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER

Miror Vitae Products," Projectors, Cameras, Film-Making Machinery, Films, Slides, Stereopticons, Specialties, Lens Grinding, etc. Special condensors, carbons and lugs.

109 East 12th Street, New York

Our new song slide service is making a big hit with managers who want only the best. Our stock is all new, and includes all the slides made by the best makers. 50c. a set a week, a week's supply shipped at one time. We have a number of perfect sets of slides of the Great Cherry Mine disaster, which we will sell for $6.00 per set, including printed lecture. Great business getters. Send us 32c. in stamps for our beautiful announcement slide, "One minute please, operator is adjusting machine."

LINCOLN TRANSPARENCY EXCHANGE

16th Floor, Masonic Temple, CHICAGO, ILL.

BE UP-TO-DATE Protect Your Patrons—Save Yourself Trouble—Use

PINO-SRAY FOR SWEEPING : : DISINFECTING, DEODORIZING

It kills all dust, germs and odors and leaves your rooms clean, sanitary and scented with the delightful odor of new pine

Write for Booklet

The Worrell Mfg. Co. :: Sedalia, Mo., U. S. A.

LECTURES on Suitable Subjects in Moving Pictures are a pleasing and attractive feature and always appreciated by your patrons. The peer and pioneer of lectures or "picture readings" with moving pictures is acknowledged to be

W. STEPHEN BUSH

Pleased to correspond with exhibitors

44 North 10th Street - - - Philadelphia, Pa.

LICENSED FILMS.

BIOGRAPH COMPANY.

		Feet
Nov.	22—The Open Gate (Dr.)	988
Nov.	25—The Mountaineer's Honor (Dr.)	977
Nov.	29—The Trick that Failed (Dr.)	645
Nov.	29—In the Window Recess (Dr.)	337
Dec.	2—The Death Disc (Dr.)	995
Dec.	6—Through the Breakers (Dr.)	974
Dec.	9—The Redman's View (Dr.)	971
Dec.	13—A Corner in Wheat (Dr.)	953
Dec.	16—In a Hempen Bag (Dr.)	455
Dec.	16—The Test (Com.)	545
Dec.	20—A Trap for Santa Claus (Dr.)	989
Dec.	23—In Little Italy (Dr.)	956
Dec.	27—To Save Her Soul (Dr.)	986
Dec.	30—The Day After (Com.)	460
Dec.	30—Choosing a Husband (Com.)	531
Jan.	3—The Rocky Road (Dr.)	990
Jan.	6—The Dancing Girl of Butte (Dr.)	984

EDISON MFG. CO.

Nov.	26—Annual Celebration of School Children, Newark, N. J. (Scenic)	300
Nov.	30—The Heart of a Clown (Com.)	600
Nov.	30—The Wonderful Electro-Magnet (Com.)	400
Dec.	3—The Keeper of the Light (Dr.)	965
Dec.	7—What the Cards Foretold (Com.)	420
Dec.	7—My Lord in Livery (Com.)	520
Dec.	10—The House of Cards (Dr.)	960
Dec.	14—Fenton of the 42d (Dr.)	860
Dec.	14—The New Policeman (Com.)	100
Dec.	17—A Gift from Santa Claus (Dr.)	920
Dec.	21—A Happy Accident (Christmas Story)	450
Dec.	21—The Mischievous Elf (Com.)	540
Dec.	24—Faust (Grand Opera)	1000
Dec.	28—Tobacco Mania (Com.)	360
Dec.	28—The Fallen Idol (Com.)	330
Dec.	28—The Cap of Fortune (Com.)	290
Dec.	31—Fishing Industry at Gloucester, Mass. (Industrial)	975
Jan.	4—Pardners (Dr.)	995
Jan.	7—The Engineer's Romance (Dr.)	670
Jan.	7—Ashes (Sentimental)	310
Jan.	11—Bear Hunt in the Rockies (Descrip.)	975
Jan.	14—A Warrior Bold (Com.)	475
Jan.	14—The Parson's Umbrella (Com.)	220
Jan.	14—Troop "B," 15th U. S. Cavalry, Bare-back Monkey Drill (Descriptive)	285
Jan.	18—In the Nick of Time (Dr.)	975
Jan.	21—The Coquette (Dr.)	495
Jan.	21—The Luck of Roaring Camp (Dr.)	490

ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.

Dec.	18—The Spanish Girl (Dr.)	975
Dec.	22—A Kiss in the Dark (Com.)	400
Dec.	22—Object: Matrimony (Com.)	635
Dec.	25—The Heart of a Cowboy (Dr.)	959
Dec.	29—Jack's Birthday (Comedy)	728
Dec.	29—A Policeman's Revolver (Comedy)	281
Jan.	1—A Western Maid (Dr.)	785
Jan.	1—Why He Did Not Win Out (Comedy)	213
Jan.	5—The Adventuress (Dr.)	525
Jan.	5—How Hubby Made Good (Com.)	473
Jan.	8—His Only Child (Dr.)	997
Jan.	12—Electric Insoles (Com.)	502
Jan.	12—The Old Maid and the Burglar (Com.)	498
Jan.	15—Review of U. S. Troops, Fort Leaven-worth (Scenic)	1000

GAUMONT.

(George Kleine.)

Nov.	13—Harlequin's Nightmare (Com.)	340
Nov.	16—A Convict's Heroism (Dr.)	638
Nov.	16—A Set of Teeth (Com.)	354
Nov.	20—Moon for Your Love (Dr.)	424
Nov.	20—Visions of a Nag (Equine Tragedy)	517
Nov.	24—Tulips (Educational)	105
Nov.	24—A Heart's Devotion (Tragedy)	842
Nov.	27—The Village Scare (Com.)	381
Nov.	27—The Mixup at Court (Dr.)	590
Nov.	30—In the Consomme (Com.)	491
Nov.	30—The Broken Vase (Com.)	472
Dec.	4—How to Get a City Job (Com.)	501
Dec.	4—X-Ray Glasses (Magic)	416
Dec.	7—Listen (Com.)	344
Dec.	7—Top-Heavy Mary (Com.)	283
Dec.	7—In a Pickle (Com.)	374
Dec.	11—Daughters of Poverty (Dr.)	953
Dec.	14—Nothing Is Ever Lost (Com.)	495
Dec.	14—The Life Buoy (Dr.)	446
Dec.	18—The Shepherd's Flute (Dr.)	528
Dec.	18—Cambyses, King of Persia (Dr.)	486
Dec.	21—The Stranger (Dr.)	935
Dec.	25—The Greek Slave's Passion (Dr.)	967
Dec.	28—A Clever Sleuth (Com.)	623
Dec.	28—Hush Money (Dr.)	361
Jan.	1—The Legion of Honor (Dr.)	1009
Jan.	4—The Wreck at Sea (Dr.)	625
Jan.	4—The Avenging Dentist (Com.)	319
Jan.	8—On the Bank of the River (Dr.)	604
Jan.	8—A Seat in the Balcony (Com.)	371

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

(George Kleine.)

		Feet
Nov.	23—Marriage of Love (Dr.)	452
Dec.	1—"Consul" (Com.)	810
Dec.	8—The Secret Chamber (Dr.)	623
Dec.	8—Capturing the North Pole (Dr.)	381
Dec.	15—The Red Signal (Dr.)	355
Dec.	15—Switzerland; Conquering the Alps (Scenic)	605
Dec.	22—Fiorella, the Bandit's Daughter (Dr.)	741
Dec.	22—From the Fighting Top of a Battleship in Action (Scenic)	263
Dec.	29—Battle in the Clouds (Scenic)	658
Dec.	29—Battle in the Clouds (Dr.)	658
Dec.	29—The Park of Caserta (Scenic)	201
Jan.	5—Tragedy at the Mill (Dr.)	612
Jan.	5—Shanghai of To-day (Scenic)	351

KALEM CO.

Nov.	24—On the Wrong Scent (Com.)	408
Nov.	27—Judgment (Dr.)	988
Nov.	19—Pale Face's Wooing (Dr.)	930
Nov.	26—The Governor's Daughter (Dr.)	955
Dec.	3—The Geisha Who Saved Japan (Dr.)	955
Dec.	10—The Rally Round the Flag (Dr.)	955
Dec.	17—The Law of the Mountain (Dr.)	875
Dec.	24—The Cardboard Baby (Fairy Story)	855
Dec.	31—A Slave to Drink (Dr.)	950
Jan.	7—The Deacon's Daughter (Dr.)	950
Jan.	14—The Romance of a Trained Nurse (Dr.)

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Nov.	18—Servant's Revenge (Com.)	610
Nov.	18—Foiled (Dr.)	375
Nov.	22—When Women Win (Com.)	550
Nov.	22—The Rubber Man (Com.)	270
Nov.	25—Martyr or Crank (Dr.)	580
Nov.	25—Finnigan's Initiation (Com.)	420
Nov.	29—A Life for a Life (Dr.)	850
Dec.	2—The Cub Reporter (Com.)	945
Dec.	6—She Took Mother's Advice (Com.)	465
Dec.	6—He Wanted a Baby (Com.)	460
Dec.	9—If Love Be True (Dr.)	950
Dec.	13—When Courage Fled (Com.)	250
Dec.	13—Jinks, the Grouch (Com.)	700
Dec.	16—Romance of the Rocky Coast (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	18—Two Christmas Tides (Dr.)	952
Dec.	20—The Policeman's Christmas Eve (Dr.)	440
Dec.	20—Three Christmas Dinners (Comedy.)	495
Dec.	23—Blissville the Beautiful (Comedy)	830
Dec.	27—The New Chief (Comedy)	495
Dec.	27—The Persistent Poet (Comedy)	525
Dec.	30—Three-Fingere Jack (Dramatic)	940
Jan.	3—Their Chaperoned Honeymoon (Com.)	816
Jan.	6—The Tattooed Arm (Dr.)	860

GEORGE MELIES.

Dec.	1—Seeing Things (Com.)	286
Dec.	8—The Fatal Ball (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	15—The Living Doll (Dr.)	1000

PATHE FRERES.

Nov.	19—The Nobleman's Dog (Dr.)	754
Nov.	19—How French Perfumes Are Made (Ind.)	230
Nov.	20—The Patient from Punkville (Com.)	551
Nov.	20—Adonis Is Robbed of His Clothes (C.)	417
Nov.	22—The Crocodile Hunt (Scenic)	266
Nov.	22—Late for the Recital (Com.)	656
Nov.	24—The Sleeper (Com.)	604
Nov.	24—A Convenient Lamp-post (Com.)	390
Nov.	26—The Bigamist (Dr.)	951
Nov.	27—The Mixed Letters (Com.)	584
Nov.	27—Chinese Amusements (Scenic)	397
Nov.	29—Bunch of Lilacs (Dr.)	423
Nov.	29—Spanish Marriage (Dr.)	551
Dec.	1—The Wolf Hunt (Scenic)	269
Dec.	1—A Legend of Orpheus	705
Dec.	3—The Three Neighbors (Com.)	413
Dec.	3—Forced into Marriage (Dr.)	561
Dec.	4—From the Egg to the Spit (Ed.)	398
Dec.	4—A Cask of Good Old Wine (Com.)	535
Dec.	6—The Lady's Companion (Dr.)	804
Dec.	8—Impossible to Get Sleep (Com.)	315
Dec.	8—The Evil Philter (Dr.)	623
Dec.	10—Masquerader's Charity (Dr.)	394
Dec.	10—Bear Hunt in Russia (Scenic)	564
Dec.	11—Exploits of a Cowboy (Scenic)	446
Dec.	11—Willyboy Gets His (Com.)	502
Dec.	12—La Grand Breteche (Dr.)	900
Dec.	13—The Tramp's Romance (Dr.)	541
Dec.	13—Repairing the House (Farce)	413
Dec.	15—The Ugly Girl (Dr.)	620
Dec.	15—Punch and Judy (Juvenile)	364
Dec.	17—The Lucky Number (Com.)	538
Dec.	17—The Strong Tonic (Com.)	433
Dec.	18—Hector, the Angel Child (Com.)	620
Dec.	18—Honey Industry (Industrial)	331
Dec.	20—The Death of the Duke D'Enghien (Dr.)	951
Dec.	22—Contest for a Handkerchief (Com.)	459
Dec.	22—The Love Token (Dramatic)	515
Dec.	24—The Birth of Jesus (Biblical)	525
Dec.	24—Agriculture in Hungary (Ind.)	826
Dec.	25—The Good Doctor (Com.)	590
Dec.	25—The Happy Widower (Com.)	384
Dec.	27—Bad Bargain (Com.)	630
Dec.	27—Marvelous Garlands (Scenic)	295
Dec.	29—Oh, You Doggie (Com.)	187
Dec.	29—A Well Earned Medal (Dr.)	728
Dec.	31—A Live Corpse (Com.)	610
Dec.	31—Corsican Hospitality (Dr.)	390
Jan.	1—Tabby's Finish (Dr.)	426
Jan.	1—Trials of a Schoolmaster (Dr.)	528
Jan.	3—The Marriage of the Cook (Com.)	562
Jan.	3—A Victim of Circumstances (Dr.)	459
Jan.	5—The King's Command (Com.)	561
Jan.	5—The Overzealous Domestic (Farce)	410
Jan.	7—Modern Highwayman (Dr.)	600
Jan.	7—An English Boxing Bout (Sports)	298
Jan.	8—The Last Look (Dr.)	587
Jan.	8—His Opponent's Card (Com.)	367

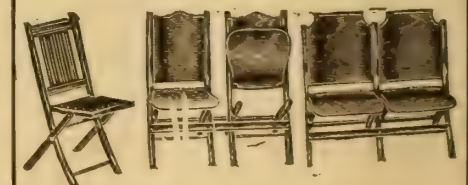
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.

Nov.	29—Brought to Terms (Dr.)	615
Nov.	29—Making It Pleasant for Him (Com.)	380
Dec.	2—An Indian Wife's Devotion (Dr.)	470
Dec.	2—A Million Dollar Mix-Up (Com.)	520
Dec.	6—The Engineer's Daughter (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	9—The Heroine of Mafeking (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	11—Pine Ridge Feud (Dr.)	975
Dec.	16—The Indian (Dr.)
Dec.	20—Through the Hood River Valley (Sc.)
Dec.	20—A Modern Dr. Jekyll (Com.)
Dec.	23—The Christian Martyrs (Dr.)	950
Dec.	27—Buried Alive (Dramatic)	1000
Dec.	30—A Daughter of the Sioux (Dr.)	985
Jan.	3—The Smuggler's Game (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	6—The Highlanders' Defiance (Dr.)	625
Jan.	6—Alderman Krantz's Picnic (Com.)	370

VITAGRAPH COMPANY.

Nov.	2—Adele's Washday (Com.)	432
Nov.	6—From Cabin Boy to King (Dr.)	958
Nov.	9—Into the Shadow (Dr.)	642
Nov.	9—A Sticky Proposition (Com.)	323
Nov.	13—Launcelot and Elaine (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	16—Benedict Arnold (Dr.)	685
Nov.	16—Indian Basket Making (Ind.)	245
Nov.	20—The Sins of the Fathers (Dr.)	985
Nov.	23—Why They Married (Com.)	905
Nov.	27—Jean Valjean (Dr.)	990
Nov.	30—The Bridegroom's Joke (Com.)	690
Nov.	30—Dirigible Balloons at St. Louis (Scen.)	275
Dec.	4—The Life of Moses (Dr.)	981
Dec.	7—A Lesson in Domestic Economy (C.)	684
Dec.	7—A Day with Our Soldier Boys (Sc.)	302
Dec.	11—Gambling with Death (Dr.)	933
Dec.	14—The Professor and the Thomas Cats (C.)	405
Dec.	14—A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year (Dr.)	586
Dec.	18—Two Christmas Tides (Dr.)	952
Dec.	21—The Forgotten Watch (Comedy)	413
Dec.	21—The Cook Makes Madeira Sauce (C.)	561
Dec.	25—A Midsummer Night's Dream (Dr.)	991
Dec.	28—The Power of the Press (Dr.)	997
Jan.	1—Cupid and the Motor Boat (Dr.)	940
Jan.	4—The Life of Moses (Biblical)	868
Jan.	8—Richelieu, or the Conspiracy (Dr.)	992
Jan.	11—Call Boy's Vengeance (Com.)	320
Jan.	11—The Old Maid's Valentine (Com.)
Jan.	15—A Sister's Sacrifice (Dr.)	970

Folding and Assembly Chairs



Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use

Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue

PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.

NORTH MANCHESTER, - - - INDIANA

Open Twenty Four Hours Every Day—Write, Call, Wire or Phone Any Hour, Day or Night

ELECTRIC THEATRE SUPPLY CO., Inc. The Home of Good Film Service The Birthplace of Original Ideas

We handle everything needed by Moving Picture Exhibitors 44 N. Tenth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

We have every subject issued by the Licensed Manufacturers

MOTIOGRAPH, PATHE FRERES, POWER'S, EDISON and LUBIN MACHINES and PARTS ALWAYS ON HAND

Write for our new propos.tion:—Supplying two customers in the same town each with twelve reels a week, keeping each one's supply away from the other, and no repeaters to either.

·Essanay Films·

Trade Mark Trade Mark

Three Notable Films This Week and Next

"THE ADVENTURESS" "ELECTRIC INSOLES" "FORT LEAVENWORTH"

THIS WEEK

RELEASE OF WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 5

"THE ADVENTURESS"

(Length, approximate 525 feet.)

A Great Dramatic Feature

and

"HOW HUBBY MADE GOOD"

(Length, approximate 473 feet.)

COMEDY

"The Essanay Kind"

RELEASE OF SATURDAY, JANUARY 8

A Big Drama from our Chicago Studios

"HIS ONLY CHILD"

(Length approximate, 997 feet.)

Get on Our Mailing List

Do You Show Essanay Films ? You Ought To

NEXT WEEK

RELEASE OF WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 12

COMEDY

"A la Essanay"

"ELECTRIC INSOLES"

(Length, approximate 502 feet.)

and

"THE OLD MAID and the BURGLAR"

(Length, approximate 498 feet.)

RELEASE OF SATURDAY, JANUARY 15

The greatest Military picture ever taken!

Essanay Photography

"REVIEW OF U. S. TROOPS—FORT LEAVENWORTH!"

(Length, approximate 1000 feet.)

Order Essanay Pictorial Posters

Essanay Film M'f'g., Co.

FACTORY and STUDIOS 1333 ARGYLE ST. - OFFICE 435 NORTH CLARK ST.
CHICAGO and LONDON, 5 NEW COMPTON ST. W.C.

You Will Admit

THAT unless the PITTSBURG CALCIUM LIGHT & FILM COMPANY'S Film Service possessed many points of Superiority, it never would have been accepted by the many users as the BEST and most SATISFACTORY service in the country.

HOW ABOUT YOUR INQUIRY?

Pittsburg Calcium Light and Film Co.

Pittsburg, Pa. Des Moines, Ia. Rochester, N. Y.

Wilkes Barre, Pa. Cincinnati, Ohio.

Omaha, Neb.

AT LAST

We can show and deliver the goods

Exhibitors are invited to call at our office, and see for themselves the exclusive service that we are importing, in conjunction with the American manufactured films

Beginning December 29th, we are putting into our film department, weekly, six European exclusive feature; three of which are Film D'Arts

EXHIBITORS' FILM EXCHANGE

INCORPORATED

138 THIRD AVENUE

phone 2775 Stuyvesant NEW YORK

A BIG SENSATION

WATCH FOR OUR

MONTHLY ISSUE OF

The "Nestor" Film De Lux

FIRST RELEASE

The Justice of Solomon

RELEASED THURSDAY, JAN. 6th

THE NEMESIS

Produced by

Centaur Film Co., of New Jersey

Full Sheet, Colored Lithographs with this Picture

SOLE AGENT

A. G. WHYTE

Importer and Exporter

1 MADISON AVENUE NEW YORK

CHERRY MINE DISASTER

A Complete Set of 36 Stereopticon Views taken on the spot by Hearst's Chicago Examiner

RENTED WITH PRINTED LECTURE AND ONE SHEET FOR LOBBY DISPLAY

RICE-McNEW Care of Brayton Mfg. Co. 122 Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

MOVING PICTURES SEEM TO BE LIVING

All the minor details recorded by the camera are reproduced so Bold, Clear and Distinct, the action so realistic you can almost hear them breath says a New York Manager, who is using BOLDINE CURTAIN COATING. Ask your exchange for Boldine or send $1.50 direct to WORTHINGTON STUDIO, 719 Christyann St., Mishawaka, Ind.

The Tide Shifts Our Way

Every exhibitor who sees what we have done for our customers in shape of Film Service, and then reasons with himself will, nay must, give us a trial.

A special assortment of Headliners. NO LEMONS
Films for sale at a reasonable Price

PHILADELPHIA FILM EXCHANGE
Members of the National Independent Moving Picture Alliance
Offices: 14 N. Ninth St., Philadelphia, Pa. 8 Light St., Baltimore, Md.

International Film Company
110 West 34th Street, New York

Dealers in Films, Moving Picture Machines, Carbons, Tickets, Song Slides, Announcement Slides and everything pertaining to the Moving Picture business. We have the New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Connecticut and Rhode Island State Rights for the Military Tournament Pictures taken at Camp Taft, Toledo, Ohio. Exhibitors wanting a drawing card, get in the line quick, as territory is being booked up rapidly.

NOTE OUR SPECIALTY—A1 Films at 2c. per foot.

INDEPENDENT

We rent new Films. Handle all the leading Makes, both AMERICAN AND FOREIGN; beautiful Posters; exclusive Feature Service. Write for prices.

CINCINNATI FILM EXCHANGE, 214-16 West 5th Street, CINCINNATI, O.

KEEP YOUR EYE ON US

AMERICAN FILM BROKERS—German Savings Bank Building
147-157 4th Avenue, New York City

300 sets second-hand Song Slides from $1.50 up. Films like new very cheap. Announcement Slides, Machines and Accessories of all kinds. Write for lists.

PITTSBURG McKENNA NEW YORK

Did you get one of our NEW CATALOGS?

Prepared especially for the man who wants information concerning

Brass Railings, Picture Easels, Grilles, Etc.

WRITE NOW TO

McKENNA BROS. BRASS CO.

1st Ave. and Ross Street PITTSBURG — "It's the Front that Attracts the Business" — 238 Broadway NEW YORK

FILMS FOR RENT

NEW FILMS—HIGH CLASS SERVICE

The Pioneer House, With 8 Years Experience And $250,000.00 Back Of It

Write To-day For Terms

EUGENE CLINE

57 and 59 Dearborn Street, Chicago

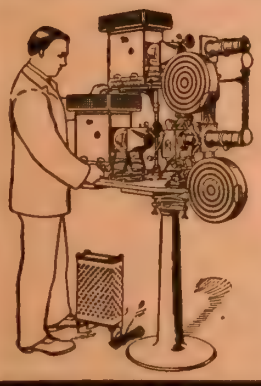
Vol. 6., No. 2. January 15, 1910 Price, 10 Cents

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

WHICH IS INCORPORATED IN THE EXHIBITOR

ALL THE FILM AND SONG SLIDE NEWS

Published Weekly by THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING CO., 125 E. 23d ST., NEW YORK



The Motiograph Motion Picture Machine is A Wonder

AND WILL INCREASE YOUR BUSINESS

It projects Flickerless, Steady and Wonderfully Brilliant pictures, has Patented 1½ minute Rewind from main crank, revolving Magazines, Automatic Fireproof shutter, etc., not found in other Machines.—WILL WEAR TWICE AS LONG.

C. H. D. of Keokuk, Iowa, writes: Motiograph Making a Big Hit and Business increased wonderfully.

F. L. F. of Chicago, Ill., writes: "Used every day for seven months, and not one penny for repairs."

F. J. K. of Kansas City, writes: "Operating Motiograph nearly two years. Have operated all makes, but none to compare with Motiograph.—PRICES, $150.00 AND UP

The Enterprise Calcium Gas Outfit is the only satisfactory substitute for electric light Write for Catalog to-day

Western Representatives { S. Lubin Geo. Melies

FILM

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564-572 West Randolph Street, Chicago

Calcium Gas Outfit

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

143 North 8th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA

Best and Newest Independent American and Foreign Films

SUPPLIES——18 REELS PER WEEK——SUPPLIES

PROMPT AND RELIABLE SERVICE

Members N. I. M. P. Alliance

Builder's Exchange Building, BALTIMORE, MD.

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

Power's Cameragraph No. 5

Power's Cameragraph No. 6

Guaranteed for 1 Year

"Power's" means Perfect in Moving Pictures

Power's Inductor for alternating current

Power's "Bill Splitter" for direct current

Power's Tool Kit

Send for Catalog G

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115-117 Nassau St., New York

LOBBY DISPLAYS

For M. P. Theatres

By special arrangement with

FRANK C. BANGS, the leading theatrical photographer of America, and MENGER & RING, display frame makers for the Shuberts, Chas. Frohman, Chas. Dillingham, Wagenhals & Kemper, W. A. Brady and others, we have secured a magnificent quartered oak, fumed-finish easel frame, 36 in. wide by 70 in high, of the celebrated

KALEM STOCK COMPANY

The pictures are the finest work of the photographic art, each mounted under glass, and the frame is identically the same in all respects as regular theatrical frames costing $65.00 each. By guaranteeing a large number of orders, and because of the fact that this is the dull season for this class of work, we have secured the remarkably low price of boxed for shipment F. O. B. New York.

$16.00 each

They will be sold to licensed theatres and exchanges only.

No amount of banners or posters will give a lobby the class and attraction of this frame. It will draw the best people to your house.

As there is no margin of profit for carrying accounts, all orders must be accompanied cash in full, or by remittance of $5.00 on account, balance C. O. D.

When payment in full is made with order, shipment can go forward by freight if desired.

Address all orders, with complete shipping directions, to

KALEM COMPANY, 235-239 West 23rd Street NEW YOKK CITY

PUZZLE PICTURE SLIDE

Show Puzzle Pictures in your theatre by using our new Combination Song Slide and Puzzle Picture Carrier which can be attached to any moving picture machine.

The slides are handsomely colored and your audiences will like them, as the carrier revolves the Puzzle Pictures on the curtain.

New sets of Puzzle Picture Slides issued each week.

Price of Carrier . . . $1.00
Price of Set, Seven Slides 5.00

Delivered Express Prepaid

EXCHANGE OF SLIDES

We will exchange any set of Puzzle Picture Slides for a new set at $1.00 per set per week. You mail slides to us and we will mail you a new set in exchange.

Write for circular giving full description, or start right away by sending $6.00 for set of slides and carrier.

Remember we prepay express charges.

National Slide Company

53 State Street, Boston, Mass.

?

YOU USE DEVELOPER OF COURSE—

HOW ABOUT

"AGFA"--METOL
"AGFA"--HYDROKINONE
"AGFA"--PYRO
"AGFA"--PARAMIDOPHENOL

Also Most Complete Line of Aniline Dyes for Film Coloring—Ask About it

BERLIN ANILINE WORKS

213-215 Water Street :: New York

No Pains Spared

To satisfy the most exacting and critical of both you and your patronage

Our Premier Film Service Is RIGHT

Right in { VARIETY, QUALITY and PRICE

Pittsburg Calcium Light and Film Co.

Pittsburg, Pa. Des Moines, Ia. Rochester, N. Y.
Wilkes Barre, Pa. Cincinnati, Ohio.
Omaha, Neb.

BISON FILMS

REGULAR RELEASE DAYS

TRADE MARK

TUESDAY
WEDNESDAY
FRIDAY
SATURDAY

FOUR REELS A WEEK

Tuesday - - - - - a "Bison"
Wednesday - - - - Ambrosio
Friday - - - - - a "Bison"
Saturday - - - - Itala

Tuesday, Jan. 11th, 1910
"BISON"

A Redman's Devotion

Code Verbal Approx. 950 Feet

A typical western production and one which has been given great care as to detail.

Wednesday, Jan. 12th, 1910
"ITALA"

An Episode of Napoleon's War With Spain

Code Visible Appaox. 775 Feet

This picture unfolds an interesting episode in the life of a great hero. The most talked of film throughout the continent.

Friday, Jan. 14th, 1910
"BISON"

A Forester's Sweetheart

Code Verdict Approx. 950 Feet

This film shows many points of interest—a daring rescue, an exciting chase, a strong duel, combined with a love tale.

Saturday, Jan. 15th, 1910
"AMBROSIO"

The Son of the Wilderness

Code Valuable Approx. 925 Feet

Direct from the studios of Ambrosio we present as our first release a masterpiece, which treats of the sacrifice of a young girl to save her aged father from a band of pllagers.

LITHOGRAPHS AND POSTERS FREE

Exhibitors:—We furnish as usual all exchanges handling these productions with one sheet four colored lithographs, also posters containing synopsis, absolutely free with each reel. Demand same from your exchange as they will positively increase your box office receipts.

Brief description of all subjects will be found on another page.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
Manufacturers of "Bison" Life Motion Pictures
429 Sixth Ave., Cor. 26th St., NEW YORK CITY
PHONE 6690-1 MADISON SQ.
Cable Address: NOSIB

The Actophone Co.

43rd Street and 11th Avenue
NEW YORK

Next Release, January 12, 1910

ROBERT MACAIRE

OR

The Two Vagabonds

A Version of the Comic Opera "ERMINIE"

SEE SYNOPSIS ON OTHER PAGE

Worse Than A Loan Shark

An exhibitor, who has turned independent since I exposed the methods of the licensed exchanges who charge a ten per cent penalty upon any exhibitor who switches his business from one licensed exchange to another, writes as follows:—"These licensed exchange fellows are worse than loan sharks. I was getting films from one of them at $60.00 a week. I changed to another and had to pay $66.00. The second exchange was so rotten that I wanted to go back to the first. Imagine my anger and amazement when they demanded $72.60. You see, they simply added ten per cent to the ten per cent already added by the second exchange. All this happened within two weeks. And like a fool I did not tumble to the fact that it was a put up job until I read your exposure in the papers." This is not the only thing that is driving exhibitors into the Independent ranks. They are finding out every day that INDEPENDENT FILMS ARE NOW THE VERY BEST DRAWING CARDS, the improvement in them having been nothing short of marvelous in the past few months. Try a week's service of my Independent films and I'll gamble you'll never want to go back to Old Mamma Ten Per Cent.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

THE LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE

Headquarters
196-198 Lake Street : : Chicago
Minneapolis, Portland, Omaha, Salt Lake City, Evansville
(Canadian Office in Montreal)

"The biggest and best film renter in the world."

GREAT NORTHERN
QUALITY FILMS
One Quality Only—THE BEST

Adwarded First Prize: Gold Medal and Prize of Honor at the Cinematograph Exhibition at Hamburg, 1908

Licensee under the Biograph Patents. All purchasers and users of our films will be protected from litigation.

NEXT RELEASE JANUARY 8th

Child as Benefactor

This pretty full reel feature story tells how a proverty stricken ne'er do well is reformed by the influence of a newsboy friend, who helps him to respectability.

RELEASE FOR JANUARY 15th

Death of the Brigand Chief

Dramatic feature production. Length approx. 690 feet.

Naughty Boys

Comedy. Length approx. 289 feet.

TO EXHIBITORS: Send in your name and address, and we will place you on our mailing list, and furnish you with a synopsis of our latest productions. Popular films never fail to draw the crowds. Therefore insist that your exchange supply you with the Popular Great Northern Films.

GREAT NORTHERN FILMS CO. COPENHAGEN

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

Member N. I. M. P. A.

7 East 14th Street - - New York

Well! Well! Well!

Messrs. Exhibitors, you certainly surprised us, it didn't take you long to recognize the great value of

NOVELTY
TRADE MARK
PUZZLETTES

"Amusing and Instructive Puzzle Slides"

This Novel Attraction has met with popular approval and is playing to S. R. O. only Rent a set from your exchange to-day the charge is small; Results are big.

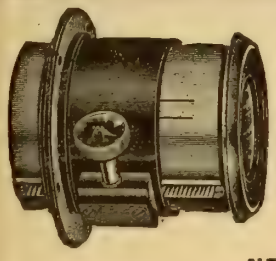
Series 1. "Cities of the U. S."
Series 2. "States of the U. S."

A NEW SUBJECT EVERY WEEK.

Write now for Free Catalog.

NOVELTY SLIDE CO.,
221 East 53d Street 10 East 14th Street
NEW YORK CITY

EXCHANGES GET IN TOUCH WITH US, we have inquiries from all over America to refer to you.



We make the best lenses in the world for projecting motion pictures and lantern slides. Can you spend a little money more wisely and profitable than by ordering a set of lenses which will

IT'S ALL IN THE LENS

IMPROVE YOUR PICTURES?

NEW PRICES

M. P. Projection Lenses any size with our improved jacket with spiral adjustment	$15.00
No. 1 Stereopticon Lenses	15 00
No. 2 Stereopticon Lenses	20.00

All dealers sell them on approval.

WRITE FOR OUR NEW CIRCULAR

When ordering state the size of your screen and the length of the picture wanted. Give the distance from the lens to the screen. Remit the price of the lens or furnish references.

CUNDLACH-MANHATTAN OPTICAL COMPANY
808 Clinton Ave., So. Rochester, N. Y.

SONG SLIDES

JUST ILLUSTRATED

L I D E — L I D E

Iv'e Just Got Time To Say Good Bye
Daddy's Doll
Could You Learn To Love Me
Dreams That I Dream Of You
My Irish Prairie Queen

We make Lantern Slides of anything and everything for any and every purpose

Send for our special prices on Announcement Slides

NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO., 143 North 8th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SONG SLIDES

Make This Your New Year's Resolution "GET A Hallberg"

Automatic Electric Economizer for electric installation, and save two-thirds on your current bill and besides improve your light about 100 per cent. on the sheet.

You have undoubtedly noticed that the "HALLBERG" Economizer which was the first reliable current saver on the market, was advertised over two years ago, and I at that time made the same claims which I am now making, and that the price of the "HALLBERG" Economizer has been the same during the past year.

Do you know what this means? I will tell you—It means that quality has been considered first, and that I have not reduced the material put into the Economizer since it was first made—In other words, it is today just as heavy and good as it ever was, and notwithstanding the fact that my competitors are selling would-be current savers at all the way from one-third to one-half less than I have to get for the "HALLBERG", I am putting in more of my Economizers than all of the rest put together.

There are reasons! ! ! This letter is one—

Archbald, Pa., Oct. 21, 1909

Mr. J. H. Hallberg,

Dear Sir:-

Since installing the "HALLBERG" Automatic Electric Economizer, the illumination is 100 per cent. brighter on the screen. Last evening an exhibitor from an neighboring town visited our theatre, and almost his first question was "where do you get all the light?" He is using an economy coil of another make, but confessed that we are getting far better results with your machine.

I regard the purchase of your Economizer as the very best investment we have made, as our patrons continually comment upon the brightness of our pictures compared with those shown in other places.

Yours very truly.
LYRIC AMUSEMENT CO.
Richard F. Foote, Manager.

Let me have your order now—I make an allowance in trade for your old rheostat on current saver.

My stock of moving picture machines and supplies is complete.

Write for Free Booklet 14-W.

J. H. HALLBERG, 28 Greenwich Ave., N. Y.

THE MASTERMARK OF PICTUREDOM

SELIG

SOMETHING NEW UNDER THE SUN AT LAST

Release Date Jan. 10 "GET THE SELIG HABIT"

A TALE OF THE BACK WOODS

A thrilling story of the early 70's full of sen sations, and the atmosphere of Human Nature.

Length 1000 Feet Code Word, Wood

TRADE MARK

Another Big War Picture

"THE SELIG KIND"

Release Date Jan. 13 UNDER THE STARS AND STRIPES

A story sensational, and bubbling over with patriotism and full of heart interest.

Length 900 Feet Code Word, Stripes

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE CO. Inc., 45-47-49 Randolph Street. Chicago, U.S.A.

THE MASTERMARK OF PICTUREDOM

SELIG

F. C. TAYLOR, 51 West 28th St., New York City

We have on hand at all times second hand machines in A1 CONDITION at prices equal to one-half of original cost. We are also Agents for The Motiograph and American Moving Picture Machines, and carry a large stock of accessories.

Our Operating School meets every Monday, Wednesday and Friday evening Complete course, $15.00. We positively guarantee you a $15.00 position.

CALL, WRITE, OR 'PHONE 1405 MADISON SQUARE

VITAGRAPH FILMS

THE FILMS OF "QUALITY"

Tuesday, January 11

The Callboy's Vengeance

A SIDE-SPLITTING COMEDY—A theatre callboy tampers with the orchestra music and instruments, and a strenuous time follows. Short, sharp and hilarious fun. Approximate length, 320 feet.

The Old Maid's Valentine

RICH AND ORIGINAL—A comedy with a humorous and witty plot, acted with tremendously funny effect. An old maid's strange valentine and the comical results that follow. This picture can be guaranteed as one of the most laughable films ever produced. Approximate length, 575 feet.

Saturday, January 15

A Sister's Sacrifice

A POWERFUL AND PATHETIC DRAMA—An older sister smothers her affections for the man she loves, that the younger sister may be happily married. The effective acting of the characters in this film is beyond praise. Approximate length, 970 feet.

COMING. PART III OF THE LIFE OF MOSES, January 25th. All five reels of this magnificent series will have been released early in Lent, giving opportunity for special exhibitions during that period.

ORDER VITAGRAPH POSTERS FROM YOUR EXCHANGES

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA { NEW YORK, 116 Nassau St. CHICAGO, 109 Randolph St. LONDON, 25 Cecil Court PARIS, 15, Rue Sainte-Cecile

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY - 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

EDITORS: J. P. CHALMERS, THOMAS BEDDING, F. R. P. S.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rica and the Philippine Islands.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3⅜ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.

TIME DISCOUNTS: 5% two or more insertions, 10% three months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

G. P. VON HARLEMAN, Western Representative, 913-915 Schiller Building, Chicago, Ill. - Telephone, Central 3763

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 6 JANUARY 15, 1910 No. 2

Coming Meeting of the Film Service Association.

The next semi-annual meeting of the Film Service Association will be held in New York City (January 29-31), instead of at Palm Beach, as suggested at the last meeting.

Summary of the Week.

The exhibitor shows more intelligence in the conduct of his business and is becoming more and more a factor in the field. (Page 47.)

* * *

The popularity of The Moving Picture World's exclusive feature of weekly comments on the films has brought forth many imitators. (Page 48.)

* * *

The toy moving picture machine a medium for cultivating a thirst for knowledge in the child. (Page 48.)

* * *

How are we to preserve for future generations great dramatic and scenic films which are worthy of preservation for all time? (Page 49.)

* * *

Consolidation of business interests a logical solution for the dangers of overproduction and excessive competition. (Page 49.)

* * *

The Kalem Company inaugurates a new feature for lobby advertising: Pictures of the actors before the camera. (Page 50.)

* * *

Non-inflammable film steadily improving in quality. * * * Motion pictures for advertising purposes. * * * Essanay Company elaborate in their stage settings. (Page 51.)

* * *

The Man-About-Town discovers a new use for the moving picture and nails down some idle rumors that are afloat. (Page 52.)

* * *

Observant exhibitors criticise some inconsistencies on the part of the film producer and give suggestions for interesting programs. (Page 53.)

* * *

Lux Graphicus goes gunning after a few "bores." * * * Edison Company announces some coming features. (Page 55.)

* * *

Items of interest contributed from far and near by World readers.

The Awakening of the Exhibitor.

The exhibitor as a factor in the moving picture field occupies a far more important position than he did this time twelve months ago. Then he did not know precisely where he stood with regard to political matters. His knowledge on that point in the interim has not greatly advanced, for he is still to some extent the sport of various factions contending for his business. At the present time there are at least four factions asserting themselves. In other words, a man just now starting in the business of running a moving picture theater has four distinct sources of supply whence he can draw his films: that of the associated manufacturers, the Alliance manufacturers, the unallied Independents, and the would-be successors of the International Projecting and Producing Company.

We do not want to talk about political matters in this article. What we want to do is to consider the influence on the exhibitor which the formation of these various factions has had and is having. It seems to us to be an educational influence. The choice of so many markets places the self-reliant exhibitor in a position where he can choose. And, indeed, from what we can learn, that is what the exhibitor in many cases is doing. He is selecting his pictures instead of having them handed to him to accept or reject, as the case may be. It is within our knowledge that he makes up his orders for films just as any other tradesman makes up his orders for goods. Daily and nightly contact with his patrons tells him what those patrons like in the way of pictures, and so he makes up his orders accordingly. He no longer takes just what an exchange chooses to offer him.

We do not say this is general, but it is common. A year ago it was not so. He just took what was given to him. But now, as always, the public is asserting itself in this matter. The public has made up its mind that it likes a certain kind of film: it wants to have it and it will have it. The exhibitor who ignores the public's wishes in this respect might as well close his theater. The applause of his patrons is the exhibitor's chief guide to successful business. He just gives them what they want, what they like, and what they ask for. The more closely an exhibitor studies the likes and dislikes of those whose dimes and nickels keep his theater going, the more successful he is likely to be.

Hence it appears to us that as a factor in the situation the exhibitor is quietly but surely becoming more powerful than ever. He has been educated by experience. He is beginning to talk quality himself instead of taking quality on trust. We have met, in these last few weeks, many intelligent exhibitors who are critical of the acting and of the photographic qualities of the films that are given to them, of the subjects of the stories and the way in which they are worked out. This is as it should be. The more intelligent interest that an exhibitor takes in the pictures that are sent to him the more favorably will this react upon the general quality of the entertainment with which he provides his patrons. The exhibitor, in fact, is beginning to pick and choose for himself, or, in other words, the public is beginning to pick and choose for the exhibitor as the representative of the public upon whom all sections of the industry rely for success.

We welcome this growing interest on the part of the exhibitor in the nature and qualities of the pictures that he chooses. We welcome the appearance in the business of men of intelligence and culture conducting moving picture theaters. The more of them there are in the business the better for the business and the public. We hope the education of the exhibitor will progress as rapidly this year as it has done in the past.

The Critic.

It was said, we think by Disraeli, that critics were disappointed authors. This is not the only unkind thing that is said about them. Critics are of several kinds. There is the critic of pictures, the critic or reviewer of books, the critic of plays. Artists, authors, actors and actresses, entertainment caterers fall foul of the critic sooner or later, simply because human nature being what it is, it is averse to the truth at times. Its inopportune publication causes angry passions to rise, with the usual conflict between author and critic. So it goes, leaving in eight cases out of ten the critic victorious. Those who challenge a public verdict must abide by the verdict of the public, of which the critic is merely the representative.

There is, then, no special glamor or attribute attaching to the office of critic in a newspaper. He is usually a man who understands the subject he writes about, be it paintings, books, or plays. He has devoted years to the study of these things from all aspects. And the result of his study is that he is enabled to present in print a rational opinion about what he sees or reads. Granting his qualifications, then, the critic may be looked upon as the mouthpiece of a great many other people who, as it were, depute him to say what they think as well as what he himself thinks. In other words, public criticisms are nothing more nor less than a consensus of public opinion.

The poet is born; the critic, on the other hand, is made. He is made by experience, study, training, thought, temperament, which are the things that mostly go to make up the critical faculty. We are all critics, more or less, with varying degrees of qualification. After all, criticism is merely the manifestation of a trained intelligence. Its expression in literary form is another matter. It is one thing to think about a given subject, another to have the ability or faculty to express those thoughts either in the press or by word of mouth, so as to convey to another person a clear and cogent idea of the critic's thought.

We are talking about critics and criticisms in this little article for a special purpose, namely, that of informing the reader precisely the functions and qualifications which are brought to bear in the writing of our film comments week by week. There is no mystery or illusion about these criticisms. As the conjuror says when he has finished a trick: "That is how it is done." Personally, we look upon published criticisms as healthy stimulants to success on the part of moving picture makers, exhibitors and the like.

We are not amongst those writing about the moving picture who have taken up criticism as a weapon, or as a means of drawing attention to their lean columns. We like the work, our readers like what we write, and so do the manufacturers. All this being thus, then, it is clear that our published criticisms on the moving picture fill a distinct place in the periodical literature of the subject. Once or twice lately there have been attacks published on the work of the critic by men who are unable to criticise, themselves, or understand the functions of criticism. Although we do not intend this article to be a reply to these deliverances, yet it may be taken to neutralize, or, rather, offset, the harm done by the self-confessed ineptitudes of incompetent scribblers.

The Young Idea.

One of the most pleasurable episodes which fell to our lot in the festive season had for its scene the toy department of a large New York department store. We went for the purpose of buying a Christmas present for a juvenile, and the Christmas present was none other than a small moving picture machine, costing, complete, three or four dollars. The toy department of this store on Christmas Eve was crowded with hundreds, if not thousands, of purchasers. We took a cursory stroll around the great store, studying the various branches of the toy industry there shown, and also the patrons and patronesses of the toys. Such a scene would have delighted writers like Dickens, Washington Irving and others who have written much about the Christmas spirit.

It is no exaggeration to say that the most sustained interest in the toys shown on that floor centered in the stall where these minute moving picture machines were being sold. We stood by for quite half an hour watching the types of people who bought these machines. They were intelligent men and women, mostly having children with them, and they showed a really remarkable amount of interest in this most popular of Christmas toys. Generally there seemed to be an air of real surprise that such an effective little machine could be had.

And it is an effective machine. We have seen it in working. There is your little oil lamp, lens, condensor, sprocket-controlled film operated by a crank, and showing an image of about eighteen inches in diameter of an excellently colored hand-drawn moving picture. You can buy extra films for thirty-five cents each, and thus for a small outlay the child can get a most delightful form of entertainment in the home circle.

We write this article and relate this experience simply for the purpose of recording, not for the first time, the intense fascination which the moving picture seems to exert upon the better classes of the community; for people spending four or five dollars on small toys are obviously drawn from the prosperous classes. What struck us was the real interest shown by the parents as well as the children in the phenomena and mechanism of the subject —in the construction of the projector and the nature of the film subject. All this is so much evidence, of course, showing the hold the moving picture has upon the public. We are reading here and there about theaters closing and occasional lapses into bad business. This sort of thing need not be seriously noticed. We are at one with the Jesuits, who are great educationalists: "Give us the child," they say, "and the future is with us." The moving picture in its better form has the support of the children in the community, and so long as these do not tire of the subject, so long will the outlook for the picture be of the rosiest.

The Life of a Film.

There are many film subjects made to-day, truly great films, which are taken out of circulation long before their popularity wanes. Exhibitors often demand from their exchanges a certain film, which they have not had on their programs, and which has long gone back to the shelves, notwithstanding the fact that they may have their choice of eighteen or twenty newly released films. But the film is dead and cannot be replaced unless the film exchange orders a new print of the subject from the manufacturer, which he seldom does.

Great films are like great books, immortal, or, at least, should be. English literature would suffer an unfathomable loss were the works of Shakespeare or Dickens lost or destroyed. The loss of some of the motion picture illustrations of these works would also be a calamity. The destruction of Versailles and its great art collections would be an incalculable catastrophe in the world of art. The art displayed in many motion picture films is equally worthy of preservation.

A prophecy that must necessarily come true is that some day film manufacturers will reprint and issue new editions of old subjects, just as publishers reissue new editions of old books.

The Essanay Company, of Chicago, has already received many re-orders for new prints from their great scenic subject released six months ago, "Wonders of Nature." This film subject is one that never grows old or tiresome, and it is probable that it will be viewed by future generations with as much interest and enthusiasm as it is to-day. Its success has been phenomenal, despite the objections of exchange men and exhibitors against scenic subjects: Which goes to prove that the picture-loving public is more discerning of art and more select in their tastes than their preceptors. The Essanay's European agent writes: "'Wonders of Nature' has run for three consecutive weeks at the Alhambra Theater, London, and is now entering its fourth week." This could not have been done in this country on account of the daily change humbug, consequently many people who wanted to see this film have been unable to do so. Films of this class, to cite but one example, are truly great, and effort should be made to preserve them, and repeat them.

Licensed Exchanges Consolidate.

It is very obvious that the great number of film exchanges in keen competition for a share of the business, is very largely responsible for many of the existing evils. Therefore we are glad to announce that two in the upper part of New York State have consolidated. At no time has the volume of business in that territory warranted so many rental offices, and the exhibitors in that region will find that they will now get better service and fewer repeaters. It stands to reason that one large distributing office in a territory can afford to buy more new reels by saving of rent and office expenses. If one clerk attends to all the shipments for a certain district he can see that competing houses always have different programs. The Rochester branch of the Pittsburg Calcium Light and Film Company and the Motion Picture Service Company, of Syracuse, have consolidated, and from their offices on the fifth floor of the Central building, in Rochester, the exhibitors in that territory will be assured of a better film service than they have ever had. The Rochester office is buying twenty-four new reels each week, and the effect of the consolidation should be to raise the quality of the service and increase the business for the exhibitor.

There are several other points where a consolidation of the exchanges would be mutually and publicly beneficial.

The Art of the Producer.

The production of a moving picture film is a work that calls for a greater diversity of talents than any other profession that we know of. This fact was forcibly impressed upon us one day last week as we watched the preparation for photographing one of the scenes in the Biblical series of pictures that are being issued by the Vitagraph Company. It was a scene in the series of the "Life of Moses," the one in which the Israelites are represented as crossing the Red Sea. The task of reproducing this scene called for all the skill of the magician and when it is thrown upon the screen the wondering audience will have very little idea of the amount of work and thought entailed in its production. But we said that we were impressed with the diversity of talent required in this field and we believe that no series of pictures better illustrates our point. The historian, the archæologist, the artist, the skilled mechanic, the scientist and the editor—widely different vocations—all seemed to be centered in the man who was directing the setting of this one scene, which would be cast aside after it had been photographed. But the series of tiny pictures, each one interpreting the mind of the artist as truly as the greatest painting, will live on for years to educate and entertain the picture loving public.

Building Upon the Sand.

A letter received from the proprietor of a leading independent film exchange is just the cue we were waiting for to sound a note of warning to the independent manufacturer. The letter was not for publication, but the writer thereof bewailed the impending disaster of an open market which he figured must follow the influx of importers and manufacturers of independent films. He points out that neither he nor any other independent renter is able to purchase the present independent output and the number is still increasing. Six months ago the independent weakness was in the paucity of the supply. To-day the weakness lies in the overproduction—for the few independent exchanges who buy cannot give the several manufacturers and importers adequate support. Price-cutting, the inevitable accompaniment of overproduction, must necessarily follow. With the cutting of prices comes a falling off in quality, so, unless there is some radical change, the business is on the verge of relapsing to the condition which exists across the Atlantic.

Curious to know what effect, if any, this inroad of independent films was having on the sale of the licensed product, we interviewed a Patents Company licensee, who assured us that their sales were on the increase, as was also the number of licensed exhibitors. He said: "It is no doubt due to the apparent laxity of the Patents Company in enforcing its claims that so many new manufacturers are springing up. These newcomers have concluded that if the patents were tenable they would have been enforced ere now against some of the manufacturers, or else they are valueless. That is where they fool themselves. Do you imagine for a moment that we would be paying tribute if we did not consider the patent claims can be upheld? In our position we were far better able to put up a fight than any of the present independent manufacturers and we only submitted after investigating every so-called non-infringing apparatus. 'The mills of the gods grind slowly, but surely.' The day of reckoning will come as soon as these manufacturers are worth attacking. The wise general does not waste his heavy ammunition in bringing down a mosquito. But, mark my words, it will not be long before the men who have been putting their money into these ventures will find that they have been building upon the sand."

PHOTOGRAPHS OF MOVING PICTURE ACTORS.

A New Method of Lobby Advertising.

Numerous have been the requests from exhibitors for photographs of the principal actors in the films. These requests have been showered on all the leading manufacturers and The Moving Picture World by exhibitors who desired the photographs for lobby display. For various reasons the manufacturers have held aloof from this form of advertising, but the Kalem Company has solved the problem by preparing a handsome lobby display of the members of their stock company, which they advertise in this week's Moving Picture World It is to be hoped that sufficient exhibitors will avail themselves of the offer to enable the Kalem Company to furnish these frames at the exceedingly low price advertised.

The Actors Before the Camera.

Managers of picture theaters and nickelodeons all over the country are making repeated urgent requests upon the producers of moving picture subjects for photographs of the principal actresses and actors taking part in them. Heretofore requests of this character have come from love-smitten patrons of the places. The managers of the places now see a big advertising advantage in the display of such photographs in the lobbies of their theaters. The idea is an old one as applied to the regular theaters and would more than make good in the picture field, but it is very doubtful that it in hearty accord with the exhibitors in the project, and so are the manufacturers. It is conceded that all good projects in the advertising line should receive hearty support from all quarters, but the people who play the parts in the pictures see the matter in a different light, and for that reason the work of transforming the lobbies of the picture places into photograph galleries is progressing very tardily. It is a matter of delicate sentiment with the actors and actresses. While the pictures have attained a distinct prominence in the theatrical field and are now recognized as a standard attraction, the people playing the parts in them are very sensitive about having their identity become known. In former days, when amateurs were principally employed for the parts, it would have been a very easy matter to secure photographs of them for the purpose now in view. At the present time the characters portrayed by the pictures are enacted by professionals. These people are only too glad to play the parts and do their work with the same zeal exercised in regular theatrical productions, but all of them try to shield their identity. They have an undisguised impression that the step from the regular productions to the scenes before the camera is a backward one. The speaking parts are cut out, so far as the audience is concerned, and in spite of the fact that some remarkably clever and effective work is done these days in the pictures, the fact that it is in reality pantomimic work makes the people playing the parts feel that their artistic reputations would suffer should it became known that they were playing parts in moving picture studios. Many of the professionals keep the theatrical managers and friends under the impression that during the period they are playing picture parts they are on the road with companies, doing straight. A great many of them apply for work at the picture studios only when no immediate engagement in the regular field is in view. They may stay with the picture concerns a day, a week, or a month, but never longer than is necessary to secure straight booking. This brings out one of the strongest points in support of the objection raised by professionals to having their photographs displayed in the lobbies of picture houses. Take a performer with a good vaudeville act who temporarily goes into the picture work and attains a distinction justifying the lobby use of his or her photograph. This display fixes the performer's identity with the public to a peculiar degree that the performer would find it difficult later in the season to secure a headline position on the billboard of a vaudeville house located in the vicinity of the place where the photographic display was made. Another argument is that professionals suffer pecuniary loss if the regular theater managers know they have been playing in pictures. Salaries paid performers in pictures, with few exceptions, approach the figures the same people get in straight work, and to keep up their standard of salary as much as possible the performers rarely let managers of the regular houses know they are or have been working in the pictures. These sentiments reflect in no way upon the ability of people who do play parts in the picture studios. There are as competent and able people playing these parts as any in the other line of work. Quite frequently the best people—recognized leaders in their respective lines—are engaged to play leading parts in picture productions, and recently the names of these people have been used in connection with the announcements, but always with a well displayed notice that the particular actress or actor was specially engaged for the production owing to peculiar adaptability to the part. At no distant day the stock company will be inaugurated in the moving picture studios and it will then be an easy matter to put the photographic display idea in operation. Many of the studios already have stock companies to a certain extent, but they are not sufficiently established to induce the players to allow general publicity in connection with their part in the pictures. Men and women are just bubbling over with impatience to see photographs of the people who play the picture parts, but they must wait a while. Conditions will eventually change and the performers will not feel that they have so much at stake as they do now; then the patrons of the picture houses will be able to feast to their heart's content upon the photographic features of their favorites. There are some good lookers among them, too.

NON-INFLAMMABLE FILM STOCK STEADILY IMPROVING.

Realizing the importance that the general use of non-inflammable stock would have on the business, a representative of The Moving Picture World visited the manufacturing plants of the manufacturers using the Eastman film and also conferred with the film exchange men. The general consensus of opinion was that while the early N. I. stock was faulty, as it did not possess the toughness and durability of the celluloid film, yet it had so improved that there was now little, if any, complaint. This is as we foreshadowed in our editorial of November 6, 1909—that all new commodities arrived at a state of perfection by a process of evolution and that the future of non-inflammable film could be safely left in the hands of the Eastman Company, a concern whose fame is worldwide for the perfection of their products. The processing of the early N. I. film stock seemed to greatly affect its material strength, which was soon discovered by the manufacturers and the Eastman Kodak Company. Immediate steps were taken to overcome the defects in the construction as well as in the processing of the N. I. film stock. The results attained to date have been so satisfactory that the present N. I. film stock has the apparent strength and durability at this time that was formerly evident in the old film stock of the celluloid base. One of the important matters in processing the N. I. film stock was the glycerine bath. It was found that when the N. I. film stock was manipulated without the use of glycerine it became dry and brittle and consequently cracked in a very easy manner, but when a strong glycerine bath, carried to its extreme point, was given to the N. I. film, its pliability was greatly enhanced and longer life to the film became evident.

The early N. I. film stock was also found to be about 1-1000 of an inch under thickness of the old celluloid stock, and this condition, together with the brittleness of improperly processed N. I. film stock, greatly assisted in the early unendurability of the film. One of the first steps to improve the strength of the film was to add to it thickness, and until recently N. I. film stock has been issued that was as thick as 7-1000 of an inch. This very materially assisted the strength of the N. I. film stock, but at the same time increased the 1,000-foot reel by nearly an inch in diameter, making it cumbersome to handle on the 10½-inch reel spool, and therefore causing difficulty in loading a thousand-foot reel spool into the film magazine. Fortunately, however, recent discoveries on the part of the Eastman Kodak Company have strengthened the N. I. film stock to the full extent of durability possessed by the previous old inflammable stock, at the same time reducing the thickness of the new N. I. film stock to practically the thickness of the old inflammable stock, and to-day the manufacturers of licensed films and the Eastman Kodak Company have concluded, after many serious tests, that the N. I. film stock as it is now offered is equal in every respect to the old inflammable film stock, and therefore the exhibitor finds himself in a most satisfactory condition as far as the safety of his audience and films are concerned.

In England, regulations are about to be adopted prohibiting the use of the old inflammable film stock, and it is a condition that will surely confront the exhibitor in America at a very early date, which cannot come too soon for the good of the moving picture business.

A TRICK OF THE FILM PRODUCER.

A representative of The World was recently invited to visit the Essanay studio by Mr. George K. Spoor to witness a most marvelous stage setting. "We have a story now in the making," said Mr. Spoor, "with two or three Summer scenes and, as it is impossible to make the picture out of doors, we have built a little Summer scenery inside the studio." Arrived at the Edgewater studio, The World man left the cold and snow outside for a veritable fairyland within. The setting is truly tremendous in size, while the detail in which the big imitation is abundant, lends an effect most realistic and beautiful. The scene represents a large garden, enclosed in a stone wall, looking toward a shady street. At the rear of the studio is an immense drop, covering very nearly the entire wall. Three-fourths of the entire floor space is covered with greensward, while a real gravel path winds up from the massive iron gates to the camera. Real flowers, growing in real soil, lend beauty to the scene. Fairyland, indeed! Several days, it is claimed, were required in setting this scene alone, while it is only too evident that it must have cost an enormous sum of money to prepare it. Twice the number of lights usually used were necessary in lighting this gigantic scene. The scene is one from an Essanay dramatic, soon to be released.

MOTION PICTURES OF THE WINE INDUSTRY FOR LECTURE PURPOSES.

Five hundred feet of moving pictures were taken at the Wahtoka (Cal.) vineyard and at the Calwa winery, under the direction of Horatio Stoll, secretary of the Grape Growers of California. In addition to this, a film was taken of the Fresno cooperage, showing the entire construction of a barrel, from the time that the rough staves are taken up in a heap until they are tightly bound together with iron hoops. The pictures are all to be used for the purpose of illustrating lectures to be given under the auspices of the grape growers, and will eventually be shown in all the cities of any prominence in the United States. Stoll lectured at the Seattle Exposition on grape growing in California, and gave Fresno considerable prominence, but was handicapped, owing to the fact that he did not have moving pictures. He was forced to illustrate with stereopticon slides furnished to him by Secretary Robertson, of the local Chamber of Commerce.

The taking of the moving pictures was quite an interesting procedure, and the films, when completed, will show the manufacture of wine in its entirety, from the time that the grapes hang in the vines until the juice is poured into properly labeled bottles, ready for the market.

The first pictures on the screen when the films are put into operation will give the Easterners an idea of the extent of California vineyards. Wide stretches of vines, in diagonal and horizontal rows and with their leaves glistening in the sun and partially covering the huge bunches of grapes, will be shown. Then will be seen the pickers, with their dexterous fingers at work, gathering the berries and laying them down quickly, but gently, upon the long line of trays.

In one instance, a life-sized Chinaman is to be shown, covering almost the entire screen and grinning with pride at the idea of being made the main subject of the picture. This scene was taken at the Wahtoka and one of the best of the Celestial pickers was chosen for the job. His long fingers will be seen as they wind about the bunches and part the stems from the main vines.

Then will be shown how the grapes are placed in wagons and taken away, to be dumped into still larger railroad cars and shipped away to the Calwa winery to be converted into wine. Every process is to be carefully portrayed, with a thorough explanation by the lecturers.

These pictures are to be shown, along with many others, some of which were taken at Asti, Sonoma County, of the great cream of tartar factory located there.

Pictures as Advertisements.

"People in Fresno and other counties," said Stoll, "have not realized up to this time the value of moving pictures for advertising purposes. The value of such pictures was never more fully illustrated than at the exposition in Seattle. During the exposition I lectured on the wine industry in California, but, while I had a good lecture to deliver, I was badly handicapped, owing to the fact that I did not have any moving pictures. Most of the other industries and many particular sections of the State did have, and, as a consequence, I was placed at a disadvantage. Los Angeles, for instance, had an excellent film showing the ostrich farm in the South. This film, although an old one to most California people, was new to a majority of the Eastern tourists who flocked to the lectures merely to see the great birds stretching their wings and their long necks on the canvas.

"I had only my stereopticon views, some of which were furnished by the Fresno Chamber of Commerce, through its secretary, along with considerable data of importance, which I was utilizing in my talks.

"Now, Fresno has no ostrich farm to show. But it has other things that are equally as interesting, and which could be pictured to advantage."

Stoll had a conference with Robertson, recently, and made a proposition that the Chamber of Commerce acquire duplicates of the films, to be used for advertising purposes. The original cost of taking the films is one dollar per foot, but duplicates can be secured for one-tenth of that amount. Stoll's proposition is that advantage be taken of these films, the original cost of which will be paid by his company, that they may be on hand for use in the future. Secretary Robertson was impressed with the proposition and will bring the matter before the Chamber for consideration.

The Actophone Company, another recent organization, started in to make use of the large plant of the defunct Cameraphone Company. They, also, secured the aid of men of experience in moving picture making and the quality of their work takes high rank. Regular weekly releases are made on Wednesday.

The latest innovation in New York City is heralded from St. Bartholomew's parish. The rector, Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks, has set aside a certain period of each Sunday afternoon which he calls "the children's hour." The attraction is a moving picture exhibition. One of the daily newspapers reports this as a sample program: "The Chariot Race from Ben Hur," "Washington Crossing the Delaware" and "The Prodigal Son." Of course, the rector's step will not escape criticism by the clergy who have faith in other methods for holding and directing the attention of the youthful in their flock. It certainly looks like a radical step, but if the learned rector attains the goal he has in view he will in time be credited with admirable foresight. It is up to him, however, to make hay while the sun shines, for the time is fast drawing near when a half-hour or hour of the time now devoted to instruction of pupils in the public schools will be devoted to moving picture demonstrations. It will then not be a matter of holding the attention of the children, but a method of instruction. Some pupils will read a page on history or geography over and over again and successfully pass examination upon the studies for the reason that they are letter perfect, but few of them achieve a conception of the subjects. They read and ponder, but they do not see. The brightest school children of to-day are those who patronize the moving picture shows. In fifteen or twenty minutes they grasp a situation that a night's study and a day's drilling cannot bring within their comprehension. To go down to details and their effects let us take the subject of "Washington Crossing the Delaware." The books describe this important historical event with a force that is readily absorbed by the mature mind, but the child fails to grasp it properly; first, because it is a compulsory absorption; second, because it is an almost mechanical effort to encompass the incident for examination and forget it when the ordeal is over; third, because it is soon crowded out by other studies. The mind is a powerful factor of the human system—in fact, it may be said to be the factor—but how many things become impressed upon the mind and gradually slip away. For instance, we read of some great event and subsequently read of others; but, if our minds are not refreshed, how soon one after another is forgotten. But let us see them, and how readily we say, "I saw that." The all-absorbing eye never fails. The civilized world is at present centering all attention upon the explorations of Africa as conducted by an ex-President of the United States. Every newspaper of the world contains an almost daily account of the progress made by the mighty hunter and explorer, and the leading magazines are publishing exhaustive articles concerning it, but all the type and paper in the world can never impress the events of the expedition upon the mind as graphically and effectively as the projecting machine. This is not a biased declaration. Aside from the students of history, how many people realized, after leaving school, the true situation attending the crossing of the Delaware by Washington until they saw it reproduced in oil painting or in the moving pictures? How many children or adults can read the "Prodigal Son" and understand it as they do after seeing it in moving pictures?

* * *

The rector of St. Bartholomew's parish will no doubt be criticized in many quarters for his Sunday afternoon moving picture venture, but in time his critics will concede that he is abreast with the times. While he is holding the attention of the children he is at the same time instructing them, and also promoting the idea of clean, wholesome pastime for the people at large. There are thousands upon thousands of people in the large cities who have only Sundays upon which to patronize the picture houses. On working days they are too tired after reaching home to go anywhere, and to them a good, clean picture show on a Sunday is a relaxation that can hardly be secured in other quarters.

* * *

During the past week there was quite a stir in the field of animated photography in Greater New York. A report got afloat that the licensed film exchanges had started a cut-rate war among themselves. In a measure the report was correct, but investigation showed that the reports were exaggerated. I made a circuit of the exchanges during the past week and I at first struck a trail that promised to furnish me with interesting matter for my letter, but before I finished the circuit I learned that, while there was occasion of some very serious apprehension a few days ago, affairs had assumed a more tranquil shape and there will be no war. From what I can learn the situation is this: Exchanges find that exhibitors are daily growing more circumspect, or, rather, particular, in their selection of films, and they claim that the returns are not sufficient to enable the rental exchanges to meet the demands. In other words, the exhibitors are keeping a close watch upon the release dates of film subjects and putting in their claims for "the latest thing that happens," but their business will not enable them to pay the price the exchanges think they should get for the newcomers. My informant would not let me into the details, but I learned enough to justify me in saying that the licensed exchanges will stave off a cut-rate war. It has been figured that such an event would undermine the rental business. Every exchange must try and make each subject purchased bring in its cost and a reasonable profit in so much time. If a subject fails to pay for itself, somebody will lose money—and the loser will not be the exhibitor. It may not be the manufacturer, either, but the latter is bound to be affected sooner or later if the subjects fail to bring in their cost, because the exchange cannot keep on paying out money when there is not sufficient return; this naturally means that the manufacturers must eventually lose orders, and that necessarily means a reduction in production. The party I interviewed laid stress upon the fact that he spoke only on the cost of subjects and did not take into consideration running expenses and a fair remuneration to the exchange man to keep body and soul together.

* * *

I gleaned that a rate war would demoralize the exchange business and eventually put some of the renters to the wall, so that there is very little prospect of such a combat. One renter said to me that "such a step would be suicide. There is no exchange in the country making the money some people imagine is made. All films must be paid for promptly and the expense is enormous. Say, for instance, I purchase only twelve reels a week (and that is small buying), my films cost me $1,200. Now, that $1,200 falls due every week. I must get 24 customers at $50 each to meet that expense alone, and look to other revenue to cover my rent, help, advertising and other numerous expenses before I have money enough to go to the market for my Sunday dinner. I will admit that some exhibitors are paying considerably more than $50 per week for service, but at the same time I will assert that a large majority of them are paying considerably less than $50 per week. I do not say that the renters are in the business as philanthropists and are not making money, but I do say that a film exchange is not a gold mine. My candid opinion is that there are too many exhibitors in the field. The same number of exchanges would fare better with a less number of exhibitors. I think I see a change coming. The speculators and grab-all men are steadily falling by the wayside. In time the conservatives will have the field and the exchange men will be better off."

* * *

Following up this expression of opinion I find that during the past three weeks a surprisingly large number of nickelodeons have gone out of business. I mentioned this to an authority the other day and he professed to be perfectly reconciled to the situation. He said it was just as he expected. It was simply a case of what is called in some circles overproduction and the sooner normal conditions prevail the better it will be for the legitimate investors. He declared that the moving picture business was not dependent upon the quantity of picture houses and added that no sane man can expect to hear that three or four picture places located on one block are all making money.

"What is your candid opinion of the situation?" I asked

"Well, before the flowers bloom in the Spring there will be far less picture places than there are to-day, but those that are left will make money. Next Fall the picture business will be on the level with the theatrical business and the money-makers will be the men who know something of the show business."

"This reduction in the number of places, then, will necessarily mean a reduction in the number of exchanges and in production of films."

"Not in the sense you put it. There will not be as many film exchanges, possibly, but there will be less competition. I believe that before the close of the coming Spring many exchanges will consolidate. There is a decided movement in this direction already in the West, especially in the licensed field; but this consolidation bears a healthy color. Exchanges that have been slashing each other are now on a co-operative basis. For a time this may have an effect on the manufacturing end, but that will eventually adjust iitself to conditions. To make a long story short, there is a decided trend towards extracting the hot air out of the business and getting affairs down to a paying basis."

OBSERVATIONS BY WIDE-AWAKE EXHIBITORS.

The Editors Invite Contributions for this page from Exhibitors who can Express an Idea that will be Beneficial to the Business.

MORE ABSURDITIES BY AMERICAN MANUFACTURERS.

By Hans Leigh.

When I made so many disagreeable remarks about the errors and absurdities in the production of "Dora," I had not yet seen "The Death Disc." This film does not contain anything so outre as the growing of a field of maize on an English farm, but in many other instances the historical falsehoods and anachronisms contained in it, put the mistakes of the author of "Dora" completely in the shade.

The scenes of "The Death Disc" are laid in England during the Cromwellian protectorate, and there is one thing about this period which every schoolchild ought to know, and which most of them do know. It is, that the Puritans wore short hair, and that in consequence of this they were contemptuously dubbed "roundheads" by the curled and perfumed partisans of the king. The artist seems to have been ignorant of this, and he has decorated the followers of Oliver Cromwell with bushy wigs—which wigs, moreover, do not resemble the long locks which were fashionable among the royalists. On top of these ridiculous chignons, he has perched in each instance a helmet of the type known as "the morion." I cannot say exactly when morions went out of fashion, but they were in general use when England was invaded by the Spanish Armada in the early part of the reign of good Queen Bess. I cannot recall any pictures of men in morions in any subsequent reign. They may have been used in the earlier portion of the reign of King James I., but I doubt it. Anyway, the followers of Cromwell wore helmets as round as their heads, and if a soldier topped with a morion had suddenly appeared among them, the whole army would have shrieked with one voice, "Where DID you get that hat?" Nevertheless it seems to be good enough for a manufacturer who prides himself upon his "correctness of detail." Also among the figures in this picture, I noted several clad in trunk hose. At the period in question men were wearing rather baggy knee-breeches, and a man in trunk hose would have aroused as much curiosity as would be created in New York were the Old Patroon suddenly to make his appearance in front of the Flat Iron Building.

Each title in this remarkable film is embellished with a verse of doggerel, of which the following is a specimen:

> Lord Cromwell has this day proclaimed,
> For the Church of England's good,
> The death of three brave soldiers
> Who have that faith withstood.

Now, Cromwell never was a lord. It is true that he held the office of "lord protector," but his office no more conferred the title of "lord" than the office of lord mayor of Liverpool does upon the various aldermen who from time to time are honored with it; and the artist might just as properly call the president "Lord Taft," or call the king of the ring "Lord Jeffries."

Secondly, Cromwell would not have dared "proclaim the death" of three British soldiers, in time of peace, without trial by jury (or at least by court martial), to which they possessed a right.

In the third place, Cromwell would never have done anything "for the Church of England's good." Cromwell was an independent churchman—a Congregationalist. He hated the Church of England, and as a matter of fact, the Church of England was at that time practically out of existence. The episcopacy had been abolished, as far as the Puritans were able to abolish it, the Anglican liturgy had been interdicted, and the clergymen who adhered to the Anglican forms had been driven out, and their benefices handed over to Presbyterians and Independents. The Church of England, insofar as it had any existence left, was devoted to the king, and Cromwell hated it as the most bitter enemy to his power. This hatred, however, was purely political. In a general way Cromwell was a supporter of religious liberty, and it is well remembered that it was he who brought the Jews back to England, after an exile which had lasted for generations. It will, therefore, be seen that the picture artist of to-day who depicts "Lord" Cromwell as killing three soldiers "for the Church of England's good" is about as sensible as the artist of the next century who might picture Pope Leo XIII. as president of the A. P. A.

There are other points of weakness which I might enlarge, but I prefer to pass on to the picture "The Heroine of Mafeking." This film is full of absurdities. According to this artist, any old uniform is good enough for a British soldier, and instead of the rough service uniforms worn in Africa, we see costumes such as could only have been evolved by the sartorial artist of an American secret society. The height of absurdity is reached, however, when the British officers are made to ride in Mexican stirrups. I will pass over the fierce charges and hand-to-hand fighting by the Boers with the simple reminder that the Boers fought from behind cover and never charged the entrenchments at Mafeking, nor, do I think, at any other place.

One of the most interesting scenes is that of "the Highlanders wading the Tugela River to the relief of Mafeking." The only trouble about it is that there were NO Highlanders at the relief of Mafeking, and that the Tugela River is nowhere near Mafeking. It would be just about as reasonable to picture an American force as wading the Monongahela to the relief of Council Bluffs, Ia.

There are a good many other absurdities in "The Heroine of Mafeking," but I will pass them over to touch upon an error which characterizes this picture in common with every other American production I have ever seen—that is the mixing and muddling of the titles of nobility. In American pictures titles are seldom, if ever, used correctly. In this picture the error is in using the title in the signature of a letter. A British peer never signs his title to a letter. If Earl Roberts, or Earl Grey, or the Earl of Minto, or the Marquis of Lansdowne, or the Duke of Devonshire are signing letters or papers, they sign simply "Roberts," or "Grey," or "Minto," or "Lansdowne," or "Devonshire"; and lest the picture artist may be led into error by this, I shall add that while I have used quotation marks, they do nothing of the kind. Likewise, if a knight or a baronet, signs his name to a letter, he signs it simply "John Smith" or "John Peters," as the case may be, and he does not use quotation marks. The same is true of courtesy titles, such as "Lord Arthur Ralston," the hero in the Mafeking picture, who would have signed his name "Arthur Ralston." Moreover, British officers do not prefix their rank to their names in writing a signature. An English colonel will sign himself, for instance, "John Davidson, colonel commanding H. M. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers." Col. Lord Arthur Ralston, according to the artist, commands "Her Majesty's Rifles." This is a small absurdity, but one nevertheless that counts. The initials "H. M." are prefixed to the name of every regiment, just as they are prefixed to the name of every ship of war, and there are many regiments of Rifles. It is not, therefore, correct for the commanding officer of a rifle regiment to sign his name as of "H. M. Rifles." He should desigante the regiment by name.

Now it seems to me, sir, that until the American manufacturer is willing to take the trouble to be right, with regard to foreign subjects, he will do well to stick to the land of the free.

AN EXHIBITOR WHO RUNS A MODEL SHOW GIVES SOME TIMELY ADVICE.

In The Moving Picture World of December 25 was a letter from Chas. R. Wilhelm, Chicago, Ill., that spoke in regard to the different kinds of low-class films and slides that are being exhibited, such as "The Red Girl," "Cherry Mine Disaster," and Western films of killing and bloodshed. Mr. Wilhelm's letter is very good and he deserves to be complimented on the same. Now I wish to say, in regard to moving picture films and the class of stuff that is offered, that the fault of the same lies chiefly among the exhibitors themselves. Anything that an exhibitor likes he labors under the false idea that everybody else should like the same; this is a very wrong belief. If an exhibitor thinks that Western pictures, such as stage coach hold-ups, train robberies, and the Indian massacres, are suitable to all his audience, because he or some of his rear seat patrons are pleased with the same, it is a mistake; ladies, children and the church-going element, or, in fact, the good, clean-thinking class of people, do not relish this kind of dope. If we had more high-thinking men operating the moving picture theaters it would be a greater uplift than all the censor board could do for it. This class of people would make the moving picture theater a place for good-thinking people to go and they would not exhibit suggestive trash, the same as is now being exhibited before the public. I know of exhibitors who make it a practice to show a certain amount of good religious film, and this tends to uplift their business. What is there better for an exhibitor to show than "The Passion Play," "The Life of Moses," "The Prodigal Son," "Samson and Delilah," "The Holy City," and various other good religious films? But if you mention this to some of the exhibitors they will say: "Oh, 'The Passion Play' has been shown here once or more." It is to laugh at this reply. How many times has "The Stage Coach Hold-up" been shown in the same theater? How many times have various other films, such as "The Train Robbery," counterfeiting films, kidnapping films, unwritten law films and many other blood-and-thunder films with the plot and outlines practically the same as were shown just a short time before? Take, for instance, the two different films under the same name, such as "The Cabman's Delusion," made by two different makers; they are practically an exact reproduction of each other. Is not every stage coach hold-up film similar to its predecessor? The exhibitor to-day is showing practically an exact reproduction of the very same films that he has shown a half-dozen times before; perhaps under a different name, but the plot and action are about the same thing, therefore it is practically a repeater. This same man would not run good feature stuff, such as "The Passion Play," because it had been shown before. This false belief is his loss. I have seen "The Passion Play" exhibited four different times in the same city, and the last time the business was as large as any of the previous times, and the only reason for it is that the people want to see this class of stuff, but they do not get the chance. The exhibitor ignores his people's desires to gratify his own, in showing what he wishes. His business falls off, or, in other words, his better class of trade leaves him, and he wonders why. The answer is this: Show better films, such as "The Passion Play" and other good religious stuff; get the church-going class of people coming to your theaters, and you will not only have the patronage of the church-going class, but you will get along then without their enmity and opposition, for by showing good, clean stuff that appeals to this class of people, they will come themselves, they will send the children, they will not object to their wives attending moving picture shows, and last, but not least, they will not advocate and support city and State laws that tend to put the moving picture exhibitor out of business. The moving picture exhibitor can boost his business if he will show the right kind of stuff. I would much rather have the good-will of the right-thinking class of people than the cheap praise of some barroom tough, whose gratification is to see prize-fights, blood-and-thunder films and other rot. L. B.

FUNNY FACTS ABOUT THE JOHNSON-KETCHEL FIGHT FILMS.

A great deal has been said regarding the lack of enterprise on the part of licensed exchanges in connection with "special" or "topical" subjects, and the Johnson-Ketchel fight films seemed for a time destined to be "passed up" by many of the exchanges who fail to keep their finger on the pulse of the people. The wise ones, however, who ventured have no cause for regret, as for instance, the Lake Shore Film and Supply Company, of Cleveland, Ohio. They contracted for one copy of 3,600 feet and now find it necessary to use three copies as exclusive owners of the Ohio rights, and the following incidents illustrate the interest shown in this particular attraction in Ohio:

Two managers of opposition piciture shows in a little "tank town" up State wrote in simultaneously for dates. Both gave their capacity and as both happened to be about 100 seats with population of 1,200, Manager Sam Bullock, of the Johnson-Ketchel fight department, could not see much in sight on a percentage basis, so each got a courteous "stall" accompanied by the regular straight rental quotation of $50 per day and each was reminded that "if you have a large hall or opera house in town go to it and you will doubtless get a nice piece of Christmas money over your expenses. We will try to fill in convenient to bigger bookings; thanking you, etc."

Then Sam dismissed the subject from his mind, never expecting to hear from either one again. The next noontime the telephone girl called out: "Tanktown is calling on the long-distance Bell." Then this happened:

"Hello, Tanktown, Bullock talking; Lake Shore, Cleveland!" Then this is what Bullock heard, all in one breath: "Hello! This is Smith, of Tanktown, Mister Bullock! Say, got yer letter an' got the opery house, tew, seven hundred settin' an' room for a cupple o' hundert standin' back of 'em. I bill all the leetle place 'raound here an' I played to nine hundert on that Ganz-Nelson, at twenty-five and fifteen; so send me a contract at fifty straight and I'll sign and send a draft fer fifty with the contract—the fust date open—don't care when, so I get fust—I don't wanter talk long—it costs money on these dang fones—good-bye!"

"Well, I'll be—if that isn't the limit for—"

"Tanktown wants Mr. Bullock on the long-distance, Cuyahoga 'phone!" again called out the telephone girl. Then this followed:

"Say! This is Jones, of Tanktaown, talkin'! Say, I've got the opery house an' I'm sendin' fifty; send me yer contract fur the fust date yuv' got—hain't particular fur a few weeks so 'm fust—want time enough ennyhow to bill heavy outside—Say, send me tew three sheets, six half sheets, six one sheets 'n' five hundert dodgers. By heck, I'll bill it like a cirkus—yer fifty 'll be on the way in five minutes an—"

"Wait a bit, Mr. Jones," said Sam. "You say you have the opera house?" "Yep!" "But Smith of your town says he has it. Now look here, Mr. Jones, whichever one of you sends in his fifty first, accompanied by a line from the manager of the opera house, he gets the Johnson-Ketchel fight!" "That's a go!" yelled Jones and communication ceased immediately.

Scarcely ten minutes elapse when both 'phones rang simultaneously. "Help!" yelled Bullock. "Joe" Diener took one and Sam the other, and this came like a shot to Sam: "Say! this is the manager of the Tanktown opery house, an' if thet fellow Jones tells you thet he hez my place booked, he's bluffin', that's all!" "Hasn't he got it then?" "Nosiree! What wud I let it tew a Demmercat like him fer when a good Republican like Smith wants it?" This was a poser for Sam, who is a rank Tom Johnsonite, but he recovered quickly when the manager assured him emphatically—"I'll Okay nubuddy's date but Smith's—that Jones hez fit me fur ten years in politics an' I've got him naow!"

"All right, O. K. the man you want, Mister Manager, and send it in. Good-bye!" Then he listened while Joe also told Jones to get a line from the manager and all would be well. Needless to say Jones could not produce and the lecturer who went with the film says that Smith played to the entire population of Tanktown and several villages besides, regardless of political or other beliefs.

Sam says the Johnson-Ketchel attraction is in more demand than ever and will increase as the time approaches for the match between Johnson and Jeffries.

THE FIGHT PICTURES IN NEW YORK.

In reply to numerous inquiries we desire to announce that the Kleine Optical Company controls the Johnson-Ketchel fight film for the States of New York and New Jersey. Terms of hire and full particulars may be had by addressing the Kleine Optical Company, 19 East Twenty-first street, New York City (Rental Dept.).

* * *

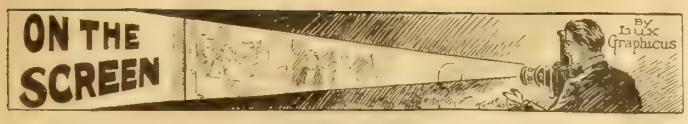
So far as we have been able to learn: no arrangements have yet been concluded for the photographing of the forthcoming Johnson-Jeffries fight.

INDEPENDENT MANUFACTURERS

The Pantograph Corporation will make their first release on Saturday, January 22 (instead of Friday, as announced by the secretary of the N. I. M. P. A.). This concern has been quietly at work for some months and have a quantity of negatives on hand. They have equipped a studio at Nepera Park. From the exchanges who have been shown advance copies of their work we learn that it is of the finest quality, both as to subject and photography. This was to be expected, as the officers and directors of the corporation are all well known business men and they have gathered around them from this country and Europe experienced help in all branches of the business.

* * *

The Phoenix Film Company announce a double reel, "The Celebrated Case," the stories of which are exceedingly interesting. Through the testimony of his child a soldier is sentenced to penal servitude for a crime of which he is innocent. The attending circumstances are detailed in the first reel, which will be issued on January 13. The second reel, issued the following week, relates how the girl discovered the real criminal and set her father free. The story is one that possesses great dramatic possibilities and the two reels should be shown on consecutive weeks. We are told that the Phoenix Company have spread themselves to make this film a winner for the Independent cause, and no doubt they will receive the hearty response of the Alliance exchanges.



The moving picture industry is an infant amongst modern industries and yet small as it is it has developed all the characteristics of much older ones. It is an industry in the making, and in the making, of course, it is gathering to itself all those distinct elements which go to the making of a homogeneous whole. In other words, in two or three years, order has been evolved out of chaos, and that which but a few hundred days ago was a mere speck in the general scheme of things, has become an organization in process of development and perfection.

* * *

The foregoing, dear reader, looks like a formidable paragraph, but really it is not. It simply means to say that the moving picture field has been long enough in existence to evolve some distinct types and personalities. Of course, I could have said all this in a much simpler way, but then I want to give a young mind down in Chicago something to think about and, if necessary, something to write about. Moreover, besides a person of horoscopical tendencies, there is a pensioner at No. 1 Madison avenue to be considered. These three persons week by week derive their chief substance from this page, so that, being full of pity for their mental sterility, I open this week's paragraphs in the manner specified in order to set these people thinking about what is to follow.

* * *

And what is to follow is just one or two reflections on the types I am meeting in the moving picture field. They are perfect parallels to those which I have met in other fields. There is, first of all, the solemn idiot who tells you that the moving picture has come to stay. He is a numerous idiot. He abounds, to some extent, even in the moving picture press; he is certainly a frequent writer in the ordinary newspaper; but above all he (and she) are common objects in ordinary society. You meet him and her in the domestic circle, in the street car, in fact in every place where the subject of the moving picture crops up in conversation. Almost the first words which the average ass tells you is that the moving picture has come to stay.

* * *

If a society was started for the assassination and extinction of the average ass who assures you that moving pictures have come to stay, I would cheerfully make a subscription to it and serve on the executive committee. For the average ass of this kind is an unmitigated bore, and an unintelligent bore, who makes miserable the lives of those of us who rebel at too much discussion of the obvious. For of course the obviousness of the stability of the moving picture is as manifest as the lack of stability amongst some of our contemporaries.

* * *

Second on my list of bores is the man who gave Thomas Alva Edison the idea for his invention of moving picture machines. If this type is to be believed, somewhere around about 1893 Mr. Edison must have been in receipt of hundreds and hundreds of communications pointing out to him how the kinemascopic principle was to be availed of for projection purposes. In other words, the country is overrun with philanthropic persons who have given their great ideas to Mr. Edison and who now slap their manly chests and say proudly, "I told you so. That was my idea so many years ago."

* * *

It is related of that stupid old George IV. of England, that in the last years of his life he used to talk to the Duke of Wellington, the victor of Waterloo, about his achievements in the field. "I won the battle of Waterloo, didn't I, Wellington?" the old king used to say. Wellington was too much of a courtier to flatly contradict George IV., so he would adroitly reply: "I have heard your Majesty say so." I find myself much in the same frame of mind as Wellington, when listening to the many discoverers of the moving picture camera and projector, who have confided the secret of their discoveries to me and who are proud of having given Mr. Edison his ideas. Civility obliges me to refrain from calling them infernal liars, and so I am forced to adopt the Wellingtonian tactics of polite acquiescence.

* * *

If these bores were killed off the earth they, to quote W. S. Gilbert, "never would be missed." But I am afraid that in the present state of American civilization it is not possible to take the obvious course of cutting these people's throats and throwing them into the nearest river. We have to tolerate these bores as we have to tolerate other types that are rife in the moving picture field to-day. I did not specify these latter. They are quite obvious to anybody who takes an intelligent interest in current happenings. But above all the bores commend me least of all to the two I have specified, namely, the "it has come to stay" bore, and the "self-styled inventor" bore. So that if any of these kind read these paragraphs this week, I hope they will take timely warning of my state of mind, which is a very murderous one in this regard. For I carry pistols, knives, poison and other deadly things for the purpose of killing right off the first bore who again bores me about the painfully obvious. People of this kind are recommended to go to Chicago, where they can pour out their stories into more sympathetic ears than mine, and provide a cub reporter with material for cheap copy that he is in urgent need of.

EDISON MANUFACTURING COMPANY NOTES—CONCERNING EDISON RELEASES.

On January 21, the Edison Manufacturing Company will release "The Coquette," said to be a true incident of the Philippine insurrection. The film is a strong dramatic story in which an officer of the United States army, dying on the skirmish line, discovers his seal ring upon the finger of a brother officer, in whose arms he is being held. Inquiry develops the fact that the ring, which had been given by him to a young lady in the Western States, to whom he was betrothed, had in turn been given by her to his brother officer, with whose affections she had also trifled. The last scene of the film shows the just retribution that was meted out to her and gives scope for some intensely dramatic action. The battlefield scene, too, is well pictured and realistic in the extreme.

Bret Harte's "Luck of Roaring Camp" will also be released on the 21st inst. In this picture the Edison Company has tried to preserve the Bret Harte flavor throughout and has followed the original story up to the last scene, where some liberty was taken with it in order to give the film a happy ending. It should prove a charming film because of the delightful blending of humor and pathos throughout and the exceptional opportunities the story suggests for photographic work.

"A Woman's Strategy" is the subject for release on the 25th. It is dramatic in character, having to do with the false accusation of dishonesty laid against a bank clerk by his fellow employee and rival in love; with the discovery by his fiancee of a bloody thumb mark on the wrapper taken from the roll of bills which he was accused of stealing; with her following this clue and arranging to secure a copy of the thumb mark of the accuser, and, lastly, with a vindication of innocence and condemnation of guilt.

Mlle. Pilar-Morin in a New Edison Film.

Mlle. Pilar-Morin, the celebrated French pantomimist, who is under a year's contract with the Edison people and whose great film "Comedy and Tragedy" will long be remembered as the most notable release of the past year, is to appear in another film, to be released on February 1. The title of the film is "The Japanese Peach Boy," and it depicts a fairy story founded on an old Japanese legend, which was put into pictorial form for the Edison people by Mlle. Morin herself. In this picture Mlle. Morin appears as two characters, assuming first the role of the mother and later on the grown-up son. The story is said to be very interesting and is as well known in Japan as "Puss in Boots" and "Cinderella" are known in this country. While the story is of a much different order from that in which she made her first appearance, this film gives Mlle. Morin every opportunity for the display of her wonderful art. With the success created by "Comedy and Tragedy" still in the public mind, this new film is sure to be in great demand and will be made a feature picture everywhere. It is said that the photography throughout is of a superior order and that some of the scenes are of a character never before attempted in motion pictures. The film, while of a special interest to children, will be eagerly awaited by all who saw the work of this eminent French artist in her first appearance.

A GOOD INVESTMENT FOR 1910.
A subscription to the
MOVING PICTURE WORLD, $2.00.
That means four cents each week.

COMMENTS ON THE FILMS

"The Battle in the Clouds" (Urban).—A graphic picture illustrating what may occur when the airship is sufficiently perfected to become the engine of destruction which some of its devotees believe is possible. The wealth of scenic effect, the startling combats with their sensational results, the love story woven into the picture, and the numerous wrecks of these vehicles of the air, all combine to make a very sensational and entertaining picture. It is impossible to describe it, but perhaps it is sufficient to say that it abounds in climaxes and anti-climaxes, which are important adjuncts to the general run of the story. The audiences watch this film with great interest, and it must be confessed that the predictions for the future which it contains are well worth careful study by those who are fortunate enough to see this beautiful film.

"The Park of Caserta" (Urban).—A beautiful park, situated upon the Mediterranean Sea, which contains untold sculpturesque treasures and also innumerable other treasures. The reproduction is reasonably faithful and affords ample opportunity to study what is said to be the most beautiful park in the world.

"Oh, You Doggie!" (Pathe).—A bit of comedy from this house which justifies the reputation which it has established for this sort of work. The picture is satisfactory technically, and there is no question about the fun the picture contains. It is, therefore, reasonably certain of being well received wherever it is shown.

"A Well-Earned Medal" (Pathe).—One of those pathetic pictures which makes one wonder whether there is any truth and justice in the world. Here is a sailor boy who is expected home, and his friends, including his sweetheart, are ready to meet him, but instead of receiving their friend, as they expected, they receive in place only the medal he won for bravery. He has been killed. Such pictures are unquestionably bits from real life, but they are so pathetic that one sometimes wishes they would cease to exist. Want and misery and suffering are all around one, with no necessity for reproduction on the motion picture, or any other stage.

"Jack's Birthday" (Essanay).—One of those uproarious comedies from the Essanay studio, in which there is a general mixup of gifts, a jealous husband who thrashes a janitor and shuts a policeman into a folding bed, thus christening their new home. The comical situations are sufficient to raise laughs, and there is a spirit of go to the film which makes it very attractive. There is a laugh in every scene and more than that in some.

"The Policeman's Revolver" (Essanay).—A lively story, containing a modified version of the familiar chase, which is headed by a maid running with a revolver to return it to her friend, the officer, who has lost it. She accumulates a somewhat extensive following, but arrives just in time to save her lover from being killed. It is all very lively, but cannot be said to be dramatic in any sense. It is merely fun and is carried out with good effect.

"The Day After" (Biograph).—An amusing travesty upon seeing the old year out and the new one in, with the accompanying resolutions, which for the thousandth time are broken and thrown to the winds. The amusing situations are enhanced and there is more and more fun, as the one drink is often repeated and both husband and wife are looking for fun wherever they can find it. The heads the next morning and the suing for forgiveness are both bits of clever acting. The piece has the spirit which characterizes the Biograph comedies of this order and is thoroughly enjoyed.

"Choosing a Hubsand" (Biograph).—This picture is a sort of intimation that choosing a husband is quite as important as choosing a horse. And the method of putting four suitors to the test is strong evidence that Gladys is of that opinion. It would seem, therefore, that this film would fill a more or less long felt want and offer many suggestions to those about to choose husbands. There is little dramatic skill employed, but the fun is infectious and the audience is quite satisfied to enjoy it to the full.

"A Daughter of the Sioux" (Selig).—An Indian tale of great strength and much beauty, with opportunities for the development of dramatic power beyond what is usually seen in motion pictures, and every point is well taken and every part is well acted. It is a complicated picture, however, and requires the closest attention to understand it. But perhaps quite the most interesting feature is the love of white man and Indian maid and the call of the blood which urges her and her brother to fight for their people against the man who has cherished them as his own for years, or since they were children. The girl receives a bullet in her breast intended for this white man and sinks dying at his feet, to tell him that it is better so, since the white man's law would never look with favor upon their union, and in the home of the Great Spirit where they will both go he can claim her for his own, because there they will be equal. There is an indescribable pathos to this film which holds one closely and makes it impossible for one to overlook the numerous strong points as they appear. The photography is good, in addition to the excellent dramatic work, the combination making a picture which it would be difficult to surpass. This firm's work in depicting Indian life and character has been commented upon before, though here and there they make a failure. However, that is so rare as to be practically nil. And, at least, this film deserves the highest praise for its good work in all departments.

"Three-Fingered Jack" (Lubin).—A heart story in which the love of Three-fingered Jack for a Salvation Army lassie is the making of him. It is one of those pretty domestic bits which can scarcely be described, yet which carry a charm that makes them irresistible in the average motion picture theater. The fact that the reformed criminal is ultimately saved through the efforts of his lassie makes a pleasant picture which is favorably commented upon by all who see it.

"A Slave to Drink" (Kalem).—A temperance story which represents first the mastery drink may exert over a man, his successive efforts to overcome the temptation and his final mastery. Temperance sermons and lectures are, as a rule, little wanted. Yet this film possesses a fascination, difficult to describe, yet none the less vivid. One must needs follow it to the end with the closest attention, even though one may feel that it is really a disguised temperance discourse, and may, perhaps, for that reason, be repugnant in some degree. The acting is quite as good as it is in the average Kalem play, better, possibly, than some of them, because it has a degree of dramatic possibility which not all have possessed. And probably it is helped, to some extent, at least, by the suggestion of the subject. Often one's own imagination assists materially in the development of a play and adds much to its interest.

"A Live Corpse" (Pathe).—A comedy which is reasonably well described in the title. It is funny from beginning to end and never fails to raise a laugh. But it is not refined comedy and therefore not up to the Pathe standard.

"Fishing Industry at Gloucester, Mass." (Edison).—An industrial film of merit, clearly and graphically illustrating the fishing industry which has centered at Gloucester, Mass., for many years, and is the oldest industry in the country, excepting agriculture. The picture carries one from the time preparations are made for sailing, through its entire trip until the vessel returns, laden with fish. Much is heard of Gloucester's fishing fleet, but no one has ever pictured it so graphically, and surely one will acquire a different and more accurate conception of the fishing industry after seeing this film. The technical work is excellent, and when the conditions under which the negatives must have been made are considered, the pictures are very good. The film is commended to managers who are desirous of showing their patrons a picture that will please and instruct.

"A Western Maid" (Essanay).—A stirring Western story of attempted robbery, the escape of the bandits, their pursuit by a posse headed by a dashing Western girl and their final capture. These bits of scenes which accurately reproduce real life are so spirited and they interpret conditions which have existed at different times with so much fidelity to facts that criticism seems unnecessary. And probably if it were undertaken it would have to content itself with minor details which really do no mar the picture, nor in any degree detract from its power and meaning. The wild sweep of life as depicted in these Western pictures actually occurred and they are sufficiently accurate in their delineations to give a fair idea of that life and those who lived it. Beyond that attention to minute details is unnecessary, excepting as it completes what is otherwise attractive and in a way inspiring.

"Why He Did Not Win Out; Or, Grandpa's Wig" (Essanay).—A laughable story of the pranks of two mischievous youngsters, who spoil an old man's matrimonial aspirations by changing wigs and inveigling him into a room where a card party is assembled. The absurdities of the circumstances help to make the picture funny; and, besides, it is acted with all the snap and enthusiasm which marks the comedy work of the Essanay players.

"Legion of Honor" (Gaumont).—A French war story which reproduces some scene of the Napoleonic wars, but scarcely reaches the pitch of interest which characterizes many of the Gaumont war pictures. There are camp scenes which probably introduce the audience to a reasonably accurate representation of life in the French camps at that time; and over it all hangs the gloom of battle, the constant presence of death. The impression conveyed by one of these war films is not pleasant, and perhaps that is their chief attraction.

"Trials of a Schoolmaster" (Pathe).—A pathetic and very touching story of an old schoolmaster's unremitting efforts to save his boys from the curse of ignorance, and how they repaid his many kindnesses. There is much of heart interest in this film, so much that the eyes fill with tears many times. Surely a picture which can appeal to the heart like that deserves a long run, and its influence must be helpful and elevating. If the technical quality of a film is reasonably well maintained and its heart interest is unquestioned, then it has fulfilled its purpose and has done more than amuse. This picture will appeal in many ways very strongly to anyone who has ever attempted to instruct youth.

"Cupid and the Motor Boat" (Vitagraph).—A story of a Summer courtship which has much of attractiveness. Not only does it tell a good love story, fascinating because it is a bit out of the ordinary, but there are exhibits of bravery in it which serve to give a few thrills and get one in sympathy with some development of courage. A combination of the two, worked out with the care usually shown by the Vitagraph people, cannot help making a very attractive film. There is life, action and an interesting story. Little else could be asked for. The dramatic elements are well developed, and the climaxes are worked out so that they hold the interest throughout the picture. The producers are to be commended for its excellence.

"The Rocky Road" (Biograph).—A strongly dramatic film, representing what may occur through overindulgence in drink. The woman's departure into the world with her little girl, the subsequent separation of the two and the child's adoption by a farmer who discoverd her by the roadside, the love-making of her own father and the beginning of the wedding, with the appearance of the mother in time to prevent it and her tragic death in her husband's arms, are all strongly dramatic and are acted with strength and fidelity, but the ending is not happy, nor is it satisfactory. Justice may be, and probably is, inexorable in real life, but to have the picture end with the mother's death just as the family is reunited is too tragic for an attractive motion picture, and this one would be improved for the average audience if the ending were changed. One doesn't like to appear to find fault with the excellent work of the Biograph Company, but in this instance the picture would be vastly improved for the average audience by the suggested change, while the dramatic force would not be injured. Perhaps its lesson, that life is indeed a rocky road for the transgressor, is impressed with sufficient strength to make it worth while.

"Their Chaperoned Honeymoon" (Lubin).—Here is one of those comedies which have made the Lubin pictures famous and have made audiences laugh from one end of the land to the other. The whimsical conception of a chaperoned honeymoon loses none of its attractiveness in the hands of Lubin's capable company. Not until aunty is doused with a number of pails of water does she understand that the newly-married couple prefer her room to her company. The situations are comical and the aunt's persistence is worthy of a better cause, perhaps.

"The Smugglers' Game" (Selig).—A melodramatic reproduction of life among opium smugglers, which is chiefly interesting, perhaps, because it reproduces with reasonable fidelity to facts an opium den and exposes the methods by which the smugglers operate. It is all very graphic, and in a degree its information is worth while. The love story, which develops into a kidnapping, and the final arrest of the smugglers are worked out with fidelity to facts and close attention to details. Selig's pictures of this type are always good, and this is no exception to what have gone before.

"Pardners" (Edison).—An excellent dramatization and reproduction of Rex E. Beach's well known story. It is in every sense a heart story and the human interest is strongly maintained throughout the entire film. The interest is heightened by the accurate reproduction of the scenery in the Alaskan gold fields where the main action of the story occurs. This novel is so well known and has been read by so many that it seems needless to repeat it here. The Edison players have caught the spirit of the piece and have infused into it much of the characteristic energy which marks Mr. Beach's novels. The complicated love story is well worked out and there seems to be a rather better interpretation of the author's conception than ordinarily in these dramatizations. The acting is an improvement over that which is sometimes undertaken to interpret a modern novel, and is remarkably well sustained. The dramatic situations are managed in a way that leads up to the climaxes gradually, graphically presenting scenes and types characteristic of the wild life in that section of the world. Altogether this production is to be commended as a worthy representation of a good book.

"Wreck at Sea" (Gaumont).—A complicated love story in which a girl is forced to marry against her will, while her real lover goes away to sea, where he is lost in a shipwreck. The body is washed ashore, and the girl's grief is so strongly apparent that it causes her husband to lose his reason. Fortunately not all films with a love story connected develop such a series of horrors and depressions. While a majority of the films from this house are attractive dramatically as well as pictorially, occasionally one slips by the managtment which produces a long series of creeps, and this is one of that kind. Technically no criticism need be passed, but the effect upon those who see it is not so pleasant.

"The Avenging Dentist" (Gaumont).—If the suggestion of this picture, that the teeth of burglars should be pulled whenever they are caught at their nefarious business, were generally adopted it is a safe conclusion that burglary would shortly become unpopular, As a comedy film this picture has much to commend it. As a novelty in conception it is quite out of the ordinary, and therefore deserves commendation.

"Tragedy at the Mill" (Urban).—A scene which is supposed to have occurred in France during the wars of the First Empire. The commander of a detachment of Hussars falls in love with the daughter of a miller, in whose mill his command is quartered. Her peasant lover fights the soldiers, but is obliged to flee to save his life, falls into the river and is mangled by the wheel of the old mill. Perhaps this is dramatic, and there is a certain degree of attractiveness inseparable from the sparkle and flash of uniforms, but this picture fails to amuse, and it does not attract, consequently it offers little excuse for existence. This house understands too well how to amuse and instruct to devote its energies to producing pictures of this type. Instruction and amusement are legitimate provinces of the motion picture, but the film that presents only views of death in its most grewsome and repulsive form can scarcely be included under either head.

"Shanghai of To-day" (Urban).—It is always a pleasure to see one of this firm's scenic pictures. Not only do they maintain a high standard of excellence, but they are photographed from the standpoints to develop the idea of instruction very strongly. After one sees this picture he feels that he has looked upon typical bits of life from the actual city, and so well are the views made that bits of actual life of the city seem to pass before one. There is a sense of satisfaction in looking at a picture like this that is almost equal to that of viewing the real scene.

"The Adventuress" (Essanay).—Perhaps the most entertaining feature of this picture is the clever way the gentleman convinces his accusers that he has committed no assault. He shows the ashes of his half burned cigar still adhering to the partially burned stump, and the officers accept this as proof that he hasn't even left his seat, much less committed an assault upon a woman in which she was generally used up. As a reminder of the way railroading is done abroad this is interesting. It is not, aside from these two features, any above ordinary quality, however.

"How Hubby Made Good" (Essanay).—A development of the hero stunt which, in a way, possesses some novelty and gives a husband an opportunity to make good in his wife's affections by bravely capturing two burglars. What the clubmen who agreed to perform the role of burglars thought of it doesn't appear, but may, perhaps, be imagined. The comedy in this is a trifle broad, but perhaps that is no harm under the circumstances. It is, at least, humorous and makes the audience laugh, and when a comedy does that it performs its function.

"Overzealous Domestic" (Pathe).—The funny complications which result from the overzealous efforts of this domestic to do business are quite up to the Pathe standard of humor and represent a development which is truly laughable. There is some rough house in it, but that does no particular harm in this instance.

Another American manufacturer, the Exclusive Film Company, of Chicago, has scored a success in their first release, "A Romance of the South." As one exchange man said: "It has all the earmarks of quality."

THE LIFE OF MOSES (Vitagraph).

The second picture in the Vitagraph's series, produced under the personal supervision of Rev. Madison C. Peters, one of the greatest modern interpreters of Hebrew history. The first picture closed with the adoption of Moses by Pharaoh's daughter and his formal introduction into the life and surroundings of the profligate Egyptian court.

This picture graphically illustrates the oppression and cruelties to which the unfortunate Hebrews were subjected by the Egyptians, representing them beaten and abused as they went about their tasks, imposed by unreasonable taskmasters. It is during these days that, even though Moses has been educated at the court, he realizes that he is a Hebrew and actually kills an overseer who is abusing an overloaded slave. He flees and goes to the land of Midian, where he befriends the priest's daughters, and is given one for a wife. The Lord speaks to him from the burning bush, commanding him to return and demand of Pharaoh the liberation of the Hebrew slaves. He meets Aaron, his brother, on the way and together they go back to the court, where they demand of the new Pharaoh the liberation of the Hebrews. When he haughtily refuses, they tell him that the Lord will surely visit the land with plagues. There the picture leaves them, at the court of the king demanding the release of the slaves.

It will be seen from this that the picture follows the Bible narrative very closely. The staging is a marvelously accurate reproduction of Egyptian scenery and costuming and undoubtedly presents one of the best of modern conceptions of life and customs in that ancient world. For this reason, perhaps, it should be accorded special praise, since anything that can add to the information, or increase one's knowledge of that age, deserves commendation. The acting is quite in keeping with the subject, rather better, perhaps, than that in the first film, indictating that as the actors studied they acquired a better comprehension of the story and what was required to interpret it accurately. The picture is commended to all students of Bible history as being particularly worthy of their consideration.

FAUST (Edison).

The policy of the Edison Company to present classic masterpieces in dramatic form on the moving picture screen finds expression, we are glad to see, in the story of Faust. Mere mention of the name of Faust recalls Gounod's operatic masterpiece of that name, in which the world's famous singers have won renown and which also, according to popular idea, is one of the most melodious operas ever staged. Then again one recalls Henry Irving as Faust and Ellen Terry as Marguerite in the drama. Indeed, few old theatergoers can see the name printed without having agreeable recollections both of the play and the opera.

The story is variously attributed to Marlow, Goethe and other renowned writers. Moreover, it supplies the theme of books and legends of many lesser authors. Synopsized, it is briefly this: An old man bargains with the devil for the sale of his soul in return for the temporary gifts of youth and its concomitants. Dr. Faust at the time of the compact is an old man and, being changed by the power of Mephistopheles into a young one, of course, has a good time. He wins the love of a young woman, sends her to the bad and ultimately goes there himself. This theme is a basic one, of course, showing the eternal struggle between good and evil. It is therefore well suited for treatment in the grand manner, either as an opera or a play.

When we saw the picture we had no difficulty in recognizing the principal characters of the story, its trend and its development. A sympathetic pianist played snatches of Gounod's music, which helped to place us in sympathy with the picture. The Edison Company certainly handle the subject in a fine manner, giving the scenic artists and the actors and actresses every opportunity. It was a bold subject to attempt and the company got through the task very successfully. They seemed to transmit the very atmosphere of the piece of the audience. The three principal characters—Faust, Mephistopheles and Marguerite well filled their parts; that is to say, they presented the conventional aspects of the interpreters of those characters. The gradual process of Marguerite's downfall at the hands of the ardent Faust is graphically shown and the scene where the girl is leaving the church and where she is first seen by Faust is a very fine piece of impressive stage work. "Faust" must be accounted a great Edison success.

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED IN THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS, YOU SHOULD SUBSCRIBE FOR THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD. $2.00.

COMING GREAT NORTHERN RELEASES.

Not the least pleasurable of the many visits that we pay to Fourteenth street, New York City—by day, of course—is to the projection room of the Great Northern Film Company. There are two reasons for this. We are always sure of a cordial welcome at the hands of Mr. Oes, an agreeable talk with him and the elucidation from him of very sane and rational ideas on film matters in general and the progress of the Alliance in particular. Mr. Oes' faith in the Alliance is unshaken, and generally his outlook is so clear and business-like that we want to say that the film business in the United States would be the richer for the presence in it of many more men such as he. Then, again, aside from these things, there is always a certainty that we shall have an advance view of some good pictures, which is the main object of our visit. One afternoon this week we spent quite a long time in inspecting a number of forthcoming Great Northern releases, showing a wide variety of subject and, above all things, uniformly good photographic quality. The chief of these is the representation in film form of one of the Dr. Nickola stories. This series of stories by Guy Boothby, an English author, to some extent resemble the Sherlock Holmes stories. Sherlock Holmes was a phenomenally clever detective. Dr. Nickola, however, combined the adventurer with the detective. The result was that the series in which Nickola figured was always full of excitement and venture. In the particular film which is shortly to be released we see the Doctor in that mysterious country, Thibet, in company with a faithful servant. Disguised as Chinese they make their way into a Thibetan monastery and have many remarkable adventures which culminate in their being sentenced to death. However, after some exciting struggles with Thibetan monks, all of whom look extremely weird on the screen, they escape. The story as it is presented is full of mystery and the scenery has an Oriental aspect. We should think it would be popular with those who love adventure, rapid change, danger, escapes and a happy ending. Dr. Nickola is to be made a feature film and it should be as successful as the Great Northern Sherlock Holmes pictures. But not all the forthcoming Great Northern releases concern themselves with mystery. There is one entitled "A Boy as Benefactor," which will appeal in virtue of its heart interest. This shows how a newsboy rescues a luckless beggar and would-be suicide. He is given work and restored to a decent place in society. It has many nice domestic touches and ends happily. A short subject illustrating the pranks of a couple of Norwegian boys on their elders will also be popular with the juvenile visitors to moving picture theaters. Yet another picture, a very long one, reminds us somewhat of the story of the Rake's Progress. This rake is a spendthrift and the facility with which he wastes his substance is remarkable. Finally, however, through the influence of a guardian angel in the shape of a pretty girl, he goes abroad and restores his fortunes, returning home a wiser and better man. This is a subject, which, in virtue of its nature, will appeal to the general audience. The moral of it is sound and the lesson it teaches is a good one. The photography of the Great Northern subjects is always unexceptionally good and, moreover, the acting is such that there is no difficulty in following the stories without the aid of titles and sub-titles. Thus the pictures are assured of being understood by those who see them, which is a sine qua non of all film subjects.

NOVELTIES FOR THE EXHIBITOR.

From the many inquiries and reports received, it seems that Novelty Puzzlettes are a new form of amusement that moving picture patrons everywhere will appreciate and demand more of. In fact, one exhibitor writes that they have become a necessary part of his program, taking the place of the illustrated song, and not only reducing his expense, but greatly increasing his receipts. This novel attraction has shown such wonderful results wherever introduced, that managers find it a very profitable innovation.

In order to keep pace with the demand, a new subject or series of Puzzlettes will be released each week. The first set, "Cities of the United States," was put on the market January 3, and the second set, "States of the United States," on January 10. Every Monday hereafter a new subject will be ready. Every exchange handling slides will rent Novelty Puzzlettes, and in this way exhibitors everywhere can be supplied without any additional expense for expressage, or any inconvenience whatsoever. Weekly descriptions of new subjects will be gladly mailed to all exhibitors sending names and addresses to the manufacturers, Novelty Slide Company, New York City.

Index to Volume V.—July to December, 1909

A

Accuracy in Indian Subjects..... 48
Acting and Action..... 443
Advance Advertising of Programs..... 957
Admission of Children to Moving Picture Shows..... 188
Advertising Feature Films..... 152
Alliance Notes.....674, 525, 480, 442, 792
American School of Moving Picture Drama..... 712
American Exhibitor in London..... 284
Antiques and Bric-a-Bracs for Moving Picture Settings.. 309
An Open Market..... 952
Appreciative Audience..... 717
Around the Globe..... 44
Automatic Ticket Seller..... 375
Attendance at the Summer Shows..... 191
Aviation Work..... 406

B

Biograph Appreciation..... 165
Board of Censorship..... 43
Browning Given in Moving Pictures..... 266

C

Cecil Spooner on the Moving Picture Stage..... 277
Censorship in Chicago..... 487
Censors Recall Bull-fight Film..... 487
Charm of Variety..... 151
Children and the Moving Picture..... 369
Children's Subjects for the Moving Picture..... 953
Color Photographs by Wire..... 917
Coming Headliner..... 835
Condensor Projector..... 797
Comedy and Tragedy..... 797
Coloring or Painting Lantern Slides..... 16
Coming Headliner ("Drink") (Pathe)..... 531
Coloring Song Slides..... 374
Concerning Producers..... 7
Concerning the Operator..... 283
Combining the Moving Picture and the Phonograph..... 158
Courts Rule Against Sunday Shows..... 166
Copyrighting Moving Picture Films..... 79
Comfort of the Public..... 43
Cradle of Moving Pictures..... 190
Current-Saving Device..... 44
Custer's Last Stand..... 755

D

Diplomacy in the Plays..... 152
Dwight McDonald Resumes His Law Practice..... 307

E

Edison Progress..... 833
Education by Moving Pictures..... 753
Edison Banquet..... 954
Educational Subjects..... 641
Elements of Accuracy in Moving Picture Manufacture .....811 ... 192... 250 .. 485
English Appreciation of G. K. Spoor..... 717
Essanay Captures World's Championship Baseball Series 623
Essanay Will Make Pictures in Mexico..... 380
Essanay Issues Handsome Poster..... 280
Essanay Company Out West..... 801
Essanay Enterprise..... 480
English View of the American Moving Picture..... 116
Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company..... 89
European Manufacturers of Raw Film..... 603
Exhibitors Seek Protection..... 80
Exhibitors' Associations..... 186
Exhibitor Who Uplifts..... 678

F

Factor of Uniformity..... 115
Film Renters as a Class..... 600
First Catch Your Hare..... 872
Fitness of the Producer..... 163
Fourth Semi-Annual Meeting of Film Service Association. 120
Fort Leavenworth Photographed by Essanay..... 962
French-Made Films in America..... 718
Funnel Arc Burner..... 341

G

General Betterment..... 247
German Ocean Liner..... 338
Government Recognition of the Moving Picture..... 369

H

Hallberg's Exhibit at the Electrical Show..... 523
Hints to Operators..... 163
High-class Posters for Moving Picture Theaters..... 754
How We Vitagraphed the Hudson-Fulton Marine Celebration..... 481
Hunting African Big Game in the Jungles of Chicago... 156

I

Impressions of Kinemacolor Films, by Burton H. Allbee. 915
Important Points for the Operator..... 563
Important Change in the Motion Picture Map..... 126
Independent Outlook..... 79
Interview with the Chicago Film Exchange..... 56
Independent Films on Fourteenth Street..... 923
Injunction Granted..... 793
Interview with Carl Laemmle..... 764
Interview with Arturo Ambrosio..... 641
Inconsistencies of Film Producers..... 957
Interstate Licenses..... 650
Independent Manufacturers Organize..... 383
Independent Film Renters in Chicago..... 343
Independent Film Releases..... 276
Italian Exhibitors Unite..... 189

K

Killing the Goose..... 951
Kinemacolor (Theory and Practise)..... 913
Kinemacolor..... 873
Kinemacolor (Demonstration of Moving Pictures in Natural Colors)..... 831
Kinemacolor from the Practical Viewpoint..... 959

L

Lamp House..... 837
Ladies and Their Headgear..... 607
Largest Manufacturer of Films for Moving Pictures.... 186
Lantern Slide Notes..... 527
Length of Film Subjects..... 837
Licensed Manufacturers Meet..... 54
Lighted Theater..... 153

M

Making Lantern Slides..... 16
March of Progress..... 276
Melies' Scenario Contest..... 444
Missing Link..... 446
Mirror Screen..... 962
Motographic History in the Making..... 958
Moving Pictures in Toyland..... 911
Modern Moving Picture Theater:
Introduction..... 305
Chapter I.—Your House in Order..... 370
Chapter II.—Posters..... 407
Chapter III.—The Exterior..... 442
Chapter IV.—Handling the Visitor..... 482
Chapter V.—Showing the Picture..... 520
Chapter VII.—Advertising the Theater..... 598
Chapter VIII.—Keeping Faith with Your Public.... 636
Moving Pictures in Public Schools..... 751
Moving Pictures and Mission Work..... 678
Moving Picture Theater Programs..... 608
Moving Picture Theater Programs..... 577
Moving Picture Operators to Have Their Own Charter.. 531
Moving Pictures in Europe and America..... 531
Moving Picture Audience..... 406
Moving Picture Patents Company and Its Work..... 81
Moving Pictures Against Saloons..... 377
Motion Pictures for Publicity..... 309
Moving Pictures in the Church..... 250
Moving Pictures in Australia..... 223
Morbid Film Subjects..... 164
Moving Pictures in the Home..... 126
Moving Pictures the Photographs of the Future..... 80
Musical End..... 7
Musical Accompaniments for Moving Pictures..... 559
Musical Accompaniments for Moving Pictures..... 576
Music..... 600
Music Question..... 804

N

National Independent Moving Picture Alliance..... 410
National Color Quest..... 217
National Board of Censorship of Moving Pictures..... 524
National Independent Moving Picture Alliance..... 681
National Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis. 925
Nights with Knowles..... 561
New Safety Device..... 872
New Independent Alliance..... 404
New York Operators Receive Their Charter..... 646
New Way of Setting Shutter..... 563
New Devices Which Look Good..... 523
New Film Producer..... 922
New Additions to the Licensed Releases..... 561
N. I. Film..... 635
Note of Warning..... 751
Notes from National Moving Picture Alliance 488 575.. 607
Non-inflammable Film Improves in Quality..... 639

O

Old Wine in New Bottles ... 115
One of the Public ... 348
Operators' Union ... 257 ... 375
Optical Desirability of Color in Moving Pictures ... 916
Operators Are Neither Dishonest or Fools ... 155
Outlook for the Fall ... 275

P

Pantomime, in Acting, by Mlle. Pilar-Morin ... 682
Patents Law and the Patents Controversy ... 832
Patents Company ... 917
Pennsylvania Exhibitors Rally ... 193 .. 275
Pictures and Pugilism ... 871
Pictures of the Roosevelt Hunt ... 871
Pictures and Politics ... 597 ... 791
Picture Films ... 118
Plate Glass Curtain ... 166
Plagiarism ... 761
Plenty of Independent Film Assured ... 479
Plea for More Care and Intelligent Use of Machine and Film ... 726
Poets of the People ... 597
Powers Company's First Release ... 608
Poor Posters ... 793
Popular Entertainers and Entertainments ... 306
Popularity of Moving Picture Shows in Western Canada 877
Practical Talks to Operators, by Arthur S. Newman:
Chapter I.—The Projector: Its Use and Treatment .. 794
Chapter II.—The Projector and Its Use ... 836
Chapter III.—The Projector and Its Use ... 875
Press and the Moving Picture, The ... 952
Proper Way to Make Lantern Slides ... 606
Progress in Machine Construction ... 883
Preliminary Injunction Against New York Motion Picture Company Denied ... 793
Projection Machine for the Home ... 794
Producer's Art ... 151
Protection of the Exhibitor ... 163
Puzzle Pictures for the Moving Picture Theater ... 922
Plain Talk to Theater Managers and Operators:
Chapter VIII.—Fitting the Operating Room ... 8
Chapter IX.—The Lamp ... 45
Chapter X.—Focal Lenses ... 84
Chapter XI.—The Spot ... 117
Chapter XII.—Carbons ... 153
Chapter XIII.—Setting the Carbons ... 187
Chapter XIV.—The Film ... 218
Chapter XV.—Speed ... 249
Chapter XVI.—Slide Carriers ... 307
Chapter XVI.—Machine Heads ... 339
Chapter XVII.—Setting the Shutter ... 371
Chapter XVIII.—The Motiograph ... 408
Chapter XIX.—Effect of Daylight and House Lights on the Picture (Continued) ... 444
Chapter XX.—Effect of Daylight and House Lights on the Picture ... 484
Chapter XXI.—Ventilation ... 521
Chapter XXII.—Seating ... 599
Chapter XXIII.—Bell Wiring ... 637
Chapter XXIV.—Selecting a Theater Location ... 676
Chapter XXV.—Decoration ... 713
Chapter XXVI.—Employees ... 753

R

Renewing Films ... 923
Release Reform Wanted ... 791
Regulating the Speed of Pictures ... 792
Charles Raleigh and the European Agencies ... 560
Rumors Run to Earth ... 519

S

Standardization, by Arthur S. Newman in The Bioscope:
I.—The Reason for the Present Gauge ... 564
II.—The Shape of the Perforation ... 637
IV.—The Width of the Film ... 677
Shackleton Films ... 684
Slide Colorists Scarce ... 527
Suggested Improvement for Reels ... 185
Sound Effects ... 308 .. 441
Setting the Scenes for Moving Pictures ... 52

T

Time Schedules for Exhibitors ... 911
Travel Talk ... 675
Transportation Facilities ... 527
Travel Talk and Moving Pictures ... 306
Toning Lantern Slides ... 279
Taft Sees Himself ... 160
Toning Lantern Slides ... 128
Tariff Question ... 43

W

White Plague of the Moving Pictures ... 831
Woman Invades the American Moving Picture Field ... 680
Wages of Operators ... 383
What Is in the Future? ... 280
Wonders of Nature ... 253

Index to Stories of the Films

A

Page.

An Outcast's Christmas (Great Northern) ... 974
Agriculture in Hungary (Pathe) ... 931
An Amateur Hold-Up (Essanay) ... 887
An Indian Wife's Devotion (Selig) ... 813
Annual Celebration of School Children ... 767
Anodis is Robbed of His Clothes (Pathe) ... 771
Arnold, Benedict (Vitagraph) ... 773
An Hour of Terror (World) ... 777
A Midnight Adventure (Biograph) ... 729
An Indian's Bride (Bison) ... 737
Actress and Child (Phoenix) ... 699
Across the Island of Ceylon (Pathe) ... 657
Adele's Washday (Vitagraph) ... 659
All's Fair in Love (Edison) ... 617
Ambulance Ventilators (Gaumont) ... 619
Awakened Memories (Urban-Eclipse) ... 623
Aunt Lena's Visit (Lubin) ... 581
Almost a Suicide (Centaur) ... 585
Alphonse, the Dead Shot (Gaumont) ... 539
Anti-Fat Sanitarium (Pathe) ... 505
Awakening, The (Biograph) ... 457
An Eventful Trip (Pathe) ... 461
Across the Divide (Selig) ... 463
All For a Nickel (Gaumont) ... 423
Actor Burglar, The (Phoenix) ... 429
All On Account of a Letter (Lubin) ... 387
Amateur Detective, The Pathe) ... 387
An Alpine Echo (Vitagraph) ... 389
Aeroplane Contests at Rheims (Urban-Eclipse) 391
Amateur William Tell (Edison) ... 349
An Awakened Conscience (Gaumont) ... 319
Apprentice Boys at Newport Naval Training Station (Edison) ... 235
Arabian Pilgrimage (Pathe) ... 205
An Easy Job (Gaumont) ... 135
Adventures of Fifine, The (Vitagraph) ... 703
An Absent-Minded Cupid (Edison) ... 25

B

Battle in the Clouds (Urban-Eclipse) ... 973
Buried Alive (Selig) ... 971
Blissville the Beautiful (Lubin) ... 929
Birth of Jesus (Pathe) ... 931
Beyond the Rockies (Centaur) ... 893
Bachelor and the Maid (Essanay) ... 849
Bear Hunt in Russia (Pathe) ... 853
Broken Vase, The Gaumont) ... (809
Bigamist, The (Pathe) ... 809
Bunch of Lilacs (Pathe) ... 811
Brought to Terms (Selig) ... 813
Belle of the Forest (Urban-Eclipse) ... 813
Bridegroom's Joke (Vitagraph) ... 813
Boy Hero, A (Nordisk) ... 817
Bluebeard (Edison) ... 767
Best Man Wins, The (Essanay) ... 731
Bride and Groom's Visit to the New York Zoological Park (Edison) ... 691
Brave Women of '76 (Lubin) ... 695
Bertha's Birthday (Raleigh & Robert) ... 699
Bill the Bill Poster (Edison) ... 653
Bachelor's Love Affair, A (Essanay) ... 653
Buffalo Racing in Madiera (Pathe) ... 621
Burglar in the Trunk (Pathe) ... 621
Briton and Boer (Selig) ... 623
Brother's Wrong, The (Kalem) ... 579
Buried Secret, A (Lubin) ... 581
Belated Wedding, The (Pathe) ... 581
Bob's Electric Theater (Pathe) ... 581
Broken Violin, The (Gaumont) ... 539
Billiken (Lubin) ... 541
Blank Check, A (Lubin) ... 541
Blessington's Bonny Babies (Pathe) ... 543
Breaking the Bank (Gaumont) ... 501
Betty's Choice (Vitagraph) ... 505
Brothers, The (Essanay) ... 457
Bachelor's Visit, The (Selig) ... 427
Blake's Rival, Dan (Centaur) ... 429
Broken Locket, The (Biograph) ... 385
Before the Dawn (Lubin) ... 353
Blight of Sin, The (Selig) ... 355
Backward, Turn Backward, O, Time, in Your Flight (Edison) ... 317
Borrowed Clothes (Vitagraph) ... 323
Broken Ties (Gaumont) ... 291
Billposter's Trial, The (Pathe) ... 291
Building Barrels (Urban-Eclipse) ... 263
Better Way, The (Biograph) ... 235
Blacksmith's Daughter (Centaur) ... 237
Baby is King (Urban-Eclipse) ... 203
Butler's Trick, The (Pathe) ... 169
Before the Mast (Selig) ... 171
Bugle Call, The (Vitagraph) ... 173
Buttinski, Mr. (Lubin) ... 137
Barber's Revenge, The (Pathe) ... 137
Bridegroom's Dilemma, The (Edison) ... 97
Brown's Moving Day (Gaumont) ... 99
Behind the Mask (Pathe) ... 101
Bewitched Manor House (Pathe) ... 101
Black Sheep, The (Essanay) ... 25
Bad Case, A (Gaumont) ... 25

C

Cap of Fortune, The (Edison) ... 969
Choosing a Husband (Biograph) ... 969
Clever Sleuth, A (Gaumont) ... 971
Cardboard Baby, The (Kalem) ... 929
Contest for a Handkerchief (Pathe) ... 931
Christian Martyrs, The (Selig) ... 931
Cook Makes Maderia Sauce, The (Vitagraph) ... 933
Cambyses, King of Persia (Gaumont) ... 889
Corner in Wheat, A (Biograph) ... 887
Capturing the North Pole (Urban-Eclipse) ... 853
Case of Good Wine (Pathe) ... 851
Crocodile Hunt (Pathe) ... 809
Convenient Lamp-Post, A (Pathe) ... 809
Chinese Amusements (Pathe) ... 811
Cement Formula (Pathe) ... 811
Consul Crosses the Atlantic (Urban-Eclipse) .. 813
Cost of Forgetfulness (World) ... 777
Convict's Heroism, A (Gaumont) ... 731
Count's Wooing, A (Melies) ... 733
Culture of Tea in Java (Pathe) ... 733
Cursed Cage, The (Aquila) ... 737
Caesar, Julius (Itala) ... 737
Comedy and Tragedy (Edison) ... 653
Cattle Thieves, The (Kalem) ... 655
Cops on a Strike (Pathe) ... 657
Cinderella Up-to-Date (Melies) ... 621
Crown Prince of Germany (Gaumont) ... 579
Casting Bread Upon the Water (Gaumont) ... 579
Country Life in a Flat (Gaumont) ... 579
Cowboy Millionaire, The (Selig) ... 583
Cosette (Vitagraph) ... 583
Change of Heart, A (Biograph) ... 539
Convicting Evidence (Gaumont) ... 539
Chums (Pathe) ... 543
Chasing the Ball (Urban-Eclipse) ... 459
Close Call, A (Centaur) ... 465
Conquering Hero, The (Lubin) ... 425
Caught in His Own Trap (Pathe) ... 425
Careless Tramp (Pathe) ... 425
Caucasion Customs (Pathe) ... 425
Crooked Path (Selig) ... 427
Children's Friend, The (Biograph) ... 385
Case of Tomatoes, A (Essanay) ... 385
Child's Prayer, The (Pathe) ... 387
City of Naples (Pathe) ... 387

Construction of Balloons (Pathe)..... 387
Comata, the Sioux (Biograph)..... 349
Call of the Heart, The (Lubin)..... 351
Chasing a Sea Lion in the Arctics (Pathe).... 355
Child of the Forest, A (Edison)..... 287
Conspirators, The (Kalem)..... 289
Cyclist's Horn (Gaumont)..... 261
Cobbler and the Millionaire, The (Gaumont).... 263
Cigar-Butt Pickers in Paris (Pathe)..... 263
Cold Plunge in Moscow (Pathe)..... 265
Coward, A (Edison)..... 235
Convict's Sacrifice, A (Biograph)..... 133
Case of Seltzer, A (Essanay)..... 133
Champion Heavy Weigh Lifter (Pathe)..... 137
Charity Begins at Home (Pathe)..... 137
Clever Nurse, A (Bison)..... 141
Casey's Jumping Toothache (Edison)..... 97
Catching Turtles (Pathe)..... 101
Case of Lumabgo, A (Pathe)..... 101
Cardinal's Conspiracy, The (Biograph)..... 61
Caught by the Coupon Craze (Edison)..... 61
Conchita, the Spanish Belle (Urban-Eclipse).. 63
Cobler and the Caliph, The (Vitagraph)..... 67
Country Doctor, The (Biograph)..... 24
Coin Collector, The (Gaumont)..... 25
Child's Love, A (Pathe)..... 27

D

Deceiver, The (Centaur)..... 974
Daughter of the Sioux (Selig)..... 971
Daughters of Poverty (Gaumont)..... 849
Day After, The (Biograph)..... 969
Day With Our Soldier Boys (Vitagraph)..... 855
Death of the Duke D'Enghien, The (Pathe).... 931
Double Six, The (Raleigh & Robert)..... 857
Death Discs (Biograph)..... 807
Dirigible Balloons at St. Louis (Vitagraph).... 813
Dooley's Thanksgiving Turkey (Bisoa)..... 777
Dora (Kalem)..... 693
Duel in Mid-Air, A (Edison)..... 653
Don Quixote (Gaumont)..... 655
Dope Head Clancy (Phoenix)..... 661
Drink (Pathe)..... 581
Dull Knife, A (Vitagraph)..... 583
Diver's Remorse, The (Vitagraph)..... 545
Dog Pickpocket (Pathe)..... 505
Drunkard's Fate, The (Pathe)..... 505
Dove Eye's Gratitude (Bison)..... 507
Dropped From the Clouds (Gaumont)..... 423
Diamond Necklace, The (Centaur)..... 357
Dangerous Pair, A (Edison)..... 317
Doctor's Bride, A (Lubin)..... 319
Dash to Death, A (Edison)..... 287
Dyspeptic and His Double, The (Kalem)..... 289
Dances of Various Countries (Pathe)..... 291
Dust in His Eye (Gaumont)..... 261
Doomed (Pathe)..... 265
Drunkard's Child, The (Lubin)..... 235
Driven From Home (Lubin)..... 63
Different Rulers of the World (Pathe)..... 65
Dramatist's Dream (Vitagraph)..... 29

E

Excelsior..... 934
Evil Philter, The (Pathe)..... 851
Exploits of a Cowboy (Pathe)..... 852
Engineer's Daughter, The (Selig)..... 853
Eat Your Soup (Pathe)..... 657
Elephant Hunting in the Cambodge (Le Lion).. 661
Entombed Alive (Vitagraph)..... 623
Expiation, The (Biograph)..... 579
Expert Glass Blowing (Edison)..... 493
Engagemen Ring, The (Selig)..... 387
Ethel's Luncheon (Edison)..... 317
Evil that Men Do, The (Vitagraph)..... 323
Eternal Romance, The (Pathe)..... 291
Elastic Transformation (Pathe)..... 265
Egyptian Mystery, The (Edison)..... 61
Escape From Andersonville, The (Kalem)..... 63
Evil Spirit in a Girl's Boarding School (Pathe) 65
Exciting Steeplechase (Urban-Eclipse)..... 25

F

Fallen Idol, The (Edison)..... 969
Floretta, the Bandit's Daughter (Urban-Eclipse) 971
Fishing Industry at Gloucester, Mass. (Edison) 969
Faust (Edison)..... 927
Forgotten Watch, The (Vitagraph)..... 933
Fenton of the 42d (Edison)..... 887
Fatal Ball (Melies)..... 851
From the Egg to the Spit (Pathe)..... 851
Female Reporter, A (Essanay)..... 851
Fortune Favors the Brave (Melies)..... 809
Forced Into Marriage (Pathe)..... 811
Fighting Suffragettes(Urban-Eclipse)..... 813
Farley's Redemption, John (Eclair)..... 817
Foiled (Lubin)..... 769
Finnigann's Initiation (Lubin)..... 771
French Perfumes are Made (Pathe)..... 771
Fisherman's Bride, The (Selig)..... 771
Flight of Monsieur Valette (Pathe)..... 733
Forest Ranger's Daughter, The (Imp)..... 737
From Cabin Boy to King (Vitagraph)..... 697
Farmer's Son, The (Itala)..... 699
Fore Sale a Baby (Melies)..... 619
For the Cause of Suffrage (Melies)..... 581
Fools of Fate (Biograph)..... 499
Female Sleuth (Pathe)..... 503
For Her Sake (Vitagraph)..... 507
Faithful Wife (Bison)..... 466
Fair Exchange, A (Biograph)..... 421
Fish Story (Lubin)..... 425
Fantine (Vitagraph)..... 427
Fresh Kid, The (Pathe)..... 387
Freebooters (Selig)..... 389
Fisherman, The (Vitagraph)..... 389
Fiddle and the Fan, The (Gaumont)..... 391
Fatal Love, The (Urban-Eclipse)..... 391
Farmer's Treasure, The (Urban-Eclipse)..... 391
First Airships Crossing the English Channel (Gaumont)..... 351
French Battleship "Justice," The (Urban-Eclipse)..... 319
Far From the Mad'ding Crowd (Edison)..... 287
Frock Coat, The (Gaumont)..... 289
For Her Sweetheart's Sake (Vitagraph)..... 265
Fantastic Heads (Pathe)..... 169
Factory Girl, The (Urban-Eclipse)..... 135
Fiddlers, The (Pathe)..... 101
Friend of the Family, The (Beo)..... 61
Flirtation Collar (Phoenix)..... 67
Fan, The (Pathe)..... 29

G

Greek Slave's Passion, The (Gaumont)..... 929
Good Doctor, The (Pathe)..... 931
Geisha Who Saved Japan, The (Kalem)..... 849
Gambling With Death (Vitagraph)..... 855
Gift From Santa Claus, A (Edison)..... 877
Governor's Daughter, The (Kalem)..... 769
Good Lesson in Charity (Pathe)..... 735
Goddess of the Sea (Le Lion)..... 737
Game, The (Essanay)..... 693
Gibson Goddess, The (Biograph)..... 653
General's Birthday Present, The (Pathe)..... 657
Girl Scout, The (Kalem)..... 619
Gambler, The (Pathe)..... 621
Grotesque Mixup (Pathe)..... 621
Gold Seeker's Daughter, The (Bison)..... 547
Gambling Passion (Urban-Eclipse)..... 503
Game of Chess, A (Pathe)..... 461
Garbage of Paris, The (Pathe)..... 461
Gratitude (Essanay)..... 421
Getting Even (Biograph)..... 385
Galley Slave, The (Vitagraph)..... 389
Glimpses of Paris (Gaumont)..... 351
Glimpses of Yellowstone Park (Lubin)..... 353
Grave Disappointment, A (Pathe)..... 353
Generous Emperor, A (Gaumont)..... 291
Great Event at Podunk (Gaumont)..... 291
Getting Even With Everybody (Pathe)..... 291
Gamekeeper's Son, The (Lubin)..... 137
Georgia Wedding, A (Vitagraph)..... 139
Great Wrong Righted, A (Lubin)..... 27

H

Hush Money (Gaumont)..... 971
Hearth of a Cowboy, The (Essanay)..... 929
Happy Widower, The (Pathe)..... 931
Honey Industry (Pathe)..... 891
Hector, the Angel Child (Pathe)..... 891
Heroine of Mafeking (Selig)..... 853
His Last Game (Imp)..... 859
House of Cards (Edison)..... 847
Happy Accident (Edison)..... 927
Heart of a Clown (Edison)..... 807
His Reformation (Essanay)..... 807
How to Get a City Job (Gaumont)..... 809
Heart's Devotion (Gaumont)..... 769
Her Dramatic Career (Pathe)..... 771
Heavy Gale at Biarritz (Urban-Eclipse)..... 773
His Masterpiece (Edison)..... 691
Honest John, the Coachman (Eclair)..... 661
Hypnotist's Revenge (Melies)..... 619
He Fell in Love With His Wife (Vitagraph).. 623
His Helpmate (Gaumont)..... 579
Husabnd's Strategy (Gaumont)..... 579
Home Without Children, A (Pathe)..... 581
Hunting Jack Rabbits in Hungaria (Pathe).. 581
How He Earned His Medal (Gaumont)..... 539
Haps and Mishaps (Lubin)..... 541
His Mexican Bride (Centaur)..... 547
Hansel and Gretel (Edison)..... 499
Hand Organ Man (aKlem)..... 503
How Jack Helped His Little Sister (Pathe).. 505
He Learns the Trick of Mesmerism (Gaumont) 459
Heroism Reconciles (Nordisk)..... 466
How Dr. Nicola Procured the Chinese Cane (Nordisk)..... 429
How the Landlord Collected His Rents (Edison) 385
Her Face Was Her Fortune (Lubin)..... 387
He Tried on Handcuffs..... 391
Her Busy Day (Gaumont)..... 391
Hiram's Bride (Kalem)..... 351
How to Tame a Mother-in-Law (Pathe)..... 355
Hunchback, The (Vitagraph)..... 355
Haunted Hat, The (Lubin)..... 321
Hypnotic Wife, The (Pathe)..... 321
His Two Children (Bison)..... 323
Horse and the Haystack, The (Gaumont)..... 291
Hat Juggler, The (Pathe)..... 291
His Wife's Visitor (Biograph)..... 261
Heroic Father, A (Pathe)..... 263
Half Breed's Treachery (Bison)..... 267
Hidden Treasure, The (Urban-Eclipse)..... 203
His Little Girl (Lubin)..... 169
His Rival's Hand (Urban-Eclipse)..... 135
Hot Time at Atlantic City, A (Lubin)..... 137
Heart of a Race Tout, The (Selig)..... 137
Hiring a Girl (Lubin)..... 101
Holding Up the Wedding (Pathe)..... 101
Hand of Justice, The (Pathe)..... 65

I

In Little Italy (Biograph)..... 927
In a Hempen Bag (Biograph)..... 887
Indian, The (Selig)..... 891
In a Pickle (Gaumont)..... 849
Impossible to Get Sleep (Pathe)..... 851
Italian Love Story, An..... 934
In the Window Recess (Biograph)..... 807
In the Consomme (Gaumont)..... 807
In India (Pathe)..... 771
In Wrong Simms (Selig)..... 773
Indian Basket Making (Vitagraph)..... 773
Imp of the Bottle, The (Edison)..... 729
In the Watches of the Night (Bio)..... 617
Iona, the White Squaw (Bison)..... 585
In Old Kentucky (Biograph)..... 421
In Hot Pursuit (Urban-Eclipse)..... 319
Indian Runner's Romance, The (Bio)..... 287
In Hot Water (Gaumont)..... 135
Instructions by Correspondence (Vitagraph).... 103
In the Hands of the Enemy (Gaumont)..... 61
Invisible Thief (Pathe)..... 65

J

Jack's Birthday (Essanay)..... 969
Judgment (Essanay)..... 769
Judge's Ward, The (Lubin)..... 503
Jane is Unwilling to Work (Pathe)..... 461
Justified (Essanay)..... 349
Judge Not that Ye Be Not Judged (Vitagraph) 323
Judge's Whiskers, The (Vitagraph)..... 293
Jone's Burglar (Biograph)..... 235
Jealousy and the Man (Biograph)..... 97

K

Keeper of the Light (Essanay)..... 847
Kiss in the Dark (Essanay)..... 927
Knight for a Nigh, A (Edison)..... 421
Kentucky Planter, A (Bison)..... 393
King's Protege, The (Urban-Eclipse)..... 293
King's Conspiracy, The (Urban-Eclipse)..... 99
Kind Hearted Tough, A (Pathe)..... 65

L

Legion of Honor, The (Gaumont)..... 971
Love Token, The (Pathe)..... 931
Lest We Forget..... 934
Law of the Mountains, The (Kalem)..... 889
Living Doll, The (Melies)..... 889
La Grande Bretechi (Pathe)..... 889
Lucky Number, The (Pathe)..... 891
Love of a Savage, The (Bison)..... 893
Listen! (Gaumont)..... 849
Lady's Companion, The..... 851
Life of Moses, The..... 853-855
Leopard Hunting in Abyssina (Ambrosio)..... 857
Life Buoy (Gaumont)..... 889
Lesson in Domestic Economy (Vitagraph)..... 855
Late for the Recital (Pathe)..... 809
Legend of Orpheus (Pathe)..... 811
Lady's Purse, A (Essanay)..... 767
Launcelot and Elaine (Vitagraph)..... 773
Love of Little Flora (Itala)..... 737
Light that Came (Biograph)..... 691
Logging in the Italian Alps (Ambrosio)..... 699
Lonely Bachelor, The (Pathe)..... 655
Love Hunter, The (Phoenix)..... 661
Lost Years, The (Centaur)..... 661
Lines of White on a Sullen Sea (Biograph).. 617
Lie, The (Edison)..... 617
Life Behind the Scenes (Pathe)..... 621
Last Love, His (Biograph)..... 579
Little Teacher (Biograph)..... 539
Liquid Air (Gaumont)..... 539
Lucky Husabnd, A (Pathe)..... 541
Lost in Siberia (Selig)..... 543
Laddie (Edison)..... 499
Leather Stocking (Biograph)..... 457
Love, the Conqueror (Urban-Eclipse)..... 459
Love and War (Edison)..... 421
Legend of the Lighthouse, The (Gaumont).... 423
Little Father, The (Vitagraph)..... 391
Little Sister (Edison)..... 349
Launching the "Voltare" (Pathe)..... 353
Little Soldier, The (Pathe)..... 353
Little Darling, The (Biograph)..... 317
Little Street Singer, The (Pathe)..... 321
Liebrty for an Hour (Vitagraph)..... 293
Laurels (Gaumont)..... 261
Long Reach, A (Gaumont)..... 261
Little Drummer of 1792, A (Gaumont)..... 261
Lost Letter, The (Centaur)..... 267
Leopard Queen (Selig)..... 235
Lochinvar (Edison)..... 203
Love's Sacrifice (Edison)..... 133
Last Confession, The (Gaumont)..... 135
Living Dolls (Pathe)..... 137
Little Orphans, The (Vitagraph)..... 139
Little Busybody (Pathe)..... 101
Lost Tie, The (Gaumont)..... 60
Lion Tamer, The (Selig)..... 29
Led Astray (Vitagraph)..... 29

M

Mischievous Elf, The (Edison)..... 927
Midsummer Night's Dream (Vitagraph)..... 933
My Lord in Livery (Edison)..... 847
Masquerader's Charity (Pathe)..... 851
Marvelous Shaving Soap..... 857
Macbeth (Cines & Co.)..... 857
Motor Cyclist, The (Raleigh & Robert)..... 857
Message of an Arrow, The (Bison)..... 857
Manhood's Reward (Powers Co.)..... 857
Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year (Vit) 893
Mixed Letters, The (Melies)..... 809
Making it Pleasant for Him (Selig)..... 813
Marriage of Love (Selig)..... 813
Mountaineer's Honor, The (Bio)..... 767
Martyr or Crank (Lubin)..... 771
Mislaid Baby, A (Essanay)..... 729
Moon For Your Love (Gaumont)..... 731
Mr. and Mrs. Duff (Melies)..... 733
Misadventure of a Pair of Trousers (Pathe).. 733
Man With the Dolls (Pathe)..... 733
Mysterious Luggage, The (Eclair)..... 737
Mother's Heart, A (Ambrosio)..... 737
Man With Three Wives (Edison)..... 693
Malicious Rival (Pathe)..... 695
Message to Napoleon, A (Nordisk)..... 699
Mystic Melodies (Gaumont)..... 655
Miss Annette Kellermann (Vitagraph)..... 659
Maud Muller (Essanay)..... 617
Mountebank's Watchcase (Pathe)..... 621
Mignon (Lubin)..... 581
More Precious Than Gold (Lubin)..... 581
Mexican's Revenge (Vitagraph)..... 583
Man and the Girl, The (Kalem)..... 539
Major and the Judge, The (Lubin)..... 541
Minister's Daughter, The (Edison)..... 499

Music Lesson, The (Pathe) 563
Man and the Law, The (Phoenix) 567
Masterpiece, The (Gaumont) 459
Mountebank's Son, The (Pathe) 387
Making of Honey, The (Edison) 349
Mason's Paradise, The (Gaumont) 351
Mozart's Last Requiem (Gaumont) 351
Midnight Sons (Lubin) 353
Mills of the Gods, The (Biograph) 347
My Wife's Gone to the Country (Essanay) 317
Magic Cartoons (Gaumont) 319
Mrs. Jones' Birthday (Selig) 321
Manufacturing Bamboo Hats 291
Miss Jones' Lover (Biograph) 261
Mended Lute, The (Biograph) 263
Much Ado About Nothing (Essanay) 263
Mustard Plaster, The (Essanay) 263
Mended Lute, The (Biograph) 169
Morning After (Gaumont) 175
Mulligan's Waterloo (Edison) 133
Mother Goose (Biograph) 133
Mother's Sorrow, A (Pathe) 137
Mid-Winter Sports (Vitagraph) 139
Missionary and the Maid (Edison) 97
McGinty's Sudden Rise (Edison) 97
Man in the Moon, The (Gaumont) 99
Monk's Mother, The (Gaumont) 99
Mexican Ball (Lubin) 101
Magic Fountain Pen, The (Vitagraph) 67
Message, The (Biograph) 24
Mine at Last (Vitagraph) 29

N

New Chief (Lubin) 931
New Policeman (Edison) 887
Nothing is Ever Lost (Gaumont) 889
Napoleon's Game of Chess (Le Lion) 817
Nobleman's Dog, The (Pathe) 771
Nursing a Viper (Biograph) 653
Nero, or The Burning of Rome (Ambrosio) 661
Napoleon and Princess Hatfeld (Itala) 661
No Man's Land (Selig) 621
North Pole Craze, The (Phoenix) 547
New Life, A (Edison) 499
Never Eat Green Apples (Vitagraph) 506
Nearsighted Mary (Lubin) 353
Niagara in Winter Dress (Vitagraph) 355
New Mail Carrier, The (Pathe) 321
Newest Woman, The (Lubin) 235
Nugget of Gold, A (Lubin) 101
New Cop, The (Essanay) 61

O

Object: Matrimony (Essanay) 927
Open Gate, The (Biograph) 767
On the Wrong Scent (Essanay) 769
On the Border (Selig) 773
On the Little Big Horn (Selig) 773
Old Lord of Ventor, The (Gaumont) 629
One-Legged Pete and Pat (Gaumont) 639
Out for the Day (Lubin) 541
Onawanda (Vitagraph) 462
Ordeal, The (Edison) 421
On the Crest of the Waves (Gaumont) 423
Old Love Letters (Lubing) 425
Oh! What a Beard (Pathe) 387
Our Country in Arms (Lubin) 351
Oh! Uncle (Biograph) 287
On Another Man's Pass (Essanay) 289
Only a Dream (Gaumont) 61

P

Park of Coserta (Urban-Eclipse) 973
Power of the Press, The (Vitagraph) 973
Policeman's Revolver, The (Essanay) 969
Policeman's Christmas Eve (Lubin) 929
Persistent Poet (Lubin) 931
Pine Ridge Feud (Selig) 891
Professor and the Thomas Cat, The (Vit) 893
Painter's Idol, The (Eclair) 857
Pair of Slippers, A (Biograph) 847
President Taft in the Far West (World) 817
Patient from Punkville, The (Pathe) 771
Parson's Prayer, The (Bison) 777
Pressing Business (Powers) 777
Personal Conduct of Henry (Essanay) 729
Pale Face Wooing, The (Kalem) 731
Pigmy World, The (Gaumont) 693
Peace Agitator, A (Gaumont) 693
Purse, The (Centaur) 585
Princess of the Sea (Gaumont) 539
Papa's Honeymoon (Lubin) 541
Physical Culture Fiend (Pathe) 543
Pet of the Big Horn Ranch (Selig) 543
Pippa Passes (Biograph) 499
Pill Box, The (Gaumont) 501
Papa's Hat (Gaumont) 459
Pierrot, the Fuddler (Pathe) 461
Pretty Girl of Nice (Pathe) 387
Pontine Marshes, Italy (Urabn Eclipse) 391
Paymaster, The (Bison) 357
Pranks (Biograph) 317
Pay Car, The (Kalem) 317
Prof. Puddenhead's Patents (Urban-Eclipse) ... 319
Professor's Dilemma, The (Pathe) 321
Patience of Miss Job, The (Edison) 287
Peaceful Jones (Centaur) 295
Princess Nicotine, or The Smoke Fairy (Vitagraph) 265
Prince and the Pauper, The (Edison) 173
Papa's Hat (Gaumont) 135
Parks in Berlin (Urban-Eclipse) 135
Peasant Prince, The (Selig) 65
Pretty Fishermaiden, The (Urban-Eclipse) 25
Prince and the Actor, The (Nordisk) 31

R

Red Cross Heroine, The (N. Y. Motion Picture Co.) 974
Richelieu (Vitagraph) 973
Red Signal, The (Urabn-Eclipse) 893
Reunited gy Santa Claus (Powers Co.) 893
Reunion's View (Biograph) 847
Rancherman's Revenge, The (Essanay) 849
Rally Round the Flag (Kalem) 849
Reunited at the Gallows (Lubin) 857
Rose of the Tenement, A (Edison) 767
Rubberman, The (Kalem) 771
Rabbit Hunt, The (Urban-Eclipse) 775
Red Star Inn, The (Melies) 781
Running in Hard Luck (Pathe) 785
Edgewood (Pathe) 789
Red Man's Love, The (Powers) 797
Restoration, The (Biograph) 691
Raymister's Rose, The (Gaumont) 695
Ranchman's Wife, The (Bison) 699
Race for a Monkey, A (Itala) 661
Romance in the Andes (Pathe) 621
Rogue's Heir, The (Pathe) 621
Romance of a Poor Girl (Pathe) 545
Red Wing's Gratitude (Vitagraph) 545
Red Domino, The (Nordisk) 541
Romance of an Old Umbrella, The (Vit) 495
Railroad Wreck, The (Phoenix) 393
Romantic Italy (Urban-Eclipse) 319
Ralph Benefits by People's Curiosity (Pathe) .. 321
Rover Turns Santa Claus (Pathe) 291
Royal Outcast, The (Selig) 293
Retaliation (Gaumont) 261
Remuneration, The (Biograph) 97
Romance of a Stranded Actress, The (Essanay) 97
Raised in the County (Gaumont) 25
Room Mates (Lubin) 27

S

Slave to Drink, A (Kalem) 971
Stranger, The (Gaumont) 929
Spanish Girl, The (Essanay) 889
Shepherd's Flute (Gaumont) 889
Strong Tonic (Pathe) 891
Switzerland, Conquering the Alps (Urban-Eclipse) 893
Secret Chamber, The (Urban-Eclipse) 853
Song that Reached Her Heart, The 857
Severant of the Actress, The (Itala) 857
Seein' Things (Melies) 869
Sleeper, The (Melies) 869
Spanish Marriage (Pathe) 811
Servant's Revenge (Lubin) 769
Sins of the Fathers (Vitagraph) 775
Sweet Revenge (Biograph) 729
Set of Teeth (Gaumont) 731
Sam's Artistic Beard (Pathe) 735
Sealed Instructions (Selig) 697
Senorita, The (Selig) 657
Sack Race, The (Le Lion) 661
Song of the Cradle (Gaumont) 619
"Sandy," the Poacher (Lubin) 541
Stolen Wireless, The (Melies) 541
Sleuth and the Wig, The (Gaumont) 501
Story of a Banknote, The (Pathe) 503
Sister Angelica (Pathe) 503
Sheriff's Girl, The (Centaur) 507
Suitors' Competition (Pathe) 425
Stricken Blind (Selig) 461
Scales of Justice, The (Vitagraph) 463
Saved from the Quicksand (Gaumont) 423
Suitors' Competition(Pathe) 425
Servants' Good Joke (Pathe) 425
Siren's Necklace, The (Vitagraph) 427
Squaw's Sacrifice, A (Bison) 429
Story of a Rose, The (Essanay) 385
Seventeen Seventy Six, or The Hessian Renegades (Bio) 349
Stolen Gems, The (Gaumont) 351
Show Your License (Pathe) 353
Swenden—Gotha Canal (Pathe) 353
Sports in Java (Pathe) 355
Stampede, The (Selig) 355
Sealed Room, The (Biograph) 317
Sam Not Wanted in the Family (Pathe) 321
Snell, The (Bison) 323
Strange Reunion, A (Bison) 323
Seventh Day, The (Biograph) 287
Simple Home Dinner, A (Eidson) 287
Sevres Porcelain (Gaumont) 291
Secret Service Woman (Bison) 295
Strikers, The (Urabn-Eclipse) 263
Sacrifice, The (Pathe) 263
Spy, The (Bison) 267
Soldier's Wife (Bison) 237
Sentinel on Duty (Gaumont) 173
Stripping a Forest in Winter (Urban-Eclipse) ... 175
Slave, The (Biograph) 133
Sporting Blood (Lubin) ..... (135
Sweet and Twenty (Biograph) 97
Sweet Toothed Dogs (Pathe) 101
Secret of the Locket, The (Edison) 61
Sure Cure, A (Gaumont) 61
Ski-ing Tournament at Ishpeming (Vit.) 67
Salome Craze (Phoenix) 67
Squeedunk Sherlock Holmes (Edison) 25
Soldier of the United States Army (Kalem) .. 25
Sideboard Folding-Bed, The (Lubin) 27
Spanish Army (Pathe) 27
Spanish Girl, The (Phoenix) 31

T

Three Christmas Dinners (Luibn) 929
Three Fingered Jack (Lubin) 931
Through the Hood River Valley and Along the Columbia River in Oregon (Selig) 931
Two Christmas Tides (Vitagraph) 933
Test, The (Biograph) 887
Tramp's Romance, The (Pathe) 891
Two Sons, The (Imp) 893
Temptation of the Gold Fields (Nordisk) 893
Through the Breakers (Biograph) 847
Tobacco Mania (Edison) 969
Top Heavy Mary (Gaumont) 848
To Save Her Soul (Biograph) 969
Trick That Failed, The (Biograph) 807
Two Sides to a Story (Essanay) 807
Three Neighbors, The (Pathe) 811
Three Thanksgivings (Edison) 767
Then and Now (Edison) 767
Tailings (Gaumont) 769
Two Chums Looking for Wives 771
Two Women and a Man (Biograph) 729
Telltale Reflections (Gaumont) 695
Tale of the Feather, The (Urabn Eclipse) 659
Three Kisses, The (Edison) 647
Two Mr. Whites, The (Vitagraph 622
Tricked to Death (Gaumont) 579
Telephone Girl, The (Phoenix) 585
Trapper, The (Pathe) 541
Too Many on the Job (Vitagraph) 545
Two of a Kind (Edison) 457
True Love Never Runs Smoothly (Edison) 421
Taking in a Reel (Gaumont) 425
Trained Birds (Pathe) .....
'Tis Now the Very Witching Time of Night 385
Three Reasons for Haste (Essanay) 385
Tricky Dummies, The (Gaumont) 391
True Patriot, A (Lubin) 55
They Robbed the Chief of Police (Pathe) 553
Training Bulls ter the Light (Pathe) 556
Tom Thumb (Pathe) 553
Temptation, The (Edison) 317
Two Gentlemanly (Gaumont) 289
Tennessee Guards (Pathe) 291
Trip to Jupiter, A (Pathe) 293
Two Lovers and a Coquette (Pathe) 295
They Would Elope (Biograph) 295
Traced by a Kodak (Kalem) 293
Thelly's Heart (Pathe) 293
Tragedy of Meudon, The (Pathe) 295
Two Pigeons, The (Pathe) 295
Truant, The (Vitagraph) 173
Tobacco Edict, The (Edison) 175
Turning Point (Urban-Eclipse) 177
Traced by a Kodak (Kalem) 175
Taking His Photograph (Edison) 133
Tramp's Story (Essanay) 135
True to His Master (Gaumont) 99
Tomboy, The (Kalem) 99
Tender Hearts (Biograph) 61
True to Her Love (Pathe) 65
Tragic Ending of Shrove Tuesday, The (Pathe) 27
Tunisian Industries (Pathe) 27
Tale of Texas, A (Centaur) 31

U

Ugly Girl, The (Pathe) 891
Up San Juan Hill (Selig) 773
Unspoken Good Bye, The (Vitagraph) 427
Up the Mountain from Hong Kong (Urban-Eclipse) 293
Unexpected Guest, The (Biograph) 295
Up the Ladder with Tom Bowline (Edison) 25

V

Village Scare, The (Gaumont) 769
Valican, Jean (Vitagraph) 775
Visions of a Nag (Gaumont) 731
Very Attractive Gentleman, A (Ambrosio) 661
Visit to Uncle, A (Lubin) 581
Vagabond Life (Nordisk) 507
Vendetta (Pathe) 461
Visit to Biskra, A (Pathe) 553
Versailles (Pathe) 556
Visions of Mother (Gaumont) 25

W

Western Maid, A (Essanay) 971
Why He Did Not Win Out 971
What the Cards Foretold (Edison) 847
Willyboy Gets His (Pathe) 853
Wonderful Electro-Magnet (Edison) 807
Wolf Hunt, A (Pathe) 811
When Women Win (Lubin) 769
Why They Married (Vitagraph) 775
Winter's Tale, A (Edison) 729
Witches' Cavern (Selig) 695
Warrior's Sacrifice, The (Gaumont) 655
Witch, The (Le Lion) 661
Widow, The (Essanay) 579
Woman's Wit, A (Essanay) 579
Who Discovered the North Pole? (Lubin) 541
Wonderful Remedy (Pathe) 543
Whittler's Witless Wanderings (Edison) 501
Wedding Party in Luna Park (Gaumont) 501
Wheels of Justice (Selig) 505
Wanted: A Child (Biograph) 456
Why Girls Leave Home (Edison) 457
Wallace Jewels, The (Edison) 457
Wife or Child (Urban-Eclipse) 459
When Women Hate (Lubin) 423
Wealthy Rival, The (Vitagraph) 391
White Lie, A (Centaur) 393
Wifey Away, Hubby at Play (Lubin) 356
Wishing Charm, The (Centaur) 357
Woman Hater, The (Lubin) 319
Winning a Widow (Selig) 321
Web of Fate, The (Edison) 287
Way of the Cross, The (Vitagraph) 293
With Her Card (Biograph) 261
Wonders of Nature in the Twin Falls Country, South Iowa (Essanay) 261
When the Flag Falls (Lubin) 169
Woman's Way, A (Vitagraph) 173
Won in the Desert (Selig) 163
Which Is Which? (Essanay) 61
Wizard's Walikng Stick, The (Urban-Eclipse) .. 63
Wood Floating in Morvan (Pathe) 65
Witch's Donkey, The (Pathe) 29
Wearybones Seeks a Rest and Gets It (Vit.) .. 29

X

X-Ray Glasses (Gaumont) 809

Y

Young Deer's Bravery (Bison) 661
Yachting Off Cowes (Urban-Eclipse) 503
Yellow Jacket Mine, The (Selig) 265

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF LICENSED FILMS.

Monday, January 10.

Biograph—Her Terrible Ordeal (Dr.)..... 952 ft.
Selig—A Tale of the Woods (Dr.).....1000 ft.
Lubin—Over the Wire (Dr.)..... 900 ft.
Pathe—Miss Moneybags Wishes to Wed (Com.).... 581 ft.
Pathe—Women in India (Educational)..... 377 ft.

Tuesday, January 11.

Gaumont—Shooting in the Haunted Woods (Com).. 570 ft.
Gaumont—Towser's New Job (Com.)..... 393 ft.
Edison—Bear Hunt in the Rockies (Scenic)..... 975 ft.
Vitagraph—Call Boy's Vengeance (Com.)..... 320 ft.
Vitagraph—The Old Maid's Valentine (Com.)..... 575 ft.

Wednesday, January 12.

Urban—True to His Oath (Dr.)..... 672 ft.
Urban—Home of the Gypsies (Scenic)..... 321 ft.
Pathe—Camille (Dr.) .....1033 ft.
Essanay—Electric Insoles (Com.)..... 502 ft.
Essanay—The Old Maid and the Burglar (Com.).... 498 ft.

Thursday, January 13.

Biograph—All on Account of the Milk (Dr.)..... 989 ft.
Selig—Under the Stars and Stripes (Dr.)..... 900 ft.
Lubin—Wild Duck Hunting on Historic Reel Foot Lake (Scenic) ..... 550 ft.
Lubin—He Joined the Frat (Com.)..... 300 ft.

Friday, January 14.

Pathe—The Beggar's Repentance (Dr.)..... 692 ft.
Pathe—Story of a Leg (Com.)..... 285 ft.
Edison—A Warrior Bold (Com.)..... 475 ft.
Edison—The Parson's Umbrella (Com.)..... 220 ft.
Edison—Troop "B," Etc..... 285 ft.
Kalem—The Romance of a Trained Nurse (Dr.).....930 ft.

Saturday, January 15.

Pathe—On a Racket (Com.)..... 600 ft.
Pathe—A Stag Hunt in Java (Scenic)..... 367 ft.
Gaumont—Decorated by the Emperor (Dr.)..... 698 ft.
Gaumont—Railway on the Ice Sea (Scenic)..... 312 ft.
Essanay—Review of the U. S. Troops, Fort Leavenworth (Scenic) .....1000 ft.
Vitagraph—A Sister's Sacrifice (Dr.)..... 970 ft.

VITAGRAPH NOTES.

Over six hundred guests have been invited to attend the "home talent" vaudeville entertainment that is to follow the Vitagraph dinner to its employees Saturday night, January 8. Although the entertainment is said to be by "home talent," the words are somewhat misleading, as everyone who is to participate is or has been a professional. There are twelve numbers on the program, as follows:

1. A reel of Vitagraph pictures: A surprise for everyone.
2. Baritone Solo.....Signor Corroccini
3. Comedy Sketch.....Miss Turner and Mr. Costello
4. Dramatic Reading....."Bill" Phillips
5. Songs and Cartoons.....S. M. Spedon
6. Irish Comedy by "Van" and "Bill," Van Dyke Brooks and W. Shea
7. Soprano Solo.....Madam St. Loup
8. Magic and Mystery.....Albert E. Smith
9. Cohen at Greenfield.....Walter Ackerman
10. Monologue of Nonsense.....J. Stuart Blackton
11. Vitagraph Review.....Entire Stock Company
12. Vitagraph Pictures.

To be followed by dancing ad. lib.

The entertainment, which will commence at 8.30 P. M., in the largest studio, will be preceded by a dinner for the company and employees at 7 P. M., for which there will be 200 covers.

* * *

The Vitagraph Company has commenced preparations for an adequate film production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The matter has been under consideration for some time, but now the plans are completed and the work is being pushed forward with all speed. It may be taken for granted, judging from the elaborate and thorough manner in which this company has always carried out its great film undertakings, that the coming "Uncle Tom's Cabin" film will be a motion picture event of the first importance. The subject is one that admits of unusually effective scenic, pantomimic and spectacular effects, and it is promised that no pains nor expense will be spared to do them full justice. The wonder is that no company has in recent years seized upon it for production, as it cannot fail to prove a most popular one.

CORRESPONDENCE.

INDEPENDENT EXCHANGE FOR NASHVILLE, TENN.

Dear Sir:

Mr. Holmberg begs to announce that he has purchased the Nashville branch of the Chicago Film Exchange, and will continue business under the firm name of Warioto Film Company, who will be pleased to receive from you your valued order for film rentals.

"Better Service."

C. HOLMBERG, Mgr.,
Warioto Film Company.

[Mr. Holmberg was for two years manager of the Chicago Film Exchange, Nashville branch, and did The Moving Picture World many favors in his territory; therefore, we take pleasure in giving the above announcement and in wishing him success.—Eds.]

Atlantic City, N. J., January 3, 1910.

Moving Picture World, New York.

Gentlemen:—I am enclosing you a clipping from the Newark Star which gives an account of the big fire which burnt our Sea Shell Theater out in that city on December 30, 1909.

We wish to say that the account they give of our operator and his work is true, but it does not say the half it could have said, as the firemen stated they never saw such a cool and matter-of-fact way in which he acted, and got the house emptied of its hundred or more patrons, and then turned in and saved all films and machines and most everything movable until the flames got so close he was compelled to stop to save himself from being caught.

We are glad to say this fire did not originate in the moving picture theater, as most people think as soon as they read about a fire burning one out, but it started next door in another line of business.

Yours truly,
SEA SHELL AMUSEMENT COMPANY,
Geo. P. Rogers.

[From the Newark Star.]

"It is to the cool and quick judgment of George Clayton, a film operator, that a hundred or more patrons of the Sea Shell moving picture house, at 230 Market street, owe their lives. Clayton, from his position in the front of the house, saw the smoke and tiny flecks of flame trickling up an exit which leads to an alley in the rear. He pressed an emergency button, which caused a light to blaze in front of Harold W. Cook, who was at the piano. When he saw the light Cook turned and Clayton yelled to turn on the lights and Cook touched a button and the place, which was in the moving picture gloom, became brilliantly illuminated.

"'No more show here to-night,' said Cook, in a voice that was far from excited.

"Several of the patrons became angry and demanded a return of their money. By this time the smoke had almost filled the place and the audience, thinking that something unusual had happened, filed out the Market street entrance. The last had not left when the flames burst through from the rear and into the moving picture house."

[Fires in moving picture houses are now of so rare occurrence that the public are no longer fooled by the talk of the agitator. The newspapers are also fair in their reports and the Newark Star gives due credit to the coolness of an operator in the Sea Shell Theater, which was unfortunately consumed by fire which originated in an adjacent factory. We sympathize with the Sea Shell Amusement Company in their loss.—Eds. M. P. W.]

I am now running the Independent pictures, which, I must say, are the best ever put on a machine. I wish to congratulate the Independent manufacturers for their big success for the present and for the future also.

I am an exhibitor and get my films through the United Film Renting Company, of Troy, and they are the only people to deal with. I must say that ever since I have been running the Independent films I have never had a repeater from the said company. Can the association beat that? This was my trouble while running the associated films; now I don't have to worry about repeaters and I am paying less for my service.

I wish to say that the United Film Renting Company are the fairest people I ever dealt with, and wish them to accept my congratulations for the present and also for the future. I also have the Cinephone and it is wonderfully successful.

THE LYRIC THEATER,
Hoosick Falls, N. Y. Jack Eberle, Mgr.

LECTURES on Suitable Subjects in Moving Pictures are a pleasing and attractive feature and always appreciated by your patrons. The peer and pioneer of lectures or "picture readings" with moving pictures is acknowledged to be

W. STEPHEN BUSH

Pleased to correspond with exhibitors

44 North 10th Street - - - Philadelphia, Pa.

Independent Films

FOR RENT

We are offering a strictly high grade Independent Service at greatly reduced prices. Our Films are all practically new, and carefully inspected before shipping.

A Big Feature with every shipment

SONG SLIDES FREE

Films, Machines, Supplies of all kinds constantly on hand for sale

Let us quote you prices on anything you need

PIEDMONT FILM EXCHANGE

Acme Theatre Building

Long Distance Phone No. 533 GOLDSBORO, N. C.

Powers Picture Plays

A new name for an improved production.

The Little Heroine

The most powerful Western Drama ever shown in Motion Pictures. Great Acting—Great Riding. Photography is superb. Beautiful colored posters Free.

Code Word, "Lilhero" Length, 975 Feet

Released January 18th, 1910

Get on our mailing list if you want to keep posted on great American films.

THE POWERS CO.

Members of the National Independent Moving Picture Alliance

241st St. & Richardson Ave. :: New York

BE UP-TO-DATE Protect Your Patrons—Save Yourself Trouble—Use

PINO-SRAY FOR SWEEPING : : DISINFECTING, DEODORIZING

It kills all dust, germs and odors and leaves your rooms clean, sanitary and scented with the delightful odor of new pine

Write for Booklet

The Worrell Mfg. Co. :: Sedalia, Mo., U. S. A.

JEFFRIES-JOHNSON

FIGHT PICTURES

18 slides, views of Jeffries and Johnson with trainers Gotch, Roller, Berger; promoters and other men and scenes connected with coming big fight.

$5.50 per set; or rented 3 days $2, week $4

THE FEATURE SYNDICATE Box 82 SANDUSKY, OHIO

FOR SALE

Beautiful Picture Theatre, Dubuque, Iowa

Town 60,000. On one of the principal corners, elegant lobby, opera chairs, raised floor and stage. Making money now, will stand close investigation. Reason for selling, time taken up with my new $50,000 Vaudeville Theatre. $2,000 takes it.

JAKE ROSENTHAL - Bijou Theatre, Dubupue, Iowa

MOTION PICTURE PIANO MUSIC

This is a book of descriptive music, regular sheet music size, and arranged for both hands. Specially selected, arranged and composed by one of the best descriptive Pianists in the U. S., who for the past twenty years has been Musical Director in all lines of Theatrical Productions. This work is the result of actual experience, and is now being used in hundreds of M. P. Theatres. Contains music, for all probable scenes, actions, characters, etc., and its suggestions are entirely practical. Increases the value of YOUR SHOW 100%. Descriptive circular sent free to anyone upon request. This book sent promptly upon receipt of price. $1.00 Remit either by P. O. or Express Order, Draft or Check to

GREGG A. FRELINGER

1009 Ferry Street Lafayette, Ind.

"Well Well"

Who said slides? If you did, send $1.00 to us and we will say it four times for you. Four beautifully colored, artistic announcement slides for $1.00 in answer to this. Send for list. "As good as the best, and better than the rest," or money back.

NIAGARA SLIDE COMPANY

"Original Slide Makers from Slideville"

LOCKPORT NEW YORK

Exhibitors Exchanges

We Want Your Names and Addresses

YOU NEED OUR PRODUCTIONS

Working together we will enjoy prosperity. Let us tell you all about something that is as good if not better than the best

Pantograph Corporation

1402 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

SEND POSTAL TO-DAY. SURE

Members of the N. I. M. P. A.

Among the Exhibitors.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The Broadway Lyceum Company will erect a new moving picture theater at 332 Broadway.

Highland, Ill.—E. R. Sanders has disposed of his nickelodeon here to R. A. Ruegger.

Gilman, Ill.—C. E. Zink has leased the Opera House here for a moving picture theater.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Charles Bagg is planning to erect a large vaudeville and moving picture theater at 1514 Main street.

Maple Rapids, Mich.—S. J. Dunstall and C. A. Pettit have opened a new moving picture theater here.

Kansas City, Mo.—George Stimpson is planning to erect an immense moving picture theater here.

Vincennes, Ind.—The New York Lyceum Company has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Bernstein & Swerdloff will erect a new moving picture theater at 1848 Niagara.

Sandusky, Ohio.—A. Schurman is making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Trenton, Mo.—Will F. Newlan has purchased the Gem Theater here.

Mechanicsville, N. Y.—Edward Cassin has purchased the Bijou Theater here from L. Cadieax.

Macomb, Ill.—J. S. Moore has purchased the Varsity Moving Picture Theater here.

New York, N. Y.—Tonti Brothers have had plans prepared for the erection of a moving picture theater at 2035 Second avenue.

Braidwood, Ill.—La Core & Wilson, of Gardner, have purchased the Scenic Theater here from F. Schimandle.

McGregor, Tex.—Wallace Connolly is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

NESTOR
Film D'Luxe

AN AMERICAN PRODUCTION

Released Monthly by

A. G. WHYTE
1 Madison Avenue
NEW YORK

Baltimore, Md.—Herman Hackerman is preparing to open a new moving picture theater at 1204 Patterson avenue.

Vincennes, Ind.—Mr. Fletcher has sold the Royal Theater, at the corner of Sixth and Main streets, to Herman Becker.

Atlanta, Ga.—J. A. Webb has purchased the Elite moving picture theater here.

Virginia, Minn.—John Cummings has sold the Orpheum Theater here to A. Baker.

Butler, Mass.—Forrest Kerrens has opened a new moving picture theater in the building formerly occupied by the Defrance store.

Keokuk, Ia.—A new moving picture theater, The Bon Ton, has been erected here.

Peotone, Ill.—Brien & Grudeau have built a new picture house in Pearson Hall.

Raleigh, N. C.—The Grand Theater is the latest moving picture theater erected here.

Cairo, Ill.—W. S. Low has taken charge of the Opera House and will operate it as a first-class moving picture theater.

Centerville, Md.—Edwin Knox is erecting a new moving picture theater on Water street.

Marion, Ind.—The Royal Theater has been purchased by Otto Reel.

Iron River, Wis.—E. M. Landry has leased the Masonic Temple and will erect a moving picture theater.

Mound City, Mo.—A new moving picture theater has been built here and will be under the management of E. Manning & Co.

Charleston, S. C.—The Turnverein Hall has been purchased by the Pastime Amusement Company, who will adopt the building for a vaudeville and moving picture theater.

Morgan City, Ia.—The Dreamland Theater has been purchased by Earnest Ditch from Frank Murzlow. The theater will be under the management of Sol. Loeb.

Released Thursday, January 13th, 1910

MISHAPS OF BONEHEAD
IN SEARCH OF AN HEIRESS
LENGTH, 450 FEET

FORGIVEN
LENGTH, 545 FEET

Rattling Good American Productions. DON'T MISS THEM

Philadelphia, Pa.—Peter Kuhn has been commissioned to prepare plans for a new moving picture theater, to be located at Frankford avenue and Ontario street, for D. C. Schuller.

Hartford, City, Ind.—George Loucks is making arrangements to open a new moving picture show here.

Bangor, Me.—Herlihy & Freeman have disposed of their interests in the Gem Theater, on Exchange street, to the Abram Amusement Company.

Chicago, Ill.—The Triangler Amusement Company will erect a new moving picture theater at 7109 South Chicago avenue.

Philadelphia, Pa.—T. Lees Howard has secured a permit for the erection of a new moving picture theater at the corner of Fifty-second and Sansom streets.

Delaware, Ohio.—F. D. King and J. F. Gaynor have purchased, from Mr. Knoblock, the Theatorium moving picture house.

Lake City, Minn.—H. S. Berlinge has purchased the interest of E. J. Fetter in the Grand Electric Theater.

Ishpeming, Mich.—The Schotts Brothers have purchased the Bijou Moving Picture Theater of T. H. Crinnian.

Buffalo, N. Y.—D. E. Meyers has decided to erect a new vaudeville and moving picture theater at 1200 Jefferson street.

Dover, N. H.—Manager Gallagher has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—The Motion Picture Theater Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000. The incorporators are Ben Tibbe, Wm. H. James, George J. Ader, Lee Crouch and others.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Lehigh Palace Company is having plans prepared for the erection of a $100,000 vaudeville and moving picture theater to be located on Lehigh avenue.

ON AND AFTER
Feb. 15, 1910

The
American Film Producing Co.

Will Release Regularly One Reel Each Week

SOLE AGENT

A. G. WHYTE
Importer and Exporter

1 Madison Avenue
NEW YORK

Windler, Pa.—The Lochrie Building, on Fifteenth street, is being converted into a moving picture theater.

St. Joseph, Mo.—Another moving picture theater is being erected here. It is the Cosy, 618 Edmond street, and is under the management of W. E. McKinney.

New Paris, Ohio.—Charles Winkle is making arrangements for the erection of a new moving picture theater here and will run all the latest pictures.

Hamilton, Ohio.—The Eagle Theater, on Court and Reily streets, has opened its doors to the public and will be under the management of Mr. Wittman.

Moundsville, W. Va.—Sam Graham and Asher T. Lewis have leased the Lyric Theater here.

Chelsea, Mass.—A new moving picture theater is being erected on Broadway and Fourth street by the Gordon Amusement Company. The seating capacity is about 2,000.

Atlanta, Ill.—M. L. Pruitt has leased the Knecht Building, which he will convert into a new moving picture theater.

Mobile, Ala.—A new moving picture theater is being erected at 11 North Conception street, opposite Bienville square. This theater is one of the largest and most handsome in Mobile.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Plans and specifications have been made by Carl P. Betger for the erection of a new moving picture theater at the corner of Front street and Girard avenue for the Jumbo Amusement Company.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Samuel Bermen is the proprietor of the new picture theater erected at 546 Michigan street.

Lynn, Mass.—A new moving picture theater is being erected in the old Slattery Block.

Macomb, Ia.—William Dickerson will build a new 5-cent theater in the Moore Building.

Renew Your Films

EXCHANGES!

A clean film is more important to an exhibitor than a recent release. First run spells good condition.

WE REMOVE DIRT AND SCRATCHES

and put a lustre on the film that makes it

BETTER THAN NEW

Put your old film to work at advanced prices by having it renovated.

OLD RELIABLE FILM RENOVATING CO.
134 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
J. S. SPEER, Manager

All kinds of References furnished

NEW YEAR RESOLUTIONS

Resolved:

1. To continue treating our customers in the future as in the past, and thus retain their good-will.
2. To continue making every effort to give the Exhibitor shows that will improve his business and increase his profits.
3. To continue giving better service at lower prices than any other Exchange in the ccuntry.
4. To continue living up to every promise, and retain the title conferred upon us by our customers; "The Square Dealer."

Wrire to us for all machine supplies and our special $12 to $15 service, including song slides and banners changed every day

Remember: WE LIVE UP TO EVERY PROMISE

UNION FILM EXCHANGE
23 N. Third Street, Harrisburg, Pa.

Films For Sale 50 new reels of perfect film, extra good condition, to close out, at $18.50. Second hand Edison machines for sale at a bargain. Parts to fit all machines in stock

MAYER SILVERMAN, 322 Fulton Bldg., Pittsburg; Pa.

Films I have a system of keeping away from Repeaters No reels older than one year. This sounds bad but not half as bad as it is to hand you gunc three years old

I am open and frank and tell you what you get for your money—Try me for a week anyhow. You can't lose.

PURDY'S FILM EXCHANGE
300 EAST 23d STREET, Cor. 2nd Ave., NEW YORK CITY

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER

Miror Vitae Products," Projectors, Cameras, Film-Making Machinery, Films, Slides, Stereopticons, Specialties, Lens Grinding, etc. Special condensors, carbons and lugs.

109 East 12th Street, New York

BIOGRAPH FILMS

TRADE MARK TRADE MARK

RELEASED JANUARY 10, 1910

Her Terrible Ordeal

WHERE ABSENT-MINDEDNESS PROVES A BLESSING

In this Biograph subject a fatality is averted through forgetfulness. Mr. Curtis is about to leave on a business trip, and leaves his office in charge of his son and the young typist, whom Jack loves. Curtis, on leaving, drops his wallet on the floor and Jack hastens to return it. While Jack is away, a tramp enters, and forcing the girl into the vault, steals her purse. On Jack's return he hears the knocking on the inside of the safe. He is powerless, as he doesn't know the combination. Out he rushes in hopes of overtaking his father, only to find the train gone. Curtis, however, is not on the train, as he had forgotten important papers and returned to the office to procure them. This was the means of saving the girl from suffocation.

LENGTH, 952 FEET

RELEASED JANUARY 13, 1910

All on Account of the Milk

A BIOGRAPH COMEDY OF A MODERN "HERO AND LEANDER"

Here we present a romance in which Cupid takes the part of the milkman. The young contractor, to better inspect the work on a building, attires himself in overalls. At lunchtime he expresses a desire for milk. His foreman tells him where he can get it. At the farmhouse the maid has been taken ill, and the young lady of the house essays to do her work. The young man, of course, thinks her the maid, while she thinks him a laborer. This does not prevent their falling in love with each other. He gets the milk habit, always going for it attired as a laborer, while she also keeps up the deception, each afraid if the other knew their identity it would frighten him or her off. The affair is finally straightened out and everybody is happy.

LENGTH, 989 FEET

A Full Description of these Subjects will be Found on Another Page

Release days of Biograph Subjects — MONDAY and THURSDAY

Get on Our Mail List and Keep Posted. Write for Our Descriptive Circulars

BIOGRAPH COMPANY
Licensee of the Motion Picture Patents Co.
11 EAST 14th STREET :: NEW YORK
GEORGE KLEINE, Selling Agent for Chicago (52 State St., Chicago, Ill.).

ROLL TICKETS

YOUR SPECIAL TICKET
PRINTED BOTH SIDES
NUMBERING GUARANTEED

50,000	-	$ 6.50
100,000	-	10.00
500,000	-	35.00

Prompt Shipments—Cash with Order—No C. O. D.

THE CARTER PRESS PEABODY MASS.

Special Quotations for Large Quantities

STORIES OF THE FILMS

BIOGAPH COMPANY.

ALL ON ACCOUNT OF THE MILK.—Our Leander did not meet his Hero on the Thracian Coast, nor does he fearlessly swim across the dangerous Hellespont to visit her, and on the other hand, Hero does not place a burning torch on a tower to attract Leander—no, the milk pail is his beacon. But to come to facts, commonplace though they be, we will state that the Leander of our story is named Hiram Hopkins, and Hero, Sophia Simpson, but as Hiram and Sophia do not look well in type, hence the poetic subtitle. The housemaid at the Simpson villa is taken sick and Miss Sophia, the young lady of the house, essays to do her work. Donning the maid's long apron, she busies herself among the pots and pans of the kitchen. Not far away there is a building in progress, and Hiram is the contractor of the work. That he may the better inspect the progress of the work, he attires himself in a suit of overalls. At noontime he expresses a desire for some milk, and his foreman offers to get it, but he asks the way and goes himself. Here he meets the pretty little Sophia, for it is from Simpson's maid that they have procured milk. Of course, he thinks she is the maid, and she thinks him one of the laborers. However, they both become smitten with each other, and her attitude is rather more tantalizing than his. Well it goes without saying that he gets the milk habit, coming over for the milk as often as is consistent. He is always sure to be garbed as a laborer for fear of frightening the little maid off, and she is always alert to be attired in the maid's apron, fearing if her laborer-lover knew her station he would be inclined to discontinue his visits. Hence they keep up this innocent deception for some time, the maid having recovered meanwhile. Later, the contractor's mother arrives at the building with a message calling him to the city. Before he goes he must said good-bye to his little housmaid sweetheart, so he calls and tells the gardener, who loves the real housemaid, he wants to see the maid. The maid is called, and, of course, she knows him not, nor does he know her. This is a relief to the gardener, but the mistress, Mrs. Simpson, views him with suspicion, and orders him from the place. As he leaves, Sophia espies him, and rushing into the kitchen, snatches up the maid's apron, putting it on as she chases after him. The gardener from a distance thinks her his sweetheart, dashes up only to be embarrassingly mistaken. However, while telling the kitchen maid the experience, Sophia's mother appears, and overhearing, at once starts out after her daughter, who she hears is in the arms of a common laborer. Hiram's mother has gotten impatient and has started out to look for him, coming upon the trio just as Mrs. Simpson is pitching into Hiram. There is at once a mixup between the two materfamilias, and for a short time things looked serious until suddenly the two recognize each other. They are old-time friends, and the identity of the lovers is established. Hence, an inordinate thirst for milk brought two hearts together, and it may be recorded as the first time that the cow played Cupid.

HER TERRIBLE ORDEAL.—That everything happens for the best has been so often verified that it behooves us to take this moral to ourselves whenever things seemingly go wrong. We may feel disappointed and perturbed at the instant, but afterwards, when we reason it out, we find it a blessing in disguise. This is an important factor in this Biograph subject. Mr. Curtis, the real estate broker, was in the extreme very absentminded, and his forgetfulness often caused him embarrassment. He is about to set out on a journey of business, and his son Jack visits his office, ostensibly to help him pack his luggage, but in reality to see the girl he loves, his father's pretty stenographer, Alice, who secretly loves him in return. Curtis is all of a flurry trying to give his typist instructions and at the same time gathering his effects for the trip. In taking from his pocket some papers, he drops on the floor his wallet, where it remains unseen until after his departure. The father gone, Jack declares himself to the girl, who teasingly holds him off. During this scene, they discover the pocketbook, and Jack hastens after his father to restore it. While he is away a peddler enters the office and finding the girl alone, snatches up her purse and forces her into the large safe vault, where she is captive, the combination having turned. Jack enters and imagining Alice has just stepped out, sits to wait, when he hears a knocking on the safe door, indistinct at first, then becoming louder, as Alice has picked up a pistol from the shelf and beats with its butt end on the heavy door. He answers with rappings, but the walls are too thick to hear her voice. He is helpless, as he does not know the combination. He is filled with terror, for he realizes Alice must be slowly but surely suffocating. Through the desk he rumages in hopes of finding the combination, but without success. Meanwhile, his father has arrived at the railroad station only to find that his forgetfulness has caused him to leave most important papers behind. At this moment a friend appears and as he cannot hope to get the papers and return in time for the oncoming train, he accompanies his friend to a cafe for a drink on the way back. The train has arrived and pulled out again when Jack rushes frantically into the station. The train gone, he has a telegram sent to the conductor to find Mr. Curtis and have him return—matter of life and death. The answer comes, "No Curtis on train." Of course not, for Mr. Curtis has returned to the office, procured the papers and is off again to catch the next train. During this time poor Alice has become exhausted and has fallen to the floor of the vault. Jack rushes back to be told by the office boy of his father having been there and just gone again. Jack and the boy rush out to overtake him, which they do. The three rush back and release the poor girl none too soon.

EDISON MFG. CO.

BEAR HUNT IN THE ROCKIES.—Many pictures have been made of wild animals, but always, so far as we know, under conditions of captivity. In this picture, however, there is not the slightest departure from absolutely natural conditions. Nor is there any attempt at acting. An actual bear hunt is reproduced just as it occurred from the beginning to the end.

Our representative was sent to Marble, Col., where he joined the camping outfit of Frank Dickens, hunter and guide, well known to all who hunt big game in that section of the country.

Through the magic aid of the camera every one who sees this picture is privileged to leave with the hunting party and to journey through the indescribably beautiful scenery of Colorado in the quest for the bear. We go through gorges and over mountains, penetrate forests and follow mountain trails where safety lies only in the sure-footed horses; and all this in the very heart of the Rockies, with the snow-capped peaks showing in the distance. The altitude is about 10,000 feet, and both horse and man can do only a limited amount of work on account of the rarefied air.

We go into camp, and from there we start on our actual hunt, accompanied by our dogs, barking in exultant chorus. The big bear is first seen swimming a stream from which a young woman is catching trout. The encounter is not at all to her liking, and she beats a precipitate retreat to camp. Taking advantage of the campers' absence, Bruin later on enters the camp, steals a grouse hanging alongside one of the tents and disappears with it into the forest. Here his quiet is broken by the baying of the dogs, and this is the beginning of his end. We see him treed, the fatal shot fired which brings him to the ground, the fight with the dogs, and finally we see Bruin thrown across a horse's back and the journey back to camp. En route a young cub is roped and brought into camp in that manner, and the final scene shows the big bear swung up, with the dead cub on the ground.

A WARRIOR BOLD.—Major Bradley, a veteran of the Civil War, is congratulated by his comrades of the Post on his birthday anniversary. They partake of liquid refreshment and the Major leaves them, promising to be present at the banquet they have arranged in his honor that afternoon. As he passes along the street he meets a small boy who has been playing "soldier" and whose flag has been broken in a tussle with a street gamin. The Major takes him into a toy store to buy him a new flag. Here he meets the proprietor, another veteran, and an argument arises as to whether Longstreet was up the hill or down in a certain engagement in which both veterans took part. In illustrating his version of the battle the Major waxes vigorous and breaks a number of toys. Apologizing to the toy man the Major pays the damage and goes on his way.

At the end of the banquet that afternoon he is called on for a war story and, quite naturally, he selects his favorite hobby as the theme. He again discusses the vexed question of Longstreet's position and, in describing the battle, in order to settle the argument which ensues, he smashes everything on the table which, in his excitement, he uses as a platform.

The French proprietor of the restaurant has him arrested and brought to the night court. Here he illustrates to the judge the cause of the trouble, and puts the court to rout. He is discharged by the good-natured judge for his distinguished services to his country, and it is recommended that he receive eight hours' refreshing sleep.

THE PARSON'S UMBRELLA.—We see the vestibule of a little country meeting house on a rainy day and some of the members of the congregation (all colored people) coming out, to find the rain beating down and endangering their good "Sunday-go-to-meeting-clothes." We see the temptation which the stack of umbrellas in the corner offers, and to which most of them succumb, and then, when the congregation has entirely departed, we see the old parson left to go home in the rain unprotected. He proves to be not without resource, however, for in the next scene he prepares a notice to his congregation, lettered by his own hand—and a piece of comic literature in itself. It intimates that he has a shrewd suspicion who took his umbrella, but will be lenient if it is tossed over his back fence that night. At the evening service this notice is read and posted on the front of the little church. Then in the dead of night we see the borrowers of other people's umbrellas doing their best to make amends and save their skins, and when the morning dawns and we get a view of the parson's back yard we see the comic side of Shakespeare's famous sentence —"Thus conscience doth make cowards of us all."

TROOP "B," 15TH U. S. CAVALRY, BAREBACK SQUAD, IN "THE MONKSY DRILL" AT FORT MYER, VA. We have seen daring specimens of horsemanship by the Cossacks and riders of other nationalities, but so far as we know this is the first time that such feats, exhibited by a regular troop of cavalry of the United States Army, have been thrown upon the canvas. It was only through the combination of fortuitous circumstances that we were able to get the picture, and we feel that the trade will share with us our gratification at the result.

Pictures portraying scenes in the daily routine of Uncle Sam's boys have an unfailing attraction for the public. Particularly is this true of cavalry pictures, the action of which is necessarily rapid and exciting, and keeps the interest of an audience keyed up to a high pitch at all times while the reel is being run.

Troop "B," 15th United States Cavalry, has a national reputation for daring horsemanship, and the picture shows them in all of the difficult feats they accomplish. The work is all done so smoothly that it looks easy, but we can well believe that it is accomplished only after weeks and months of most arduous practice, which is not unattended with danger. The pictures also are a testimonial to the high moral standard of the U. S. Army at the present time, for it is incredible that these feats, requiring as they do acrobatic skill and dexterity of a high order, could be performed by men whose mode of living is not clean and sober.

ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.

ELECTRIC INSOLES.—Hav you ever heard of Dr. Wright's Wonderful Electric Insoles? "Guaranteed to cure anything the matter with the feet, rheumatism, corns, bunions, also a powerful vitality stimulant, makes you feel young and giddy and alarmingly lively," etc., etc.

Our hero, Bill Smith, has something the matter with his feet. He is hobbling along with the aid of a cane one day when his friend, Jim Brown, stops him and tells him about Dr. Wright's Electric Insoles, and recommends that he buy a pair. Bill is a little skeptical but finally decides to buy a pair. Hobbling into a drug store, Bill purchases a pair of insoles, and, anxious to see how they work, sits down on the sidewalk, removes his shoes and places the insoles inside. He rises to his feet again and the trouble begins.

It seems that this pair of electric insoles has been too heavily charged or stimulated; at any rate Bill's feet begin cutting up, and for the life of him he cannot make them behave. With a swoop he is off and though he tries hard enough he cannot stop himself.

You have heard of the legendary "Seven-League Boots" and their remarkable speed qualities. The fabulous hero who wore them never ate space faster than Bill did. Bill tries to turn off the motor or shake the shoes but there is nothing doing. He tries to make a speed break of his cane and grabbing the picket of a fence tears out an entire section and deposits it two or three blocks down the street. Two policemen get in his way, when the human lightning streak hits them and leaves them sprawling on the ground. Two women come out to beat a carpet and Bill takes them with him.

The merry pace continues and Bill, having exhausted every available means to stop himself, finally allows the speed-mad shoes to carry him whither they will. The various pedestrians who have suffered indignities and bumps in collision with Bill have pursued him relentlessly, unable, of course, to keep pace with him, until finally, in crossing the iron lid of a sidewalk manhole, our hero suddenly stops. The manhole lid, it seems, acts as an attracting magnet and holds Bill and his wonderful shoes firmly to the walk.

The pursuers arrive on the scene and Bill receives the drubbing of his life. Then they endeavor to tear him from the manhole, but only until he is pulled out of his shoes is the spell broken.

THE OLD MAID AND THE BURGLAR.—Miss Priscilla Mifkin is our heroine. Priscilla has long passed the matrimonial decline, but hope in her heart is not dead and she flirts with the butcher, baker and candlestick maker, honestly confident that one of these worthy gentlemen will some day propose to her. She wants a man; she doesn't care what sort of a creature he is, anything in trousers will do.

Priscilla retires to her bed one night, peeping under the bedstead, as is her custom, to see if a man may be hidden under it. She rises with a doleful expression on her face when she finds her hopes have been useless.

A short time later Priscilla is startled from her sleep by noises, unmistakably coming from the dining room. "Ah, a man at last!"

Arming herself with a broom she steals out of her chamber, down the stairs and into the dining room. A burly intruder is just gathering up the silver. A stiff blow or two with the broom tumbles the astonished burglar into a heap and a

When you once get solid with the family, neighborhood crowd by giving the clearest, steadiest pictures, you've got a patronage worth having. The way to get solid with this crowd is to start with the right machine—

The Edison Kinetoscope

The men who are making the most money, in the moving picture game, are the men who use the Edison—because they get ALL the profits; they don't throw away a big percentage of their profits on repairs.

When the neighborhood crowd once gets the habit, good pictures are just as necessary to them as three square meals a day. Start with the machine that will give them the best pictures and you'll come home a winner at the finish. The Edison Kinetoscope will outwear any other motion picture machine made.

Write to-day for booklet giving full particulars, and copy of the Edison Kinetogram.

EDISON FILMS

RELEASE OF JANUARY 11

BEAR HUNT IN THE ROCKIES

An actual bear hunt on the Big Muddy, near Marble, Colorado, arranged and directed by Frank Dickens, the well-known hunter and guide of that region. All the exciting features of the hunt vividly portrayed. Photographically perfect.

No. 6572 Code, VERZAUBERT App. Length, 975 feet

RELEASES OF JANUARY 14

A WARRIOR BOLD

A film that will convulse. Major Bradley, exhilarated by liquid refreshments on his birthday, causes havoc with his cane in illustrating a military movement. He eventually lands in court, which he demoralizes in the same manner.

No. 6573 Code, VERZEEPEN App. Length, 475 feet

THE PARSON'S UMBRELLA

A clever short film, showing how a resourceful colored parson, whose umbrella had been "borrowed," not only got his own back but about all his congregation boasted of besides.

No. 6574 Code, VERZEGELEN App. Length, 220 feet

TROOP "B," 15th U. S. CAVALRY, BAREBACK DRILL SQUAD IN THE "MONKEY DRILL" AT FORT MYER, VA. (Descriptive)

Showing the daring feats of horsemanship that "Uncle Sam's" boys daily perform. An unusual and thrilling film.

No. 6575 Code, VERZEHBAR App. Length, 285 feet

RELEASE OF JANUARY 18

IN THE NICK OF TIME (Melodramatic)

No. 6576 Code, VESCIMUR App. Length, 975 feet

RELEASES OF JANUARY 21

THE COQUETTE (Dramatic)

No. 6577 Code, VESCOVADO App. Length, 495 feet

THE LUCK OF ROARING CAMP (Bret Harte's Story

No. 6578 Code, VESCOVESSA App. Length, 490 feet

ORDER DISPLAY POSTERS OF THESE FILMS FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR THE A. B. C. COMPANY, CLEVELAND, OHIO

EDISON MANUFACTURING CO.

MAIN OFFICE and FACTORY: 72 LAKESIDE AVE., ORANGE, N. J.

New York Office: 10 Fifth Avenue. Chicago Office: 90 Wabash Ave.
Office for United Kingdom: Edison Works, Victoria Road, Willesden, N. W., England.

Selling Agents

P. L. WATERS, 41 E. 21st St., New York. GEORGE BRECK, 70 Turk St., San Francisco, Cal.

Dealers in All Principal Cities

FILMS HOWARD MOVING PICTURE CO. FILMS

Repair Work a Specialty. Agents for Motiograph, Power's and Edison Machines. Supplies and Sundries.

564 Washington Street, - - Boston Mass.

Established 1894. (Opposite Adams House). Incorporated 1908.

Our new song slide service is making a big hit with managers who want only the best. Our stock is all new, and includes all the slides made by the best makers. 50c. a set a week, a week's supply shipped at one time. We have a number of perfect sets of slides of the Great Cherry Mine disaster, which we will sell for $6.00 per set, including printed lecture. Great business getters. Send us 32c. in stamps for our beautiful announcement slide, "One minute please, operator is adjusting machine."

LINCOLN TRANSPARENCY EXCHANGE :· 16th Floor, Masonic Temple, CHICAGO, ILL.

O. T. Crawford's Film Service

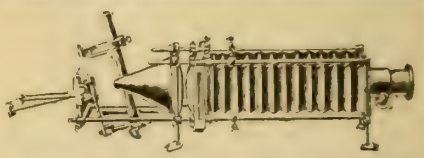
ACKNOWLEDGED

"BETTER THAN THE BEST"

Let us convince you that we can give you just the service you require. Better write to-day.

O. T. CRAWFORD FILM EXCHANGE CO.

1401 Locust Street, ST. LOUIS, MO.
319 Fourth Avenue, LOUISVILLE, KY.



Stereopticons $10, 50,000 Tickets $3.50; Automatic Arc Lamp 15c; Slide Mats 1c; Stereopticon Lenses 50c; Economizers $30; Slide Carriers 40c

FILMS RENTED, SOLD OR EXCHANGE

L. HETZ, 302 E. 23d Street New York

Special prices to the trade

CHEAP

Steel Frame Theatre Chairs

ABSOLUTELY Non-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small theatres and Moving Picture shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also Seating for Out of-Door Use.

Address Dept. W,

STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich.

New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue

Boston Office: 224 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

FOR SALE—1,000 ft. reels film, late releases, $5 and $10 per reel. Lubin, Power's, Edison machines, $60; new, $100; Model B. gas outfits, $25; paying moving picture theaters cheap.

SONG SETS—$1.50.

FOR RENT—5,000 ft. film, 3 sets slides, $10; 9,000 ft., $12, one shipment. Will Buy—Film, machines. H. DAVIS, Watertown, Wis.

moment later Miss Priscilla has him firmly tied to a chair.

"No, no, kind sir," she assures him, "I am not going to kill you. I'm going to marry you. You are going to be my own little hubby!" This last with infinite tenderness. The burglar looks at her face and makes a horrible grimace. "Not—not if I know it!" he breathes in determined aside.

On his promise to be good and not run away she releases him and conducts him to the spare room, tells him to make himself perfectly at home and that they will have the minister early in the morning. She locks the door on the outside, being none too trustful of her adopted affinity's promise, vowing to keep him at all costs.

But Burglar Bill, when he is left alone, shakes his head sadly, feels his bruises, then goes to the window and looks out. Just a ten-foot drop to the ground. Resolved to risk a broken neck rather than live with Priscilla, he writes a farewell note to his captor, opens the window and jumps out into the darkness.

The next morning Priscilla, in her wedding gown, knocks gently on her burglar's door. No answer; finally she unlocks the door and goes in. Gone! Stung again! The litle maiden lady drops on her knees and bursts into tears.

REVIEW OF U. S. TROOPS—FORT LEAVENWORTH, KAN.—The picture starts with a review of troops in dress parade. Headed by the famous Fort Leavenworth military band, several thousand of Uncle Sam's blue clad defenders, marching in orderly array, pass the camera.

We next have a review of the cavalry, followed by a realistic charge on the enemy. The Fort Leavenworth cavalry is known as the best trained troops in the world.

Wall scaling is an interesting feature and shows a squad of infantry climbing a 15-foot wall. It is astoundeding how easily and quickly these atheletic young fellows clear the obstacle.

The building of a strong and serviceable pontoon bridge is next shown. Planks placed across mud scows make a crossing strong enough to support an entire battalion of soldiers.

The building and destroying of a "spar" bridge is as interesting. The bridge is erected in less than ten minutes and a charge of dynamite blows it to atoms immediately after the last soldier has crossed.

Fancy and bareback riding by the cavalry troop is an interesting feature. This shows the cavalry troop in fence and hurdle practice.

The work of the signal corps is pictured showing the heliograph in operation. A wireless outfit is an important feature in every army garrison now, the operation of which is pictured in this film. Erecting the masts and sending messages is shown in close-up views. The field telephone corps is another important adjunct, and we are shown the laying of wires and the sending and receiving of messages.

A charge of the infantry and cavalry, firing on the enemy, lends a touch of realism, while a dozen or more big gatling guns, bringing up in the rear of infantry and cavalry, belch fire and smoke, and the picture closes with an enlarged view of the Stars and Stripes waving in victory.

There are innumerable other features in the picture which make it a big masterpiece of its kind. There is not a dull foot in the reel, not a wasted moment. Advertise it as a coming feature, the only really great military picture ever made.

LUBIN MFG. CO.

THEIR CHAPERONED HONEYMOON.—Mothers-in-law are the dread of the newly married. One reason that Daisy Durham accepted Jack Shafer was that he was an orphan and no mother-in-law threatened to share her rule. But Jack has an aunt who has been more than a mother to him and she decides that the two young people were not to be trusted gallivanting about the country all alone. By explaining to Daisy that Jack insisted, she silences objection and then she tells Jack that Daisy is afraid and wants a chaperone. Jack says something that is not "yes" but all the same Aunt Emaline rides to the station in the bridal coach and assumes personal conduct of the honeymoon by tipping the obsequious porter a penny when Jack is happy enough to give the man a dollar. Arrived at the journey's end Jack and Daisy seek to run away from Aunt Emaline for each has found that the other does not want her along. But they can't lose Auntie. They run away and head for home, but Daisy drops her purse and in stopping to get it Jack is left behind and takes a train on another road that makes a little better time and gets him to the city at the same hour. Aunt Emaline is on the train, too, though Jack does not see her. The result is that they all reach the Shafer's new home about the same time. Daisy and Jack see Aunt Emaline coming and run into the house, locking all the doors. Aunt Emaline begins to have a doubt in her mind as to whether she really is welcome and this doubt becomes a certainty when Jack pours a couple of buckets of water over her from an upper window.

THE TATTOOED ARM.—Jack Trevor's father in a generous mood gives him a dollar and Jack hurries over to Evelyn Bradford's house to show his prize. Evelyn has been Jack's little sweetheart through all of her short life and what is his is hers as well. The children start out to spend the money and wander down on the water front to see the ships. In one chandler's shop an old seaman has set up his tattooing instruments and Jack decides to have his initials on his arm. He likes the effect so much that he persuades Evelyn to have her arm decorated with her initials and his own and with childish solemnity they plight their troth. Jack's father is a manufacturer and a discharged workman, to be revenged for his fancied for her little comarde but in vain and in attempting to beat of the abductor her knee is sprained. The police inquiry slowly draws the net about the workman and Jack, disguised as a girl, is taken aboard a ship bound for Australia. The man pays the captain to take the lad as cabin boy and all trace of Jack is lost to the dectective's. Evelyn becomes a trained nurse and though the young interne makes ardent love to her she remains true for the time to the betrothal of baby days. But no word has come from Jack in fifteen years for he was cast away on the African coast and captured by savages. She yields to the young surgeon's plea, but even as she accepts the surgeon's love they are interrupted by an accident case. A sailor has been assaulted by footpads and his arm and head have been injured. The surgeon dresses the wound in the head while the nurse prepares to bandage the arm. She starts back as the tatoo marks are disclosed and she realizes that it is Jack come back at last. The old love floods back into her heart and the surgeon, appreciating the situation, takes back the ring he gave her to mark their engagement and hands it to Jack to replace upon the tiny finger as the sign of his own happiness.

OVER THE WIRE.—Seth Marshall makes trouble for his relatives even after his death, for his will declares that unless Gladys Bailey and Percy Ticklewit are married within three days of the reading of the will his fortune is to go to a home for cats and dogs. Percy is his nephew and Gladys the daughter of Marshall's partner, but the two have never met. Both decline to be married in this offhand fashion and not the least of their reasons is the fact that each is in love with a stranger met in a chance encounter on the street. They cannot know that they have met in this informal fashion and the executor of the estate is in despair until the thought of marriage by telephone suggests itself to him. To this they accede and over the wire they say the words that make them man and wife in name only. Then they go their separate ways each vowing never to set eyes upon the other. Mr. and Mrs. Carter, happy in their own married life, set out to bring the young couple together in their country home and in pursuance of this plot invite them down for a week end. They meet and find, each in the other, the object of the admiration that followed the chance encounters. A rattling little comedy plainly told in spirited action.

WILD DUCK HUNTING ON HISTORIC REEL FOOT LAKE.—Reel Foot Lake, the historic body of water created by the recession of the ground during an earthquake, is one of the most picturesque spots in Tennessee, being located close to the northwest corner where four States meet. One of the Lubin staff spent an entire week at this point recently and the result is some of the best pictures ever shown of real duck hunting. The lake is a favorite resting place with wild ducks in their migrations and at times the game is heavy. Time and patience were consumed in getting some actual hunting scenes in which the only preparation was the selection of points of view which should be both picturesque and productive of good sport. Ducks in flight are seen to be brought down by the gun of one of the most experienced hunters in that section and there is a really remarkable picture of a duck hit by a shot. It could not be anticipated, in point of fact a prepared picture was thrown out because it was unreal, but a happy chance gave the photographer the picture and quick wit and quicker action recorded it in the camera. The trees submerged at the time of the earthquake are still standing and these, with the heavy growths of marsh grass in combination with the heavy slack waters give some remarkable reflection pictures of mirrorlike smoothness. It is an unusually attractive subject from every point of view.

HE JOINED THE FRAT.—Fred Powers is popular at college and he is elected to membership in the Beta Beta Delta, the most exclusive of the fraternities. He is tickled to death at the honor conferred but at the same time a little apprehensive of the initiation that is to test his desirability as a candidate. Three of the committee call upon the member-elect and inform him that he is to be dressed as a woman and fare forth in search of adventures. It is not an easy matter to induce him to get into his clothes, but at last they get him dressed and are about to set out when Fred decides that he wants a cigarette. The request is refused on the plea that it is unladylike and when Fred tries to take one from one of the boys they set upon him, to the great concern of a near-sighted old lady who decides that the poor girl is being abducted and rushes off in search of a policeman. The college boys hurry away to escape investigation and station Fred on a street corner. When a charming young woman asks her way and permits Fred to tie her shoe laces the other boys try to come in, but Fred is averse to flirtation and sternly commands them to be off. There follows a series of laughable adventures, but things take a more serious turn when Fred announces that he is going to take lessons in a swimming school conducted for women only. The others know that he is reckless enough to attempt the escapade, but they have a happy thought and tempt him away with a cigarette. Plenty of comedy unspoiled by coarseness of action makes this a capital humorous release.

GAUMONT.
(George Kleine.)

SHOOTING IN THE HAUNTED WOODS.—Paul du Chaillu, the intrepid sportsman, goes out hunting accompanied by his man servant.

They follow a rabbit into a densely wooded forest, where their attention is attracted to a sign in the form of a crooked hand nailed on a tree. A countryman explains to them that the place is haunted and cautions them against going further into the woods. The hunters ridicule the warning and keep right on. They shoot a rabbit. To their surprise, the ghostly lord of the haunted forest suddenly appears in company with his gamekeeper, who picks up the rabbit and brings it to the sportsman. Before they can thank his lordship he and his gamekeeper vanish and in their place appears a small wooden gate, obstructing the path and indicating that they are trespassing. They are not so easily scared, however, so opening the gate, they proceed still further.

Soon they shoot another rabbit. Du Chaillu's gun is transformed into a broomstick and the game bag into a fox trap. This, of course, puts a stop to their hunting. They next come upon the haunted castle, where they enter and are received with great courtesy by the noble lord.

They are ushered into the dining room where they seat themselves at a sumptuous repast, but the chair of one changes into a bath tub and the seat of the other becomes a chafing dish, while the chicken which is about to be carved, takes to itself wings and flies away.

They are much incensed, but, as they angrily arise to attack their host the scene changes to the North Pole, and they find themselves confronted by a bear. Then a crevice in the ice opens under their feet and they are almost engulfed in it. The man servant blows his horn to summon assistance, but the instrument explodes and throws the two huntsmen to the ground. Then they wake up and find it was all a dream.

TOWSER'S NEW JOB.—Hector is one of those intelligent French poodles, such as we see occasionally in animal acts on the variety stage. His intelligence, however, surpasses that of most canines for he acts the part of a combination waiter, porter and mail carrier in a country hotel. He hauls the baggage to the depot, delivers the mail, waits on the guests at the table and does not forget to collect tips from the departing visitors.

DECORATED BY THE EMPEROR.—An old, retired general, who served under Napoleon Bonaparte, is shown in a poverty-stricken condition at the time of the Restoration. He cannot pay his room rent, so his sympathetic landlady introduces him to a Jewish dealer in curios and antiquities to whom he might be able to sell some of his relics of his Empire collection. The old Jew ridicules a bust of Napoleon and the old soldier shows him the door.

Tired and disheartened, the poor old man falls asleep. He sees in a dream the events of his past life, from his enlistment until he became a general. He sees himself as a young lieutenant bringing a prisoner to the emperor, who rewards him with a purse of money. He awakes and remembering his dream, he opens a trunk from which he takes the lieutenant's uniform and finds the purse of money in a pocket, just where he had originally placed it.

RAILWAY ON THE ICE SEA.—Superb Alpine scenery in the vicinity of Mount Blanc, the highest mountain in Switzerland.

The views are taken from the mountain railroad, the motion picture camera being on the train it-

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2.

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

FOR SALE—100,000 feet of film in perfect condition, 1¼c. per foot. We will trade films at $2.00 per reel. Send us your list. ECONOMY FILM CO., Room 204, 108 Fourth Ave., Pittsburg, Penna.

KALEM FILMS

Issue of January 14, 1910

The Romance of A Trained Nurse

LENGTH 950 FEET (Approx)

is a great dramatic tale of love decried and love triumphant. It is the story of the sorrows of a crippled young man turned to happiness by the heart of a true woman—a striking contrast of a young woman who is a flirt and a flyaway and one who is as true as steel. Taken in Florida, by the Kalem Company's great stock company of all star actors, the same cast which produced our coming success of Jan. 7—

THE DEACON'S DAUGHTER

A Second Kalem Reel

Commencing with the first week in February the Kalem Company will regularly issue two reels each week, one on Wednesday and the other on Friday. The added reel will be made up almost exclusively of the product of our splendid new studio and will be devoted largely to themes of mystery and comedy, a line which we know will be welcomed by all exhibitors. The second film of the new series of Fairy Stories for American Children will be issued Jan. 21,,and is called

The Magic Flower

Kalem posters can be obtained from your exchange or by mail from the A. B. C. Co., of Cleveland, O.

Free Descriptive Lectures Sent to all Applicants

KALEM CO., Inc.

Eastman Kodak Building

235-237-239 WEST 23rd STREET
NEW YORK CITY

SLIDES

of Highest Quality

LATEST SONG SETS

I Love My Steady But I'm Crazy About My Once In Awhile.
Candy
I Have Got Something In My Eye.
Kitty.
Chasing The Eagle
If I Thought You Wouldn't Tell.
Anywhere
Michael Angelo.
Before I Go and Marry, I'll Have a Talk With You.
Sometime In Springtime
I've Got Wings On My Fingers And Bells On My Toes.
Amina.

High class slides made and colored to order from prints and negatives

Scott & Van Altena
59 Pearl St., New York City

NEW SLIDES

For the Following Songs—JUST OUT

Love Me Dreamy Eyes.
Nora Malone.
By the Light of the Silvery Moon.
There's Nothing Else in Life Like Love, Love, Love.
Take Me Back to Sunshine Land.
Mary you're a Big Girl Now
My Dream of Long Ago.
When I Fell in Love With You.
Rosenbaum.
When You've Won the Only Girl You Love.
Just a Girl Like You.
In the Harbor of Sunshine and Love.
Round Up.
Would You be Satisfied, Sally?
You'll Come Back.
Put On Your Old Grey Bonnet.
Heinz.

DeWitt C. Wheeler
120 W. 31st St., N. Y. City

CALEHUFF

A Member of the FILM SERVICE ASSOCIATION

Headquarters for only the best of latest FILMS and SONG SLIDES. No junk. MACHINES, SUPPLIES, Etc.

LATEST SONG SLIDES
$5.00 per set

N. E. Cor. 4th & Green Streets,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

"TITLE POSTERS"

The Only Practical and Economical

Moving Picture Posters

A POSTER FOR EVERY PICTURE

$7.50 a Month Express Prepaid

SEND FOR FREE SAMPLE

TITLE POSTER CO.
231-233 Bowery, New York

Canadian Exhibitors

Looking for a first-class film service, write the Crystal Palace Film Exchange for particulars. We handle both Licensed and Independent films and can give you a right up-to-date service. We own and operate the most successful Moving Picture Theaters in Canada.

Located at

141 Yonge Street, Toronto.
331 St. Lawrence Blvd., Mont.
27 King Street East, Hamilton.

Agents for Power's and Edison Machines.

Crystal Palace Film Exchange
141 Yonge Street. Toronto, Can.

self, so that all the most picturesque scenes are depicted in the film, ending with the wonderful "Sea of Ice." The photography is extremely good, no glare from the snow being visible in the pictures. No need to go to Europe to see this grand Swiss scenery when it is so perfectly presented in a moving picture!

KALEM MFG. CO.

THE ROMANCE OF A TRAINED NURSE.—This is a story of the power of unselfish love, telling how Maurice Marsh, a young society man, after being made a cripple by an accident and deserted by his cold-blooded fiancee, is saved from morbid invalidism and made happy by the pure unselfish love of his trained nurse. A short time before the opening scene Marsh was injured in an automobile accident. For a time his life hung by a thread. There was a fear that his limbs would have to be amputated, but two of the best surgeons in the country performed an operation that saved them.

Scene I.—After the Accident—The Surgeons Decide That Marsh will Be a Cripple.

Scene II.—The Trained Nurse Arrives.

Scene III.—Marsh Receives a Note from His Fiancee. It is a week since Nurse Frances arrived and took charge of her patient. Maurice has just breakfasted in the warm sunshine of the broad veranda and the dishes are being removed. Frances reminds him it is time for his tonic and pouring out a spoonful gives it to him. Maurice, like a spoiled child, makes a wry face at its bitter taste. At this moment the maid arrives with a letter for Maurice. Glancing at it Maurice recognizes Forestine's writing. With nervous, shaking fingers he tears it open and reads it eagerly. Down it falls to the floor and his face twitches with pain, while his hands grip the arm of his chair. Nurse looks at him anxiously and then picks up the letter. Maurice holds out his hand for it mechanically and slowly re-reads it. Forestine's letter tells him she is sailing on Saturday for Europe and will call to say good-bye at tea time. As he reads it Nurse watches him closely. Now his head drops back. Nurse wipes the perspiration from his forehead and gives him a drink. His head drops forward as if in deep thought while the nurse busies herself about him.

Scene IV.—The Fiancee's Heartless Farewell.

Scene V.—The Engagement Broken.

Scene VI.—Six Months Later—The Old Wound Healing. Six months have passed. Maurice is still under the care of Nurse Frances. Out in the garden they are seated. She is reading to him but he seems to be paying more attention to her than to what she is reading. Now she stops to question him in regard to a paragraph in the book. Maurice looks confused, then laughs and tells her that really he was so busy watching her he didn't hear a word of what she was reading. He takes the book from her and grasping her hand raises it to his lips. Nurse Frances rises in confusion, though it is plain she is not averse to his caress. She glances at her watch grasps the lateness of the hour as a good excuse and leaves him. He calls after her then watches her out of sight. Glancing down he sees the handkerchief she has dropped. With difficulty he secures it, looks at it tenderly then kisses it and gazes dreamily out with a half smile on his lips.

Scene VII.—Nurse Frances Runs Away from Love. The next morning Maurice and his mother are walking slowly down the driveway from the Marsh home when back of them appears Nurse Frances with her grip in hand ready to leave. She has fought the battle with her love for Maurice and won. Maurice hears her steps and turns as she approaches. As she bids his mother good-bye he stands overwhelmed with surprise at her going. When she turns to him he grasps her hand and begs piteously for her to remain. Nurse Frances is firm in her resolve, although her face shows how much it costs her to leave him. As she hurries away Maurice drops his head hopelessly, murmuring, "No one seems to care for me." His mother, although she has never suspected he cared for Frances, puts a consoling arm around him as he stands in silent suffering.

Scene VIII.—The Letter of Recall. It is a week after Nurse Frances' departure. As Mrs. Marsh is busy with her fancy work she hears the sound of her son's crutches and rises to greet him. Maurice seats himself wearily. He is pale, thin and despondent, looking more like the Maurice of six months than the Maurice of a week ago. Her mind is made up. Her boy's happiness must be secured. Hastily she writes a short note to Frances, asking her to come back for Maurice's sake. Giving it to the attendant, she tells him to post it, but be certain to go in such a direction that Maurice will not meet him. As she looks out in the direction her son has taken her face is lighted up with the hope of her son's future happiness.

Scene IX.—True Love's Reward. Mrs. Marsh has brought her son out to his and Frances' favorite seat where she was wont to sit with him. He is attempting to read but finds it difficult here where he and Frances spent so many happy hours together. Mrs. Marsh glances about expectantly. Her son, noticing her excitement, asks what is the matter, but she tells him not to mind her. Back through the trees appears Nurse Frances. Mrs. Marsh sees her and hurries to meet her with her finger to her lips for silence. She indicates Maurice. Slowly Frances approaches and speaks his name gently. He does not hear her "Maurice." Again she speaks. Now he turns and sees her. With a glad cry he holds out his arms. He attempts to rise, but she is kneeling by his side in an instant. His arms are around her and with a face transfigured with joy he is repeating, "You won't leave he again," and she answers, "Maurice, I love you," while the mother looks on in pleased silence at this happy ending of the love romance of these two young people.

PATHE FRERES.

THE MARRIAGE OF THE COOK.—An impecunious old fellow pays his cook's wages long overdue with some worthless stock. The cook's beau, the coal man, finds out one day that this stock which the master has given the cook has taken an unexpected rise. At the very same time the master himself reads of this in the daily paper, and being in such terrible straits for money decides that there is nothing else for him to do but to marry the cook; which he does, but after the ceremony her faithful friend, the coal man, tells her why her master married her, so she leaves the latter, not forgetting to take her fortune with her; which she finally thinks but right to bestow together with her hand upon the ever faithful coal man, leaving her desperate master to get out of his troubles as best he can.

A VICTIM OF CIRCUMSTANCES.—A poor fellow who has had just a tiny drop too much is endeavoring to find his way home when he falls over the prostrate body of a man who has been robbed and left for dead by some midnight maurauders. The poor drunken fellow when he sees the man lying there thinks he also has been celebrating, and kneeling down beside him tries to arouse him. His fingers, however, suddenly come in contact with something wet and the color leaves his face as he recognizes it as blood and looking around sees that his coat is covered with it. Realizing in a moment what has happened, he becomes seized with terror and immediately endeavors to conceal himself somewhere, for should he be seen in this condition he will surely be thought a murderer. He is a pitiable object indeed, as, he being a painter by trade, the telltale marks of red stand out with greater distinctness on his white suit. Finally, unable to bear the agony any longer, he decides to go into a cafe and get something to drink. As he sits at one of the tables he glances furtively from side to side endeavoring to cover the stains on his coat with his hand. The waiter brings him something to drink and as he is gulping it down two other men come over to him, and noticing from his queer behavior that something is wrong soon see the blood stains and in a short time deliver the terrified man up to the police. When he is arraigned at court where all the people that were in the cafe are gathered to witness against him, the body of his supposed victim is brought in on a stretcher. Just as the magistrate begins to speak the form on the stretcher rises and pointing his finger at one of the men who discovered the blood stains on the painter's coat in the cafe, cries that he is the one who stabbed him. Then falling back he breathes his last. The policeman immediately seizes the accused man. When they endeavor to explain to their other prisoner, however, that he is now free, and that it was all a mistake, to their astonishment he laughs loudly, and, pushing them aside, makes a dash at the magistrate, endeavoring to strangle him and still shrieking with laughter. It is easily seen that the occurrences of the night have been too much for the man's brain, which has been completely turned in consequence.

THE KING'S COMMAND.—King Henry IV. of France, anxious to repay the miller and his daughter for the hospitality they extended to him and his courtiers on the occasion of their visits to his mill, wrote a note to the captain of a regiment camping nearby telling him to marry the bearer of the note to the handsomest officer of his regiment. He then gave the letter to the miller's daughter and she hastened away with it, little thinking what it contained. On her way, however, she meets a country bumpkin who is very much in love with her and whose attentions flatter the unsophisticated girl not a little. The young girl's father, the old miller, does not approve of the youth's attentions to his daughter and forbade the latter to have anything to do with him. This meeting, therefore, was a great piece of luck and the blushing young country bumpkin persuaded the girl to give the note to somebody else to deliver and they could then have a little while together, as her father knowing she was on an errand for the King would not expect her back for some time. Just as they were talking along comes a ridiculous little roly-poly of an old woman. The latter, a romantic creature, was only too glad to be of service to the young lovers and hurried away to the camp with the missive. When the commander read the King's message he immediately sent for the officer whom he considered the handsomest in the regiment. His chest thrown out with pride at the thought of being the best looker in the bunch, a big six-footer steps forward, salutes and awaits orders. When the King's letter is read to him and he catches a glimpse of the bearer of the same, he earnestly protests, saying he is [illegible] by any means the most looking [illegible] the regiment, that there are many fairer [illegible]. But his superior officer will not listen to [illegible] but sends for the chaplain to marry the pair. When the little old roly-poly hears of her good fortune she is unable to contain herself, but leaps up and down with joy, to the great amusement of the other officers.

The poor bridegroom-to-be, however, looks most dejected. It is the very first time in his life he regrets being so good looking. While all this is happening the King happens to hear that the miller's daughter did not deliver the note herself, and becoming uneasy starts out with his men for the camp. He arrives just too late, however. The knot has already been tied. When the King sees the bride he has the greatest sympathy for his officer and taking a medal from his own neck he places it on the breast of the newly made husband as a reward for his obedience to his King.

THE OVERZEALOUS DOMESTIC.—Milly, the maid, about to leave for the country with her employers, is bidding her best beau (a stunning policeman) a long good-bye when her master suddenly comes in upon them. The frightened maid hustles her beau into her trunk. The trunk is locked and carried off by the expressmen before she can liberate her loved one and he makes the trip to Villa Butter-cup without incident. When he arrives here the maid can hardly wait until she gets the trunk open, but just as she is unstrapping it two burglars enter the room and, pushing her aside, unlock the trunk themselves, hoping to find something of value—which they do, but not of the kind they expected, for out jumps the imprisoned officer of the law as fresh as paint after his journey and arrests the robbers without further parley. The maid gets nothing but words of praise from her employers for her thoughtfulness in bringing a policeman in her trunk along with other useful articles.

MODERN HIGHWAYMAN.—If one is looking for action, plenty of it and of the thrilling kind, this film will prove more than satisfactory. From the moment the modern highwayman comes on the scene he keeps everybody on the jump and his acting is so wonderfully realistic that the spectator finds himself gasping with excitement at his daring feats and readiness when danger threatens. In the opening scene this up-to-date burglar is waiting at a turn in the road for an automobile speeding towards him. When it is a few feet away he jumps out and raising his pistol brings it to a stop and causes the terrified occupants to deliver up to him all their valuables. With wonderful thoughtfulness he makes the chauffeur empty his can of gasoline so as they will have no power to go for help. He then jumps on his motorcycle and in a twinkling has disappeared from sight. As soon as they see the last of him they rush down the road calling for help and finally a policeman comes along, who telephones the news of the daring robbery to police headquarters. The police patrol with seven or eight officers is immediately sent out to run down the highwayman. In the meantime the latter has stopped to get something to drink, and is looking over his loot when one of the officers comes up to him. He throws the latter and leaves him lying unconscious, and speeds away on his motorcycle. The patrolmen arrive on the scene and one of the most exciting chases ever produced by the cinematograph takes place. At one place on the road the burglar jumps off his motorcycle and takes to the woods, but the officers are right after him, and jumping out of their machine, rush through the underbrush close on his heels. A thought comes to the pursued, however, and turning suddenly around he rushes out to the road and jumps into the waiting automobile, and with his pistol at the chauffeur's head, tells him to drive like mad.

His cleverness in eluding his would-be captors up to this time is, however, of no avail, as they finally overtake him and are doubly severe with him on account of the trouble they have had in capturing him.

AN ENGLISH BOXING BOUT.—Willy Lewis, the famous English pugilist, is matched against Costello. The bout runs four rounds and every round is a marvel of speed, skill and endurance. From the beginning, Lewis takes the aggressive, and it is evident that he is the superior man of the two. Costello is game, however, and takes terrible punishment, being sent to the floor in nearly every round, taking full advantage of the count every time he goes down. At the beginning of the fourth round Costello is evidently groggy while Lewis is as fresh as a daisy. After sparring for a while, Costello leads his left for Lewis' jaw, but Lewis ducks and comes back hard in Costello's wind. He goes down while the referee counts nine. When he regains his feet the battle is nearly over. He faces Lewis and feebly tries to block Lewis' hammer-like blows. Finally with a vicious right hand uppercut Lewis lifts Costello clear off the floor and lands him down and out against the ropes.

THE LAST LOOK.—This is a powerful subject showing how an unusual occurrence discovered the perpetrator of a foul murder. A wealthy man highly thought of in his community had a worthless nephew who was constantly worrying him for financial assistance. The old man had done everything for the ungrateful boy; had put him in fine positions which he invariably threw up, as work had ever been distasteful to him. The uncle had

COMPENSARC

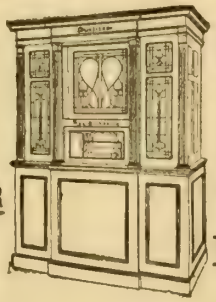
That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA. 738

Wurlitzer
55 YEARS LEADERS IN MUSIC

BETTER MUSIC AT SMALLER COST



FOR ALL MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

Have you investigated the Wurlitzer PianOrchestra?

The leading Nickelodeons are putting in this marvelous Automatic Orchestra. It furnishes better music than a regular orchestra of 5 to 25 pieces, is always "on the job," and cuts out the enormous expense of musicians. The money saved pays rent.

Easy terms, less than paid to musicians. We supply the U. S. Gov't. with musical instruments. Write for big 96-page catalog & testimonial booklet showing Wurlitzer PianOrchestras in leading Nickelodeons.

The RUDOLPH WURLITZER Co
World's Largest Mfrs. Automatic Mus. Insts.
NEW YORK CINCINNATI CHICAGO
25-27 W. 32d 117-121 E. 4th 266-268 Wabash

SCENERY
For M. P. Theatres

I am making a specialty of small sets of Wood Scenes consisting of Back Drop 4 Wood Wings, 2 Cut Wood Borders, which is all you need for Vaudeville Acts between Pictures. This scenery is all fireproof to meet the demands of the Fire Underwriters. All packed ready to express to any part of the United States in the following sizes according to price.

Set No. 1	Drop	8x10	Wings	3x8	Borders	2x12	$ 50.00
" 2	"	9x10	"	3x9	"	3x12	65.00
" 3	"	10x12	"	3x10	"	3x14	80.00
" 4	"	11x12	"	3x11	"	3x14	90.00
" 5	"	12x14	"	4x12	"	3x16	125.00
" 6	"	14x24	"	4x14	"	4x30	175.00

These Sets are ALL READY to set up and GIVE SHOW

Send deposit of one THIRD
Balance C. O. D. subject to inspection

TURNER CO.
Theatrical Stage Properties
Paper Machie Work
552 7th Ave. New York
References: T. M. A. No. 1 N. Y.
T. P. U. No. 1 N. Y. or T. P. U. in Theatre of your own town or city

LUBIN FILMS

RELEASED, JANUARY 10, 1910.

"Over the Wire"

It was a marriage ceremony that went "over the wire," for Percy Ticklewit and Gladys Bailey were joint heirs to Seth Marshall only on condition that they marry within thirty days. They refused even to meet each other, but consented to be wedded over the wire. Later on they discovered that they were in love, but not until a most amusing series of complications had occurred. A Lubin comedy of the best sort with a story that holds the interest down to the last inch of film. LENGTH, 690 FEET.

"Glimpses of an Indian Village"

Brief glimpses of an Indian village with some striking pictures of the braves in full war dress and some pictures of Indian babies that no woman can resist. A short but very interesting subject. LENGTH, 205 FEET.

RELEASED, JANUARY 13, 1910.

"Wild Duck Hunting on Reel Foot Lake"

Reel Foot Lake, that curious body of water formed by an earthquake and in the heart of the "Night Rider's" region, is unusually picturesque. As a scenic release it would command attention, but here it is used as the background for a rarely convincing hunting picture: convincing because the pictures were made in the course of an actual hunt and under the guidance of one of the most expert sportsmen in that section of the country. You cannot afford to miss this. It is a treat. LENGTH, 550 FEET.

"He Joined the Frat"

He was a college boy who wanted to join a Greek letter fraternity and it was first demanded that in feminine dress he submit to the directions of his committee. They lead him a lively life for a time, but somehow the candidate has the best of it—except that they will not permit him to have a cigarette. A short, snappy comedy subject played with a spirit and dash that holds the attention from start to finish. LENGTH, 358 FEET.

Send for catalogue of our 1910 machine

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY 926-928 MARKET STREET PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SPECIAL

PHOENIX FILM COMPANY

Announce that the BIG AMERICAN FEATURE

"THE CELEBRATED CASE"

WILL BE READY

First Part Shipped from Chicago Jan. 13, 1910

Second Part Shipped from Chicago Jan. 20, 1910

Instead of Jan. 6 and 13 as previously announced

REMEMBER THE DATE

The demand for this picture has been so great that it caused this change of date

We do not want anybody disappointed

Exchanges who have not as yet sent in their orders will favor us by wiring at once

PHOENIX FILM COMPANY, Mossler Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

now come to the end of his patience, and after a particularly disgraceful occurrence in which his nephew had taken part, decided to cut the boy off without a cent, but to leave his entire fortune to a Home for the Aged. He told his nephew of what he had done and the worthless scamp decided then to get possession of this will and destroy it. We see him, therefore, in the dead of the night stealing into his uncle's house and taking the will out and, lighting a match to it, burns it up. Just at this moment his uncle appears at the door of the room with a lamp in his hand, and the boy on seeing him leaps towards him and fells him with a single blow. In the morning when the corpse is found by the servant, the authorities are called in and no one is more noisy in his grief than the worthless nephew. On examining the body the coroner sees that the eye bears the impression of some human figure and looking more closely he sees it is that of a young man. Deeply interested, he sends for the different members of the dead man's household and on seeing the nephew he immediately recognizes him as the one whose figure is imprinted on the dead man's eye. (The spectator is here shown the eye at close range with the figure of the murderer imprinted on it.) When the youth sees that he is caught he breaks down, confesses all and is carried away by the officers of the law.

HIS OPPONENT'S CARD.—After a very gay and hilarious dinner party two of the most convivial members accidently collide with one another on leaving the house, and both being in rather pompous mood and feeling that their dignity has suffered by the encounter, each offers the other his card, challenging him to a duel. They then continue their zig-zag journey homeward. One, however, does not get much further than a nearby lamp-post and is taken up by two policemen, who, finding his opponent's card in his pocket, take the helpless fellow to the number given thereon and, notwithstanding his protestations, leave him there, much to his discomfort. Well, the end of it all is that he is politely thrown out of the window when he is discovered by some of the family, but even under these trying conditions he still endeavors to maintain his dignified bearing, being a man possessed of a very proud spirit.

SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.

A TALE OF THE BACKWOODS.—Living near one of the numerous lumber mills, operated in the dense forests of the south, were two families—the Bergers and Chaneys. Old man Chaney, whose reputation for thrift was not of the best, had a wife whose slovenly habits and unkempt appearance made her a fit companion for the indolent old backwoodsman.

The Bergers were not as uncouth as their strange neighbors, consequently were held in higher esteem by the few acquaintances they had. They also had a daughter, whose name was Molly, a rather gentle and lovable little creature, who won the hearts of all who knew her, except the quarrelsome and revengeful Meg Chaney, who hated her because she had won the love of honest Pete Horner, a sturdy and thrifty young lumberman, who made a good living hauling logs and lumber for the mill company.

Another character of special importance in our story is one "Humpy" Duncan, a half-wit.

The story opens with the meeting of the Bergers and the Chaneys, while in the village to do some trading. Pete is there at the time and is talking to Meg when Molly comes on the scene and Meg is at once fired to bitter hatred for the rival, when she sees Peter's marked preference for the winsome little maiden. Meeting Peter later, on his way to the river (driving his ten head of oxen), she tries to regain the ground she has lost by her actions at their former meeting.

Rushing away into the deep woods she throws herself sobbing on the ground, where for hours she gives way to grief and rage.

Humpy hurries after Meg and finally overtakes her. Here he learns the cause of her attempt at murder, and in his poor crazed way begs to be allowed to do something for his beloved Meg.

A wicked thought enters Meg's mind. Why not get this poor fool to make away with Molly? If found out the blame could be easily shifted on Humpy. Peter could finally be won over to care for her. Deceiving the demented wretch with the promise of bestowing her love on him should he succeed in carrying out her plans, she unfolds to him a plot by which Molly could be dragged away to an old deserted building in the forest, locked in and the shack fired. Then all traces of the crime could be obliterated. "I'll do it," cries the half-wit. "For a smile from your lips, I would kill all mankind." Then rushing away he waits until Molly has returned home, and calling her out and away from the house by a whistle which she thinks is a signal from her lover, he soon has her in his power and bears her away to the old shack which Meg intends shall be her funeral pyre. Now it happens that a negro, fishing on the bank of the river, catches sight of the struggling girl, and realizing her danger, hastens to Pete's home and apprises him of Molly's peril. In the meantime Humpy has brought Meg to the old shack and at her command sets fire to it. Then seeing that her victim is apparently beyond all earthly hope, she chuckles with fiendish glee and hastens away. The half-wit seizes Meg in his arms, and with the strength of a maniac, drags her back to the burning shack. "You lied to me; we will die together." He bursts open the door and throws the frantic, struggling Meg inside, then seizing the unconscious form of Molly he bears her through the stifling smoke into the pure air without. Then rushing back, he bars the door, and inside that burning caldron, calmly awaits death to come to him and his partner in crime.

Racing through the dense growth of the forest Pete hears the crackle of flames. Staggering up almost exhausted, he utters a cry of joy to see his little Molly safe and just recovering from the swoon she was in. Clasping her in his arms he is about to bear her away when he hears the screams of a woman coming from the burning building. Through the flames he dashes and bursting open the door is just in time to drag the half-dead Meg and the hunchback out of the jaws of death.

Thus the fate so richly deserved by Molly's cruel rival is averted, and after a month of reflection and repentance she is forgiven by the kind-hearted Pete and his little sweetheart.

UNDER THE STARS AND STRIPES.—Just now, when our national feelings are more or less strained with Nicaragua, and diplomatic relations are at an end, we are reminded again of our duty to our flag—the Stars and Stripes—and the brave marines at Corinto and Bluefield are awaiting with abated breath the message from Washington that sends them to the front. All these things tend to renew our memories of the happenings of 1898, when so many of our gallant men were left sleeping in the sands of Cuba. The story opens in the office of our consul, General Lee, who has just received his passport to leave Cuba; his aide, Captain Locke, who has become enamored with Lorette, the secretary of General Weyler, sees plainly the parting of the ways, when his superior sends the United States Goverment the following cablegram:

Havana, Cuba.

Root, Washington, D. C.,
Secretary War, U. S. A.
All peace negotiations out of the question.
The Stars and Stripes alone will pacify Cuba.
LEE.

A hasty gathering of belongings and an affectionate good-bye and God-speed between Lorette and Captain Locke, who takes the field under his flag. General Weyler, desperate in his efforts to stop the cablegram, orders the bridge blown leading to the cable station. Captain Locke, horse and all, go down into the river; he is seen making for the shore followed by Spaniards. He gains the bank and is off as fast as horseflesh can carry him. Almost exhausted, he lands his message in the station, and as the last word is clicked off, with the key still open, the cable is cut. The many happenings within the next few weeks are best told by the waving of the Stars and Stripes over Morro Castle and the honor with which Locke acquitted himself in battle and claimed his senorita at the eleventh hour, just as she was about to be wedded in an unholy marriage with her guardian.

International military laws permitted General Weyler to retire and return to the mother country and with his departure all Cuba rejoiced, happy in the knowledge that they were under the Stars and Stripes.

URBAN-ECLIPSE.
(George Kleine.)

TRUE TO HIS OATH.—An old sailor is on his deathbed, surrounded by his family, consisting of his wife, daughter and son.

The father, before he passes away, causes his son to swear on the family Bible that he will never leave his widowed mother and orphan sister.

After the old man's death, the son pursues his trade as fisherman, in order to support the bereaved and helpless women. It chances one day that as he was about to row out to the fishing fleet, an attractive young woman meets and persuades him to take her out on the water, and, falling in love with him, urges him to leave the fishing village to accompany her to the gay city where she lives.

Her wiles seduce him completely. He returns home to get together his clothing preparatory to his departure when his eyes happen to alight on the family Bible upon which he swore never to leave his mother and sister. At the same moment, his father's ghost appears to remind him of his oath.

This has a powerful effect on the young fisherman, who abandons all ideas of leaving the village and decides to stay with his family forever.

HOME OF THE GYPSIES.—This most interesting and instructive film illustrates as no words can do the degree of perfection to which ancient Moorish architecture attained during the time when Morocco held Spain in subjugation, that is to say, in the 13th century. First, we see a superb panorama of the ancient city of Granada and then the details of its masterpiece of architectural art the "Alhambra"—the palace of the Moorish kings, with its "Lions Courtyard," paved with white marble, the lions being carved out of solid blocks of black marble—Then we are shown the "Myrtle Courtyard" and at the back the "Mirador," or "Look-Out" balcony whence a splendid panoramic view of Granada and surroundings is obtained—The film closes with familiar scenes of Spanish gypsy life—A wedding followed by rejoicings and dances.

Independent Films.

CENTAUR FILM COMPANY.

THE MISHAPS OF BONEHEAD IN SEARCH OF AN HEIRESS.—Valentine Maynard, being ambitious to climb the social ladder, decided that his first steps must be to secure a brilliant marriage for his daughter, Dora.

Sir Percival Bonehead therefore easily secured a cordial invitation to lay siege to the hand and heart of the great heiress, for Maynard had assured himself that while his Lordship's finances were low, his social position was exceedingly high.

However they had both reckoned without their host, for Dora was secretly engaged to Wallace Ross, who no sooner learned of her father's matrimonial plans for her than he decided to administer the love cure to his Lordship by having his mischievous chum, Roy Cheves, impersonate Dora.

Sir Percival proposed and Roy promptly accepted with a vigorous embrace, and upon being complimented upon his strength, begged his Lordship to put on the gloves with him. The unsuspecting Earl complied and as a result received so sound a beating that Maynard's profuse apologies were of no avail.

In the meantime, Dora and Wallace had been quietly married on the lawn, and when Maynard seemed inclined to storm, Roy again stepped forward with his boxing gloves, and as a result the young couple received a submissive father's blessing.

FORGIVEN.—Harry Laughton, a college man, had fallen in love with and married Daisy Woods, a country maiden, during his vacation, despite his father's commands and entreaties.

Harry loved his simple, untutored little wife, but her lack of style and ignorance of his favorite books shamed and annoyed him. He grew more and more irritable, until broken-hearted little Daisy, believing that he no longer loved her, sorrowfully departed for her old home.

But the streets were strange to her, and as she was looking up at a lamp-post to read the name, an automobile came suddenly around the corner and knocked her down.

The owner of the automobile proved to be her father-in-law, who was soon captivated by her sweet simplicity, and gladly sent for his distracted son, to whom he gave a little fatherly advice, thereby preventing a repetition of what so nearly cost him his happiness.

GREAT NORTHERN.

CHILD BENEFACTOR.—Robert Fielding has in his time seen better days, but his carelessness and bad company made him run through the fortune which was left him by his father. Now he walks the streets in rags, being so reduced to poverty. But no one has any sympathy for him, because he is young, and a strong-looking man, and ought to be able to get his living by working. Fielding comes across a newsboy, and cannot help but admire the little chap, who is busy selling papers and taking in the pennies, and notes how he understands to sell to everyone who comes along. He envies the boy being able to take in money in such an apparently easy way. When the boy is through for the day, Fielding follows him up. The boy makes his way to an old shed outside the town, where Fielding sees him lie down to rest. For a moment Fielding is tempted to rob the boy of his earnings, but his good nature gets the upper hand, and he walks away in despair. Rather would he end his own life than do any harm to the innocent boy. The boy, having noticed him, gets up, runs after him, and asks him if he is hungry. Fielding has to admit it, of course, and accepts from the boy a few pennies to buy food. But the temptation is too great, and he spends this money for drink. The boy, who has been watching him all the time, enters the public house, and takes away the glass from Fielding, saying: "Now let's go and have something to eat; I didn't give you money for drink." The strong will of the boy seems to influence Fielding, and he realizes suddenly that he must do some work, in order to make a living. He succeeds in finding a situation as porter, and the boy and he from now on become very great friends. Fielding works very hard, and they can soon afford to take very nice rooms together, and also to go on nice outings on Saturday afternoons. One day Fielding is sweeping in front of his employer's house, when he hears a cry, and looking up he is astonished to see the child of his employer just falling from one of the windows of the house. Fortunately he catches her in his arms, and although the child is unhurt by the fall, the weight coming down on him from such a height causes some slight injuries to Fielding's head and arm. He has to be carried home, and his grateful employer accompanies him to his room, where he hears the whole story of Fielding's and his boy friend's struggles. In appreciation to Fielding for saving his little child from an almost certain death, his employer provides him with ample money to nurse himself quickly back to health, and also obtains such a good position from his employer that he is able to marry a nice girl, and the newsboy lives with them, in a very comfortable home, often receiving thanks from Fielding for saving him from ruin.

THE STORIES OF THE FILMS

Do not Show the Photographic or Acting Values. We Carefully Select All the Best for Our Service

COME WITH US AND BE SATISFIED

THE PHILADELPHIA PROJECTION CO., 44 N. 9th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

LUX FILMS.

A DRAMA AT SEA.—This picture is a portrayal of a love story between the custom house official's daughter and a sailor. During the absence of the sailor we find the pretty maid working in the yard of her home, when along comes a rival fisherman, who is also desperately in love with the custom house official's daughter. He is, however, rejected and ordered from the premises by the girl's father, for which act he swears vengeance. The girl's lover returns and we see the two strolling through the streets when they are suddenly spied by the rejected fisherman, who is following, waiting an opportunity to get his revenge. After the lover leaves the girl we see the fisherman overtake her, when he says: "You're mine, and no other man will ever have you." A very exciting struggle takes place on the edge of a cliff, when the villian in his meanness throws her over the cliff. During this time her mother is seen anxiously waiting for her daughter, when the father returns and is informed of the girl's absence. In the meantime, two sailors pass by the cliff from which the girl was thrown, and find her partly submerged in the sand below. They put her on board the ship and return her to her parents. Her lover is informed of the murderous attempt of the rival fisherman, and goes in pursuit of the culprit. The lover finds the rival fisherman near the place where the girl was found, and a battle ensues between the two in which the lover is shot in the arm. The culprit then attempts to make his escape in a sailboat, when he is followed by the custom house officer and the lover in a launch. They overtake him and throw him into the water. At the end we see where the couple are being married.

THE FOOTBALL CRAZE.—This beautiful picture portrays the craze for football between the "Stad College" and "Racing Club." We see the ball go from the game into the highway, boys going after it throw down a young couple. It is then thrown into a restaurant and all the guests put into great excitement. The players rush in after the ball and demolish the entire place. Next we see them going after the ball, which is thrown into a moving van, and in their efforts to locate the ball they throw the furniture in the street. It is next thrown into a yard, and from there into a private residence. While rushing in after the ball they throw two people down. Next the ball is thrown into an artist's studio. The artist is seated on his stool in the act of painting a portrait. The players rush madly after the ball. The artist succeeds in throwing them out of window and they all land on the roof below. While in their frantic effort to secure the ball, they all tumble to the ground below. We see them in front of a grocery store playing football with all the groceries, etc. The ball is thrown in the river and a game of football takes place in the water. Finally the police come to the rescue and lodge all the players in a cell, and even there they could not give up their playing and manage to get the police officers into a game. We see both the players and officers go crazy for the game, during which time the players make their escape and leave the police in the cell playing football.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

A REDMAN'S DEVOTION.—Western tales still retain their popularity and this New York Motion Picture Company production comes up to everyone's expectations. Jim Waters, accompanied by a Navajo Indian from his ranch, go to the depot to meet Dell Ellison, an Eastern girl. As she alights from the train, Jim helps her into his wagon, her baggage is seen to and they start off. Dell is greeted most heartily by Mrs. Waters and is introduced to all the cowboys. Rolla, more audacious than the others, advances toward Dell, who shrinks from him. The boys laugh at him because of the repulse, which, naturally, causes Rolla to be angry at all. When Dell starts out on horseback to explore the town, the Navajo Indian goes as her guardian. They ride for some distance, the Indian in the rear, when Rolla comes along, recognizes the rider and starts after Dell. Rolla rides hard and finally pulls up beside Dell, grabbing her bridle. When he refuses to listen to her, Dell lashes him with her whip, and the Indian comes to her assistance. Rolla and the Navajo engage in a duel, while Dell rides away. The Indian is wounded and Rolla follows after Dell. She, meantime, has reached Jim's house, told of the happening, and Jim, with his cowboys, rides away with her. They come upon the Indian and put him on a horse. The Indian, in his wounded condition, is cared for by Dell, and she gains his undying gratitude. While Dell sits painting near the Navajo, Jim returns with Rolla. The Indian shows a disposition to get hold of him, but is quieted by Dell. Under all guns pointed at him, Rolla is shown the way to go. Later, Dell has as her model the Indian, and their painting is rudely interrupted by Rolla, who fells the Indian to the ground and carries off Dell. The Navajo staggers to Jim's, gives the alarm and all start in pursuit. They rescue Dell and retake Rolla.

AN EPISODE OF NAPOLEON'S WAR WITH SPAIN.—A Spanish peasant, disregarding his wife's entreaties, joins a band of unsuccessful soldiers who renew their attack against Napoleon. He leads the soldiers to a hilltop, and despite their strength of position and desperate valor, Napoleon's troops are seen bursting into the trenches. Grasping his beloved Spanish flag, and winding it around his wounded arm, the peasant fires the last cannon and staggers away. The peasant takes refuge in his cottage and when the French officers fail to make his wife acknowledge the Emperor, comes from his hiding place and is taken prisoner with his wife, dragged off to camp and sentenced to death, for their treachery. Meanwhile their boy, after evading the sentries, fearlessly makes his way to the place in the market square where Napoleon is seated studying maps of the district. The child's story appeals to Napoleon and he accompanies him to the execution ground, arriving in time to prevent the death of the boy's parents. They are about to return to their home when Napoleon sees the flag binding the peasant's arm. It would seem he was about to recall his pardon, but realizing that patriotism prompted the act, Napoleon dismisses the peasant and at once resumes the inspection of his maps.

A FORESTER'S SWEETHEART.—Bess, a pretty mountain girl, is waiting for Bob, her sweetheart. When he comes she coquettishly dodges behind trees and runs from him. In doing this, she falls from the forest edge, and is rescued by Bob, who carries her on his back up the steep ledge. He takes Bess to her home, and she explains her accident to her father. Bob, after seeing Bess enter the cabin, rides away, and Joe, his rival, goes in the opposite direction. When Bob asks for Bess, the father refuses his consent, because of the lack of money. Joe, however, offers a goodly amount and thereby gains the father's favor. Bess shows great aversion for Joe, and much love for Bob. She pleads with the latter, but he cannot see his way clear to take her, and she returns home accusing him of not loving her. Her father forces her into Joe's arms, who mounts her on a horse and leads her away. Bob, meantime, resolves to win her, goes to her cabin and finds her gone. Then follows a hard ride, and finally Bob gets on their trail, and overtakes them. He and Joe engage in a duel with axes, in which Bob acts most honorably. He worsts his adversary, and making certain that Joe is merely stunned, Bob and Bess ride off together. They dismount and refresh their horses at a waterfall and then caress.

THE SON OF THE WILDERNESS.—The city of Marseilles was at the epoch of this anecdote inhabited by Greek colonies. An old gunsmith leaves his workshop in charge of his wife and daughter, while he makes his way to a neighboring village. On his way he is kidnapped by a gang of pillagers who descend from the surrounding mountains for their daily robberies. His daughter, having been informed of her father's troubles, pleads vainly for her town citizens' help; and then with a sudden outburst of affection runs to her fathre's captors and proposes that they allow her to take her father's place. The proposal is accepted, but as the robbers try to avail themselves of the new booty, their chieftain appears and assumes the defense of the young girl. His loyal action awakes full confidence in the girl's heart, while on the other hand the sturdy young fellow is overcome by the feeling of love. His hopes are deluded, and while unable to rebel against the sweet girl who has charmed his feelings, forsakes his dreams of the future and frees the young girl. Meanwhile the girl's father assembles some of his fellow citizens and makes for his daughter's rescue. Luck is on their side

POWERS CO.

THE LITTLE HEROINE.—A Texan ranch owner starts out to pay off his cowboys, and he is captured by four outlaws. His horse, carrying the money in the saddle bag, runs back to the ranch house pursued by an outlaw. The ranch owner's daughter, Nellie, a child of ten, captures the "bad man" in a most ingenious way. Then mounting her father's horse, little Nellie dashes off to the rescue. She meets the outlaws, overhears them telling how they have tied her father to the rocks and that a slow burning fuse, connected with a keg of powder, will blow him into eternity if the money is not brought back by their messenger. Now follows the most thrilling chase that has ever been put into a motion picture. The plucky little girl dashes through bush and over rocks closely pursued by the outlaws. Nothing can stop the brave child. She goes across a river on a rope, then runs afoot for the rocks. She comes to the edge of the cliff. The rope on which her father is suspended offers a way down. Without a moment's hesitation little Nellie descends to where, a hundred feet below, her father faces a terrible death. The child frees him, and an instant later the powder explodes. The father and child escape, and, later, reach home, where the cowboys are gathered after having captured the outlaws.

THE ACTOPHONE COMPANY.

ROBERT MACAIRE; or, THE TWO VAGABONDS. Macaire and Strop, two vagabonds, are first seen in a cell, filing off their manacles and preparing to escape. In the midst of this they are surprised by the jailor, who is knocked senseless by Strop. They tie the jailor to the cot, take his keys and revolver and successfully leave the prison. They are next seen running along the highway in their prison garb. They see a stage coach approaching and boldly decide to rob the passengers. This is accomplished and the coach departs. Macaire and Strop take another road with their booty and Strop takes a hat and coat from a scarecrow and adorns himself. They hold up the Marquis V. de V., tie him to a tree and Macaire strips him of his clothes and decides to represent himself as the Marquis V. de V.

Next is the exterior of an inn, with all the incidents of peasants dancing and the arrival of guests. Macaire and Strop appear and are introduced to the passengers, whom they robbed on the highway. Macaire's wife, whom he has deserted and has not seen in years, is taken in and given shelter for the night. In the midst of these incidents, the Marquis V. de V. arrives with gendarmes and denounces Macaire, who easily outwits him and orders his arrest.

We are now taken to the interior of the inn. Macaire and Strop have become great favorites and are seen dancing with the Princess, Chevalier and Marquis whom they have robbed. Good-nights are said and all retire. Comedy complications follow and Macaire and Strop are seen preparing to leave the inn with the booty that they have gathered together. The Marquis V. de V. enters, establishes his identity and Macaire is called upon to surrender. Macaire tries to escape and is shot by the gendarme and dies.

PHOENIX FILM CO.

VICTIMS OF JEALOUSY.—The above very appropriate title is applied to a very thrilling and absorbing story dealing with a man's insane jealousy aroused by an innocent act, common courtesy on the part of his wife.

The lady is seen picking flowers in the garden. A casual acquaintance comes along and the lady very politely hands him a beautiful rose. The husband is seen approaching and evidently observes the act of his wife and when the gentleman acquaintance leaves, the husband rebukes his wife very severely for the courteous act. A very stormy scene takes place between husband and wife, ending with the father taking their only child from the house in a violent passion. The husband places the child in an orphan asylum to secrete from the wife. He does not mention this fact to any one so that when later the husband is killed by being thrown from a horse, neither the wife nor any one else knows the whereabouts of the abducted child.

Some years later, the child, now a grown boy of twelve years, in company with another waif is farmed out to evil masters. They teach the young ones to rob and steal. A plot is concocted to enter and rob a certain stately mansion. The young boy is forced to climb the gates so as to permit his evil companions to enter, and later is seen to climb the stone column supporting the balcony above. The boy enters the window in the apartments of a lady, who is slumbering upon a lounge nearby. The boy recognizes in the sleeping woman his own mother, and sees the picture of his own father and mother hanging from the wall. The boy hesitates to go any further and is soon followed by his companions from the outside, intent upon robbing the place. The boy awakens his mother and saves her from the attacks of his companions. The boy declares to the mother who he is. Soon the arms of his devoted mother fondle and caress him and by her action is seen to also adopt the little waif, companion of her long lost boy.

A LUCKY KNOCK.—Accompanying the above release is also a very laughable comedy entitled "A Lucky Knock." To give the description of this farce would only hurt its value, as the comedy itself cannot fail to be appreciated when fully seen.

FILMS AT 8c. FT.—NEW

Dram.—"Nero"; or the Burning of Rome—1,155 ft. (Ambrosio).
Com.—Silly Billy—435 ft. (M. F. A.).
Dram.—Consequence of a Lie—625 ft.—(Le Lion).
Sens.—Elephant Hunt in Cambodge—600 ft. (Le Lion).

FILMS AT 6c. FT.—AS NEW

Farce—Fight for North Pole—381 ft. (Urban).
Comedy—Simple Simon—435 ft. (London Cin. Co.).
Comedy—Bath Chair—420 ft. (Cines).
Comedy—Who Seeks Finds—656 ft. (Gr. Northern).
Comedy—Pork Butcher—280 ft. (Lux).
Drama—Kidnapped King—820 ft. (M. F. A.).
Drama—Theodora—820 ft. (Pasq. & Tempo).
Drama—Suicide Club (Sleeping Pills)—650 ft. (Eclair).
Drama—Father's Love—435 ft. (Lon. Cin.).
Drama—Monte Cristo—1045 ft. (Ambrosio).
Drama—"Nero"—1155 ft. (Ambrosio).

FILMS AT 4c FT.—AS NEW

Drama—Muledriver's Bride—640 ft. (Lux).
Drama—Automatic Umbrella Seller — 640 ft. (Pathe).
Drama—Rivals—695 ft. (Precision).
Drama—At the Carnival—550 ft. (Pathe).
Drama—Drama Under Richelieu—775 ft. (Lux).
Drama—Church Robber—655 ft. (Pathe).
Drama—Alboino & Rosamund—860 ft. (Pasq. & Tempo).
Drama—Episode of French Revolution—680 ft. (Cosmopolitan).
Drama—Repentance—715 ft. (Lux).
Drama—Tyrolean Tragedy—600 ft. (London Cin.).
Drama—Cyrano de Bergerac—750 ft. (Lux).
Drama—Magda—900 ft. (Itala).
Drama—Foster Brothers—(Lux).
Drama—Boy Scouts—420 ft. (London Cin.).
Drama—Master Detective—780 ft. (Gr. North.).
Drama—The Double—675 ft (Eclair).
Comedy—Electrified Hunchback—272 ft (Lux).
Comedy—Bogus General—490 ft. (Lux).
Comedy—Forced Treatment—525 ft. (London Cin.).
Comedy—Reincarnated Mummy—550 ft. (Lux).
Comedy—Human Squib—365 ft. (Gaumont).
Comedy—Punch Register—234 ft. (Pathe).
Comedy—The Twine—400 ft. (Pasq. & Tempo).
Comedy—Roast Chicken—375 ft. (Lux).
Comedy—Interrupted Rendezvous — 550 ft. (Itala).
Comedy—Marvelous, Indeed—500 ft. (M. F. A.).
Comedy—Getting Rid of Uncle—300 ft. (Rosie).
Comedy—Good Tramp—385 ft. (Lux).
Comedy—Absorbing Tale—300 ft. (Urban).
Comedy—Magic Carpet—350 ft (Urban).
Comedy—Amorous Minstrel—490 ft. (Cines).
Comedy—Mind, I Catch You Smoking—490 ft. (Cricks & Martin).
Comedy—Carlo and the Baby—206 ft. (Bioscope).
Comedy—Patent Glue—535 ft. (Welt).
Comedy—Cat Came Back—500 ft. (Urban).
Comedy—Follow Me—385 ft. (Lux).
Comedy—Why She Didn't Marry—350 ft. (Gaumont).
Comedy—Foxy Farmer—340 ft. (Gaumont).
Comedy—Selling Shoes—300 ft. (Gaumont).
Comedy—It Was a Beautiful Dream—600 ft. (Gr. North.).

FILMS AT 2c. FT.—PERFECT CONDITION

Comedy—Statue on a Spree—390 ft. (Pathe).
Comedy—Only Thoughtfulness—500 ft. (Pathe).
Comedy—Betrayed by One's Feet—275 ft. (Pathe).
Comedy—Tula's Dream—450 ft. (Pathe).
Comedy—Susceptible Youth—350 ft. (Pathe).
Comedy—Fashionable Hat—375 ft. (Pathe).
Comedy—The Mourners—475 ft. (Vitagraph).
Comedy—Chieftain's Revenge—390 ft. (Vitagraph).
Comedy—The Mummy—475 ft. (Pathe).

PLEASE NOTE

ALL FILMS OFFERED ARE IN SPLENDID CONDITION, RUN VERY LITTLE. ONLY FIRST-CLASS, QUITE UP-TO-DATE SUBJECTS. 24 HOURS APPRO AGAINST DEPOSIT.

EXPORT OF FILMS A SPECIATY. ALL ORDERS RECEIVE PROMPT ATTENTION. I CAN GET YOU ANY SUBJECT, NEW OR SECOND-HAND, AT LOWEST PRICES. FILM TITLES TO YOUR ORDER, COLORED, 50c. EACH.

G. W. BRADENBURGH
Importer of Life Motion Picture Films
233 N. Eighth St., Philadelphia

INDEPENDENT FILMS

THE ACTOPHONE COMPANY.

Jan. 12—Robert Macaire; or, The Two Vagabonds.

FILM IMPORT AND TRADING CO.

Jan. 3—The Salted Mine (Carson).....750
Jan. 3—A Wall Street Chance (Eclair).....540
Jan. 3—Seal and Walrus Hunting (R. & R.)..500
Jan. 3—Poolshead's Holiday (Itala).....500
Jan. 3—The Poem of Life (Aquila).....975
Jan. 3—A Happy New Year (R. & R.).....430
Jan. 3—Out With It (Meester).....N.350
Jan. 3—Patrician and Slave (Cines).....925

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY.

Nov. 10—Yachting on the Baltic.....236
Dec. 1—A Boy Hero.....600
Dec. 1—Trollhattan.....380
Dec. 4—Little Willie's Trip to the North Pole.407
Dec. 4—Wrestling.....426
Dec. 8—Temptations of the Gold Fields (Dr.).750
Dec. 8—Gerhardi Mohr (Com.).....194
Dec. 18—Mother-in-Law Crazy with Music.....460
Dec. 18—The Butcher's Bill.....230
Dec. 18—In Southern Sweden.....292
Dec. 25—An Outcast's Christmas.....495
Dec. 25—Father Busy Papering.....360
Jan. 8—Child as Benefactor.....957
Jan. 15—Death of the Brigand Chief.....690
Jan. 15—Naughty Boys.....289

"IMP."
INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES COMPANY OF AMERICA.

Oct. 25—Hiawatha.....988
Nov. 1—Love's Stratagem.....954
Nov. 8—Destiny.....864
Nov. 15—Forest Ranger's Daughter.....700
Nov. 15—Brave (?) Policeman.....300
Nov. 22—Levitsky Sees Parade.....704
Nov. 22—Honor Among Thieves.....296
Nov. 29—Her Generous Way.....970
Dec. 6—His Last Game.....941
Dec. 13—The Two Sons.....955
Dec. 20—Lest We Forget.....916
Dec. 27—The Awakening of Bess.....985
Jan. 3—The Winning Punch.....957
Jan. 10—Right of Love.....975
Jan. 17—The Tide of Fortune.....975

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

Oct. 29—Mexican's Crime.....1000
Nov. 5—Young Deer's Bravery.....950
Nov. 12—The Ranchman's Wife.....950
Nov. 19—An Indian's Bride.....1000
Nov. 26—The Parson's Prayer (Dr.).....550
Nov. 26—Dooley's Thanksgiving Turkey (Com.).400
Dec. 3—The Message of an Arrow.....1000
Dec. 10—Reunited at the Gallows (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 17—The Love of a Savage (Dr.).....990
Dec. 24—An Italian Love Story (Dr.).....900
Dec. 31—The Red Cross Heroine.....1000
Jan. 7—Red Girl's Romance (Dr.).....990
Jan. 11—A Redman's Devotion (Bison).....950
Jan. 12—An Episode of Napoleon's War with Spain (Itala).....775
Jan. 14—A Forester's Sweetheart (Bison).....950
Jan. 15—The Son of the Wilderness (Ambrosio).925

THE POWERS COMPANY.
(Columbia Film.)

Nov. 2—Change of Complexion.....950
Nov. 9—All for the Love of a Girl.....950
Nov. 16—The Gypsy's Regret.....925
Nov. 23—A Red Man's Love.....830
Nov. 30—Pressing Business.....850
Dec. 7—A Run for the Money.....950
Dec. 14—Manhood's Reward.....950
Dec. 21—Reunited by Santa Claus.....950
Dec. 28—Excelsior (Comedy).....950
Jan. 4—A Frozen Ape.....950
Jan. 18—The Little Heroine.....975

PHOENIX FILM CO.

Nov. 18—Millionaire Bootblack (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 25—Delayed Telegram (Com.).....900
Dec. 2—Answered Prayer (Dr.).....850
Dec. 9—Bad Case of Grip (Com.).....750
Dec. 9—July 4th, 1910 (Com.).....250
Dec. 16—Her Mother's Mistake (Dr.).....850
Jan. 6—Convicted by His Own Child (1).....1000
Jan. 13—Convicted by His Own Child (2).....1000

CENTAUR FILM CO.

Dec. 11—Santa Claus and the Miner's Child.abt. 950
Dec. 18—Beyond the Rockies.....abt. 950
Dec. 25—The Deceiver.....1000
Jan. 13—Mishaps of Bonehead.....450
Jan. 13—Forgiven.....345

EXCLUSIVE FILM COMPANY.

Dec. 30—A Romance of the South.....875

AT LIBERTY—First class operator, Edison or Power's machines. Best of references. WALTER KINIRY, care of Dreamland, Bellows Falls, Vt.

Classified Advertising.

Rate 3 cents per word, Cash with order.

MR. MOVING PICTURE MAN—In answer to this ad we will sell you 4 beautifully colored, artistic announcement slides for $1.00. Send for list, every one new, a work of art. NIAGARA SLIDE CO., Lockport, N. Y.

The "A B C OF MOTION PICTURES" just out. What, when, why, where, how. Everything pertaining to the biggest money-making business out. How to run machines, equip theaters, build stage, install lighting, make rheostats, paint banners and signs, make slides for 3 cents each, what to charge, how to handle help, details of phonographic instruction, where to get film cheapest, how to save on supplies, 5,000 facts, pointers and suggestions which will save anyone going into the business $500.00 at the lowest calculation. Postpaid for a dollar. GARRETT SWIFT, 238 20th Ave., North, Minneapolis, Minn.

WANTED—Oxy-carbi gas making outfit. Address SMITH STUDIO, Carson City, Nev.

FOR SALE—Edison exhibition model machine, friction takeup, in perfect condition, with 4 reels of film in perfect condition, $120.00. One machine all complete with fire boxes, perfect condition, 4 reels of film, $135.00. Lot of films at $15.00 per reel. MAYER SILVERMAN, 108-110 Fourth Ave., Pittsburg, Penna.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

A-1 TENOR SINGER of experience wishes position. Good salary. Can show references from past employers if desired. ROBERT P. TOURNIER, 56 Oak Street, Providence, R. I.

EXPERIENCED LANTERNIST AND PHOTOGRAPHER wishes position with lecturer. Can furnish reference. Read or city. HARRY L. KEEPERS, 506 Lexington Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

AT LIBERTY—Trap drummer with full outfits for effects for pictures; play bells, etc. A. DRUMMER, 117 W. Cabarrus St., Raleigh, N. C.

Neosho Song Slides

$3.50 the set

These NEW ones are ready for immediate delivery:

Darling Make Me Dreamy
Name the Day, Honey, Do
Sue
Only a Dream of You
Mary Brown
Give Me a Spin in Your Mitchell, Bill

Write for our special standing order proposition

The Neosho Slide Company
100 S. Wood St., Neosho, Mo.

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a space saver, life saver and money saver. Shipped built up. It is the only sanitary theatre chair. Used by Keith, Proctor and Poli. It folds up automatically and is revolving, making the theatre all aisles. It is a friend to the public.

Send for our circular A. Write today.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO.
CANAL DOVER, OHIO

LICENSED FILMS.

BIOGRAPH COMPANY.

		Feet
Nov.	29—The Trick that Failed (Dr.)	645
Nov.	29—In the Window Recess (Dr.)	337
Dec.	2—The Death Disc (Dr.)	995
Dec.	6—Through the Breakers (Dr.)	974
Dec.	9—The Redman's View (Dr.)	971
Dec.	13—A Corner in Wheat (Dr.)	953
Dec.	16—In a Hempen Bag (Dr.)	455
Dec.	16—The Test (Com.)	545
Dec.	20—A Trap for Santa Claus (Dr.)	989
Dec.	23—In Little Italy (Dr.)	956
Dec.	27—To Save Her Soul (Dr.)	986
Dec.	30—The Day After (Com.)	460
Dec.	30—Choosing a Husband (Com.)	531
Jan.	3—The Rocky Road (Dr.)	990
Jan.	6—The Dancing Girl of Butte (Dr.)	984
Jan.	10—Her Terrible Ordeal (Dr.)	952
Jan.	13—All on Account of the Milk (Dr.)	989

EDISON MFG. CO.

Nov.	26—Annual Celebration of School Children, Newark, N. J. (Scenic)	300
Nov.	30—The Heart of a Clown (Com.)	600
Nov.	30—The Wonderful Electro-Magnet (Com.)	400
Dec.	3—The Keeper of the Light (Dr.)	965
Dec.	7—What the Cards Foretold (Com.)	420
Dec.	7—My Lord in Livery (Com.)	520
Dec.	10—The House of Cards (Dr.)	960
Dec.	14—Fenton of the 42d (Dr.)	860
Dec.	14—The New Policeman (Com.)	100
Dec.	17—A Gift from Santa Claus (Dr.)	920
Dec.	21—A Happy Accident (Christmas Story)	450
Dec.	21—The Mischievous Elf (Com.)	540
Dec.	24—Faust (Grand Opera)	1000
Dec.	28—Tobacco Mania (Com.)	360
Dec.	28—The Fallen Idol (Com.)	330
Dec.	28—The Cap of Fortune (Com.)	290
Dec.	31—Fishing Industry at Gloucester, Mass. (Industrial)	975
Jan.	4—Pardners (Dr.)	995
Jan.	7—The Engineer's Romance (Dr.)	670
Jan.	7—Ashes (Sentimental)	310
Jan.	11—Bear Hunt in the Rockies (Descrip.)	975
Jan.	14—A Warrior Bold (Com.)	475
Jan.	14—The Parson's Umbrella (Com.)	220
Jan.	14—Troop "B," 15th U. S. Cavalry, Bareback Monkey Drill (Descriptive)	283
Jan.	18—In the Nick of Time (Dr.)	975
Jan.	21—The Coquette (Dr.)	495
Jan.	21—The Luck of Roaring Camp (Dr.)	490

ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.

Dec.	25—The Heart of a Cowboy (Dr.)	959
Dec.	29—Jack's Birthday (Comedy)	728
Dec.	29—A Policeman's Revolver (Comedy)	281
Jan.	1—A Western Maid (Dr.)	785
Jan.	1—Why He Did Not Win Out (Comedy)	213
Jan.	5—The Adventuress (Dr.)	525
Jan.	5—How Hubby Made Good (Com.)	473
Jan.	8—His Only Child (Dr.)	997
Jan.	12—Electric Insoles (Com.)	502
Jan.	12—The Old Maid and the Burglar (Com.)	498
Jan.	15—Review of U. S. Troops, Fort Leavenworth (Scenic)	1000
Jan.	19—Won by a Holdup (Com.)	629
Jan.	19—Flower Parade at Pasadena, Cal.	292
Jan.	22—The Confession (Dr.)	960

GAUMONT.

(George Kleine.)

Nov.	20—Visions of a Nag (Equine Tragedy)	517
Nov.	24—Tulips (Educational)	105
Nov.	24—A Heart's Devotion (Tragedy)	842
Nov.	27—The Village Scare (Com.)	381
Nov.	27—The Mixup at Court (Dr.)	590
Nov.	30—In the Consomme (Com.)	491
Nov.	30—The Broken Vase (Com.)	472
Dec.	4—How to Get a City Job (Com.)	501
Dec.	4—X-Ray Glasses (Magic)	416
Dec.	7—Listen (Com.)	344
Dec.	7—Top-Heavy Mary (Com.)	283
Dec.	7—In a Pickle (Com.)	374
Dec.	11—Daughters of Poverty (Dr.)	953
Dec.	14—Nothing Is Ever Lost (Com.)	495
Dec.	14—The Life Buoy (Dr.)	446
Dec.	18—The Shepherd's Flute (Dr.)	528
Dec.	18—Cambyses, King of Persia (Dr.)	486
Dec.	21—The Stranger (Dr.)	935
Dec.	25—The Greek Slave's Passion (Dr.)	967
Dec.	28—A Clever Sleuth (Com.)	623
Dec.	28—Hush Money (Dr.)	361
Jan.	1—The Legion of Honor (Dr.)	1009
Jan.	4—The Wreck at Sea (Dr.)	623
Jan.	4—The Avenging Dentist (Com.)	319
Jan.	8—On the Bank of the River (Dr.)	604
Jan.	8—A Seat in the Balcony (Com.)	371
Jan.	11—Shooting in the Haunted Woods (Com.)	570
Jan.	11—Towser's New Job (Com.)	393
Jan.	15—Decorated by the Emperor (Dr.)	698
Jan.	15—Railway on the Ice Sea (Scenic)	512

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

(George Kleine.)

		Feet
Dec.	8—The Secret Chamber (Dr.)	623
Dec.	8—Capturing the North Pole (Dr.)	381
Dec.	15—The Red Signal (Dr.)	355
Dec.	15—Switzerland; Conquering the Alps (Scenic)	605
Dec.	22—Fiorella, the Bandit's Daughter (Dr.)	741
Dec.	22—From the Fighting Top of a Battleship in Action (Scenic)	263
Dec.	29—Battle in the Clouds (Scenic)	658
Dec.	29—Battle in the Clouds (Dr.)	658
Dec.	29—The Park of Caserta (Scenic)	201
Jan.	5—Tragedy at the Mill (Dr.)	612
Jan.	5—Shanghai of To-day (Scenic)	351
Jan.	12—True to His Oath (Dr.)	672
Jan.	12—Home of the Gypsies (Scenic)	321

KALEM CO.

Nov.	27—Judgment (Dr.)	988
Nov.	19—Pale Face's Wooing (Dr.)	930
Nov.	26—The Governor's Daughter (Dr.)	955
Dec.	3—The Geisha Who Saved Japan (Dr.)	955
Dec.	10—The Rally Round the Flag (Dr.)	955
Dec.	17—The Law of the Mountain (Dr.)	875
Dec.	24—The Cardboard Baby (Fairy Story)	855
Dec.	31—A Slave to Drink (Dr.)	950
Jan.	7—The Deacon's Daughter (Dr.)	950
Jan.	14—The Romance of a Trained Nurse (Dr.)
Jan.	21—The Magic Flower (Fairy Tale)

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Nov.	25—Martyr or Crank (Dr.)	580
Nov.	25—Finnigan's Initiation (Com.)	420
Nov.	29—A Life for a Life (Dr.)	850
Dec.	2—The Cub Reporter (Com.)	945
Dec.	6—She Took Mother's Advice (Com.)	465
Dec.	6—He Wanted a Baby (Com.)	460
Dec.	9—If Love Be True (Dr.)	950
Dec.	13—When Courage Fled (Com.)	250
Dec.	13—Jinks, the Grouch (Com.)	700
Dec.	16—Romance of the Rocky Coast (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	18—Two Christmas Tides (Dr.)	952
Dec.	20—The Policeman's Christmas Eve (Dr.)	440
Dec.	20—Three Christmas Dinners (Comedy)	495
Dec.	23—Blissville the Beautiful (Comedy)	830
Dec.	27—The New Chief (Comedy)	495
Dec.	27—The Persistent Poet (Comedy)	525
Dec.	30—Three-Fingere Jack (Dramatic)	940
Jan.	3—Their Chaperoned Honeymoon (Com.)	816
Jan.	6—The Tattooed Arm (Dr.)	860
Jan.	10—Over the Wire (Dr.)	900
Jan.	13—Wild Duck Hunting on Historic Reel Foot Lake (Scenic)	550
Jan.	13—He Joined the Frat (Com.)	300

GEORGE MELIES.

Dec.	1—Seeing Things (Com.)	286
Dec.	8—The Fatal Ball (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	15—The Living Doll (Dr.)	1000

PATHE FRERES.

Nov.	26—The Bigamist (Dr.)	951
Nov.	27—The Mixed Letters (Com.)	584
Nov.	27—Chinese Amusements (Scenic)	397
Nov.	29—Bunch of Lilacs (Dr.)	423
Nov.	29—Spanish Marriage (Dr.)	551
Dec.	1—The Wolf Hunt (Scenic)	269
Dec.	1—A Legend of Orpheus	705
Dec.	3—The Three Neighbors (Com.)	413
Dec.	3—Forced into Marriage (Dr.)	561
Dec.	4—From the Egg to the Spit (Ed.)	398
Dec.	4—A Cask of Good Old Wine (Com.)	535
Dec.	6—The Lady's Companion (Dr.)	804
Dec.	8—Impossible to Get Sleep (Com.)	315
Dec.	8—The Evil Philter (Dr.)	623
Dec.	10—Masquerader's Charity (Dr.)	394
Dec.	10—Bear Hunt in Russia (Scenic)	564
Dec.	11—Exploits of a Cowboy (Scenic)	446
Dec.	11—Willyboy Gets His (Com.)	502
Dec.	12—La Grand Breteche (Dr.)	900
Dec.	13—The Tramp's Romance (Dr.)	541
Dec.	13—Repairing the House (Farce)	413
Dec.	15—The Ugly Girl (Dr.)	620
Dec.	15—Punch and Judy (Juvenile)	364
Dec.	17—The Lucky Number (Com.)	538
Dec.	17—The Strong Tonic (Com.)	433
Dec.	18—Hector, the Angel Child (Com.)	620
Dec.	18—Honey Industry (Industrial)	331
Dec.	20—The Death of the Duke D'Enghien (Dr.)	951
Dec.	22—Contest for a Handkerchief (Com.)	459
Dec.	22—The Love Token (Dramatic)	515
Dec.	24—The Birth of Jesus (Biblical)	525
Dec.	24—Agriculture in Hungary (Ind.)	826
Dec.	25—The Good Doctor (Com.)	590
Dec.	25—The Happy Widower (Com.)	384
Dec.	27—Bad Bargain (Com.)	630
Dec.	27—Marvelous Garlands (Scenic)	295
Dec.	29—Oh, You Doggie (Com.)	187
Dec.	29—A Well Earned Medal (Dr.)	728
Dec.	31—A Live Corpse (Com.)	610
Dec.	31—Corsican Hospitality (Dr.)	390
Jan.	1—Tabby's Finish (Dr.)	426
Jan.	1—Trials of a Schoolmaster (Dr.)	528
Jan.	3—The Marriage of the Cook (Com.)	502
Jan.	3—A Victim of Circumstances (Dr.)	459
Jan.	5—The King's Command (Com.)	561
Jan.	5—The Overzealous Domestic (Farce)	410
Jan.	7—Modern Highwayman (Dr.)	600
Jan.	7—An English Boxing Bout (Sports)	298
Jan.	8—The Last Look (Dr.)	587
Jan.	8—His Opponent's Card (Com.)	367
Jan.	10—Miss Moneybags Wishes to Wed (Com.)	581
Jan.	10—Women in India (Educational)	377
Jan.	12—Camille (Dr.)	1033
Jan.	14—The Beggar's Repentance (Dr.)	692
Jan.	14—Story of a Leg (Com.)	285
Jan.	15—On a Racket (Com.)	660
Jan.	15—A Stag Hunt in Java (Scenic)	367

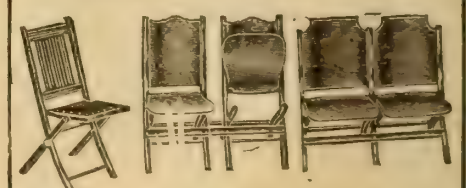
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.

Dec.	6—The Engineer's Daughter (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	9—The Heroine of Mafeking (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	11—Pine Ridge Feud (Dr.)	975
Dec.	16—The Indian (Dr.)
Dec.	20—Through the Hood River Valley (Sc.)
Dec.	20—A Modern Dr. Jekyll (Com.)
Dec.	23—The Christian Martyrs (Dr.)	950
Dec.	27—Buried Alive (Dramatic)	1000
Dec.	30—A Daughter of the Sioux (Dr.)	985
Jan.	3—The Smuggler's Game (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	6—The Highlanders' Defiance (Dr.)	625
Jan.	6—Alderman Krautz's Picnic (Com.)	370
Jan.	10—A Tale of the Woods (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	13—Under the Stars and Stripes (Dr.)	900
Jan.	17—A New Divorce Cure (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	20—The Courtship of Miles Standish (Dr.)	1000

VITAGRAPH COMPANY.

Nov.	2—Adele's Washday (Com.)	432
Nov.	6—From Cabin Boy to King (Dr.)	958
Nov.	9—Into the Shadow (Dr.)	642
Nov.	9—A Sticky Proposition (Com.)	323
Nov.	13—Launcelot and Elaine (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	16—Benedict Arnold (Dr.)	685
Nov.	16—Indian Basket Making (Ind.)	245
Nov.	20—The Sins of the Fathers (Dr.)	985
Nov.	23—Why They Married (Com.)	905
Nov.	27—Jean Valjean (Dr.)	990
Nov.	30—The Bridegroom's Joke (Com.)	690
Nov.	30—Dirigible Balloons at St. Louis (Scen.)	275
Dec.	4—The Life of Moses (Dr.)	981
Dec.	7—A Lesson in Domestic Economy (C.)	684
Dec.	7—A Day with Our Soldier Boys (Sc.)	302
Dec.	11—Gambling with Death (Dr.)	933
Dec.	14—The Professor and the Thomas Cats (C.)	405
Dec.	14—A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year (Dr.)	586
Dec.	18—Two Christmas Tides (Dr.)	952
Dec.	21—The Forgotten Watch (Comedy)	413
Dec.	21—The Cook Makes Madeira Sauce (C.)	561
Dec.	25—A Midsummer Night's Dream (Dr.)	991
Dec.	28—The Power of the Press (Dr.)	997
Jan.	1—Cupid and the Motor Boat (Dr.)	940
Jan.	4—The Life of Moses (Biblical)	868
Jan.	8—Richelieu, or the Conspiracy (Dr.)	992
Jan.	11—Call Boy's Vengeance (Com.)	320
Jan.	11—The Old Maid's Valentine (Com.)
Jan.	15—A Sister's Sacrifice (Dr.)	970

Folding and Assembly Chairs



Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use

Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue

PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.

NORTH MANCHESTER, - - - INDIANA

Open Twenty Four Hours Every Day—Write, Call, Wire or Phone Any Hour, Day or Night

ELECTRIC THEATRE SUPPLY CO., Inc. The Home of Good Film Service The Birthplace of Original Ideas

We handle everything needed by Moving Picture Exhibitors 44 N. Tenth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

We have every subject issued by the Licensed Manufacturers

MOTIOGRAPH, PATHE FRERES, POWER'S, EDISON and LUBIN MACHINES and PARTS ALWAYS ON HAND

Write for our new proposition:—Supplying two customers in the same town each with twelve reels a week, keeping each one's supply away from the other, and no repeaters to either.

Trade Mark

·Essanay Films·

Trade Mark

These Pictures Will Get the Money! A Program Par Excellence This Week!

"ELECTRIC INSOLES" "FORT LEAVENWORTH"

THIS WEEK

RELEASE OF WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 12

COMEDY

"A Laugh in Every Foot"

"ELECTRIC INSOLES"

(Length, approximate 525 feet.)

with

"THE OLD MAID and the BURGLAR"

(Length, approximate 498 feet.)

RELEASE OF SATURDAY, JANUARY 15

The greatest Military picture ever Released!

Essanay Photography

"U. S. ARMY MANOEUVRES— FORT LEAVENWORTH!"

(Length, approximate 1000 feet.)

Do You Show Essanay Films ? You Ought To

NEXT WEEK

RELEASE OF WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 19

COMEDY

"Made in the West"

"WON BY A HOLD-UP"

(Length, approximate 629 feet.)

with the marvellously beautiful scenic

"FLOWER PARADE AT PASADENA, CALIFORNIA!"

(Length, approximate 292 feet.)

RELEASE OF SATURDAY, JANUARY 22

A Great Dramatic Feature by an All Star Cast.

Perfect Production

"THE CONFESSION"

(Length approximate, 960 feet.)

"YOU DON'T KNOW GOOD COMEDY UNTIL YOU SEE AN ESSANY"

Get on Our Mailing List Order Essanay Pictorial Posters

Essanay Film M'f'g., Co.

FACTORY and STUDIOS 1333 ARGYLE ST. - OFFICE 435 NORTH CLARK ST.
CHICAGO and LONDON, 5 NEW COMPTON ST. W.C.

LUX FILMS

Mr. R. Prieur begs to announce that owing to the large increase in orders for Lux Films he has secured large and more conveniently located offices at

No. 10 E. 15th Street

(Bet. 5th Ave. and Broadway)

Weekly Release Day Wednesday. This Week's Shipment

Drama at Sea 655 Ft.

Football Craze (COMIC) 331 Ft.

R. PRIEUR

10 E. 15th Street Telephone Call: STUYVESANT 3124 NEW YORK

Two "Imp" Releases a Week!
Then Three! And Then Four!

Beginning in about a month the "Imp" will release two reels per week. Both will come from our New York studio. Later, when our Florida studio is ready, we will increase to three and then four releases per week. We are not doing this on speculation, but as the result of an insistent and irresistible demand on the part of the Independent exhibitors and exchanges. We could start the two-release plan this week, but we first want to be dead certain that every little detail is complete to insure two weekly reels as perfect as the one-a-week we are now producing. So we allow ourselves about a month of margin in order to be able to start the double release without apologies or excuses. The "Imp" factory has established a record unparalleled in the history of moving pictures. Only a few weeks of age, it has put behind it all the amateurishness which other factories required months and years to eliminate. From the very inception of the "Imp" factory, the demand for its product has been sensational. News of this success has flashed across the waters to Europe to such an extent that English, German, Russian and French moving picture agencies are clamoring for exclusive control of "Imp" films in their own respective bailiwicks. Exhibitors in all parts of America, hitherto using licensed films because they feared the Independent kind would not satisfy their clientele, are now joining the Independent ranks hourly, absolutely safe in the knowledge that "Imp" films will fulfill the most exacting demands. The Independent exchanges have felt this sudden movement in their increased business and it has given them new energy and encouragement to wage war on their licensed competitors. All this is not an accident. It is not bone-headed luck. It is the result of employing the best stage directors, the best performers, the best camera men, the best factory workers; buying the finest equipment that the age has produced and spending money lavishly on productions. The "Imp" intends to put every cent it makes for months, back into the business, adding, improving, growing, overcoming any and all obstacles until even its bitterest enemies acknowledge its supremacy just as its friends now do. If you are an exhibitor and want the benefit of this campaign, tell your exchange you want "Imp" films, and don't let up till you get them.

Independent Moving Pictures Company of America

CARL LAEMMLE, PRESIDENT

111 EAST 14TH ST., NEW YORK

Released Monday "THE TIDE OF FORTUNE" January 17th

This is in keeping with the magnificent improvement in "Imp" films and is exactiy the sort of picture the exhibitors are crying for. It tells the story of the ups and downs of a rich family and proves that in some cases the black sheep turns out to be the bell-cow. Keep asking for this and other "Imp" films till you get them. Write for names of exchanges which are buying all the new releases.

This Week's Release

"The Winning Punch"

Next Week's Release

"Right of Love"

Ohio Moving Picture Theatre Managers, Attention!

We are rapidly booking dates for the original

JOHNSON-KETCHEL FIGHT

(Three and one-half reels, taken at Colma, October 16, 1909)

BOOKING WITH LICENSED EXHIBITORS ONLY

Intensely interesting as the days go by on account of the coming fight between JOHNSON and JEFFRIES

The biggest attraction yet. A clean fight of 12 rounds with a sensational climax—the knock-down of Johnson and the knock-out of Ketchel. Get in line and get the money. Send the capacity of your house, location and population and we will tell you how.

If your own theatre is small, get the biggest hall in town and we will make arrangements with you under special license. We hold exclusive rights for Ohio.

This will be the money getter for Tent Shows for May and June. Get in now, Mr. Summer Showman

LAKE SHORE FILM & SUPPLY CO., Superior Bldg,, Cleveland, Ohio

ADDRESS: Johnson-Ketchel Fight Department, Sam Bullock, Manager

CHERRY MINE DISASTER

A Complete Set of 36 Stereopticon Views taken on the spot by Hearst's Chicago Examiner

RENTED WITH PRINTED LECTURE AND ONE SHEET FOR LOBBY DISPLAY

RICE-McNEW Care of Brayton Mfg. Co. 122 Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

INTERNATIONAL FILM COMPANY

110 WEST 34th STREET NEW YORK

NOTE OUR SPECIALTY
A1 Films at 2 cents per foot

Dealers in Films, Moving Picture Machines, Carbons, Tickets, Song Slides, Announcement Slides and everything pertaining to the Moving Picture business.

Want to Buy 1000 Reels Independent Film

INDEPENDENT

We rent new Films. Handle all the leading Makes, both AMERICAN AND FOREIGN; beautiful Posters; exclusive Feature Service. Write for prices.

CINCINNATI FILM EXCHANGE, 214-16 West 5th Street, CINCINNATI, O.

KEEP YOUR EYE ON US

AMERICAN FILM BROKERS—German Savings Bank Building
147-157 4th Avenue, New York City

300 sets second-hand Song Slides from $1.50 up. Films like new very cheap. Announcement Slides, Machines and Accessories of all kinds. Write for lists.

PITTSBURG — McKENNA — NEW YORK

Did you get one of our NEW CATALOGS?

Prepared especially for the man who wants information concerning

Brass Railings, Picture Easels, Grilles, Etc.

WRITE NOW TO

McKENNA BROS. BRASS CO.

1st Ave. and Ross Street PITTSBURG — "It's the Front that Attracts the Business" — 238 Broadway NEW YORK

FILMS FOR RENT

NEW FILMS—HIGH CLASS SERVICE

The Pioneer House, With 8 Years Experience And $250,000.00 Back Of It

Write To-day For Terms

EUGENE CLINE

57 and 59 Dearborn Street, Chicago

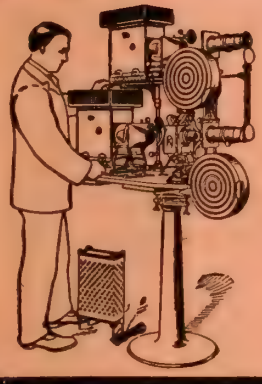
Vol. 6., No. 3. January 22, 1910 Price, 10 Cents

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

WHICH IS INCORPORATING THE EXHIBITOR

ALL THE FILM AND SONG SLIDE NEWS

Published Weekly by THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING CO., 125 E. 23d ST., NEW YORK



The Motiograph Motion Picture Machine is A Wonder

AND WILL INCREASE YOUR BUSINESS

It projects Flickerless, Steady and Wonderfully Brilliant pictures, has Patented 1½ minute Rewind from main crank, revolving Magazines, Automatic Fireproof shutter, etc., not found in other Machines.—WILL WEAR TWICE AS LONG.

C. H. D. of Keokuk, Iowa, writes: Motiograph Making a Big Hit and Business increased wonderfully.

F. L. F. of Chicago, Ill., writes: "Used every day for seven months, and not one penny for repairs."

F. J. K. of Kansas City, writes: "Operating Motiograph nearly two years. Have operated all makes, but none to compare with Motiograph.—PRICES, $150.00 AND UP

The Enterprise Calcium Gas Outfit is the only satisfactory substitute for electric light Write for Catalog to-day

Western Representatives: S. Lubin, Geo. Melies

FILM

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564-572 West Randolph Street, Chicago

Calcium Gas Outfit

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

143 North 8th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA

Best and Newest Independent American and Foreign Films

SUPPLIES——18 REELS PER WEEK——SUPPLIES

PROMPT AND RELIABLE SERVICE

Members N. I. M. P. Alliance

Builder's Exchange Building, BALTIMORE, MD.

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

Power's Cameragraph No. 5

Power's Cameragraph No. 6

Guaranteed for 1 Year

"Power's" Means Perfect in Moving Pictures

Power's Inductor for alternating current

Power's "Bill Splitter" for direct current

Power's Tool Kit

Send for Catalog G

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115-117 Nassau St., New York

A Feature in Every Respect

THE WAGES OF SIN

Length 990 Feet

Full Sheet Colored Lithographs with this picture

The quality, acting and staging of this production puts it in a class by itself

Get on my mailing list and receive the good news of the week

SOLE AGENT

A. G. WHYTE

Importer and Exporter

1 MADISON AVENUE NEW YORK

The Film Service

you now use may be all right—you may be sure it is if it is

THE PREMIER KIND of

The Pittsburg Calcium Light & Film Company

Pittsburg, Pa. Des Moines, Ia. Rochester, N. Y.
Wilkes Barre, Pa. Cincinnati, Ohio.
Omaha, Neb.

Something New Every Week

GREAT WESTERN FILM COMPANY

Our Release Day Every Saturday

NOW READY FOR SHIPMENT

ON THE FIRING LINE

Length About 800 Feet
A Stirring American Military Drama

Free Post-ers

Two Sub-jects on One Reel

A thrilling story of Love and War, replete with Military Incidents, a dashing charge over the hills and a strong battle seene enacted by a regiment of Mounted Cavalrymen, at the United States Military Reservation. A Great Production, Photography unexcelled.

Comedy—THE DEVIL IS LOOSE
Length About 200 Feet
Containing some funny and effective laughs

GREAT WESTERN FILM CO.
1441 Fillmore Street San Francisco, Cal.

OUR NEXT RELEASE
The Montana Ranchman—Drama—The Burglar Trap—Comedy

LUX FILMS

Mr. R. Prieur begs to announce that owing to the large increase in orders for Lux Films he has secured large and more conveniently located offices at

No. 10 E. 15th Street

(Bet. 5th Ave. and Broadway)

Release Wednesday, January 19th

THE REFUGEE

750 Feet

ADVENTURES OF A SANDWICH MAN

(COMIC) 232 Feet

R. PRIEUR

10 E. 15th Street Telephone Call: STUYVESANT 3124 NEW YORK

PATHÉ FRÈRES

Will Release

MOTHERLESS

LENGTH 1046 FEET

The beautiful and pathetic play of international fame, "The Two Orphans," dramatically portrayed in a film of exceptionally great merit. The story of the blind girl and her foster sister, who step from poverty to riches after great hardship and suffering, is one to move the hardest hearted spectator to tears.

Released January 26th

FOR OTHER RELEASES SEE THE PATHÉ BULLETIN

PATHÉ FRÈRES

NEW YORK
41 West 25th Street

CHICAGO
35 Randolph Street

NEW ORLEANS
813 Union Street

Pacific Coast Agency—Turner & Dahnken, 136 Eddy Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Get Your Posters from the A. B. C. Co., of Cleveland, Ohio

VITAGRAPH FILMS

THE FILMS OF "QUALITY"

Tuesday, January 18

The Toymaker's Secret

A Remarkable Novelty Picture—with a fascinating love story. A free adaptation from the opera of Copellia. Approximate length, 969 feet.

Saturday, January 22

A Pair of Schemers

A High Class Comedy—with a novel ending. How a newly married couple overcame the objections of a grouchy uncle. Neat and Classy. Approximate length, 743 feet.

Five Minutes to Twelve

Short, Snappy and Screaming with Laughter—A youth running for his noon-day lunch is followed by many people who imagine his haste is from quite another cause. Approximate length, 162 feet.

PLACE YOUR ORDERS EARLY FOR

LIFE OF MOSES, PART III.—"The Plagues of Egypt and the Deliverance of the Hebrew." To be released January 25. Parts IV and V of this magnificent series will be issued in February, so that all will be available early in Lent.

WE NOW ISSUE OUR OWN POSTERS. ORDER FROM YOUR EXCHANGE

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

NEW YORK, 116 Nassau St.
CHICAGO, 109 Randolph St.
LONDON, 25 Cecil Court
PARIS, 15, Rue Sainte-Cecile

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY - 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

EDITORS: J. P. CHALMERS, THOMAS BEDDING, F. R. P. S.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rica and the Philippine Islands.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3⅜ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.

TIME DISCOUNTS: 5% two or more insertions, 10% three months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

G. P. VON HARLEMAN, Western Representative, 913-915 Schiller Building, Chicago, Ill. - Telephone, Central 3763

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 6 JANUARY 22, 1910 No. 3

Coming Meeting of the Film Service Association.

The next semi-annual meeting of the Film Service Association will be held in New York City (January 29-31), instead of at Palm Beach, as suggested at the last meeting.

Summary of the Week.

* * *

A moving picture palace wanted in New York City. One that will cater to an intelligent and select audience and present only the best pictures, good songs and good music, will be a success from the start.

* * *

There is much talk of the popularity of American films. What is an American subject? (Page 82.)

* * *

The agitator who never sees a moving picture show condemns the cleanest amusement of the people. New Jersey politics discouraging to the exhibitor. (Page 82.)

* * *

Lantern slide making is passing into the hands of the fittest. Great progress has been made in the photographic quality and coloring by leading makers. (Page 83.)

* * *

The inadmissible subject is a thing of the past. Film manufacturers competing on the lines of quality are equally alert to the character of the subject. (Page 83.)

* * *

Mme. Pilar-Morin discusses the future trend of the silent drama. In an interesting interview she outlines the class of work in which she is engaged in the Edison studio.

* * *

The Vitagraph Company of America entertain their employees at a royal banquet and entertainment in the Vitagraph studios.

* * *

Our Man-on-the-Road gives some interesting impressions of his interviews with exchange men and exhibitors.

* * *

"Lux Graphicus" has a chat with a prominent factor in the film business.

* * *

The Melies Company are engaged in the sunny South and will soon begin to release a higher quality of product.

Public officials seek to restrain the use of combustible celluloid film in Newark, N. J.

* * *

Frequenters of moving picture shows bewail the fact that there is not a show house in New York where the regular releases can be seen without the delay and annoyance of sitting through tiresome vaudeville.

The Moving Picture in the Vaudeville House.

We, who write this, first made the acquaintance of the moving picture in its public aspect in a vaudeville house. This was just after the Lumieres made their wonderful success in the year 1896. The moving pictures then became part of the public entertainment shown in the great European cities. For a time it was received with wonderment, but ere long it fell in public esteem.

It became what is known in this country as a "chaser." It occasionally preceded the star act of the evening, or it ended the entertainment. The result was apparent and it continued apparent for a long time. People walked around the promenade or went and indulged in liquid refreshment or they left the theater altogether. The moving picture was tolerated by some, bored others, pleased and interested only a very few.

A change in public sentiment is, however, taking place in this matter. In Europe the moving picture to-day is appreciated even in vaudeville houses. Apparently this is the case in New York City. The other evening we went to a well-known vaudeville house in Manhattan, where the moving picture forms a permanent feature of the entertainment. We were just curious to study the attitude of the public towards this picture. We wondered if the people would rise from their seats and leave the house as they used to do in London. Not so. The audience remained and followed the picture with great interest. Indeed, they seemed to us willing to stand for something more (and something better) than the piffling vaudeville entertainment offered them. In other words, they seemed to be conscious that they were not getting the best in the way of moving pictures. This is merely an impression, but it was confirmed for us by friends in the audience.

Vaudeville managers and others would, therefore, be wise to take cognizance of the enormous hold the moving picture has upon the public. We mean the moving picture of the best kind, not the "chaser," but subjects that appeal to the intelect and the emotions of the audience. Theatrical and variety magnates are, as we have pointed out, rising to some appreciation of the importance of the moving picture in the entertainment scheme of things, but they have yet much to learn in properly gauging the taste of the public.

What is an American Subject?

We should be glad to receive answers from our exhibiting readers to this question. We think that if they would express their views freely and openly on the subject in our columns the manufacturers would derive many useful hints. Much has been said and written the last twelve months on the desirability of providing American film subjects for American moving picture audiences. It has been urged against the imported film that it usually has the drawback of not dealing with a subject suitable for an American audience. The urgent necessity of American subjects made by American labor has been predicated and the poor importer as well as the Enropean manufacturer has therefore been, to some extent, prejudiced in the eyes of the American exhibitor.

Examining the parallel of the ordinary or talking stage it is surprising to see how very few American subjects hold the stage for any length of time in New York City. If we go to the recently opened New Theater we see that most of the works presented are by foreign authors. At this moment America's leading actress, Miss Maude Adams, is playing in a comedy by a Scottish author. Irving's son has brought a European piece with him. Mr. Frohman's most recent success is "Arsene Lupin," a French subject. So it goes pretty well down the list of recent metropolitan successes. Both opera houses put on French and Italian music. Why is this? Dare we reply because there is a dearth of suitable American subjects?

Let us look at the moving picture field. Out of about forty films commented upon in the last number of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, exactly one-half are foreign subjects and were made abroad. Of those that were made in this country, not more than ten are of American themes, that is, themes "racy of the soil" and distinctly American in characterization, scenery and surroundings. The other subjects were such as might have been made in Europe. In the licensed releases for the week ending January 15, out of about 31 pictures, 11 are foreign subjects; of the remaining 20 only 6 are clearly American. The remainder are, if we may so put it, of a nondescript kind.

It will be seen from this, that the American subject, even after a year's plugging away, does not seem to have secured a predominant part in the film program of the moving picture theaters of the United States. It is permissible to inquire whether this is because the makers are unable to keep up the supply of purely American subjects, or because the tastes of the public are many and varied and have to be catered for accordingly? We incline to the latter view. There seems to be amongst exhibitors, among whom we have made the inquiry, a strong and increasing demand for Indian and Western subjects, and here probably we get the most satisfactory answer to our own question. Indian and Western subjects may fairly be considered American, because they deal with the aboriginal or original life of the pioneers of the country. When you come to the comedy subject, the dramatic subject, the purely humorous subject, the American aspect of things is not perhaps so obvious as it might be.

We have examined this little question at some length, in order, first of all, to see what is meant by the common generalization expressed in the phrase "American subjects," and also for the purpose of starting the theme for discussion so as to learn the views of our exhibiting readers. It would be a good thing if our exhibiting readers would write us and give us an idea of the class of subject which their audiences like, which are the most popular and understood—what, in fact, the audience prefers. It will possibly be found that if exclusively American made subjects were presented in the moving picture theaters of the United States the audiences would clamor for more variety, so that we should be brought round to the same condition of things as prevails at the present time.

A Fool Proposition.

One Robert L. Fleming, who claims Jersey City as his home, will introduce in the session of the New Jersey Legislature, which convenes next Tuesday at Trenton, a bill to shut all children under fifteen years out of motion picture shows, unless accompanied by a parent, or guardian, meaning by that, perhaps, an older person.

Of course the same old silly twaddle about the injurious influence of immoral films is used plentifully as justification for this attempted fool legislation, though not one fact is deduced to prove the claims of immorality. And it would be impossible to bring forward one iota of proof that motion pictures are injurious to anybody.

One wonders if some of the people like Mr. Fleming have ever seen such pictures, for example, as "The Life of Moses," recently released by the Vitagraph Company? Or their Shakespearean or historical pictures? Or Edison's sermon in pictures, "A Gift from Santa Claus," or their illustrated classics, such as "Pardners," or their educational subjects, such as "The Fishing Industry at Gloucester, Mass."? One is forced to the conclusion that the marvelous dramatic and pictorial productions from the Pathe studio have never gladdened the eye or aroused the emotions of such inconsistent critics. One may reasonably believe that the wonderfully life-like pictures from the Biograph have never been seen by these men and women who apparently want to take away a legitimate and instructive pleasure. And these are only a few of the pictures which might be mentioned that this gentleman, and many more like him, purpose interdicting by law.

A good woman, who tries to do her duty toward her fellows, said in the writer's hearing not long ago that she thought it a waste of time and money for children to go to motion picture shows. "They might," she said, "be doing something better."

Here is another phase of the question. They might be doing something better; but what? Take away this perfectly legitimate and instructive amusement and offer them, what? Perhaps a sewing class, or a Sunday school gathering, or something equally attractive and, perhaps one may venture the assertion, instructive. Take away something that is alive and teeming with human interest, and offer something that has the life of mummified customs and hoary efforts. One has no sympathy with this. It is contrary to the law of nature and the activity and brightness of childhood.

The writer of this has probably seen as many films as any other one individual in the United States during the past year or more, and he has yet to see one that is immoral. He has criticised sharply those which might convey false impressions, and has seen the old type of dime novel film disappear and in its place has seen the dramatically and artistically perfect films of the present day. Men like Mr. Fleming should keep in touch with modern progress and know what they are criticising before they undertake to legislate against something of such universal benefit as the motion picture.

The New Jersey Film Rental Company, of 214 Sixth avenue, New York City, announce that they have removed to larger quarters at 61 West Fourteenth street. The firm's name has been changed to the Paramount Film Company.

The Rehabilitation of the Lantern Slide.

Not very many months ago the lantern slide was the Ishmael of the moving picture theater. Every man's hand seemed to be against it. Ours was. So were those of many of the public. But, speaking generally, the lantern slide was not what it might have been. It badly illustrated a song imperfectly sung. The maudlinity of the subject has perhaps not wholly gone. The "Spring Poet of the Broadway" still stalks the land and we yearn to assassinate some of the singers that we occasionally hear. Also the writers of the music. Nevertheless, improvement is perceptibly occurring in these latter directions; and good singers of well written songs are becoming more numerous.

But the lantern slide business itself has perceptibly improved, while the other departments of the song slide parts of an entertainment are improving. In fact, speaking generally, there has been an enormous advance in the artistic and technical departments of the lantern slides shown in American moving picture theaters to-day. The people who make these slides are employing good photographers and the pictures are nicely colored, with artistic restraint, and with some regard for pleasing color effects. We think this fact should be mentioned, to the credit of the slide makers.

It has been said over and over again that the moving picture has killed the stationary photograph, otherwise the lantern slide, for entertainment purposes. Not so, however, as we constantly observe that whenever good and artistically colored slides are shown they command the applause of the public. Lantern slides in themselves today are probably not attractive enough to form the staple of an entertainment, in a moving picture house or in any other house of entertainment. But when they are good they are always well received. They act as a very excellent complement to the moving picture. And they may be regarded as a rest or a relief to it. Moreover, there are many subjects still only possible to treat by stationary photography which frequenters of moving picture theaters desire to see. Travelogues, illustrated song slides, short lectures on special subjects, all these still find their field in stationary photography. Therefore, the better the artistic and technical productions of these pictures, the better for the lantern slide business, and the better for the moving picture end, because of the agreeable complement or influence which the still picture has on the moving picture.

A number of people recently entered the song slide field who seemed to think that nothing was so easy as to take a negative, print a positive from it, color it, and send it around to the theaters. It is not easy to make a good photograph, wherein the surroundings are well chosen, the figures artistically posed and the exposure and development carefully attended to. The work demands long training, great skill and knowledge and considerable command of the technique of the work. All this was conspicuously absent from the efforts of many of those who butted into the song slide field. As to the coloring it is a charity not now to be referred to. But this element seems to have gone out of the market, or at any rate to be less conspicuous than it was only a year ago. The result is that the work of reputable makers, such as Scott & Van Altena, De Witt C. Wheeler, A. L. Simpson and others, while steadily improving along progressive lines, has come to the front, ousting the rubbish and the amateurish, and is earning increasing applause and appreciation from the moving picture public.

Many times these last few months we made it our special business to take a general survey of the song slide end of matters in the moving picture theaters, so that we are speaking as the result of observation. There is no doubt of it, in our mind, that well made, properly colored, lantern slides will always be popular features in a moving picture theater, and we desire to encourage the makers of them in their efforts to satisfy the public demand for highly artistic pictorial lantern slides.

The Inadmissible Snbject.

The newspapers the other day published a French cablegram telling of a use of the moving picture camera that we desire to write of. The love of the morbid is inherent in the French nature, as everybody knows. In Paris, the morgue, where you may inspect the bodies of suicides, is a common thing, and one of the attractions to tourists. Even in their judicial trials, as one read of in the case of Mme. Steinheil, the alleged murderess of President Faure, the love of the morbid is carried down to the minutest detail of fact and conjecture.

It was apparently the same national trait which recently dictated the use of the moving picture camera in the execution of a criminal. Films were made both immediately before and immediately after the poor wretch had been killed. And they were talked of for public exhibition! Fortunately, humanity stepped in and the films were stopped and another slur kept off the fair reputation of motion picture photography.

The more strongly the public authorities condemn the misapplication of the moving picture camera, the higher in public esteem will the moving picture become. We remember how, some years ago on the other side of the Atlantic, there was a great outcry against an English amateur photographer holding military rank who photographed an execution in, we believe, Burmah, and then attempted to publish or exhibit the photograph. The attention of the British Parliament was called to the matter, there was an outcry, the officer was censured and the photographs were suppressed.

This is the sort of feeling we should like to see animating all public bodies, both in the United States and abroad, with regard to the use and the abuse of the moving picture camera. In this matter the public have a right to be protected; they have a right to be protected from the inadmissible in the shape of the brutal, the degrading, the gruesome, the repulsive or the immoral. And certainly, an execution shown on the screen is brutalizing and revolting. Here and there, in other directions, we notice tendencies towards the brutalization of the moving picture which we shall consider it our duty to denounce.

NOTES OF THE TRADE.

Dr. Berthold A. Baer, manager of the Lubin interests for twelve years, has tendered his resignation. Dr. Baer leaves with the most cordial relations existing between Mr. Lubin and himself to embark in business on his own account. The many friends he has made in his former capacity will wish him all success in his new sphere.

The Yerkes Manufacturing Company, Inc., beg to announce their removal to the Greenwald Building, northwest corner Eighty-seventh street and Third avenue, New York City, where the manufacture of high-grade drums and sound effects for moving pictures will be continued. H. A. Yerkes, president; P. Herfort, treasurer; C. M. Steinert, secretary.

That nothing succeeds like success, is borne out by the fact that Charles H. Streimer, who was formerly with the Empire Film Company, of New York City, has, during his short connection with the Paramount Film Company, which was formerly the New Jersey Film Rental Company, increased its business 50 per cent. The proprietors of the Paramount Film Company are F. Pennino, F. Graf and I. Goetz. They are buying from twelve to fifteen prints of the latest productions of the Independents, both of American and foreign manufacture.

THE FUTURE OF THE SILENT DRAMA.

Pilar-Morin on Her Work.—The Renowned French Actress Discusses the Future of the Moving Picture.

MME. PILAR-MORIN.

Mme. Pilar-Morin has come at the psychological moment, or, it may also be put, she is a happy accident—very gifted, very optimistic and very earnest. Curiosity as to the personalities of leading artists connected with the opera and the stage is becoming duplicated in the moving picture field, where, in the last few months, the renowned and the favorite performer have become familiar to the 7,000,000 public of the United States. The most renowned of them all, who easily takes pride of place in virtue of her record and her transcendental ability, is Mme. Pilar-Morin, who is mostly called French, but told us that she was Spanish, and who this week is rendering her Japanese monologue at the opening of the Japanese Gardens in New York's newest and most gorgeous restaurant, the Cafe de l'Opera, on Broadway.

We said that Mme. Pilar-Morin was an accident, and a happy accident. We mean by this that she entered the moving picture field just at that moment when the influence of her art was needed to strengthen the performing end of moving picture work and to stimulate the manufacturers to do justice to the enormous possibilities of the moving picture, the silent play, the silent drama, or motography, whichever name the reader thinks best to employ. She has come into the game, then, at the right moment. It is said of many things in life, that the hour brings the man. Well, here the hour brought the woman, and we do not think that there is any other woman in the world more suited by training, talent and temperament to the opportunity of uplifting the moving picture by her art.

Mme. Pilar-Morin, herself, is no accident. She is a growth, a development, and now the finished product of long and rigorous training in her peculiar and her unique art, namely, the silent drama. The phrase, "silent drama," is her own invention; it expresses her own meaning; it expresses her own work, which may, in some sense, be termed a play without words. It is the Chinese, we think, who have a proverb that "speech was given us to conceal our thoughts." Mme. Pilar-Morin conceals her speech, but thinks aloud; that is to say, she feels everything instead of saying it; she expresses everything she feels by gesture instead of speech. This, of course, is true acting. Her career commenced in girlhood at the Paris Conservatoire, the nursery of most of the renowned French actors and actresses. Thereafter, from ordinary stage work, she naturally found her forte in the silent drama, or, as it is commonly called, the silent play. She has worked not only in the United States, but in France, England, Africa and Japan, and has a special disposition for Japanese characters, which will be shown in the Edison film to be released on February 1, entitled, "The Japanese Peach-Boy," in which Mme. Pilar-Morin impersonates two characters.

Chiefest renown, however, attaches to this gifted artist in virtue of the fact that she was the exponent of the chief character of "L'Enfant Prodigue," a silent play with a world-wide reputation, which, we believe, is shortly to be revived in New York City with Pilar-Morin in her old part. Moreover, she is an exponent in the lecture theater of the silent drama. Now, the silent drama converted into everyday use, according to our fair informant, is nothing more nor less than personal acting or deportment, or, as we like for convenience sake to put it, the expression of one's personality in one's actions. Mme. Pilar-Morin would have us talk less and think more. It is commonly said that acts speak louder than words. She, if we understand her aright, would substitute, as far as possible, acts for words. And, in making this point in the interview that she was kind enough to give us, she illustrated her meaning by acting many little passages for us and throwing such an amount of meaning and thought into her little gestures that she was quite successful in speaking without words. This brings us, of course, to the underlying reason of the penchant which this gifted artist has for the moving picture. Being the greatest exponent in the world, on the ordinary stage, of the silent drama or wordless play, what was more natural than Mme. Pilar-Morin should see an opportunity for practising her peculiar art on the moving picture stage? There were many reasons why she adopted this plan and has contracted herself to the Edison Company for two years. Not the least of these reasons is that, being an artist, she is very naturally desirous that her work should be preserved for the benefit of posterity. She points out with some force that the phonograph is doing much to preserve for posterity, records of the vocal excellencies of Caruso and other great singers, but that hitherto there was no means of perpetuating the record of the best work of the actor and actress. But here the moving picture steps in; the photographic record can be made of the finest histrionic work for the benefit and inspection of future generations. This is peculiarly applicable to the work of those French actors and actresses who are doing picture work, and playing in Paris at this present time. We have seen, within the last year, many pictures made in Paris studios in which the most renowned actors and actresses of the Comedie Francaise have appeared. And it is to us something of a regret that such pictures, by the exigencies of business, are not more frequently shown in a moving picture theater, or continuously shown so that the public can be better acquainted with them. For example, we could see the Pathe "La Tosca" once more, nay, many more times. Just as we could see the Edison "Comedy and Tragedy" again, and we hope to do so. Such work as this could be seen again and again, and it is work of this kind that Mme. Pilar-Morin is engaged in doing in the Edison studio.

Regarding Mme. Pilar-Morin as a pioneer in this branch of work, we were naturally anxious to learn from her whether it would be possible for her to cast a moving picture film with silent dramatists of her own training or method of work —wordless players, in fact. She expressed her readiness and willingness to do so. It is one thing for your modern film manufacturer to engage the services of actors and actresses from the ordinary theaters for their pictures, but, paradoxical as it may seem, there are very few actors and actresses who act. To quote a line from a song by Louie Freear, of London, "They just walk on." Exactly. They just walk on and they mostly do what they are told by an energetic producer, but rarely do they think or act; that is to say, rarely do they allow their acts on the stage to be the manifestations of the thoughts suggested by their work. In other words, they do not think and feel, and therefore they do not convey their emotions to the audience. If they really thought and felt, as they are supposed to be thinking and feeling, when the photograph is being taken, then our pictures would be full of dramatic action, conviction—the act would "get over."

* * *

After all, perhaps, the actor and actress, like the poet, are born, not made. The Latin race are, as we know, natural actors and actresses; that is to say, they are separated widely in respect of temperament from other races, and that accounts for a lot. We are not so optimistic as to suppose that the moving picture stage will be filled with a bevy of Pilar-Morins, now that this lady has set the example, but her influence is bound to be widespread and far-reaching. She, we think, would be instrumental in directing the film makers of England and America to engage only the best talent for the work, and, moreover, their influence would be exerted on the public, who are rapidly becoming very critical of moving picture films. The "stick" must go in the competition of quality which we have many times pointed out is a feature of the moving picture situation to-day. Over and over again we have voiced the general requirements for good pictures, well acted. So well acted that it does not need a professional critic to appreciate the work, but that the public can appreciate and can understand the action—the mental action that is going on in the picture. That, in short, your moving picture film shall be a complete wordless play. It is for these reasons that we have been warm admirers of the work of Mme. Pilar-Morin, and that we have endeavored in the personal interview with her to come to some understanding of the very beautiful art of which she is mistress. We look forward, then, with great interest to the Edison release of February 1, "The Japanese Peach-Boy," in which the moving picture public of the world will have a second opportunity of seeing this great artist in another manifestation of her gifts.

Incidentally we learn from Mme. Pilar-Morin that the wordless play, or the silent drama, as she herself prefers to call it, is likely to have a fresh vogue in the United States, a fact which we think will react favorably on the moving picture, inasmuch as the public will be led to accept the same quality of acting in the film that they will get on the ordinary stage. Then, again, the time is probably not far distant when the moving picture film will always become accompanied by suitable music. At present this is rarely the case. One means of hastening this desirable state of things would be the presentation to the American public of the ballet in the form which it is known in London, Paris and other great European cities. Here you occasionally get such a subject as "Carmen" expressed throughout by action and accompanied by music. Ballets of this kind run sometimes forty-five or fifty minutes. It is easy to conceive that a full reel running twenty minutes and accompanied by suitable music—let us, if you like, take the subject of "Carmen" itself—would be very attractive to moving picture audiences. There is, indeed, a great deal of work to be done in this direction—in the direction of doing the moving picture the utmost possible justice in its presentation to the public. At the risk of repeating ourselves possibly too often, there is no reason why the picture on the screen should not comply with the highest canons of art in the way of scenarios, accessories, photography and acting. And if to these we add the important incident of music, then you have the perfect voiceless substitute for the ordinary drama or opera. And in hastening this consummation, we feel in conclusion that the fine artistic work that Mme. Pilar-Morin is contributing to the moving picture stage to-day will have an important influence.

OBSERVATIONS BY WIDE-AWAKE EXHIBITORS.

The Editors Invite Contributions for this page from Exhibitors who can Express an Idea that will be Beneficial to the Business.

ABOUT THE N. I. FILM.

Time and again has the writer pointed out the evil results of "pulling down" the film roll. It is this, and practically this alone, which produces what are called rainmarks. Also I have repeatedly said that reels were too small. The standard reel is ten inches and the magazines are made to accommodate that size, nor would they take an eleven-inch reel, notwithstanding the fact that eleven inches is the proper reel for one thousand feet of old stock film which ordinarily ran 5-1000 to 5½-1000 of an inch in thickness. I, of course, readily grant that 1,000 feet of that stock would not quite fill such a reel, but, as a matter of fact, a reel should not be filled full. Since the introduction of N. I. film, however, stock has been thickened, some having been put out by the manufacturers which is as thick as 7-1000 of an inch. Properly treated with glycerine, the writer is unable to discern any difference in the toughness of N. I. and inflammable stock, but nevertheless he believes that that stock will, in its final form, be somewhat thicker than was the old film. As the matter is now, some of the new 1,000-foot films are overrunning the ten-inch reels by almost an inch with ordinary rewinding. This is very, very bad from any and every point of view. Not only is it difficult to get such a reel into the magazine, but it is exceedingly hard to handle it without the surplus film slipping off entirely, in which case it falls upon the floor in the dust and dirt, endangering the future salvation of the operator by causing him to shatter the third commandment into very small pieces. More than this, it has a decided tendency to induce very heavy "pulling down," thus permanently and excessively injuring the film, especially if it be new and the emulsion comparatively soft, by scratching—rainmarks. Of course it must be admitted that a change to eleven-inch reels now involves a distinct hardship, since it would require not only new reels but new magazines as well. Still, for all this, the change should be made, and if stock is to be made permanently thicker the change is absolutely imperative. Film exchanges should give this matter the serious consideration its importance merits, since it is they, more than anyone else, who are the sufferers. To the writer it is indeed a strange and incomprehensible thing that exchange men do not seem to know or realize the evil effects of pulling down.

* * *

We all know the aggravation caused by ladies who persistently refuse to remove their headgear, even though it be a cross between a washtub and an aeroplane in size and shape. What seems a likely suggestion was voiced to the writer recently: Reserve one side of the house for the men, then let the ladies fight it out among themselves. Ladies minus hats might be allowed on the men's side, but only without the hat.

* * *

In connection with the necessity for larger reels, the question has been asked if the coming exclusive use of N. I. film would not do away with the necessity for a magazine, thus eliminating the expense of changing them as well as the reel. In answer to this, I would say, No! The reels should be changed to eleven inches at once, while the exclusive use of N. I. stock is not yet. More than this, a magazine is a valuable thing, though not a really absolutely necessary one, even with N. I. stock, since it protects the film from much dust and dirt, which is always injurious, particularly while the film is new and the emulsion comparatively soft. More than this, it will take considerable time to get the authorities to consent to the elimination of magazines. The official mind is slow to move, particularly when it has things as it wants them and a proposed change merely operates to accommodate the other fellow. Mark what I tell you, N. I. stock will have to be in exclusive use for a considerable while before Mr. Official will consider the matter of leaving off the magazine at all. Meanwhile, the clinging to ten-inch reels will ruin more film than every reel and magazine ever made is worth, several times over. F. H. RICHARDSON.

* * *

Circleville, Ohio.—Hart Bros., formerly proprietors of the Wonderland Motion Picture Parlors at Marion, Ohio, and now conducting the Exhibit at Circleville, Ohio, will open a new picture house in Toledo, Ohio, on Summit street, to be known as the Hart Theater. The Hart Bros. will run both this and the Circleville house with the same high-class service they have given in the Exhibit.

St. Paul, Minn.—The Palace is a new theater of attractive construction, all on up-to-date lines except the operating booth. It is a great mistake for exhibitors to overlook the importance of having the booth as roomy and well-arranged as possible, for on it depends largely the quality of the show. The Palace is getting its share of business and all the other shows in town are doing well.

VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA ENTERTAIN THEIR EMPLOYEES.

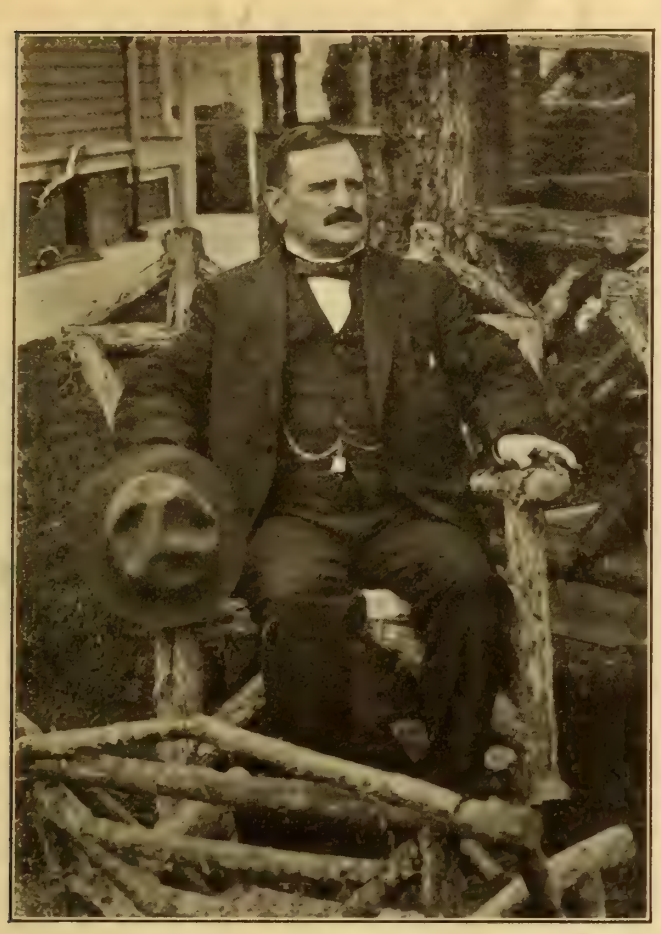
Memorable Display of Vitagraph Hospitality and Talent at the Flatbush Studios on Saturday Evening, January 8th, 1910.

One of the most enjoyable social events we ever attended, and unique in the history of the motion picture business in this country, was the entertainment and banquet tendered to its employees by The Vitagraph Company of America at its studios on Saturday evening, January 8. All the arrangements, to which reference was made in the last issue of the Moving Picture World, were carried out to the letter and with flattering success. The gathering included everyone in all the departments of the studios and factory in Brooklyn and in the New York office. It was the first time that the entire local staff of the company assembled to get an acquaintance with each other. The proprietors of the big industry mingled and chatted with their employees and were constantly on the alert to see that nothing that would promote the pleasure of the evening was left undone. Not a single incident occurred to mar the success and pleasure of the event.

The main part of the Vitagraph Company's plant in Brooklyn consists of four immense studios, the upper parts of which are so constructed that they can be operated individually or thrown into one great assembly hall. They were thus converted for this event with the exception of one of them, which was used as the banquet hall and later in the night transformed into a ballroom. The entire establishment was beautifully decorated with the national colors. The abundance and taste with which the walls and ceilings were draped with Old Glory had an inspiring effect which developed into enthusiastic demonstration whenever the orchestra played patriotic tunes. While the banquet was in progress the orchestra struck up the national anthem. It brought the assemblage to its feet in an instant and the singing that followed must have made the negative of "Washington Under the American Flag" dance with glee in the vaults below. At one end of the banquet hall a long table extended over its entire width and at this table were seated the officers of the company and the heads of the departments, including the stage directors who supervise the productions before the cameras. The remainder of the floor space was taken up by round, elaborately decorated tables accommodating four couples Fully 200 guests partook of the feast, which was prepared and served by a leading Brooklyn caterer.

Upon the final sipping of the coffee Mr. William T. Rock, president of tht Vitagraph Company, arose from his seat at the center of the main table and gave voice to the pleasure it gave him to see so many real, live, happy Vitagraph faces in one gathing. He begged off from making a long address, stating that the significance of the event was too much for him; that he was overcome and would leave the speaking to his partners, after expressing the wish that he would be permitted to be present on many occasions of the same kind. Mr. Albert E. Smith, the treasurer of the company, followed with a cordial greeting to the employees, mingled with witty references to every-day life in the various branches of the Vitagraph business, after which Mr. J. Stuart Blackton, secretary of the Vitagraph Company, maintained his reputation as a most happy after-dinner speaker. Owing to the length of the programme for the evening, the addresses were made as brief as possible. When Mr. Blackton resumed his seat toasts followtd in quick succession to "Rock, Blackton and Smith," and "Our Paris, London and Chicago managers and employees." The rousing applause and cheers given the officers sufficiently demonstrated that the relation of employer and employee, as it exists in the Vitagraph Company, should serve as a valuable asset to concerns who have not been fortunate enough to construct a similar policy. Once Mr. Blackton became serious in his remarks and made a slash at people who have referred to the licensed manufacturers as a trust. He declared that these manufacturers represented the people who had inaugurated and built up the motion picture business in the United States and they were entitled to take any reasonable steps that might serve to protect what they had acquired by hard, persistent work and enormous investments. "The only 'trust' about the matter," he said, "is their trust in the future of the motion picture business if properly conducted and protected. These so-called 'trust methods' are holding the business on a fair remunerative basis, and if they were abolished it would be a most unfortunate thing for all concerned. Instead of arranging a feast gathering as that before him, the Vitagraph and the other companies would be cutting down their labor roll and with a half dozen employees concentrate their plants in a space that would quite easily fit in one corner of the studio."

PARTIAL VIEW OF THE BANQUET ROOM—AFTERWARDS USED FOR DANCING.



WILLIAM T. ROCK,
President of the Vitagraph Company of America.

ALBERT E. SMITH,
Treasurer of the Vitagraph Company of America.

Following Mr. Blackton's address was another very pleasing event of the evening. It was the presentation of a valuable gold watch to Mr. James B. French, the superintendent of the Vitagraph factory, Mr. Blackton making the presentation on behalf of the employees. The rousing cheers which followed when Mr. French arose to accept the token of good will so unnerved the recipient that he entirely forgot the neat speech he said he had prepared. But in spite of a big lump which kept arising in his throat he managed to make a graceful acknowledgment and say how much he appreciated the testimonial. It showed, he said, that the employees of the Vitagraph Company were not afraid of being called to account for any delinquencies when they presented their superintendent with a stop watch, and he hoped it would always record their faithful service.

Mr. Brooks, one of the Vitagraph's directors of productions, presented another testimonial to the members of the firm on behalf of the employees. It was a large engrossed set of resolutions, beautifully illuminated, expressing to the Vitagraph Company of America the sincere appreciation of its employees for uniform kindness and courtesies received. The resolutions were in an attractive frame 5 x 3 feet in size. In acknowledging this presentation Mr. Blackton stated that a similar testimonial received by the company on a previous occasion is considered by it the most valuable asset in the office, and the one just received would be equally prized.

At this point the guests adjourned to the studio that was reserved for the vaudeville entertainment, where they joined 300 or more guests who had been invited to participate in the hospitalities following the banquet. It was midnight when the entertainment closed. There were twelve numbers on the program, and they were good ones. Following the overture came "Ancient History," which was a reproduction of the two first films made by the Vitagraph Company, dating back twelve years. The last number was a reproduction of the last two subjtcts made by the company up to the date of the entertainment. They were two rattling good comedies that have not been christened yet, being run without titles.

The following is the complete program: In one of the numbers the Vitagraph stock company portrayed the tribulations of a moving picture studio. Messrs. Albert E. Smith and J. Stuart Blackton supplied two of the numbers, the former showing how he used to mystify audiences with sleight-of-hand work, and in one of his tricks he used the silk flag used in making the first Vitagraph picture. Mr. Blackton gave one of the monologues and exhibitions of caricature that he, as Mr. Smith's partner several years ago, used to give to the public. He related an anecdote that will bear repeating here.

THE MAN AND HIS HOBBY.
(From a photograph by Mrs. Blackton.)

J. STUART BLACKTON,
Secretary of the Vitagraph Company of America.

They had a story that always brought down the house. It was so good that they tossed a coin to decide which of them should tell it. One night Smith left the theater for a few minues and Blackton went on with his turn. He was followed by Smith, who told the much-valued story and was shocked when it failed to provoke even a smile. When he returned to the wings he said to Blackton: "Say, Jim, that story was a regular frost to-night. I can't understand it." "Well," replied his partner, "you did not get back in time to toss up for it so I gave them the yarn."

STUDIO WAS CONVERTED INTO A THEATER WHERE THREE HUNDRED EMPLOYEES AND THEIR FRIENDS ENJOYED A PROGRAM BY TALENTED VITAGRAPH ACTORS.

ON THE ROAD—AMONG THE EXCHANGES AND EXHIBITORS.

Philadelphia.—Market street, still heaped with the snow of the blizzard, appeared very gloomy with men busy removing the furniture from the Unique and from the two Dreamlands of Eighth and Market and Ninth and Market, as if it was a general eviction of moving picture theaters. At the Victoria they must have hope of capturing some of the trade of the three closed places, as they have removed the dry goods show case from the front of their premises and stopped the distribution of skirts to the ladies.

Heard in an Independent exchange: "Mr. Jones, I give you 'A Stolen Rose' and 'Reunited at the Gallows.'" "Cut it off; I do not want such a show." "Why? They are very good pictures." "I do not care if they are better than Biograph, but I do not want to flash such names in front of my place. The words 'stolen' and 'gallows' are too suggestive of crime."

Let this be a warning to our manufacturers, as often when they have a weak story, they put a sensational title to it, to push the sales.

Mr. Geo. Graff, of the Eagle Film Exchange, has started a plant to make titles. Mr. Geo. Bradenburgh has branched out for himself as an importer of films and offers a large collection of some of the best foreign productions. Mr. Bradenburgh will soon announce a change of address, as his present quarters, 233 North Eighth street, are entirely too small to give prompt attention to the orders.

Baltimore.—The mirror screen at the Blue Mouse is still the talk, notwithstanding the objections of some persons, who claim to have somtthing better. The new screen must either increase the beauty of a picture or the Lux manufacturers must have greatly improved their work, as the picture was a revelation.

While Mr. A. Steen has started an exchange for himself, Mr. O. Prince has assumed the management of the Baltimore branch of the Eagle Film Exchange, and I wish them both the best success.

The Independents are well represented in Baltimore with a number of exchanges, making a great saving of time in the handling of films, especially when the railroads are tied up, as they have been from the effects of the blizzard.

Pittsburgh.—If the independents are well represented in Baltimore, they are badly beaten in Pittsburgh by the licensed ones. Although the American Film Exchange has new quarters, the place appears to me as a "go-as-you-please," with the head of the concern always out of town and an assistant manager and cashier not willing to answer business questions. The Liberty and J. Frank Hatch are the two other independent film exchanges. The licensed manufacturers are well represented by the Pittsburgh Calcium Light and Film Company, The Pennsylvania Film Company, The Duquesne Amusement Company and the Columbia Film Exchange. The sensation was the first release of the Actophone Company, "A Wife's Sacrifice," and many persons braved a blinding snow to see this new release, a new star in the crown of the Independents.

Columbia, Pa.—In a previous letter I said that the Opera House was showing five reels and some vaudeville acts. I had made two attempts to see the manager, but as he was too busy to be interviewed, I wrote my lttter according o the signs in front of the place, announcing five reels and some vaudeville. The manager wishes me to state that five reels and vaudeville acts are shown on Saturdays and holidays for five and ten cents, but that on other days he shows only three reels for five cents and does not charge for the vaudeville.

Cincinnati.—I found the exchanges more or less in bad humor, as the municipal authorities have forced them to abandon their respective quarters, to locate themselves in undesirable old buildings. The exchanges are not spiteful, and although much worried with their own installations, they are still preparing the banquet they will tender to the exhibitors on January 17.

The Hippodrome is changing hands and will be entirely remodeled, as the plans are to abandon the Penny Arcade and have the moving picture theater on the ground floor.

As a new theater is going to be opened on West Fifth street, the old Dreamland will close.

The Colonial is a very fine house, very wide, offering a good view from every seat.

The Pastime is a small, narrow house, but the front is of a special design, very neat in appearance, illuminated with much taste.

I was surprised to find an old friend, Geo. Davis, formerly of the Automatic Vaudeville of Market street, Philadelphia, acting as the manager of the Dreamland.

The prevailing manufacturing fever has struck Cincinnati. A photographer found that his signs of 30 ping pongs or of 3 postals for 25 cents were not noticed by the crowds rushing to the "Ohio," a moving picture theater located in the same building, and as he wondered if young men had more pleasure to take their sweethearts to a show than to present them with a set of ping pongs, he took advice from his next-door neighbor, a film renter. We know that the renters are generally dissatisfied and claim that the manufacturers are the only ones making any money. It was decided that the photographer would turn the camera and the renter would raise the capital. They were going to produce wonders, they engaged experienced help from New York. A few feet of negative was the result, and the help had to return home the best they could. These manufacturers of no experience knew that the Independents wanted some American pictures, so, to win the market, they decided to call their company The United States Film Company, hoping that the name would do more than the quality. The only thing they did, was to get some stationery printed in red and blue on white paper to represent the national colors and ornamented with the American flag. When I called on the photographer, he had nothing to say on moving pictures or on his defunct company, but was very busy trying to repair his electric lights. I hope that he will prove to be a better electrician than a moving picture manufacturer.

This little story should warn many persons who are talking of entering the moving picture field that the turning of the crank of a camera is a rather expensive amusement.

Indianapolis.—I take my hat off to Indianapolis, the home of the sensible exhibitor.

An excellent system prevails here; the great majority of the show places, especially the licensed houses, are showing the same pictures for three consecutive days, and they all agree that it pays to do so, as when they have good pictures the receipts are better on the second day and still better on the third day. I believe it, as I often expressed myself against the idea of changing every day. Some pictures are even shown for one and two weeks, and I am told that an exhibitor has already made arrangements to show a coming film for two consecutive weeks. The system is so perfect that the same pictures are not shown in the same locality.

This system is partly due to the good harmony existing among the exhibitors and the greatest credit is due to The Lieber Company, the only licensed exchange located in Indianapolis. The Lieber Company, having no competition in the place, could prepare the system, submit same to the exhibitors, and urge them to form an association and adopt the system. Each week the exhibitors draw lots for the pictures; first week exhibitor A draws first, B second, C third, etc; the second week B draws first, C second, while A is the last one; the third week C draws first, etc.; and they are all satisfied. Why should they not be satisfied, as according to the general statement the business is very good, exceedingly good considering the snow storms and bad weather. I never saw such a happy lot of exhibitors, a smile on each face, a cordial reception from every one, no long, dreary complaints against their neighbors, none of the grouchy faces so familiar in the East.

A good front inspires confidence, and I believe that Mr. E. H. Brunt, the manager of The Lieber Company, was able to put in effect his system because the credit, reputation and elegant store and building of his company inspire much confidence.

I advocated in the past that it would be a good thing if the exchanges were more centralized and each one given a district. The work of The Lieber Company proves that I was right. The moment that each exchange would have a territory, there would be no reasons for the exchanges to employ solicitors for the sole purpose of taking away the patrons of another exchange, no reasons for cuts in the service, no reasons for special inducements and the exchanges relieved of all this trouble could then take better care of their patrons.

It remains to be seen how long this good system will work in Indianapolis. I hope the Motion Picture Patents Company will co-operate along these lines. They ask $2 a week on tht ground of protection; they promise to the licensed houses to not license other places in their immediate neighborhood, yet this protection is violated every day.

The Independents are also well taken care of by Mr. Swain of the Indianapolis Calcium Light Film Exchange. Mr. Swain has a long experience and will do all in his power to help the independent cause.

Some of our new independent manufacturers are harder on the exchanges than the Patents Company. Mr. Swain showed me a letter from a new manufacturer who has released only one picture, asking the exchanges to return the same amount of feet of film within thirty days.

I am perhaps a hard man to please, but it seems that I must always find a flaw somewhere. My complaint is that the ushers and ticket collectors, with old hat and clothes not of the best, do not harmonize with the general neat appearance of the theaters, and this struck me more forcibly as the wide, clean streets and fine buildings of Indianapolis would rather show a refined class of spectators. I found only two places with uniformed employees, the Orpheum and the Illinois.

Mr. Fred Criswell, of the Vaudette Theater, informed me that he will open, in a few days, a new house on Market street.

The Orpheum has ordered a mirror screen and hopes to have it in place in a few days. As the same party controls the Casino, the Bijou and the Mystic, we can expect a number of mirror screens in Indianapolis.

The proprietor of the Lyric is a progressive man and had something new for his song slides which attracted much attention. He hopes to have something new to show me at my next visit.

Mr. B. N. Barton, of the Crystal Theater, intends to establish a circuit of Crystal houses; the next one to open will be in Columbus on January 17.

The sensation of the place was the opening of the new Illinois Theater, a neat house with a tasteful front. The manager has arranged a series of curtain portieres in the rear of the seats. These curtains do not only give a very cozy appearance to the place, but are for the audience a protection against the cold air from the street. The very large attendance is a guarantee of success for the Illinois.

J. M. B.

ABOLISHES CELLULOID MOVING PICTURE FILMS IN NEWARK, N. J.

Taking what he believed to be the first action of the kind in this country, C. Albert Gasser, Superintendent of the Department of Combustibles and Fire Risks, has sent to each of the eighty moving picture shows in Newark, a notice that after January 11 they will not be allowed to use ordinary celluloid films, but must utilize those of the so-called non-inflammable variety. This action was taken to reduce the alleged danger from fire in this class of entertainment places.

In commenting on his order, Mr. Gasser said that he had for the past six months been observing carefully the films that have come into this city. He found that, while at first there were few of the non-inflammable films, there are now many of the better class of places where no other kind is used. All new films are of this kind, he added, and he concluded it would work no hardship on owners to enforce the order.

"It is my aim to obviate the danger from fire in these places as much as possible," Mr. Gasser declared. "I have not permitted the establishment of a film exchange here, because of a recent fire in such a place in Pittsburg, where six people were killed. The fumes from burning celluloid often explode with terrible force. The non-inflammable variety does not burn, but merely crumbles away and turns to an ash when in contact with fire."

"LOST, STOLEN OR STRAYED."

To the Editor:

Sir—Will you permit one who is interested in moving pictures to ask whether there is at present a house in New York City between Fourteenth and Forty-second streets which shows the first run of pictures without vaudeville. I make a practice of trying to see new pictures once a week, and formerly went regularly to a prominent house on Fourteenth street. Recently they have introduced vaudeville, and last week, in visiting the place, I stayed an hour and three-quarters and saw just two pictures—the balance vaudeville, illustrated songs and travelogues.

This week I tried a new and very handsome place at Broadway and Thirty-first street with a similar result—in an hour and a half there were shown two short pictures and part of one more.

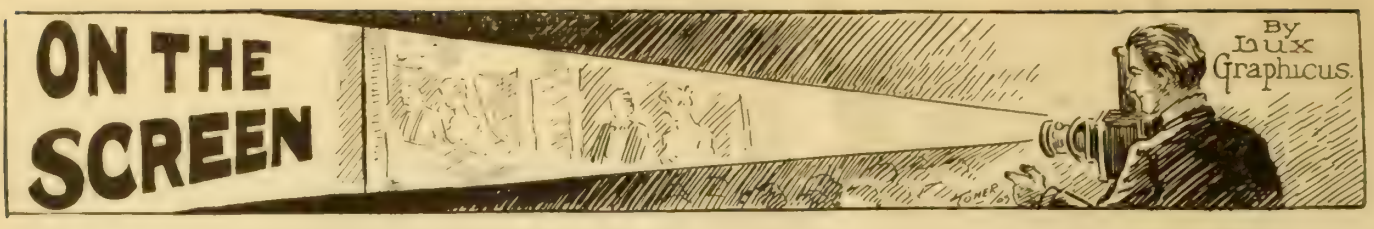
Is the great army of moving picture lovers in New York City at present forced to sit through an evening of more or less tiresome vaudeville in order to see a scattering picture—or are there places which still show pictures only and of which I am ignorant? Any information you can give me will be gratefully appreciated. A SEARCHER.

["Theatrical and vaudeville managers are afraid of the moving picture!" was a remark made to us this week by a prominent member of the dramatic profession. When the vaudeville and theater magnates have grown intelligent enough to realize that the public really wants pictures and does not want vaudeville, then the Picture Palace will come into its own. But there is not yet sufficient managerial acument on Broadway and Forty-second street.

If the theater owners and managers do not rise to the occasion and furnish New York City with what it wants—an exclusive picture house with only high-class music—then it will be up to the film makers to establish such a theater and "show them," the way.—Eds. M. P. W.]

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

The Gem Theater, 714-16 East Baltimore street, the first independent theater in Baltimore, is now running licensed film, and on January 1 last discontinued vaudeville and substituted in its place three reels of first-class pictures with trap drum and effects and the latest illustrated songs. Mr. John H. Heinz is now proprietor, having purchased from W. G. Spurrier, the present owner of the Savoy Seattle. The manager writes that he "got the idea to discontinue vaudeville from the writings in the Moving Picture World about vaudeville not belonging in a picture house."



The readers of this page know by this that I have many pet aversions, which I hate with all the hatred of my heart and soul. Among these is the "set interview." By the "set" interview I mean the celebrity or notoriety, the personality or any other entity who, for his sins either of omission or commission, has hurtled across the public vision, and arouses demands for knowledge of the innermost characteristics of the culprit.

* * *

In the "set" interview such as we find in the Sunday editions of the daily newspapers, the photographer and the journalist wait upon you at your house. The photographer photographs you and everything that is yours—your house, your maidservant, your ox, your ass, and the whole bag of tricks—and then the interviewer interviews you; that is to say, he makes you make a pretty speech to the public. It is mostly fake. You could not make the speech or talk the talk. Never mind; you have provided your interviewer with a certain amount of copy for his space, and the public, the dear old public, is gulled once more. Which is apparently what the public exists for. I have been interviewed myself—likewise my photograph has been put in papers. But I always put my foot down on the fake interviewer and I am not particularly keen on having my photograph in the papers. Not being good-looking, or vain, or endowed with any other of the minor vices by which the average person achieves the privilege of notoriety or publicity. The interview, as a rule, is faked in this country nearly as much as it is across the Atlantic, but not quite in the solemn formal manner. In Europe they are more categorical. Here they draw upon their imagination. I had not been in New York a week before an interview with me was published in a Chicago paper—a trade paper, by the way. The gentleman who did it was a friend of mine and he made me say and think things which were all very nice, but I never said or thought them. This is a great country!

* * *

As for myself, I always prefer the personal impression of a man or woman to be interviewed. I care very little for their surroundings; their business statistics; their cut-and-dried commercial formulæ, which can be dictated to a stenographer and handed out to your obedient newspaper man for the purpose of filling his space. In other words, I detest the stock interview where the interviewed mostly writes what the interviewer is supposed to say. Surely in these days educated people are no longer edified by these things!

* * *

With these unconventional views in my mind, I determined, recently, to interview in my own way a very much interviewed man in the moving picture field. I allude to Carl Laemmle. Before Mr. Laemmle went to England he was interviewed, he was interviewed when he got there, he was interviewed when he got back to New York, he was interviewed when he got back to Chicago. I read all this stuff, and as all through the piece I admire and appreciate the position which Mr. Laemmle has taken in the moving picture game to-day, I wondered to myself, many a time and oft, where, in all the mass of words, the real Carl Laemmle lay. For I long ago came to the conclusion that Mr. Laemmle is not only a ponderable factor in the moving picture situation of the United States and the world, but is destined to be even a greater factor. So I determined to interview the president of the "Imp" Company in my own way, which was done this week in a long and discursive talk, on his recent visit to New York.

* * *

There is no doubt in my mind that Mr. Laemmle will succeed in the object which he has in view, which is to build up one of the largest moving picture manufacturing and distributing businesses in the world. I think he is the man to do it. He has mastered one great secret in the success of all captains of industry. He gathers loyal people about him and treats them well. Then, again, he has breadth of view, breadth of outlook—in short, breadth of mind. He can see the enormous possibilities of the moving picture in all its aspects, the artistic as well as the commercial. Not every maker of moving pictures does this. With many of them the picture is a mere pawn in the game of business, irrespective of its innate qualities. The artistic qualities of "Imp" films, their continual and their progressive improvement towards super-excellence, is a cardinal point in Mr. Laemmle's outlook.

* * *

I was much surprised at what I will call Carl's international grasp of the commercial situation. In vast tracts of the earth the moving picture is not yet publicly shown. Conversing the other day with a friend from Turkey, he told me that they were practically unknown in that great empire. In Asia, generally, the picture is but little known, and just consider what an enormous field this offers for expansion. There were some such facts as these in Mr. Laemmle's mind during the conversation we were having, in which he probably did not suspect that he was being interviewed, according to my formula.

* * *

The "Imp" film, then, of which during its short presence on this market its chief sponsor has reason to be proud, will, I am convinced, obtain a worldwide vogue. The man at the head of the company fully realizes the magnitude of the field and the fundamental conditions of success, namely, a perfected organization of loyal helpers and an efficient system of distribution. These two factors are prime essentials to success in any business. They have made for success in other industries; they are making for success in the moving picture field to-day. It is my view that wherever those factors are found in the creed of a business man they should be recognized and encouraged. The moving picture business throughout the world is, as I have pointed out before in this column, a very new business indeed. It is one which calls for just the businesslike qualities which Carl Laemmle possesses and which I take the opportunity of applauding.

* * *

I lived for so long in an atmosphere of conservatism and prejudice that to me the American idea of commercial expansion is a refreshing delight and something of a revelation. There is no doubt in my mind that the American idea of commercial expansion, with the breadth of outlook which it takes, is a factor in the world's commerce to-day. So that, listening as I did to Mr. Laemmle's ideas, and the possibilities of the American film taking a position in the markets of the world, was something in the nature of an intellectual treat. Narrowness of outlook, conservatism, prejudice, are things which cannot be justly alleged against the typical American business man of to-day. It is, therefore, in his positive grasp of the possibilities which lie before the American film in general and the "Imp" film in particular, which indicates Mr. Laemmle as a factor in the film situation to-day. The lesson of which, dear readers, I project onto the screen this week, so that you can all profit by it. Progress, progress, progress, appear to be the Laemmle watchwords, as interpreted by me in this unconventional interview.

MASSACHUSETTS EXHIBITORS ORGANIZE.

An association has been formed and duly incorporated under the laws of the State of Massachusetts, known as the "Amusement Association of Massachusetts." The charter members are as follows: Nat. Burgess, James Donaldson, Walter E. Greene, Cornelius H. Buckley, Silas H. Bunce, Arthur C. Milot, John E. Koen, Arthur G. Carver, George A. Copeland, Charles H. Webster, J. Henry Sohel, Napoleon L. Demara, John W. Barry, Frank J. Howard, Nathan H. Gordon, Charles F. A. Smith, George F. Washburn, Nathaniel N. Brooks, Louis Rosenbaum, Arthur E. Lord, Ernest H. Horstmann, Rufus D. Masson.

Mr. Charles F. A. Smith is secretary and his address is 49 Federal street, Boston, Mass.

NAT. BURGESS, Manager.

Renew your subscription to the Moving Picture World, $2.00. Do it now. It will pay.

"The Dancing Girl of Butte" (Biograph).—A drama of considerable power which tells an interesting love story, though perhaps one may be permitted to say that it is not so strong as most of the Biograph productions. It tells of the love of a newspaper artist for a dancing girl, and exhibits a strongly dramatic picture when he discovers the truth regarding her occupation; but she convinces him of her purity and sincerity and they are married. Visible evidence is afforded afterward that in this instance, at least, the marriage was happy. While it is not a great film, it is well acted and the photography is clear and the situations are satisfactorily worked out. The film ends happily, which is an important point in pleasing the public.

"The Tattooed Arm" (Lubin).—A story of how the tattooing of the initials of a boy and girl on the arm of each resulted in recognition after years of separation, renewing the childish pledges of love and a happy wedding to close the picture. Some thrills are included, too. An abduction, a shipwreck, life among savages and similar occurrences serve to hold the interest unbroken from beginning to end. The interpretation in the hands of Lubin's capable company is sufficiently graphic to be thoroughly satisfactory. The picture, as a whole, is one of the most interesting Lubin has offered recently and should please wherever it is shown. Plenty of action of this character is what the public likes, and in this instance the players perform their parts with an energy which adds materially to the attractions of he picture.

"The Highlanders' Defiance" (Selig).—While it is difficult to repress a feeling of pride that men should be as brave as those who play the principal parts in this drama, one cannot restrain the further feeling of sorrow for those at home, waiting silently and hopefully for the loved ones who gave up their lives to defend a position from an attack by the Boers. War is glorious, when one reads about the dashing bravery and the wondrous gallantry of the soldiers who do the fighting, but it takes on quite a different appearance when one sees the men fall in battle. Perhaps along with its other beneficent offices the motion picture will help the peace society advocates in their crusade against war. The graphic representation of deaths in battle, followed almost instantly by the equally graphic reproduction of the broken-hearted mourners at home will emphasize, more than mere words can do, the horrors of war, with its waste of life and money. War pictures may be thrilling, but they may convey a deeper meaning, and exert a more powerful and beneficial influence than their makers suspected.

"Alderman Krautz's Picnic" (Selig).—If you want clean, pure fun, with the boy's love for getting some unfortunate into scrapes made prominent, here it is. The philanthropic alderman has his picnic. The boys enjoy it, and who shall say the alderman did not, even though he took a bath, got tangled in the wreckage of "London Bridge" and was finally set upon and despitefully used by a colony of lively hornets? But the genial alderman was game, and the spirit of the Selig players accurately portrays his experiences with the bunch of kids at his enjoyable picnic.

"The Winning Punch" (Imp).—Here is a picture that will set the blood coursing through one's veins these cold days and cause one to feel like giving vent to a genuine "rah, rah, rah" when the young collegian finally sends his opponent to earth with a well directed upper cut, after a slashing ring contest that appeals with irresistible force to the man, or woman, who has just a touch of sporting blood. Anyhow the young fellow gets the girl he wanted, and she is proud to think that he was able to beat out his opponent in such a vigorous fight. There is plenty of action in this picture, action which speaks for itself, requiring no explanation of its purpose or its direction. Consequently the film is attractive and is generally vigorously applauded. It is an improvement over some of the earlier films sent out by this house. Not that the highest possible standard has yet been achieved, or even approached, but the improvement is none the less welcome and proves that the company has profited by its previous mistakes and augurs well for its future.

"The Engineer's Romance" (Edison).—A thrilling railroad melodrama, illustrated with all the vim and finished dramatic work which characterizes the work of the Edison players. A girl station agent in a lonely station is beset by theives. She wires to a distance for help. Her sweetheart jumps on his locomotive and goes to her assistance. The last part of the film, showing alternately the progress of the locomotive and the steady retreat of the girl as the robbers force door after door is thrilling, and causes one to become almost breathless as the swift-flying locomotive with its assistance seems to crawl. The story is strong and the pictorial work is clear and quite up to the requirements of the subject and the story. No question need trouble the manager of a motion picture theater if he will watch the crowd when a story of this sort is on the screen. Action is what they like, and a thrilling rescue of this character causes a wonderfully impressive exhibition of interest. Such a film will never fail of pleasing the average audience.

"Ashes" (Edison).—Probably every man who reaches middle age sometimes looks into the dying embers of a fire and reads what may seem to him the story of his life. The bachelor who sees in the smoke of his cigar the face of his first and only sweetheart, and then sees the scenes of his love story pass before him, wreathed in this smoke is probably typical of very many who have had a romance, but have lived long enough to see it vanish down the vista of the years. The story passes. The scenes resolve once more into the bachelor's den and he gazes regretfully into the ashes, apparently mourning because this romance passed. The memories of middle life will make this picture impressive, and all men will see in it some allusion, perhaps, to their own experience and that will make the picture all the stronger. It is recommended as a desirable addition to any program.

"The Minister's Daughter" (Kalem).—An interesting melodrama dealing with the love affairs of the daughter of a minister who is lured to the city by a villain and begins a course of dissipation which makes her an invalid. Then she is deserted and finds her way back to the parsonage, where she is welcomed home. The story hasn't much in it that is new, but the way it is told makes it attractive and the excellent work of the actors in interpreting it keeps the audience interested from the opening scene to the last. Dramatically it is one of the best that has recently come from the Kalem people. Photographically it is an advance upon other similar films, and the finished acting is an important feature in the film's many excellencies. The steady improvement in the Kalem films is an important factor in the increasing popularity of the firm's pictures, and the company deserves credit for its work.

"An English Boxing Bout" (Pathe).—A sporting picture which will appeal to those who are interested in vigorous athletics. The photography is remarkably clear for this character of picture and the audience is sure to be interested in watching it as it runs.

"Her Terrible Ordeal" (Biograph).—A love story, the interest in which is heightened by the fact that the girl is locked in a safe; an absent-minded business man who leaves important papers behind and must, perforce, return to his office to get them, and a general mixup which keeps up the interest throughout the film. The girl is finally rescued and the picture ends happily, with the young people united and probably all pleased, rather than otherwise, that the afore said business man was absent-minded. Maybe the central thought of this picture may be taken to be the inference that sometimes those things which seem all wrong in reality are blessings in disguise. Or, to make the application of this idea specific, if the business man in the picture had not been absent-minded the girl would have died in the safe. Not all in an audience will reason out or apprecite these subtleties, but when they do interest in the picture is increased proportionately.

"A Tale of the Backwoods" (Selig).—A melodrama which combines the Selig qualities in a marked degree and affords opportunity for some interesting character delineation. Two distinct types are shown, and the conception of the parts is accurate. The actors interpret the peculiarities of these two types so closely that one becomes involved in a mental consideration of their relative values as personalities in a community. There are a number of dramatic incidents which rouse one to a more than ordinary pitch of excitement. A delicate girl, for example, is carried away by a deformed and insane man, thrown into an old building and the place set on fire. Then suddenly he changes and the endangered girl is rescued, while the one who induced him to commit the deed is thrown in instead. But everybody is rescued, the lovers marry and the erring ones are properly forgiven. But the thrills in the film are numerous and keep one constantly on the alert. The technical quality of the film is quite as good as its pictorial features, and one feels constrained to say that it promises to be popular.

"Over the Wire" (Lubin).—A comedy which is based upon a marriage direction left in a will, which was carried out over the wire after numerous amusing complications. Like all the Lubin films it is funny and after seeing it once one wants to see it again.

"Miss Moneybags Wishes to Wed" (Pathe).—A comedy representing the desire of a wealthy girl, who had nothing else to make her attractive, to secure a husband. The numerous complications afford opportunity for a good deal of fun before the story is told.

"Women in India" (Pathe).—An educational subject, produced with all the beauty and high technical quality which accompany the Pathe productions. The picture depicts with care and detail the life of women in India, producing it so graphically that everyone who sees it will obtain a clearer understanding of the conditions existing there. Such films are not alone interesting. They are highly instructive and in them the motion picture performs its most important function, the graphic and easily comprehended dissemination of accurate information.

"Shooting in the Haunted Woods" (Gaumont).—A magic film introducing some novel features. Two hunters stray into some woods seeking rabbits, and are confronted with ghosts and all sorts of strange things happen to them. Even the chicken they were to carve for dinner flies away, a most unkind thing for an eatable fowl to do. The surprising adventures of these hunters afford much amusement for the audience, who are kept constantly wondering what will occur next. The evidence of preparation and care in making up this film adds to its interest.

"Towser's New Job" (Gaumont).—A trained dog performs most of the manual labor at a hotel, moving baggage, waiting upon the table and collecting tips from the departing guests, an important portion of the business of such a hostelry. The evidence of training given by the dog adds charm to the picture, particularly for those who are interested in dogs.

"Bear Hunt in the Rockies" (Edison).—Something new in wild animal pictures. Heretofore hunt pictures have been made with animals either in captivity or trained so as not to be dangerous. But in this instance the operator joined an actual hunt, and the audience goes with the party from the time they start until the bear is killed and taken to camp. It is reproduced on the screen with amazing fidelity and offers numerous thrills before the rifle shot brings the huge beast to the ground. The way the young woman, fishing, retreats to camp when the bear swims the stream is a touch of comedy that gives a touch of life that increases the interest. The scenery of the Colorado Rockies is faithfully reproduced. To those who have been fortunate enough to clamber over these magnificent mountains and thread their narrow defiles, this picture will appeal with irresistible power. And those who have not been there can rest assured that the reproduction is faithful and is almost as good as seeing the originals, without the attendant discomforts. Of course discomforts will not deter the enthusiast from climbing a mountain, but they do exert some influence on others; and this picture is a good substitute. The technical work is uncommonly good, considering the difficulties under which much of it was performed. It is a picture which should secure for the company the congratulations of all who appreciate the labor involved in obtaining it.

"The Call Boy's Vengeance" (Vitagraph).—A lively comedy representing the results of a theater call boy tampering with the instruments in the orchestra. The combinations and complications which follow are as funny as it is possible to make them.

"The Old Maid's Valentine" (Vitagraph).—A farce based upon an old maid's strange valentine. There is a good plot and the play is full of fun from beginning to end. Where the writer saw the picture the audience never ceased laughing until the picture ended.

"A Redman's Devotion" (Bison).—A Western story, told with dash and enthusiasm and affording opportunity for some good work representative of Western life. Some good riding is shown and there are a few thrills like capturing a girl and her rescue and an opportunity to show the better side of an Indian's character, a matter which is of considerable importance. The picture is full of action and depicts the life graphically.

"The Winning Punch" (Imp).—On the occasion when we saw this film at the old Fourteenth Street Theater the audience received it with an enthusiasm that would have gladdened the heart of the producer if he had been present. The story is cleverly handled and contains all the thrills that captivate a moving picture audience. There is a love story with a heroine and a hero, who is the champion boxer of his college. In a spirited bout this chap wins a prize-fight against a professional boxer and gets the prize money. Also incidentally winning the consent of the girl's father to their union.

"His Only Child" (Essanay).—A graphic illustration of what occurs when a man becomes so engrossed in business he forgets his family, or, perhaps it is better to say, overlooks the fact that they need affection or attention. Not all children are so well favored as the one here depicted in having a sympathetic nurse to look out for them. And even this picture, which seemed a bit forbidding at the beginning, ended happily with the father realizing that children need something more than stocks and bonds to make them grow up into well-balanced men and women. This picture possesses an unusual interest in its suggestion of what may occur, and what probably does occur, under certain conditions.

"On the Bank of the River" (Gaumont).—A story of an ill-matched pair of sisters, which represents the practical one driving the dreamer from home. Later the banished dreamer returns as a popular musician with money to pay off the mortgage and save the home of the more practical sister in quite the old-time success novel style. The photographic quality of the picture redeems it from the merely commonplace. The story itself presents nothing especially new or interesting.

"A Seat in the Balcony" (Gaumont).—Purports to depict the experiences of a man who sees a play for the first time. The picture presents considerable rough-house, and offers nothing especially new. Pelting with peanuts and bags may be tolerated in foreign theaters, and disturbances such as the one here presented may be of sufficiently frequent occurrence to warrant motion picture reproduction, but in general such scenes are false and therefore lack one of the principal elements of interest, truth to actual life. The photographic quality of this film is quite up to the Gaumont standard.

"Richelieu" (Vitagraph).—A sumptuous and strongly dramatic production of an episode in the life of the famous Cardinal, dealing with a conspiracy in which the lives of important French government officials were threatened. Much time and money were expended upon the staging of this picture, and the costumes and settings are as nearly historically correct as it is possible to make them. A love story runs through the picture, adding materially to its interest, since jealousy, however repulsive an exhibition of it may be, supplies a reasonable motive for the movements of different actors which might not otherwise seem plain. Dramatically this picture will rank with the best productions of the Vitagraph's capable players. And what is perhaps more pleasing to a critical audience, the acting is well balanced and evenly sustained through the different scenes. Perhaps it is not too much to say that the acting is convincing, each actor giving what seems to be a good reason for his movements. Such elaborate pictures, presented with the beautiful stage settings and sumptuous costumes, add materially to the educational value of the motion picture, and what is of even more importance, they furnish an opportunity whereby those who cannot afford expensive theater tickets are enabled to see and enjoy dramatic masterpieces. The influence of such pictures is beneficial. They stimulate interest in important historic events and they graphically present the beauties of literary masterpieces. Under their influence public taste will improve and the artistic and literary impulses will be cultivated and become stronger. It is one important feature of the diffusion of artistic and literary education through the medium of the motion picture.

"The Red Girl's Romance" (Bison).—A slashing Western story, possessing all the imagined elements which make the West a land of romance and poetic misconceptions. Here are presented a love story, considerable gun play, with huge clouds of smoke; the capture of one party, the escape and capture of another, with different individuals tied to different trees in different ways, and the whole ends with some demonstrative love making between an Indian girl and her white admirer. There is plenty of action, interesting scenery, and withal a series of scenes which are alike thrilling and interesting. It is a good addition to a program.

"Forgiven" (Centaur).—A threadbare story in which a young man marries below his social position and is disowned by his father but clings to the girl. In spite of this love test we are shown the couple in their own home having a quarrel, and the young wife starts to foot it back to her dad. It is a long walk from Alpena, N. J., to Avenue C, Bayonne, and on the way she gets knocked down by her father-in-law's automobile, in which she is taken to his home; hubby is telegraphed for and forgiven, and everybody is happy.

Neither the acting nor the photography lend strength to the plot.

"Mishaps of Bonehead, in Search of an Heiress" (Centaur).—This was the most applauded and most thoroughly enjoyable number on the program at the old Fourteenth Street Theater on Thursday. We overheard the manager say to the representative of the United Film Exchange: "Give us more of this kind of stuff and give us the same photographic quality." As comedy it is the best ever turned out by the Centaur Company and we advise them to stick to that line. Every independent exhibitor who shows "The Mishaps of Bonehead" will find it a house-warmer.

"Camille" (Pathe).—A veritable film d'art. A thrilling and intensely dramatic representation of what has been termed by competent critics to be Alexander Dumas' son's masterpiece—Camille. The story of the unfortunate Marguerite Gautier and her unhappy lover, Armand Duval, graphically represented and dramatically acted, as the finished actors of the Pathes company always do act. It is unnecessary to repeat the story. It would seem that one so popular in novel, drama and opera would be sufficiently well understood to preclude the necessity for repetition. Criticism of such a popular and well-known drama seems scarcely necessary, and that is especially true in this instance, because it seems almost impossible to suggest any improvement. The setting and staging are alike sumptuous and the figures move across the screen like actual persons. After seeing the picture one seems to become acquainted with them and they are individual entities which will live with one as long as memory lasts. In many respects this seems to rank among the leading films the Pathes have produced. Perhaps the play is not up to the standard of some of those produced in the past, but even though this may be true, the picture has most of the attributes of greatness and deserves to be included in the comparatively small number that are reckoned among the leaders in the motion picture world.

"Home of the Gypsies" (Urban).—A wonderfully impressive film, its superb photographic quality contributing to its beauty. It is a picture of ancient Moorish architecture in Spain. First is shown a panorama of the ancient city of Granada and following that come details of that masterpiece of architectural art, the Alhambra, the palace of the Moorish kings, with the Lion's Courtyard, Myrtle Courtyard, and the famous Lookout Balcony. This is one of those pictures which cannot be described, nor is it possible to offer any criticism. It is a record film, but such a marvelously satisfactory record that one wants to see it again. The masterly reproduction of such examples of art must be helpful and in no sense is it possible to escape the conviction that far too few such pictures are presented. On the other hand, it must not be forgotten that unless the reproduction is perfect the picture is worse than useless. It must be a faithful record, else it conveys a false impression and does more harm than good. A picture that gives accurate representations of this character has an educational value not easily estimated, but the reproduction must equal the original, else it better not be attempted. The romance of Old Spain is closely connected with the Alhambra and any reproduction of this building necessarily brings to mind the romance and chivalry of its period. Naturally this serves, in some degree, to throw a sort of halo over the whole scene which adds much to its beauty and emphasizes its influence. A touch of picturesque life is given when the picture closes with a Gypsy wedding, followed by the rejoicings and the merry dances.

"True to His Oath" (Urban).—A touching story, illustrating the lasting strength of a father's influence. The young man would have been led astray but for the Bible and the appearance of the father's spirit. Influences of this sort do not always have the actual appearance of a ghost to increase their emphasis, but the spirit is present, and probably exerts quite as strong an influence as it would if it were visible. The lesson here is obvious.

"Electric Insoles" (Essanay).—A modification of the liquid electricity pictures which were numerous last year, combining with it a long chase after a human whirlwind whose electric insoles bear him into all sorts of difficulties and bring about many and disastrous collisions with people and objects. The picture is lively and develops a good many convulsing situations.

"The Old Maid and the Burglar" (Esanay).—Based upon the oft-repeated proposition that old maids are always looking for a man. In this instance she finds him, knocks him down and locks him in a room, but he jumps to the ground rather than run the risk of marriage. Of course the picture is funny. One cannot question that; but it is a species of coarse fun which cannot be commended as highly as it might otherwise. However, it excites the risibles of the average audience, and therefore performs its mission.

"An Episode of Napoleon's War with Spain" (Itala).—A bit which purports to represent a touch in the life of the great commander. Fortunately it does not depict him as an inhuman monster. On the contrary, he is shown pardoning a peasant and his wife sentenced to death for fighting for their home. The plea of a child saved them. Aside from the glitter of uniforms and the clash of contending armies, the picture possesses little interest.

THE TIDE OF FORTUNE

will swiftly and surely roll into 111 East Fourteenth street if the Independent Motion Pictures Company continue to publish films as good as the one which bears the above title. The story is clean and ennobling—the acting is good, and then some—the photography is equal in quality to the best work of much older firms. All this should be encouraging to the "Imp." With several other callous men of the world we were invited to see an advance copy of "The Tide of Fortune." Before the last scene ended our eyes were so dim that we could scarcely discern the figures on the screen, and when the lights went up we caught some of the party using handkerchiefs. Yes, indeed, "The Tide of Fortune" shows that the "Imp" is progressing in the right direction.

A year ago the stronghold of the independent was the European films. Now the demand is for American and the outlook for the importer is not so rosy. This is hardly to be wondered at, as some foreign stuff we have lately seen was positively nauseating, while even the independent American manufacturers are vieing with each other on quality—and some of them are really making good.

PANTOGRAPH CORPORATION.

The Pantograph Corporation, as stated in our last issue, would release on January 22, request us to state their release will not be until January 29. The picture to be released on that date will be one of interest and educational value, entitled, "A Tale of Colonial Days." This picture is an episode in the life of Alexander Hamilton and Aaron Burr, and has been carefully prepared, treated and tinted by a special process of their own, which gives exceptionally fine detail and makes the outlines exceedingly sharp. The personages are reproduced with scrupulous accuracy and the scenes have all been made on the actual grounds where the episode occurred. A full synopsis will be given in our issue of next week.

TEXAS NOW THE STAMPING GROUND FOR MOVING PICTURE ARTISTS.

San Antonio and its climate have attracted the manufacturers of moving picture films, and for the next three or four months a company of real actors will work eight hours each day in enacting those roles now displayed in every city where the picture now flourishes.

Wallace McCutcheon, a pioneer in this business and now manager of the producing department of the firm of Geo. Melies, of Paris, France, and Paul G. Melies, son of the head of the New York branch, reached the city recently. Within a week it is planned to have the studio ready and the making of silent dramas and comedies will be under way. The actors will reach here Wednesday from New York City.

"We are not," said Mr. McCutcheon at the St. Anthony Hotel, "asking any financial aid of San Antonians. San Antonio was selected by our firm because we learned it was the land of sunshine and would afford us a great deal of scope for our operations. We were informed of Fort Sam Houston, and one of our aims is to secure here a number of pictures of the soldiers. There is at Fort Sam Houston a splendid opportunity for a series of brilliant pictures that must necessarily appeal to the American who has a martial spirit and is interested in his country's arms. We are now having written the story of San Antonio by an author with whom Americans are familiar and who is familiar with the history of this city and its achievements. The staging of this picture must necessarily take in many of the points of interest and will, of course, include the Alamo. We appreciate that a great amount of work and many rehearsals will be required to fulfill our aim in this respect. Before we attempt to put this picture on a film, we shall wish to have it witnessed in San Antonio first by those who are interested in San Antonio and are familiar with the city. We want something historically correct and there will be ample ro mance in it. It will be, on the whole, one of the greatest films of the year and one, we believe, that will appeal to the masses."—San Antonio "Daily Express."

F. H. STEWART APPOINTED TRAVELING REPRESENTATIVE OF EDISON MFG. CO.

On January 10, Mr. F. H. Stewart, who was recently appointed traveling representative of the Edison Manufacturing Company, will start on a trip for the purpose of demonstrating the new Edison Improved Model "B" Kinetoscope. His itinerary, which as yet is incomplete, will probably embrace Philadelphia as the first stop and then the Eastern States. He expects to stay in Philadelphia one week, during which time demonstrations will be arranged at convenient places throughout the city to which local exhibitors and operators will be invited. Mr. Stewart, who is a veteran operator and expert mechanic, will also inspect machines in places of their exhibition where agreeable, and will offer suggestions for improvement in the projection. The Edison Company is convinced that much of the blame for faulty projection that has been laid at the door of films in the past is in reality due to defects in the projecting machine, and urges that exhibitors and operators generally take advantage of Mr. Stewart's presence in their respective cities and invite an inspection of their machines in order to discover any faults in their mechanical operation. The remarkable steadiness of projection secured by the use of the new Edison Improved Model invites the serious consideration of exhibitors who have had trouble in this respect in their exhibition.

SELIG ACTIVITIES.

The Selig Polyscope Company have made two master strokes in preparing the foundation for two famous films, "The Wizard of Oz" and "Samuel of Posen," with M. B. Curtis in his original role of "Sammy." Special arrangements have been made whereby a number of the original company in addition to M. B. Curtis will appear in the film. There can be no mistake as regards the popularity of this picture. Mr. Selig has gone to considerable expense in the issuance of beautiful four-colored lithographed posters by the Russel-Morgan Company in order that the exhibitor may make a special feature of the two great films. The release date will be watched with more than ordinary interest.

Scene from "Under the Stars and Stripes"—(Selig).

Scene from "A New Divorce Cure"—(Selig).

NOTES FROM SAN FRANCISCO.

The Theater Film Service Company, of San Francisco, has recently come under the sole ownership of A. J. Clapham, and it is safe to prophesy that now that this enterprising gentleman has attained the goal that he has long sought for, there is no limit to the heights to which this exchange will soar under his capable management. The remarkable growth of this firm in the short time it has been in existence, under the capable captaincy of Mr. Clapham, makes it safe to predict remarkable things for its future. About fifteen months ago, at the solicitation of Mr. Clapham, the Theater Film Service Company, of Chicago, established its Pacific Coast branch at San Francisco, which grew so rapidly that in July, 1909, the branch was incorporated as a separate corporation, with the following officers and directors: A. C. Roebuck, president; F. C. Aiken, Vice-President; A. J. Clapham, treasurer; S. S. Hutchinson, secretary. Just recently, on November 5, Mr. Clapham purchased the entire interests of his associates. This exchange is one of the leading renters west of Chicago, and its success is attributed solely to the management of Mr. Clapham. He has a personality that makes him extremely popular among the exhibitors of the Coast, and his fair-minded and progressive policies have won him much business. The climatic conditions of the Coast make an ideal environment for motion picture theaters, and the business is better in no other part of the country. The industry is ever growing, and the marvelous growth of the Theater Film Service Company to a large and enterprising business in little more than a year is a fair example of conditions there. With A. J. Clapham at the helm, great things may be expected of this concern very shortly.

OPERATORS' UNION, I. A. T. S. E., BRANCHES INCREASING.

Denver, Col., December 31, 1909.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Dear Sirs—Managers and operators of moving picture theaters in the United States and Canada, I desire to have a heart-to-heart talk with you on the Operators' Union. There has been during the last year much printed in the papers of the trade about our Union, which should convey to the managers of picture houses that he can depend upon his operator to give a steady picture, accurately focused, centered, etc., if he is a member of the Union. So far, so good. But I must say that if an operator gets a film terribly scratched and mutilated beyond repair, that he cannot give a good show—a show that will please his employer, and I here suggest to the managers of the inspection department of the exchanges throughout the United States and Canada to carefully inspect their films after they have been returned from the exhibitors, before he rents them out to other exhibitors. I would also tell my brother operators to be more careful in handling the films. I have been in operating booths where the operator handles the film as though it were a piece of lead or some material of a very strong substance. This cannot be done with the film, for, when it has been in constant use for a time it becomes brittle. Again I say that the inspection department manager should give his films more attention. I am a member of the Denver branch of the I. A. T. S. E. and we are all getting to be expert operators. We are also adding new members to our branch at every meeting.

G. E. S. Local No. 7, I. A. T. S. E.

A Drawing Card for Moving Picture Theatres

Louise M. Marion

IN

Illustrated poems, now booking in Moving Picture Houses in and out of town, also for professional entertainment.

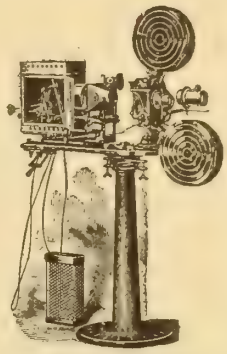
Miss Marion is presenting several beautiful poems written by Fred Emmerson Brooks, which she has illustrated with special permission from the author. This work never fails to make a hit on every occasion.

Operator, Vaudeville Sketch and music furnished when desired. Highest testimonials. Terms reasonable.

LOUISE M. MARION

321 West 23rd Street New York City

"IT IS A BEAUTY"



Motiograph
No. 1 Flickerless

That is what every man says who knows anything about moving picture machines when he sees the flickerless

MOTIOGRAPH

in operation, giving full size pictures in my new show room, which is only two minute's walk from the 8th St. station of the 6th Ave. "L"

I can prove to any unbiased purchaser of a moving picture machine that he gets more for his money and a better machine when he buys the MOTIOGRAPH than if he purchases any other make. I have had hundreds of visitors buying

"HALLBERG" Economizers

Who have kicked themselves because they did not look at the MOTIOGRAPH before they placed their order for moving picture machine.

Do you realize what it means to have a quiet running machine, giving a rock steady flickerless picture on the sheet? Let me tell you—It means that you will get your competitor's trade, and your show will be spoken of as something new, out of the ordinary.

A look into my show room takes only a few minutes and it costs you nothing. I will demonstrate to you the MOTIOGRAPH, the "HALLBERG" Economizer and other "HALLBERG" Specialties in full operation.

J. H. HALLBERG

I make an allowance for your old machine, rheostat or current savers in trade

If you cannot call, write for free Booklet No. W-15

J. H. HALLBERG

28 Greenwich Avenue New York

Hallberg
A. C. Economizer

PUZZLE PICTURE SLIDES

PUZZLE PICTURE SLIDES

Show Puzzle Pictures in your theatre by using our new Combination Song Slide and Puzzle Picture Carrier which can be attached to any moving picture machine.

The slides are handsomely colored and your audiences will like them, as the carrier revolves the Puzzle Pictures on the curtain.

New sets of Puzzle Picture Slides issued each week.

Price of Carrier . . . $1.00
Price of Set, Seven Slides 5.00

Delivered Express Prepaid

EXCHANGE OF SLIDES

We will exchange any set of Puzzle Picture Slides for a new set at $1 00 per set per week. You mail slides to us and we will mail you a new set in exchange.

Write for circular giving full description, or start right away by sending $6.00 for set of slides and carrier.

Remember we prepay express charges.

National Slide Company

53 State Street, Boston, Mass.

Independent Films

FOR SALE

We offer for sale about 500 Reels of old Independent and Association films in good condition; every reel has been renovated and cleaned in our own plant, putting same in fine condition. We have concluded to handle no films in the future for rental purposes that are more than six to seven months after release. Write for list to the largest Independent Film Exchange in this territory.

Wagner Film Company

208 North 4th Street :: St. Louis, Mo.

LECTURES

on Suitable Subjects in Moving Pictures are a pleasing and attractive feature and always appreciated by your patrons. The peer and pioneer of lectures or "picture readings" with moving pictures is acknowledged to be

W. STEPHEN BUSH

Pleased to correspond with exhibitors

44 North 10th Street - - - Philadelphia, Pa.

BE UP-TO-DATE Protect Your Patrons—Save Yourself Trouble—Use

PINO-SRAY FOR SWEEPING : : DISINFECTING, DEODORIZING

It kills all dust, germs and odors and leaves your rooms clean, sanitary and scented with the delightful odor of new pine

Write for Booklet

The Worrell Mfg. Co. :: Sedalia, Mo., U. S. A.

GREAT NORTHERN

QUALITY FILMS

RELEASE JANUARY 15th

THE DEATH OF THE BRIGAND CHIEF

Stirring Dramatic Production. Length, 672 feet.

NAUGHTY BOYS

Comedy. Length, 280 feet.

RELEASED JANUARY 22nd

ANARCHISTS ON BOARD

Full Reel Feature Production of Special Interest!

EHIBITORS! When you use our product you know you are exhibiting films of the highest standard.

All Exchanges Rent Our Films
One Quality Only—THE BEST

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.

7 E. 14th STREET NEW YORK

Among the Exhibitors.

Aberdeen, S. D.—J. A. Wigard, of this city, has purchased the Princess Moving Picture Theater, at Watertown, from Easrl Barr.

La Grande, Ore.—M. J. Windstock is planning to open a new moving picture theater here.

Chandlerville, Ill.—T. S. Allen, of Springfield, has sold his moving picture theater here to C. E. Golden and K. Underwood, of Springfield, who will continue the business.

Topeka, Kan.—A new moving picture theater has been opened at 718 Kansas avenue. It is known as the Cozy.

Nashua, Ia.—L. E. Hardy will open a new moving picture theater in Frank's Hall.

Weiser, Ida.—George W. Moyer is making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Mountain View, Cal.—Mr. Smith will open a new moving picture show on Castro street.

San Jose, Cal.—Ed Redmond has purchased the theater of the Jose Amusement Company.

Greeley, Col.—R. W. Speer has been awarded the contract for the erection of a new vaudeville theater on Ninth street.

Galesburg, Ill.—Edward Kennedy has purchased the Nickelodeon, on South Cherry street, from Mr. Martin and has taken possession.

New York, N. Y.—Architect Thomas W. Lamb has filed plans for the remodeling of the German Evangelical Church, at 141 East Houston street, into a moving picture theater.

St. Clairsville, W. Va.—Sands & Hillenbrand, of Wheeling, have purchased the moving picture show here of Paul Zauplus.

Chicago, Ill.—A. H. Lowden has completed plans for the erection of a new theater, at the corner of Sixty-third and Kimbark avenue.

Buffalo, N. Y.—John G. Sattler will erect a new vaudeville and moving picture theater, at 1820 Genesee street.

Milford, Mich.—William Avery has sold his moving picture theater, in the Hubbell Building, to George McCoy.

New York City.—The Hudson-Fulton Theater, at 136th street and Broadway, will open its doors on Saturday, January 1, with high class moving pictures and vaudeville. S. Abrams, a member of Local 35, I. A. T. S. E., will have charge of the machine.

Claremont, N. H.—Joseph Lynch has opened a moving picture theater here.

Hamilton, Ohio.—Mason & Shears have erected a new moving picture theater, the Royal, and will conduct it as a first-class picture house with all up-to-date film.

Brandford, Conn.—A new moving picture theater has been erected in Pythian Hall.

Jeffersonville, Ind.—A new vaudeville and moving picture theater is being erected at the Armory here.

Knox, Ind.—A new 5-cent theater will shortly open in the Musselman Building under the management of Albert Metzger.

Paterson, N. J.—The Paterson Show Company have purchased the moving picture theater at 136 Market street.

Medalia, Me.—The Unique Theater, at 110 East Third street, has been reopened.

St. Louis, Mo.—Joseph Bower will open a new picture house at 1428 Market street.

Reading, Pa.—Frank K. Stetler is planning to open a picture theater at 739 Penn street.

Baltimore, Md.—Frank H. Durkee will erect a new moving picture theater here, which will cost about $4,000.

Chatham, N. Y.—A new moving picture theater will be erected here by S. M. Spaulding.

Boston, Mass.—A new moving picture theater is being erected in the Gray Hall.

Green Bay, Wis.—The Gem is the name of the latest moving picture theater opened here under the proprietorship of H. U. Cole.

Lowell, Mass.—The old Tremont house, in Merrimack street, is being converted into a moving picture palace for George Husson.

Lowell, Mass.—Another moving picture theater is being erected here, at Bridge and Paige streets, for Alexandra Straus.

Annapolis, Md.—The Magnet Theater, a new moving picture house, situated on Main street, near Conduit, has at last opened its doors to the public. The seating capacity is 300.

Muncie, Ind.—C. L. Pemberton has purchased the Royal Theater from Owen Davies.

Philadelphia, Pa.—J. Fred Zimmerman will erect a new moving picture theater on his property on Columbus avenue, west of Broad street, which will be able to seat about 2,400 persons.

Glen Falls, N. Y.—William Rosay has purchased an interest in the Fairyland Theater and hereafter will manage it. Mr. Rosay was formerly connected with the Peoples Vaudeville Company, of New York City.

Blandinsville, Ill.—N. T. Guy is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Frankfort, Ky.—Edward W. Ramsey, of Lexington, has leased the Crystal moving picture theater on St. Clair street, and has taken possession.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—M. H. Kuehn has disposed of his interest in the Dreamland moving picture theater here to William LeRoy Foster, of Alleghany, N. Y.

Pleasanton, Cal.—Rutherford Sinclair is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Mansfield, Ohio.—Wm. G. Georgion & Co., of Cleveland, are preparing to open a new moving picture theater here.

Baltimore, Md.—Messrs. A. Brager and Robert H. Baum are planning to erect a new moving picture theater at the corner of Light and German streets.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The H. B. Deal Company has been awarded the contract for the erection of a new $25,000 vaudeville and moving picture theater, to be located at the corner of Fifty-second and Sansom streets, for Thomas McAllister.

Pecatonica, Ill.—Geo. Buxton has opened a moving picture theater here.

Cascade, Ia.—Jake Leytem will open an electric theater here December 1.

Port Huron, Mich.—Will E. Culhane Amusement Company, incorporated, capital $1,000.

Baraboo, Wis.—F. E. Shults sold his Orpheum Theater here to A. B. Robbins.

Platteville, Wis.—Harvey Mann will conduct a moving picture theater here.

Goshen, Ind.—E. J. Stanton has purchased the Vaudette Theater, located in the Mummert Building on South Main street, and has taken possession.

Salina, Kans.—Matt Price has purchased the National moving picture theater here.

Ishpeming, Mich.—Miss Emma Schott has purchased the Bijou Theater here from T. H. Crinnian, of Sault Ste. Marie.

Buffalo, N. Y.—A. J. Hoch will erect a new moving picture theater on Grand street, north from Breckenridge.

Baltimore, Md.—Plans have been completed for the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Stafford Springs, Conn.—A new moving picture theater has been built here for John Sena.

Salem, Mass.—The Olympic Theater will be enlarged and is to run all up-to-date film. Mr. Hagerty is the present manager.

Hudson, Mass.—Henry W. E. Taillon has purchased the Hudson Theater's interest from S. E. Sherman.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Independent Amusement Company have leased the lot at 1800 South street, where they will erect a moving picture and vaudeville theater.

Webster, Mass.—An application has been filed for Oscar Mercier for the erection of a moving picture theater at St. Jean Hall.

New London, Conn.—Joseph Silva has leased the A. O. U. W. Building, which he will convert into a moving picture theater.

Goshen, Ind.—The New Vaudeville Theater, in the Mummert Building, on South Main street, has reopened and is now under the management of E. J. Stanton.

Walton, N. Y.—E. C. Eger has leased the Opera House here and will convert it into a moving picture theater.

New York City.—A new moving picture theater has been erected at the corner of Bowery and Bayard streets, which will be under the management of William H. Mackgraf.

Philadelphia, Pa.—George F. Steumpig is the manager of the new moving picture theater erected at Germantown avenue, south of Chelton avenue.

Portland, Ore.—Arrangements have been made for the erection of a new moving picture theater in the Montgomery Building.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Peter Kuhn has filed plans to build a moving picture theater at the corner of Frankford avenue and Ontario street, which will cost about $18,000.

Paducah, Ky.—A new moving picture theater is being erected here and will be under the management of Mr. Derberger.

Easton, Pa.—Iori Brothers have built a first-class moving picture theater on Northampton street.

Runbury, Pa.—The Blanchard Amusement Company is erecting a new moving picture theater here.

Potsdam, N. Y.—The Wonderland Theater, on Main street, is now under the management of H. E. Flack and is being enlarged and beautifully decorated.

Three Rivers, Mass.—Eugene Pigeon has opened a new moving picture theater, The Pastime, in Ruggles Hall.

New York City.—Harry Pollak has leased the building at the southwest corner of 101st street and Columbus avenue, which he will convert into a moving picture theater.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Aeroplane Amusement Company will erect a moving picture theater at 439 Fulton street.

Frackville, Pa.—The Family Theater here has been forced to close on account of poor business.

Camden, Me.—A new moving picture theater is being erected here for Roland Crockett.

Georgetown, D. C.—Crandal Mackie is having a moving picture theater erected in M street, near Thirty-third, which will cost about $8,000, and will seat about 400 people.

St. John, N. B.—The People's Mission, on Waterloo row, is going converted into a moving picture theater.

Aitken, Minn.—Fred Hall has sold the Electric Theater to Ora D. Freer and associated with him will be Mr. Edwards, who has been introducing special features at the nightly performances. Mr. Freer has taken possession and will continue the business.

Grand Forks, N. D.—The Gem Theater opened December 11. All the latest and best in moving pictures and illustrated songs. Newest and nicest family theater in the entire Northwest. Price 10 cents.

Plattsburgh, N. Y.—The Palace Theater in the future will be run for motion pictures and vaudeville. The stage has been enlarged and a complete set of scenery put in. The contract for enlarging this house has been given; house will hold about 700, making one of the best houses of its kind in Northern New York.

Portsmouth, N. H.—Gray & McDonough are making arrangements to open a new moving picture show in the Pierce Hall.

Peoria, Ill.—Fred Pitts has closed the Unique Electric Theater, located in the Arcade Building.

Watseka, Ill.—George De Onzo has purchased the Princess Picture Theater here.

Livingston, Ill.—J. B. Jordan has opened a new electric theater in the Kepplinger Block.

South Tacoma, Wash.—R. R. Pratsch is making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—The Midgley-Bodel Company will erect a new moving picture theater at 35 East First South.

Streator, Ill.—The Chicago Amusement Company is preparing to open a new moving picture theater here.

Roanoke, Ill.—Adamond Faucon and Alfred Bodhaine are making arrangements to start a moving picture theater in the Duggan Building.

Ida Grove, Ia.—Mr. Ford has opened a new moving picture theater here. It is known as the Bijou.

Ft. Scott, Kan.—Mr. Henderson has sold the Pictureland Moving Picture Show to H. C. Ernich and P. V. Jordan.

Danbury, Conn.—The Electric Theater, on White street, has been purchased by Harry Deck, who will have the theater remodeled and fitted with new chairs and a new stage for vaudeville.

Louisville, Ky.—A new amusement palace is being erected on Jefferson street, east of Fourth, which will be perfectly fireproof and will be operated by the Princess Amusement Company. This theater will run first class vaudeville and moving pictures.

Hartford, Conn.—The Scenic Theater has again opened here and will remain under the management of Mr. Hallaby.

Pottstown, Pa.—A new moving picture theater will be erected in the new building on High street for the Pastime Theater Company.

Stroudsburg, Pa.—Bert B. Palmer has purchased, from O. F. Koch, the Nickelet Theater, which is located in Angle Building, on Main street.

Amsterdam, N. Y.—Leslie O. Behr opened the Theater Premier here and is using all of the latest moving pictures and illustrated songs. The house has a seating capacity of 300 and is very finely equipped.

Richmond, W. Va.—Irving L. Dulaney will open a moving picture theater in the Cross Building.

Georgetown, Tex.—A new moving picture theater is being erected in the Glassock Block, which will be under the management of A. S. Grayson and John Sherman.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—The Moving Picture Theater Company here has been given a permit to erect a moving picture theater which will cost about $3,000. It will be located on Gilbert avenue, near Hewitt street.

Houman, La.—Henry Breaux has purchased the Bijou Theater, which had been closed for some time.

Binghamton, N. Y.—Arrangements have been made for the erection of a moving picture theater in the Kunkie Block for Charles H. Everett.

Cleveland, Ohio.—Joseph Koberna will build a moving picture theater at 7614 Central avenue.

Allentown, Pa.—The Lion Theater here has been closed by the building inspector on account of not having enough exits.

Clyde, N. Y.—Hamilton & Mack are to instal a first-class moving picture theater at the corner of Main and Ford streets. This theater will be opened to the public on January 15.

Bisbee, Ariz.—M. D. Betz has purchased the Royal Moving Picture Theater here.

Orange, Tex.—J. B. Humphreys and A. Eickman are making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Knoxville, Ill.—R. O. Farmer is to open a new moving picture theater here.

Bridgeton, N. J.—Lester Loper is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater at the Ellmer Hall.

Athens, Ohio.—Fred Stires is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Xenia, Ohio.—J. H. Dakin has sold the Detroit street moving picture theater here to Jeffrys Bros.

Ware, Mass.—Michael D. Haight is planning to open a new moving picture theater here.

Streator, Ill.—Myer Silvermaster is planning to open a moving picture theater here.

St. Louis, Mo.—Joseph Van Raalte has commenced the erection of a new vaudeville and moving picture show at 2635 Cherokee street.

Sheridan, Wyo.—James Klindt has purchased the interest of his partner, C. E. Merritt, in the Star Moving Picture Theater.

Louisville, Ky.—John H. and James P. Whallen are making arrangements to erect a modern moving picture theater here.

Laingsburg, Mich.—Ernest Hayward has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Independent Films
FOR RENT

We are offering a strictly high grade Independent Service at greatly reduced prices. Our Films are all practically new, and carefully inspected before shipping.

A Big Feature with every shipment

SONG SLIDES FREE

Films, Machines, Supplies of all Kinds constantly on hand for sale

Let us quote you prices on anything you need

PIEDMONT FILM EXCHANGE
Acme Theatre Building

Long Distance Phone No. 533 GOLDSBORO, N. C.

CUSTOMER wants manager for first class moving picture house in Chicago. Says great opportunity for right man. Write to me for particulars.

CUSTOMER wants to sell nickelodeon located in big moving picture district in Chicago. Says he will sacrifice for quick cash. Write to me for details.

Exhibitors Overjoyed

With the new films now being released by the Independent manufacturers of America and Europe. Never since I have been in the film renting business have I received so many letters complimenting the new stunts being pulled off by the Independents. There are some renters who can't give you a good Independent service, because they are not buying any of the new films, but I can and will give you the cream of the best. If you want to be dead sure that you get the best the market affords, write to the biggest and best film renter in the world. Meaning nobody but me.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

THE LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE
Headquarters

196-198 Lake Street : : Chicago

Minneapolis, Portland, Omaha, Salt Lake City, Evansville
(Canadian Office in Montreal)

"The biggest and best film renter in the world."

AUCTION SALE
C. L. FERLINGHETTI, Auctioneer

Sells Monday, January 17, 1910. 11 A. M.
122 East 13th Street, New York

Entire Contents of a Large Arcade—500 PENNY SLOT MACHINES

Consisting of Byerjein Display Machines, Phonographs, Illustrated Song Machines, Looking Glasses, Electric Postal Card Outfit, Dumb Bells, Candy Machines, Laughing Mirrors, U. S. Grip Machines, Weissman Blower, Shooting Gallery and Outfit, Doctor Machines, Rifles, Self-Playing Automatic Piano, Melle Zita (fortune teller), Fight Machines, Electric Machines, Roover's Name Plate, Palm Reader, Telephone Girl (fortune), Mutoscopes, Picture Machines, Fairbank's Scales, Guessing Scales, Balloon Machines, Rosenfield Punching Machines, Mills Punching Bags, Mills Lifter, Cash Registers, Desks, Combination Safe, Phrenometers, Electric Fans, Motors, etc.

Sale absolute Rain or Shine. Auctioneer's Office, 31 Willoughby St., Bklyn.

MOTION PICTURE PIANO MUSIC

This is a book of descriptive music, regular sheet music size, and arranged for both hands. Specially selected, arranged and composed by one of the best descriptive Pianists in the U. S., who for the past twenty years has been Musical D rector in all lines of Theatrical Productions. This work is the result of actual experience, and is now being used in hundreds of M. P. Theatres Contains music, for all probable scenes, actions, characters, etc , and its suggestions are entirely practical. Increases the value of YOUR SHOW 100%. Descriptive circular sent free to anyone upon request. This book sent promptly upon receipt of price. $1.00 Remit either by P O. or Express Order, Draft or Check to

GREGG A. FRELINGER
1009 Ferry Street Lafayette, Ind.

The Magnetic Film Service Company
INCORPORATED

Successor to

Lubin Film Service Company
123 Shillito Place, Cincinnati

The Best Service
Thoroughly Inspected Films
Prompt and Careful Shipments
Write for Information and Catalogue

Don't Buy Yourself Poor
MAKE YOUR OWN

Non-Inflammable Cement
I will sell this valuable Formula upon receipt of only $2.00

The ingredients of which can be purchased anywhere at a very reasonable price. Can be used on both kinds of Film

Positively Strongest Film Cement Formula on Earth

Send 12c. for sample bottle and be convinced

JOHN H. HEINZ
1905 Cecil Avenue Baltimore, Md.

Sayre, N. Y.—John R. Kasper has sold his moving picture theater here to Maney & Page, of Athens.

Terre Haute, Ind.—A new moving picture theater has been opened at 323 Wabash avenue. It is known as the Savoy.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—The Alhambra Theater Company is preparing to erect a new theater at 148 West Fifth street.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Domenico Saraci will erect a moving picture theater at 103 Dante place.

Ft. Madison, Ia.—W. W. Cassidy is making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Palmer, Mass.—The Scenic Theater, owned by the New England Amusement Company, was closed.

Marion, Ind.—Charles Sipes is preparing to open a picture show in the Gas City.

Rockport, Mo.—Linville & Harrison have opened a new moving picture theater in the Lewis Building.

Great Bend, Kan.—O'Brien & Brumley have sold their moving picture theater here to Paul Curry.

Bloomingburg, Ohio.—Mr. Coleman has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Maquoketa, Ia.—Andrew Fuhglsang has sold a half interest in the Lyric Moving Picture Theater here to Lee Kullmer.

Chicago, Ill.—G. H. Stricker has secured a permit for the erection of a moving picture theater at 3056 Lincoln avenue.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Emil Schmidt will erect a nickelodeon at 170 French street.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—A new moving picture theater is being erected on New Utrecht avenue which will cost the proprietor, M. Baron, $2,500.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Plans are being made for the erection of a new picture palace, at Fifty-eighth and Lansdowne avenue, for Smith & Smink.

Monson, Mass.—A new moving picture theater is being erected here.

Somerville Station, Boston, Mass.—A petition has been received at the Mayor's office urging him not to grant a license to operate a moving picture show in the Day Street Church. This petition has been signed by 71 citizens, who objected to it.

Baltimore, Md.—Another moving picture parlor is to be erected on North avenue, near Charles street, opposite the Casino Theater. Eugene A. Cook, who is the proprietor, claims that when the construction is finished it will cost him $25,000.

Brattleboro, Vt.—A new moving picture theater is being erected here, and will be under the management of John Galvin.

Stockton, Cal.—Donnellan & Collier are erecting a new moving picture theater on Main street, which will be equipped with 4,000 opera chairs, a new No. 6 Power's machine, a first class violin and piano player and all of the latest moving pictures and illustrated songs.

Foxboro, Mass.—Messrs. Wheeler and G. B. French will open a new moving picture theater in the Union Building, which will be well equipped and will have the latest pictures and song slides.

New York City.—Moving pictures took possession of the New York Roof Garden, and were well applauded by the spectators that attended the opening.

Green Bay, Wis.—A beautiful high-class moving picture theater is being erected at Cherry and Adams streets. The name of this place is the Park, which is well equipped with exits and is a very comfortable playhouse.

Laundrie, N. Y.—Arrangements have been filed for the erection of a first-class picture house here.

Lawrence, Mass.—The New Pastime Moving Picture Theater is enjoying a generous patronage every night. Miss Mae Bagshaw sings with the latest illustrated song slides.

New Haven, Conn.—Announcement that the Lyceum Theater is about to take up vaudeville and moving pictures again indicates that they don't make enough coin with dramatic plays.

Topeka, Kan.—The Cozy Motion Picture Theater, at 718 Kansas avenue, has at last opened its doors to the public, and have all new chairs and a new new moving picture machine put in. The pictures will be changed daily.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Crystal Theater has been purchased by Thomas Saxe, formerly owned by Frank E. Winter, and is being remodeled, which will amount to $30,000 when finished.

Aberdeen, S. D.—J. A. Wigaard has purchased, from Earl Barr, the Watertown Theater.

Springfield, Mass.—A new moving picture theater is being erected on Main street for Frank Sutty.

Hartford, Conn.—The Park Theater, in Trim Little Building, on Main street, has at last opened its doors to the public and will be provided with all up-to-date moving pictures and vaudeville. This house will be under the management of H. P. Heine.

Bronx, N. Y.—Charles Knickrihm is having a new theater built at 864 Longwood avenue, and it will be known as the Longwood Theater.

New York City.—A new moving picture theater will be opened on Eighth avenue, between Thirtieth and Thirty-first streets, for Mr. Eckhardt.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Princess Theater is one of the latest moving picture houses erected here and is beautifully fitted with new chairs and a handsome front. The capital of this theater amounts to $50,000.

Springfield, Mass.—The New Bijou Theater is now in the process of construction on Worthington street, just below Main street.

St. Clairsville, W. Va.—Sands & Hellenbrand have purchased the moving picture theater formerly conducted by Paul Zauplus.

Danbury, Conn.—The Electric Theater has been purchased by Harry Dick.

Suffolk, Va.—The Comedy Theater has reopened with moving pictures and vaudeville.

Topeka, Kan.—The Frost Building is being converted into a moving picture show. It has a seating capacity of 550.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—A new moving picture theater will be erected on the east side of Gilbert avenue, between Hewitt and Holloway avenues.

North Attleboro, Mass.—Charles Reen and Henry Collins have purchased the Wansutta Moving Picture Theater.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Grand Theater, on Third street, north of Grand avenue, has been converted into a moving picture and vaudeville theater.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Domenico Saraci has erected a new picture theater at 101 Dante place.

St. Louis, Mo.—Joseph Van Raalte has filed plans for the building of a $20,000 moving picture theater at 2635 Cherokee street. This show house is well provided with exits and has a handsome front.

New York City.—A new moving picture theater has been erected at 93 Park row and will be under the management of J. Rosenthal.

Chester, Pa.—The Pastime Theater has again opened and is doing good business.

Olean, N. Y.—L. D. Nourse and Glen Pratt expect to open a moving picture palace, either in Castile or Silver Springs.

Washington, N. J.—Frank Bair, proprietor of his moving picture theater here, reports good business.

Athens, Ohio.—Fred Stires has purchased the Athens Opera House from Finsterwald & Slaughter, which he intends to convert into a first-class moving picture theater. It is Mr. Stires' intention to open another moving picture house, in Logan, in the Spring.

Bordentown, N. J.—Work has begun for the erection of a new moving picture theater on Farnsworth avenue.

Bridgeton, N. J.—Lester Loper has opened a moving picture theater here.

Asbury Park, N. J.—The Nickelet Theater which opened its doors a week ago was forced to close on account of poor business. Messrs. Frank Banks and Vet are the proprietors.

New York City.—Plans have been filed for the erection of a new moving picture theater at 31 West Thirty-sixth street, which will be under the management of Maximilian Zipkes and will cost about $5,000.

Vineland, N. J.—The hall on the Zambone property, on the West Side, will soon be opened as a moving picture and vaudeville theater.

Norwich, Conn.—The Hub Moving Picture Theater, in the Keystone Block, was ordered to close by the Mayor because of not having enough exits.

Camden, N. J.—It is reported that George Ware and Zeke Mires are about to open a moving picture parlor here.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.—The Lyric Theater opened again and will be under new management.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A permit was issued to George F. Stuemppling for the erection of a moving picture theater at 5508 Germantown avenue, which will cost about $15,000.

New York City.—A. L. Erlanger has opened the Crescent Theater, in 135th street, between Fifth and Lenox avenues, and will run first-class moving pictures and vaudeville.

New York City.—Zalka & Kramer are having a new picture theater erected at 655 Second avenue.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Unique Amusement Company, proprietors of the Unique Theater, on Market street, between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets, have closed their theater on account of poor business.

Cleveland, Ohio.—The Moving Picture Theater Company, of Cincinnati, have been given a permit to erect a moving picture theater which will cost about $3,000. It will be located on Gilbert avenue, near Hewitt street.

New Brunswick, N. J.—The Bijou Moving Picture Palace, on George street, has been purchased by Feiber & Shea.

As the Manager Sees It

This Manager looks prosperous and happy. You will feel the same way when you discard that old juice consuming rheostat and put in a

Fort Wayne Compensarc

It will increase your box office receipts because your patrons will notice at once how much brighter and clearer your pictures are. And what's more, it will

Cut 2-3 from Your Monthly Lighting Bill

That sounds as if we were stretching it, doesn't it? But we are not and just to show you, we will ship you one on 30 days free trial and let you prove it.

If it does not do all we claim for it, ship it back at our expense and it won't cost you one cent.

If this sounds "good" to you, send for our little booklet "Compensarc vs. Rheostat" and find out the particulars.

You are paying the Lighting Company half your profits every day you wait.

Fort Wayne Electric Works
1402 Broadway
Fort Wayne, Indiana

WOOD SYSTEMS FWEW FORT WAYNE IND C3

In answering advertisers, kindly mention the Moving Picture World.

FILMS HOWARD MOVING PICTURE CO. FILMS
Repair Work a Specialty. Agents for Motiograph, Power's and Edison Machines. Supplies and Sundries.
564 Washington Street, - - Boston Mass.
Established 1894. (Opposite Adams House). Incorporated 1908.

Renew Your Films

EXCHANGES!

A clean film is more important to an exhibitor than a recent release. First run spells good condition.

WE REMOVE DIRT AND SCRATCHES

and put a lustre on the film that makes it

BETTER THAN NEW

Put your old film to work at advanced prices by having it renovated.

OLD RELIABLE FILM RENOVATING CO.
134 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
J. S. SPEER, Manager

All kinds of References furnished

SCENERY
For M. P. Theatres

I am making a specialty of small sets of Wood Scenes consisting of Back Drop 4 Wood Wings, 2 Cut Wood Borders, which is all you need for Vaudeville Acts between Pictures. This scenery is all fireproof to meet the demands of the Fire Underwriters. All packed ready to express to any part of the United States in the following sizes according to price

Set No. 1	Drop	8x10	Wings	3x8	Borders	2x12	$ 50.00
" 2	"	9x10	"	3x9	"	3x12	65.00
" 3	"	10x12	"	3x10	"	3x14	80.00
" 4	"	11x12	"	3x11	"	3x14	90 00
" 5	"	12x14	"	4x12	"	3x16	125.00
" 6	"	14x24	"	4x14	"	4x30	175.00

These Sets are ALL READY to set up and GIVE SHOW

Send deposit of one THIRD
Balance C. O. D. subject to inspection

TURNER CO.
Theatrical Stage Properties
Paper Machie Work
552 7th Ave. New York
References: T. M. A. No. 1 N. Y.
T. P. U. No. 1 N. Y. or T. P. U. in Theatre of your own town or city

BIOGRAPH FILMS

TRADE MARK TRADE MARK

RELEASED JANUARY 17, 1910

ON THE REEF

A BIOGRAPH STORY OF A FATAL MISTAKE

Love is not in our power, nor is it in our choice. We only love when fate ordains we should. This was the sad experience of the heroine of this story, who, to comply with the deathbed request of her mother, marries an old friend of the family. Her mother wishes this that her family's future welfare may be assured. The friend is a widower beyond the middle age, and the father of a young child. The wife has all she can wish for, but her heart is untouched, until later she meets a young man, who she realizes she loves and who loves her. Both honorable, the young man, to avoid wrong, goes to parts unknown. The husband, however, learns of this attraction and the shock kills him. Here she is now alone, she feels, until the thought of his child awakens interest and she will devote herself to the care of it.

LENGTH, 988 FEET

RELEASED JANUARY 20, 1910

THE CALL

A STORY OF LIFE UNDER THE "WHITE TOP"

There is possibly no profession as alluring as that of circus performer. Once you have cavorted about in the sawdust you become inoculated with the germ of the circus fever. Edith was engaged as a dancer with a traveling tent show and collapses under the arduous work. Her plight is witnessed by a young farmer who offers to marry her and take her away from the life of the circus. A second breakdown and discharge decides her. She marries the young man, but often feels the longing for the arena. During the following season the same show plays the village and are in need of a dancer. The temptation becomes irresistible and she goes to join, but arriving at the dressing tent she sees the old life in a different light, and retraces her steps to her humble home entirely cured.

LENGTH, 989 FEET

A Full Description of these Subjects will be Found on Another Page

Release days of Biograph Subjects — MONDAY and THURSDAY

Get on Our Mail List and Keep Posted. Write for Our Descriptive Circulars

BIOGRAPH COMPANY
Licensee of the Motion Picture Patents Co.
11 EAST 14th STREET :: NEW YORK
GEORGE KLEINE, Selling Agent for Chicago (52 State St., Chicago, Ill.).

Films For Sale 50 new reels of perfect film, extra good condition, to close out, at $18.50. Second hand Edison machines for sale at a bargain. Parts to fit all machines in stock
MAYER SILVERMAN, 322 Fulton Bldg., Pittsburg, Pa.

FOR RENT—Up-to-date picture theater. Slant floor; fine opera chairs; good location; seats nearly 300; hustling New England city of 30,000 population. For further information inquire A. L. REEVES, Danielson, Conn.

FOR SALE—Good paying 5c. theater in city of 85,000. If interested address R. Z., care Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE—A handsomely decorated motion picture house. Best location in New York City. A money maker. Reasonable terms. Quick action. F. W. MOORE, 18 West 108th St., New York City.

Films I have a system of keeping away from Repeaters. No reels older than one year. This sounds bad but not half as bad as it is to hand you gunc three years old.
I am open and frank and tell you what you get for your money—Try me for a week anyhow. You can't lose.
PURDY'S FILM EXCHANGE
300 EAST 23d STREET, Cor. 2nd Ave., NEW YORK CITY

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER
Miror Vitae Products," Projectors, Cameras, Film-Making Machinery, Films, Slides, Stereopticons, Specialties, Lens Grinding, etc. Special condensors, carbons and lugs.
109 East 12th Street, New York

FOR SALE
In manufacturing city of BATAVIA, N. Y.
a first-class 10c vaudeville house; fine chairs; capacity 200; location Main Street—heart of city. Everything running to good business; incline floor, elegant stage. Good reputation. Can be bought reasonable—owner has other interests. A chance for a man who knows the business.
Address: J. LEE, Batavia, N. Y.

BIOGAPH COMPANY.

ON THE REEF.—Love is not in our power, nor is it in our choice. We only love when fate ordains we should. Such was the experience of poor Grace Wallace, who acceded to her mother's last request to marry the man she selected. Grace was the only child of a widow of decidedly meager means. Mr. Rupert Howland, a widower of considerable wealth, the father of a girl child, and an old friend of the family, often surreptitiously helped them. He dearly loved the young girl, but it was only at the death-bed of Mrs. Wallace that he really showed it. The poor woman at the point of death realized the helplessness of those she was leaving behind—her own aged parents and her daughter Grace. To assure their future she begged Grace to marry their dear friend, and Grace, touched by the man's goodness and her mother's condition, consented. Not content with the promise, she asked that the marriage take place at once by her bedside, and the wish was granted. Poor Grace struggled hard to love the dear old man, but while she admired and respected him, and was profoundly grateful for his kindness, she could not love him. It was not that she loved another, it was simply that their hearts were not affined. Her only happiness was to visit and ameliorate the burden of her grandparents, which she was able to do. Of course, Rupert's little one, Elsie, strongly appealed to her. However, resigned to her lot, she endeavored to make the best of it and hoped for a change in her nature. Here fate intervened, and one day Rupert introduces her to his friend, Mr. Wilson, a young and prosperous author. It was love at first sight, and the more they struggled the tighter they were caught in the net. Each fully appreciated their moral obligations and fought to down the tendencies of their inclination until at last an open declaration is made. At first it is delectable to Grace, but in a moment her better self asserts itself and she repulses his advances. Leaving her he goes home, writes her a note that he is going to where she will never see or hear of him again. Sending the note by a messenger, he leaves for parts unknown. This note falls into the hands of Rupert, and the shock proves too much for his weak heart, and he succumbs to the crushing blow. Rupert dead, Wilson gone forever, she feels she is indeed alone in the world. She sits sobbing in her room, when little Elsie, weeping bitterly over the loss of her father, enters. Grace's heart goes out to the child and feels that this is all there is to live for. She will devote her life to it.

THE CALL.—A story of life under the "white top." There is possibly no profession as alluring as that of circus performer. To reason it out, appreciating their hardships and many privations, we must conclude there is a fascination about it that is simply irresistible. Once you have cavorted and capered about in the sawdust you become inoculated with the germ of "Febris Circensis"—in other words, the circus fever, and there is no positive antidote. Strong wills become weak under the intoxicating influence of the sawdust's exhalations; the shrill-voiced steam calliope, the guttural bleating of the bally-hoo, with his iridescent collection of adjectives, and the near-Rembrandtian paintings portraying the wonders that are "alive! alive! and on the inside!" All this considered, few will wonder at the struggles of the pretty little heroine of this Biograph subject. Edith Lawson is engaged as the star dancer of a traveling tent show. Her circus name is Fatima. Billy Harvey, one of the performers, and a part owner of the show, is, or rather pretends to be, in love with Fatima, and she loves him in return. The arduous duties have made the poor girl ill but her managers cruelly insist that she must appear, as she is a feature. During her dance, however, she faints from weakness, and the audience is dismissed. Amos Holden, a young merchant in the village, who is in the audience, is deeply moved by the poor girl's predicament, and determines to help her. He writes her a letter which she receives after her second attempt and failure to go through her dance. She is discharged and cast adrift by her managers, and as a resort seeks out Amos. He has fallen in love with her and she never having been accorded such tender treatment feels for the first time the power of pure honest love. Shortly afterwards they were married, and Edith seems happy and has grown strong in her new life. She feels that the circus fever has left her forever, but one day during the following year she finds a handbill advertising the return engagement of "Harvey's mammoth aggregation of celebrities," and the fancied smell of the sawdust reaches her nostrils. The inclination is almost overpowering, and a surreptitious visit from Harvey decides her. Leaving a note for her husband, she goes back to the circus, but it is not many moments before she realizes the error of her way, and how loathsome are the surroundings. Hence she rushes from the tent to her home to find her letter has not yet fallen into the hands of Amos. Edith is now thoroughly cured of the circus fever. The production is rather novel, depicting with true atmospheric strength the life of a circus performer.

EDISON MFG. CO.

IN THE NICK OF TIME.—Fast living and gambling have caused the cashier of Riverdale Bank to embezzle large sums of money from the safe, at which stage of affairs the story of the picture begins. He has succeeded in evading detection by manipulating the bank's books, but upon news being received of the coming of the official bank examiner he realizes that he stands face to face with ruin and arrest. Through the aid of a friendly newspaper reporter he gives forth false impressions regarding the bank's financial standing. This is done with the intent to cause a run on the bank, by means of which he hopes to be able to evade detection for a time at least.

In the meantime one of the bookkeepers of the bank, who is loved by the president's daughter, has been ordered to report for duty upon the practice maneuvers of the Engineers' Corps of the National Guard of which he is a member. After obtaining permission from the president and bidding his sweetheart farewell, he leaves to fulfil his duty. On the following morning the sensational newspaper article appears, and the president and his daughter arriving at the bank in their auto, are surprised to see a pushing, struggling crowd in front of the door clamoring for their money. The president's appeal to the depositors is fruitless. At last he decides to negotiate for a loan of $50,000 in ready cash from a neighboring bank at Junction City, twenty miles away. Consulting a time table, he finds that the trip cannot be made by train in time for the money to be of avail, and is at his wit's end, when his daughter suggests that she be permitted to make it by auto. He willingly consents.

The plan becomes known to the guilty cashier, who, realizing his immediate danger should the run be stopped, decides to take a desperate chance and delay the auto's return with the money by blowing up the bridge between the two towns. This he accomplishes in a very thrilling and dramatic manner. After securing the money the bank president's daughter arrives at the bridge, only to find it destroyed. She realizes that all is lost unless she can reach the bank with the money in time. Suddenly remembering that her sweetheart is camped in the neighborhood with his Engineers' Corps, she appeals to him for aid. The matter is placed before the Captain, and in a few moments orders are flying from aCptain to Lieutenants. Not a second is lost, and in one minute after the arrival at the destroyed bridge the Engineers' Corps have built their first pontoon or floating boat. This is launched into the stream preparatory to building a pontoon bridge to carry the president's daughter in her auto containing the $50,000 in money across the stream. Pontoon after pontoon is rowed into place, stags, styles and flooring are quickly lashed upon these floating boats, and in less time than it takes to tell it the auto carrying its precious weight, the girl, her sweetheart and a detachment of guards, is seen dashing across the bridge and on its way to their destination, Riverdale Bank, ten miles away.

The guilty cashier returns to the banks sees the auto coming, and in his desperation draws his revolver and fires upon its occupants. The soldiers immediately respond with a volley. One of the bullets finds the heart of the guilty man, who with folded arms is left to keep his lonely watch at the cross roads while the auto dashes on without further hindrance and arrives at the bank just in the nick of time to save it from ruin.

THE COQUETTE.—A young officer of a regiment from one of the Western States fell in love with a young lady in San Francisco and was accepted by her. They exchanged love tokens, he giving her his seal ring and she giving him a locket containing her portrait. Some months after he had gone to the Philippines with his regiment the young lady met an officer of a regiment from one of the Eastern States, who became smitten with her. Instead of discouraging his attentions she acted as though her heart was free, and brought about a proposal from the second man. In accepting him she gave him the ring presented to her by the first suitor.

By a strange coincidence the two suitors were engaged in the same skirmish with some Filipinos. The man from the Western regiment was mortally wounded and died in the arms of the man from the East. Just before expiring he noticed his ring upon the finger of the man in whose arms he was held. Questions from him brought forth explanations, and he informed the young officer from the East that the ring was his and that the girl had accepted him as her sweetheart. On returning to California the young Easterner visited the girl. She advanced to meet him with a glad heart, but her happiness soon turned to remorse when he told her in vigorous language of having met the man she had so basely wronged.

THE LUCK OF ROARING CAMP.—Bret Harte's stories have for years stood as the standard of artistic and true delineation of Western life, in which field he was undoubtedly the first.

Briefly, the story deals with a certain mining camp around the time of '49 and the arrival of a young wife from the East with her little boy. Her husband, who was one of the miners in the camp, has died, and it is left to the rough men gathered in the barroom on the widow's arrival to tell her of her loss. This they do in an uncouth way, but with some delicacy after all. She does not long survive the news of the loss of her husband, and the little child is left alone lacking a mother's care in such incongruous surroundings. How the miners take up a collection for the "kid," contributing personal ornaments, revolves, knives and even a whiskey bottle, is shown, grotesquely perhaps, but in such a way as to cause tears rather than laughter. Finally the child, in playing near the camp, discovers gold and this leads to its formal adoption by the camp.

ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.

WON BY A HOLD-UP.—Our friend, Bill Smith, a cowpuncher, in the employ of Jim Parsons, a gruff old rancher, is stung by Cupid's arrow, succumbing this time to the irresistible smile of Nell Parsons, the ranchman's daughter. After a short courtship, pretty Nell is won—as far as she is concerned, but when Bill starts to put the ring on her finger, she doubtfully waves it aside, referring him first to the lord of her household, her father.

Jim is a rough old aristocrat and guards his daughter with jealous pride. "She's fit for a king, and no one else will have her," Jim has remarked from time to time, and when Bill and his sweetheart brace him on the subject, Jim turns from the farm implement he is tinkering with and kicks Bill off the premises.

The young lovers try all means to win the old gentleman, but their meetings are invariably frustrated. On one occasion Bill sends a note to Nell to meet him at a certain place, which is intercepted by Jim, who gives the youth another thrashing and himself waits for his daughter. When she arrives he surprises her and leads her back to the house by the ear.

The two lovers are unanimous in their opinion that Dad is an old reprobate who needs a lesson. They must win him by foul means or fair and Bill, being of inventive turn of mind, concocts an excellent plan. He enlists two of his inseparable comrades and instructs them to mask themselves, waylay the old gentleman on his way to town and after giving him a good scare, he will dash up, disperse the robbers and thus win the affections and admiration of his reluctant prospective father-in-law.

The scheme works well and turns out just like a fairy story. Dad is won over and agrees to the marriage, notwithstanding the fact that the two cowpunchers, who posed as murderous brigands, in an effort to get their guns returned to them, interview old Jim and lay bare the secret.

FLOWER PARADE AT PASADENA, CAL.—Pasadena, several miles out of Los Angeles, is one of the most beautiful of the minor cities in the world. Its delightful climate, exhilarating air and other attractive advantages has made it world-famous as a Winter resort and it is estimated that Pasadena is the Winter home of more American millionaires than any other Southern city. The citizens of Pasadena have assisted Mother Nature in her work in the building of beautiful homes and the construction of beautiful paved streets and shaded park drives.

Southern California, in Springtime, is a veritable earthly paradise. Bright, sweet-smelling flowers of every description and specie grow in prolific abundance, without the touch or care of any human hand. The earth is riotous with rich coloring and sweet fragrance.

The flower parade in Pasadena, an annual celebration, occurs in the Spring of each year, and outrivals the world-famous Fete of the Flowers at Nice, in France Preparations are made a month or more ahead of time and every vacant lot and patch of ground available is sown with rade flowers.

The great parade is a marvel of artistic beauty in the designs of the many beflowered floats. Many Los Angeles and Pasadena business firms are represented with clubs and associations and private individuals, each striving to outrival the others in the gorgeousness and beaty of the decorations of their floats and carriages.

THE CONFESSION.—Brandon Sherman, our hero, is a phonograph enthusiast and a poet. As he writes his verses he records them upon his phonograph that, in his morbid fancies, he may, "Listen to the children of his thoughts, the passions of his soul." He is interrupted one afternoon while at his phonograph by the entrance of his sister Jane and his betrothed, Gertrude Hale. He is finally persuaded to leave his work to accompany them to the home of Gertrude's uncle, Philip Hale, an exacting man, at whose hands Gertrude suffers indignities and much cruelty.

While wandering about the beautiful Hale gardens the old gentleman meets them and being bitterly opposed to Brandon orders him from the place. Hale, in his anger, strikes Gertrude with his cane, which so angers the young man that he bitterly denounces Gertrude's guardian and is saved from personally attacking him by the interference of the gardener. The scene ends in the bodily ejection of Brandon from the premises, Jane is ordered off and Gertrude sent to her room.

Brandon is so incensed that he cannot sleep until he exacts an apology from Hale. Later he en-

SONG SLIDES

JUST ILLUSTRATED

I've Just Got Time To Say Good Bye
Daddy's Doll
Could You Learn To Love Me
Dreams That I Dream Of You
My Irish Prairie Queen

We make Lantern Slides of anything and everything for any and every purpose

Send for our special prices on Announcement Slides

NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO., 143 North 8th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SONG SLIDES

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED IN THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS, YOU SHOULD SUBSCRIBE FOR THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD. $2.00.

NOVELTY
TRADE MARK
PUZZLETTES

WILL POSITIVELY
Increase your NET profits by pleasing your patrons
CONVINCE YOURSELF
Rent a set from your exchange or from us direct
DO IT NOW
NOVELTY SLIDE COMPANY
221 East 53rd Street 10 East 14th Street
NEW YORK CITY

Keep the Same Crowd Coming

Drummers and transients help some in the motion picture game, because their money's just as good as anybody's—but it isn't so continuous. The family, neighborhood crowd is the crowd you want, and the thing that gets their patronage, and holds it, is good, clear, steady pictures and no long waits between—the kind of pictures that the gives. Don't risk the success of your business by purchasing a machine that may cost a little bit less in the beginning, and is sure to cost a whole lot more to operate, and will eat up your profits on repairs. Buy an Edison Kinetoscope and be sure of good, clear profits and constant patronage.

EDISON KINETOSCOPE

Write to-day for booklet, giving full details as to why the Edison is the machine that you should buy—also copy of the Edison Kinetogram.

EDISON FILMS

Releases of January 18 and 21

RELEASE OF JANUARY 18

IN THE NICK OF TIME

A virile melodrama of love, hate, revenge and death, in which are shown a run on a bank, an exciting auto ride, the blowing up of a bridge, the erection of a pontoon bridge by Co. "K", 22nd (N. Y.) Regiment, Engineer Corps and a cross-road fight. Thrillingly dramatic.

No. 6576 Code, VESCIMUR Approx. Length, 975 feet

RELEASES OF JANUARY 21

THE COQUETTE

Dramatic. A true story of the Philippine insurrection in which two U. S. Army officers learn on the field of battle that they are engaged to the same woman. The one dying, the other rebukes her falseness.

No. 6577 Code, VESCOVADO Approx. Length, 495 feet

THE LUCK OF ROARING CAMP

Bret Harte's famous story of the mining days of '49, adapted and presented with but slight necessary changes. A delicate blending of humor and pathos; a film that appeals to the heart.

No. 6578 Code, VESCOVESSA Approx. Length, 490 feet

Releases of January 25 and 28

RELEASE OF JANUARY 25

A WOMAM'S STRATEGY (Dramatic)

No. 6579 Code, VESCOVILE Approx. Length, 975 feet

RELEASES OF JANUARY 28

A GEORGIA POSSUM HUNT (Descriptive)

No. 6580 Code, VESCULORUM Approx. Length, 140 feet

THE SKIPPER'S YARN

No. 6518 Code, VESCULOS Approx. Length, 850 feet

ORDER DISPLAY POSTERS OF THESE FILMS FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR THE A. B. C. COMPANY, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

EDISON MANUFACTURING CO.

MAIN OFFICE and FACTORY: 72 LAKESIDE AVE., ORANGE, N. J.

New York Office: 10 Fifth Avenue. Chicago Office: 90 Wabash Ave.
Office for United Kingdom: Edison Works, Victoria Road, Willesden, N. W., England.

Dealers in All Principal Cities

O. T. Crawford's Film Service

ACKNOWLEDGED

"BETTER THAN THE BEST"

Let us convince you that we can give you just the service you require. Better write to-day.

O. T. CRAWFORD FILM EXCHANGE CO.
1401 Locust Street 319 Fourth Avenue
ST. LOUIS, MO. LOUISVILLE, KY.

CHEAP
Steel Frame Theatre Chairs
ABSOLUTELY Non-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small theatres and Moving Picture shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs Also Seating for Out of-Door Use.

Address Dept. W,
STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich.

New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue
Boston Office: 224 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

counters the old gentleman in the latter's conservatory. The old man again orders him off and enraged by the young fellow's impudence strikes him again with his cane. Brandon wrests the cane from Hale's hands and in turn belabors him across the shoulders. Hale is beaten down among his plants and in the confusion a giant fern is joggled from its pedestal, crushing Hale's skull. Panic-stricken, the young man turns and runs away.

There has been no eyewitness and suspicion never turns toward Brandon. For six weeks the mystery of the cause of death has not been solved, but finally an extra announces the verdict—accidental death. Brandon, who has suffered untold misery, instead of being comforted or relieved, lapses into hysteria and says the paper lies.

In the persistent solitude his mind weakens beneath the strain of remorse and mortal fear. His soul yearns to confess to someone the awful secret that he himself killed Philip Hale. He calls his sister that he may confess to her, but his voice chokes on the first word and he drives her from him. Falling on his knees he pleads Divine aid to help him unburden his soul.

As if in response to his pleadings, his eyes rest upon the phonograph before him and an inner voice bids him "record his confession there." In feverish haste he adjusts the cylinder and placing his mouth to the machine murmurs tremulously: "I killed Philip Hale, but it was in self defense! Brandon Sherman."

A knock at the door interrupts him as he is removing the tell-tale cylinder. He opens the door to admit his sister Jane. She notes his nervousness and asks him what he is recording. "Poetry! Poetry!" he answers, but she is not convinced and resolves to hear for herself. On the pretext of obtaining something from an adjoining room, she sends him out, then locking the door adjusts the cylinder and starts the machines.

As the little clay cylinder begins unfolding, in her brother's tremulous voice, the confession he has made, Jane staggers back in dismay. The youth in a paroxysm of mingled rage, despair, delirium, bangs on the door, then seizes a chair and dashing the door to flinders leans through the aperture he has made, wildly demanding the record. The girl unlocks the door, he reels into the room and falls into a chair dazed. Jane, by this time horror stricken, takes the record from the phonograph and Brandon dashes it to the floor.

The boy, completely unstrung, heartbroken, his life crushed out of him, sinks back sobbing as Gertrude Hale enters. A moment later, with his two dearest ones at his side, he falls back in his chair lifeless, the broken record of his confession lying in scattered fragments at his feet.

GAUMONT.

(George Kleine.)

FATAL FASCINATION.—A beautiful and capricious young woman, the only daughter of a farmer, is sought in marriage by a rich young man.

Her father insists that she accept the young man, but as she does not love him she declines. The rejected lover, understanding the ways of womankind, makes love to the pretty maid of the girl he really wants to marry, in order to attract the tetention and arouse the jealousy of the one he loves.

The poor servant girl takes the young man's advances all too seriously and falls deeply in love with him.

This brings the farmer's daughter to the point where she is willing to marry the young man. Unfortunately for the poor maidservant, she appears on the scene just as the lovers pledge their troth and the shock proves too much for her. The fatal fascination exercised by the young man over her causes her to die of a broken heart.

GETTING SQUARE WITH THE INVENTOR.—An ingenious and inventive watchmaker conceives the idea of making a clock-work motor powerful enough to propel every kind of vehicle.

By way of experiment, he attaches his clock-work motor to a baby carriage, while the nurse is not looking. The effect is very startling to the nurse and baby, though highly satisfactory to the inventor, as proving the efficiency of his device.

Next, he applies his motor to a porter and then to a coachman, who thinks that his horse is running away.

The various victims of these experiments meet and combine forces to revenge themselves on the watchmaker.

They attach his spring motors to his own heels, thus proving to him beyond all doubt how effective his invention really is, and at the same time enabling them all to "get square" with the inventor.

SWALLOWED BY THE DEEP.—A beautiful young Princess is so rich that there is practically nothing left for her to desire. She is so satiated with good things that she does not know what to do to enjoy herself. Several handsome young Princes seek her hand in marriage, but she refuses them all as she does not love anyone. One day, in a moment of waywardness, she throws a goblet into the sea with the remark that she will share her throne with the man who succeeds in bringing it back to her.

No one among her admirers has the courage to plunge into the sea in order to recover the cup.

A young sailor who has admired the Princess since the day he first saw her, makes up his mind that he will get the goblet at all costs.

Accordingly, he invokes the aid of the Fairies of the Sea. One of them, disguised as an old woman, appears and undertakes to conduct him to the spot where the cup lies.

He recovers it, but has to promise to return to the Mermaid Queen whenever he hears the sound of her conch-shell horn.

Then he presents himself at the palace of the Princess and presents the goblet to her.

She fulfills her promise and rewards him with her hand and half of her kingdom. The Mermaid, still disguised as an old woman, comes to the wedding. She is turned away by the courtiers. In revenge, she waits until the bridal pair are alone and about to retire for the night. Then the Mermaid's horn sounds a loud blast! The bridegroom starts for he recalls his rash promise to return to the Mermaid Queen at the call of the horn. He hesitates and lingers with his bride. The castle with the Princess and her husband and their courtiers and retainers then slowly sinks and is swallowed up by the deep.

KALEM MFG. CO.

THE MAGIC FLOWER.—For years and years—yes, hundreds and hundreds of years, fairy tales have been the most popular means of entertaining the children, and even the grown-ups, too, for that matter. And it is not without good reason that their popularity has never lagged, for, aside from their beauty and wonderful charm of mystery, they always carry with them a moral—that is—"good deeds never fail to receive their reward."

Scene I.—First we see the beautiful Magic Flower itself, and as its fragrant petals slowly unfold, it discloses the radiant, happy face of Little Marjorie, the heroine of our story, who begs your indulgence while the story proceeds.

Scene II.—Marjorie and Her Mother are Evicted from Their Home.

Scene III.—Marjorie, in Desperation, Decides to Beg for Food.

Scene IV.—Marjorie Receives Two Pieces of Bread.

Scene V.—Marjorie Gives Her Share of Bread to the Good Fairy, Who Is Disguised as a Beggar Woman.

Scene VI.—Marjorie Receives the Magic Flower, Which Will Grant Any Wish. As Marjorie came running down the path she noticed what appeared to be an old beggar woman, who stopped her and begged for a bite to eat. Now Marjorie only had two slices of bread, one for her mother and one for herself, and she was very hungry too, but out of sympathy for the old woman she gave her her own share of the bread and started away. But the old woman stopped her again and waving her staff, which was really a fairy's wand, she caused a beautiful flower to suddenly grow on a bush by the side of the path, which she plucked and gave to Marjorie, telling her that it would grant her any wish. Marjorie accepted the flower and thanking the old woman hurried to take the remaining piece of bread back to her mother. The old woman then transformed herself back to the good fairy and gazed fondly after her.

Scene VII.—Marjorie's Mother Revived.

Scene VIII.—Marjorie and Her Mother, Homeless, Take Refuge in the Park.

Scene IX.—The Golden Loaf—The Magic Flower Works Wonders. Marjorie found the Magic Flower on the ground where it had fallen from her lap and remembering what the old beggar woman had said about its power to grant any wish, decided to try it and wish for bread. The wish was no sooner uttered than a loaf of bread appeared in her lap. Marjorie was so startled that she hastened to waken her mother and showed her the bread and the Magic Flower, and told her all about how she got them. And when she broke the loaf of bread in two to share it with her mother, lo and behold! it was filled with golden coin. Their happiness was unbounded and they laughed and cried all in the same breath. The wonder of it even made them forget their hunger. Marjorie kissed and loved the Magic Flower while her mother busied herself picking up the coin which she placed in the pocket of her apron. By this time Marjorie was so taken with the wonders and possibilities of the Magic Flower that she decided to wish again, and noticing her mother's shabby garments wished that her mother was better clothed. "No sooner spoken than done." There stood her mother beautifully dressed. With all this good fortune Marjorie never once thought of herself, until her mother called her attention to her own poor rags of clothes. One more wish, and Marjorie was as beautifully dressed as her mother. Their happiness was unbounded.

Scene X.—In the Greenhouse—Marjorie Now Wealthy, Wishes for Playmates.

Scene IX.—Ten Years Later—Marjorie Has One More Wish Gratified. The years rolled on, and Marjorie grew to be a beautiful young lady. The Magic Flower had granted wish after wish until there did not seem to be anything left to wish for, but one day she was standing on the beautiful terrace overlooking her magnificent estate, when there suddenly appeared before her, the Prince of her dreams. She had unconsciously expressed a wish which the Magic Flower immediately granted. The Prince was an ardent lover and soon won Marjorie's heart completely.

Scene XII.—And They Lived Happily Ever Afterward. And so the Prince brought her to his beautiful palace, and as he clasped her in his arms and the dear little flower girls and pages entwined them in a garland of flowers, her happines was complete and she felt sure that there was nothing more on earth that she could wish for.

PATHE FRERES.

MISS MONEYBAGS WISHES TO WED.—The heiress, Miss Moneybags, makes up her mind to marry, so, accompanied by her father and mother, she applies at a matrimonial agency where she is shown photographs of the different eligibles on their list, for he must possess good looks besides being a man of aristocratic birth. Several photographs are examined and cast aside until the proprietor of the agency shows them a picture of a handsome but impecunious nobleman who immediately attracts the young girl's fancy. In the next scene we see the handsome, impecunious one receiving the telephone message from the agent, saying he has an heieress for him and to come at once to the office. In his haste he wrecks the room, knocks down a fat woman on the stairs and collides with everything from an automobile to a baby carriage he meets on the way. Although spick-and-span enough when he started out he arrives at the matrimonial agency looking like the only surviving member of a railroad wreck. When the girl sees him she begins to cry with disappointment and the father storms around the room at the deception that has been practiced upon them. The aspirant pleads for mercy and taking the father aside explains the case to him and prevails upon him to change clothes with him. When he reappears wearing the old gentleman's frock coat he is quite presentable and the girl takes him to her heart. But the poor father who is waiting in another room decked out in the torn and tattered garments of the young man is soon set upon by a howling mob that bursts into the place looking for the man who in his hasty dash through the streets but a few moments before had aroused their indignation by colliding with and injuring each and every one of them in turn.

WOMEN IN INDIA.—The women in India spend their time in making their toilet, in sweet idleness and in prayer. They are passionately fond of jewelry. Their dress consists of tight trousers with sleeveless waist over which is worn a piece of cloth of more or less value. The poorest of them deck themselves out with jewelry of all kinds. The women of India as a rule are brought up in ignorance. Formerly a widow was supposed to be burnt up with her husband's corpse. To-day, however, she has the choice of becoming a public dancing girl if she wishes to live after her husband's death. In the evening they go in groups to the temple for prayer, throwing flowers by the roadside as they pass along. It is thus we see them in the last picture of this pretty film.

THE BEGGAR'S REPENTANCE.—A famished beggar finds a bank note on the street and stifling the voice of his conscience he goes to the baker's to buy some bread. Once his hunger is appeased, however, his conscience bothers him to such an extent that he goes to the church and places the money in the poor box. The pastor sees him and becomes suspicious at such a very generous offering from such a shabby looking stranger and decides to follow him. As it happens a young clerk lost the money the beggar found and was discharged by his employer as a thief. Driven to despair by such an accusation the boy decides to drown himself, and as fate would have it the beggar happened to be on the river bank and is successful in saving the boy's life. The latter tells him of losing the money and of his employer's accusation and his own despair. After hearing the boy's story the beggar confessed his fault and the pastor, who had been following the beggar comes forward, explains to the boy how the former had tried to make up for his momentary weakness. All ends well and the beggar is given a good steady job for his honesty.

STORY OF A LEG.—The one-legged fellow seen in this picture is a wonder much more nimble than many men possessing both limbs. His wife arranges his necktie and sees him to the door as he starts out for his customary walk, telling him to be very careful not to get run over. He goes to the park and falls asleep on one of the benches. Some bad boys come along and tie one of his legs to the bench. They then tickle him with a straw and as he awakens suddenly and starts up after them, lo and behold he leaves his leg behind. With a worried expression on his face he picks up the leg and hops all the way home. His wife is enraged when she sees what has happened and throws the unoffending cork limb out of the window. A ragpicker finds it and carrying it along with him meets a legless cripple seated on the sidewalk begging. The ragpicker gives him the leg and he fastens it on to one of his stumps and jumps up as good as new and travels as quickly on that one leg without any crutch or cane, as most men do on two. The one-legged man in this film is surely a wonder.

ON A RACKET.—Monty is overjoyed because he has got his degree and when his generous father hears the good news he presents his son with a goodly amount of money which the latter decides to spend in having a glorious time in celebration of the event. He therefore sends a note to a chum and tells him to meet him at "The Terrace"

KALEM FILMS

Issue of January 21, 1910

THE MAGIC FLOWER

LENGTH 860 FEET (Approx)

"THE MAGIC FLOWER"

is the second of our new series of Fairy Stories of American Children, and is so good that it has determined the date of our second weekly reel—i. e., Wednesday, February 2, 1910.

REMEMBER! Commencing Wednesday, February 2 THE KALEM COMPANY will release two reels each week, one on Wednesday and the other on Friday

The second reel will be almost exclusively the product of our new and splendid studio in the Eastman Kodak Building, a studio which represents the very last word in the photographic art. The output will be confined largely to mystery and comedy themes and is in charge of one of the strongest producing forces in the business. We can assure exhibitors that this new KALEM release will embody decided novelties. We are confident that the exchanges will welcome it, and we trust you will make your advance arrangements accordingly.

Kalem posters can be obtained from your exchange or by mail from the A. B. C. Co., of Cleveland, O.

Free Descriptive Lectures Sent to all Applicants

KALEM CO., Inc.

Eastman Kodak Building

235-237-239 WEST 23rd STREET
NEW YORK CITY

SLIDES

of Highest Quality

LATEST SONG SETS

In The City Where Nobody Cares.
I Rather Say Hello Than Say Good Bye.
Every Girl I Get The Other Fellow Steals.
I Love My Steady But I'm Crazy About My Once In Awhile.
Candy
I Have Got Something In My Eye.
Kitty.
Chasing The Eagle.
If I Thought You Wouldn't Tell.
Anywhere.
I've Got Rings On My Fingers And Bells On My Toes.
Amina.

High class slides made and colored to order from prints and negatives

Scott & Van Altena
59 Pearl St., New York City

NEW SLIDES

For the Following Songs—JUST OUT

Mandy How Do You Do.
Margarita.
Love Me Dreamy Eyes.
Nora Malone.
By the Light of the Silvery Moon.
There's Nothing Else in Life Like Love, Love, Love.
Take Me Back to Sunshine Land.
Mary you're a Big Girl Now.
My Dream of Long Ago.
When I Fell in Love With You.
Rosenbaum.
When You've Won the Only Girl You Love.
Just a Girl Like You.
In the Harbor of Sunshine and Love.
Round Up.
Would You be Satisfied, Sally?
You'll Come Back.
Put On Your Old Grey Bonnet.
Heinz.

DeWitt C. Wheeler

120 W. 31st St., N. Y. City

CALEHUFF

A Member of the
FILM SERVICE ASSOCIATION

Headquarters for only the best of latest FILMS and SONG SLIDES. No junk. MACHINES, SUPPLIES, Etc.

LATEST SONG SLIDES
$5.00 per set

N. E. Cor. 4th & Green Streets,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

"TITLE POSTERS"

The Only Practical and Economical

Moving Picture Posters

A POSTER FOR EVERY PICTURE

$7.50 a Month. Express Prepaid

SEND FOR FREE SAMPLE

TITLE POSTER CO.
231-233 Bowery, New York

Canadian Exhibitors

Looking for a first-class film service, write the Crystal Palace Film Exchange for particulars. We handle both Licensed and Independent films and can give you a right up-to-date service. We own and operate the most successful Moving Picture Theaters in Canada.

Located at

141 Yonge Street, Toronto.
331 St. Lawrence Blvd., Mont.
27 King Street East, Hamilton.

Agents for Power's and Edison Machines.

Crystal Palace Film Exchange
141 Yonge Street. Toronto, Can.

with two "queens" and he will foot the bill. He then proceeds to get into his evening clothes and we soon see him hastening away to join his friends. He finds the friend and the queens and they surely do make a night of it. Monty is the life of the party and not only keeps his own friends amused but has everybody in the cafe in roars of laughter at his wonderfully amusing doings. In a most good natured way he takes up a siphon and squirts the contents over an inoffensive gentleman sitting at the next table. The gentleman naturally take umbrage at this want of courtesy and strikes Monty. The latter hauls off and is evidently about to give him a telling blow, but just as his fist is about to come in contact with the man's head he changes his mind and smilingly places his arm about his neck and embraces him most affectionately. Of course the man's wrath is immediately turned to amusement and everything ends up satisfactorily. Nine bottles of champagne having already been consumed by the party and Monty himself drinks a tenth from his own hat. This of course brings down the house and the party finally gets so hilarious that they are all put out. When Monty reaches his home, mistaking the open window for his closet, he opens it and throws all his clothes piece by piece out into the street, thinking he is carefully hanging each piece away in the closet. His parents finally find him asleep on the dining room table with his head resting in the cheese cake.

A STAG HUNT IN JAVA.—The coloring in this picture is exquisite. The stags are so graceful and so gentle it really seems a shame to kill them. They are so very timid that the sportsmen have to be very careful not to frighten the pretty creatures, so they steal up with the softest kind of a tread and it is necessary to be a pretty good shot as it is impossible to get very near this kind of game, as the slightest rustling or noise sends them scampering in all directions. The huntsmen here are most successful and bring down several specimens. The whole view of the hunt is most interesting and instructive.

SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.

A NEW DIVORCE CURE.—The opening scene is laid in the beautifully appointed home of Henry Morland, who has recently married a lady twenty years younger than himself, she being a social leader of the set, and fond of theaters, cafes and dances, her husband preferring his library and the many surroundings of a comfortable home.

Dolby, an Englishman, and friend of the Morlands, calls as a guest one evening. Following closely upon his arrival, a number of friends of the younger set call, and prevail upon Mrs. Morland to accompany them to a theater party. She quickly consents, the husband preferring to remain at home after an irksome day in a busy office.

The next morning Morland, arriving at this office, and upon opening his mail, finds a letter from a business friend, suggesting that unless he is more attentive to his young wife that he will find a depreciation in her affections, and his casual reference to Dolby, the Englishman, a self-appointed scion of British nobility, visiting America for the first time, in search of American dollars—the easy way, by marriage. The letter awakens Morland to his sense of duty. His books are forgotten and office affairs cast aside. A hurried visit to his home culminates in his inadvertently confronting his wife and Dolby enjoying each other's society in the conservatory. Showing the letter, he demands an explanation. The wife, resenting the insult, refuses to explain, whereupon Dolby is asked to leave. As he does so, he makes a futile attempt to explain his invasion. At this juncture the wife's mother appears and indignantly denounces Morland for his presumption and prevails upon her daughter to leave the Morland home and go with her, which she does.

At her mother's home the next morning she receives a message from her husband telling her that while he loves her, his one thought is for her happiness, and if she desires her freedom he will place no obstacles in her way. Her mother and Mr. Dolby, entering the room at the moment, are informed of the new turn of affairs. All are jubilant over the apparently easy victory, and dinner at Cafe Martin is suggested as suitable to the occasion. Soon the trio forget the droll old outer world amid the music and Bohemian atmosphere of Martin's.

The husband, by this time, has formulated his new plan for the "cure of Divorce." The green-eyed monster suggests to him a new way to pay old debts. Summoning a female detective from the agency, a dashing, handsome young woman, to act as his companion. She discovers the party has gone to Martin's for dinner. This suggests to him the first treatment of the New Cure. In the course of their dinner they are observed by the wife and her party.

Consternation pervails throughout the cafe. They hastily take their departure. On their arrival home, Mrs. Morland discovers that she loves her husband, proving the success of the New Cure. She sends for him and a reconciliation is effected. He takes her back to the same cafe, and, as a fitting termination to a turbulent evening, on arriving there, he is imbued with the idea of holding Dolby up to ridicule.

With the aid of the lady detective, who is in company with another employe of pugilistic attributes from the same office, and aided by the head waiter, who is directed to usher Dolby to the private dining room, in which will be the detective and her companion. When Dolby arrives, presumably to meet Mrs. Morland, he is escorted to the room, and "like a lamb, is led to slaughter." He falls into the trap and the noise emananting from the room in no way resembles a family reunion. The door flies open and Dolby lands squarely in the center of the cafe, looking much the worse for wear and tear. Deaf ears are turned to his pleadings and he is ejected.

Morland and his wife are happy once more and the new divorce cure demonstrates its value beyond a reasonable doubt.

THE COURTSHIP OF MILES STANDISH.—Miles Standish, as we all know, was a man among men, a warrior who knew no fear in battle, but who was very timid and abashed when it came to the wooing of the maid Priscilla. Therefore we see him requesting his young comrade, John Alden, to go to Priscilla and give her a bunch of mayflowers as a token of his love. John goes to her, and sincere in his devotion to his friend, tells her of the strength of character and of the nobility of the man who has sent him to her. He pleads, but his pleading has the wrong effect, for the maid loses her heart to him. But John cannot understand, and so he goes on urging the suit of his friend, explaining, persuading, speaking of the courage and skill of Standish and of all his battles in Flanders, until finally the truth dawns upon him as she archly smiles at him, and with tremulous voice, whispers, "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?"

Heart-torn betwixt love for the maid and duty to Standish, John returns home. At first we find him in despair as to how to tell his friend the true state of affairs, and then we see Standish with the whole naked truth upon his awakened senses, about to plunge his sword into the heart of his young friend: "John Alden, you have supplanted, defrauded, betrayed me, Miles Standish, you friend. One of my ancestors ran his sword through the heart of Wat Tyler; who shall prevent me from running my own through the heart of a traitor?"

So he speaks, and Alden, always the scholar, and yet fearless, awaits the death blow. But the scene is interrupted, for news of an Indian outbreak is reported to Standish, and buckling on the weapon with which he had threatened John, he rushes from his cabin to gather his men for action and for defense of wives and sweethearts.

The scene shifts, and we see before us an assembly of men, rugged, war-beaten, determined. The council is on, debate is held as to self-protection, and extermination of the Indian is decided, unless they smoke the pipe of peace.

Now let us wander to the Atlantic shores, where we see the Pilgrims delivering their mail to one who will bear it all to the home of their birth across the ocean, on the vessel "Mayflower." Again the scene changes, and we see Miles Standish, after a three days' march, at an Indian encampment, pitched on the edge of a meadow, between the sea and the forest. A parlay ensues between white and red, wherein Pecksuot tells Standish that he and his braves will sweep the whites from their land. Angered at such a defiance, Standish grabs the red man's knife and plunges it into his breast. As he does this, Wattawamat drives his own knife into the back of our Plymouth captain. A fight ensues and the Indians are driven over the embankment and into the sea.

Fortunately Standish recovers, and eventually, after many hardships and physical trials, he begins to think of the maid, Priscilla, more as a daughter than as one he would wed. So he goes to her home. He sees her in the arms of the man she loves, John Alden. He, poor youth, still conscious of that word "betrayer," the last that his friend had called him, expects further rebuke, but he is mistaken, for with a smile of benediction, Standish takes the hand of the maid and the hand of the youth, and joining them, smiles his approbation of two well-met, well-loved, and well united.

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

(George Kleine.)

THE COAST GUARD.—On a wild, romantic, rocky coast a young coast guard corporal is on duty, under orders to watch for smugglers. He is also in love with a young peasant girl and the match is favored by both the girl and her father.

While watching the coast one day, the young officer is overcome by the heat, lies down and falls asleep. While he sleeps the smugglers creep up on him, take away his rifle and go about their business.

The guard detail of coast guards come around to relieve the man on duty and find him asleep and his gun gone. They arrest him and take him to headquarters, where his corporal's stripes are torn from his sleeves and he is disgraced. His sweetheart and her father now dismiss him from their house and altogether things look very bad for him Clearly the only way out of his troubles is for him to perform some act of conspicuous bravery or merit. He follows up the trail of the smuggler band and succeeds in locating them. Then he summons the other coast guards to his assistance, and the smugglers are arrested.

This act results in the restoration of the corporal's stripes and the return of his sweetheart's love and favor. He is now and henceforward worthy of the name of "coast guard."

RIVA, AUSTRIA, AND THE LAKE OF GARDA.—The picturesque borderland of Austria and Italy. This film will prove a great attraction to all admirers of exquisite scenery. It certainly would be impossible to find more superb mountain and lake effects than those depicted in this glorious motion picture. The Lake of Garda reflects mountains, vineyards and sky in its placid depths. No mirror could do it more perfectly. The panoramic view of the densely wooded hills, interspersed with dazzling white buildings, lordly historic castles, ruins of ancient temples and picturesque residences cannot be rivaled anywhere. Everyone is sorry when this picture comes to an end. A thousand feet of such sublime views as are here depicted would not be too much.

THE MASTERMARK OF PICTUREDOM

DON'T FORGET TO ORDER OUR BEAUTIFUL 4-COLOR POSTERS

A NEW DIVORCE CURE 2 ON 1 Together with this "CURE" we offer you HIS VACATION

RELEASED JAN. 17th

Length, 690 Feet Code Word, Cure

Just the picture you're looking for,—to curb the Holiday Slump

Length, 310 Feet

A BIG BOUNCING BALL OF COMEDY

See it, laugh—and see it again

SELIG TRADE MARK SELIG

THE COURTSHIP OF MILES STANDISH

Length, 1,000 Feet. Released January 20th. Code Word, Dish

An adaptation of the poem by HENRY W. LONGFELLOW and dealing with the early life of the Pilgrims

Order now from your renter. It's a record breaker

SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY, Inc., 45-47-49 Randolph Street, Chicago, U.S.A.

THE MASTERMARK OF PICTUREDOM

BISON FILMS

REGULAR RELEASE DAYS

TRADE MARK

TUESDAY
WEDNESDAY
FRIDAY
SATURDAY

FOUR REELS A WEEK

Tuesday - - - - -	a "Bison"
Wednesday - - - -	Ambrosio
Friday - - - - -	a "Bison"
Saturday - - - -	Itala

Tuesday, Jan. 18th, 1910
"BISON"
A COWBOY'S REWARD
Code Valor

The maxim "Faint Heart ne'er won fair lady," was never more clearly verified than in this "Bison" production. It shows a daring rescue of father and daughter from a band of hostile Indians by a once rejected suitor.

Wednesday, Jan. 19th, 1910
"AMBROSIO"
PAULI
Code Vide

Pauli, a famous conspirator, gaining the confidence of the Duchess, plans for their flight. The Duke, learning of this, makes escape impossible by surrounding the castle with his soldiers. A fierce conflict ensues. This is a most beautiful film.

Friday, Jan. 21st, 1910
"BISON"
ROMANY ROB'S REVENGE
Code Virtu

Another frontier picture taken in the wilderness. Showing how a father, after several daring attempts, regains his stolen child from a tribe of gypsys.

Saturday, Jan. 22nd, 1910
"ITALA"
THERE ARE SOME GHOSTS
THE TEMPTING COLLAR
Code Victor

These two interesting subjects making a complete reel. Both the staging and acting have been cleverly taken care of.

LITHOGRAPHS AND POSTERS FREE

Exhibitors:—We furnish as usual all exchanges handling these productions with one sheet four colored lithographs, also posters containing synopsis, absolutely free with each reel. Demand same from your exchange as they will positively increase your box office receipts.

Brief description of all subjects will be found on another page.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
Manufacturers of "Bison" Life Motion Pictures
429 Sixth Ave., Cor. 26th St., NEW YORK CITY
PHONE 6690-1 MADISON SQ.
Cable Address: NOSIB

"BULLY FOR THE IMP"

The announcement in last week's papers that within a month there will be TWO weekly "Imp" releases instead of one, was greeted with a veritable yell of approval by Independent exhibitors and exchanges. .The telegrams, letters and telephone calls that stormed our office are the greatest encouragement the "Imp" has had since it started to manufacture films.. We'll keep you posted as to the exact date of the two-a-week release. Watch all our announcements. Meanwhile our next release (January 24) is a double-header, entitled

NEVER AGAIN
(About 615 Feet)

A ROSE OF THE PHILIPPINES
About 730 Feet)

The first part of this reel is a scream. Watch Mrs. Henpecker in "Never Again." If she doesn't make your patrons laugh till the tears flow they have the heart of a mummy, the soul of a mutt. The other part of the reel is one of the strongest love stories ever pictured. It keeps you guessing till the last few feet and then—it "turns out right."

This Week's Release
By Right of Love
Next Week's Release
Tide of Fortune

THE INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. OF AMERICA
111 East 14th Street, New York.
Carl Laemmle, President.

M. P. THEATRES WANTED

We want 500 M. P. THEATRES to install STAGES AND SCENERY, under our new plan, which gives you FIRST-CLASS, ARTISTIC, FIRE-PROOFED GOODS, WITHOUT COST TO YOU. In these progressive times, every house, no matter how small, should be prepared for occasional vaudeville. BENSON SCENIC STUDIOS, Niles, Michigan.

Films and Song Slides For Sale

We have a large number of films and slides that we will sell from one half a cent a foot up. Good condition. Write us at once as they will sell at once.

THE MIAMI FILM SERVICE
11 Fountain Square Cincinnati, Ohio

VITAGRAPH COMPANY.

THE TOYMAKER'S SECRET.—In the workshop of an old toymaker of the Tyrol we see him surrounded by the dolls, manikins and life-size figures which testify to his great skill. There is but one thing lacking to make his triumph complete, and that is to give life to the creatures of his handiwork. He is poring over a book in search of this secret and his eye rests on this paragraph:

"To bring a toy to life, place upon its forehead a drop of blood from a lover's lip."

The toymaker is elated. He goes to the window, where a life-size doll is shown looking down at the street, and causes it to nod and beckon to the people on the street below. Then he starts on his quest for the magic charm.

Meanwhile we must go back to another little episode which has been taking place. A pretty Tyrol girl shows her friend a letter from her lover:

"Sweetheart Swanhilda: Have had a prosperous voyage. My ship will dock to-day. Meet me. Your lover, Frantz."

Swanhilda meets her lover and is returning with him through this very street as the toymaker is putting the figure in the window through the life motions. Frantz sees the pretty face at the window and waves his hand. The face nods and smiles to him and he is elated and infatuated, and repels Swanhilda, who leaves him in anger. She is determined upon revenge upon the one who has stolen her lover's affections and approaches the toymaker's house as he passes out and picks up the door-key, which he has dropped. She enters and sees all the toys and approaches the window and shakes the young lady sitting there, only to find that her rival is a doll. Seeing her lover approaching, and climbing up to greet his new inamorata, Swanhilda hastily puts on the doll's dress and takes its place at the window. The toymaker returns in time to see Frantz climbing in through the window and gives him a drink, in which is a drug that puts him to sleep. The toymaker then draws a drop of blood from his lips and applies it to the forehead of what he supposes is the doll, and is delighted and surprised when Swanhilda steps down and ambles in doll-like fashion around the room. Frantz awakes and is humble and penitent when he learns of his mistake, and as he and Swanhilda march off arm in arm the old toymaker is disconsolate at the failure of his experiment. This is a weird and interesting tale and is so well acted that titles are hardly necessary to make it clear to the beholder.

A PAIR OF SCHEMERS; or, MY WIFE AND MY UNCLE.—A young married couple, the honeymoon not yet over, are comfortably settled in a neatly furnished apartment. The young wife is clearing away the table while her hubby is writing a letter as well as he can between the interruptions of lovemaking. He shows her the letter:

"Dear Jack: I am married to the dearest little woman in the world and happy except for the fact that if my rich Uncle John knew that I had married without his consent he would cut me off with a nickel. However, I hope for the best. Yours, Will."

They have hardly finished reading the letter before the bell rings and a letter is handed in which causes consternation:

"Dear Will: I am coming to visit you in New York. Think I can arrange a splendid marriage for you. Your affectionate Uncle John."

Will is in a quandary. He tells his wife that she must not be seen there, that she must hide somewhere until his uncle departs. She pouts and refuses, while he looks at his watch and becomes more and more agitated. At last an idea strikes him and he rushes into the next room and comes out with a maid's cap and apron, which he tells her to don and pass off as the maid. She is indignant at first, but finally sees the humor of the situation and assumes her duties just as the rich uncle is ushered in. There is an affectionate greeting between Will and his Uncle John, and after a smoke and a chat the uncle finally pulls out of his pocket the photograph of the woman he has selected for his nephew's wife. Will declines the choice and Uncle John is furious; he places the photo on the mantel and intimates that Will must accept his choice. Here Will's wife enters in maid's dress and begins to tidy up the room. Uncle John eyes her suspiciously and Will lightly explains that she is the hired girl from upstairs. Uncle John slyly pokes Will in the ribs and winks, but Will is justly indignant. Uncle John then makes an excuse and goes out, and Will's wife enters, and seeing the photograph of Uncle's choice, she tears it up and throws the pieces on the floor. Meanwhile, Uncle John, who is not without an eye to beauty, returns with a bouquet of flowers. Under pretext of sending Will out to mail a letter he takes the opportunity of presenting the bouquet to the pretty maid, and trying to flirt with her. She boxes his ears, and Will returns to find them both storming up and down the apartment. Explanations of course follow, and Uncle John flies into a rage and is about to take himself away, fortune and all, when Will's wife, with a winning smile, pats him on the cheek and says some pretty things, and the old chap melts and takes them both to his heart as he calls them "a pair of schemers."

FIVE MINUTES TO TWELVE. A messenger boy sauntering along the street, reading a novel, happens to look up and see that it is but five minutes to twelve, and realizing that he has but five minutes in which to get his lunch, he turns and makes a dash for the nearest pie stand. A pedestrian, thinking there is something up when he sees a messenger boy actually running, gives chase, as also a policeman and a street-sweeper. Two men are moving a large painting from a store; this the boy clears at a leap, and as the astonished bearers bring the painting to the perpendicular the others dash through it. The boy also leaps over a baker who is coming up out of a cellar with a pan of flour, but his pursuers get the full contents over them. A bridal party is coming out of a coach and the boy and his pursuers dash through their midst and all join in the chase. Fast and furious the chase continues until the messenger boy reaches the pie stand, where he buys a large pie and begins to devour it, while his disgusted pursuers shake their fists and sheepishly disperse.

LUBIN FILMS

RELEASED, MONDAY, JANUARY 17, 1910.

He Got Rid of the Moths

He got rid of the moths but he was sorry afterward that he went after them with such enthusiasm, for the tenants in a big apartment house were driven from their homes by the fumes of the sulphur candles he employed too lavishly and all sorts of trouble followed. A good story and plenty of fun make this a certain laugh getter. LENGTH, 540 FEET.

A Slippery Day

The Lubin acrobatic comedians are the talk of the country and the recent blizzard gave us a chance to make a snow scene that is a remarkable photographic achievement and at the same time as funny a knockabout comedy as you ever saw. Old Moneyton starts for the office on foot, but after many adventures he arrives back home on all fours. One of the fastest little comedies of recent weeks. LENGTH, 320 FEET.

RELEASED, THURSDAY, JANUARY 20, 1910.

The Usurper

A strong, melodramatic story of a man who impersonates his rival in love and obtains a part of the inheritance to which the latter has fallen heir. But luck turns and in the end the scoundrel is turned over to the police with three serious charges to face. In photographic quality this subject is exceptionally good but, better than that, the story is so strong and so well acted that the attention is grasped and held to the very finish. LENGTH, 905 FEET.

Send for catalogue of our 1910 machine

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY 926-928 MARKET STREET PHILADELPHIA, PA.

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a space saver, life saver and money saver. Shipped built up. It is the only sanitary theatre chair. Used by Keith, Proctor and Poli. It folds up automatically and is revolving, making the theatre all aisles. It is a friend to the public.

Send for our circular A. Write today.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO.
CANAL DOVER, OHIO

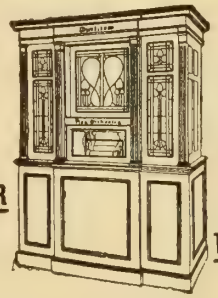
FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2.

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

Wurlitzer
55 YEARS LEADERS IN MUSIC



BETTER MUSIC AT SMALLER COST FOR ALL MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

Have you investigated the Wurlitzer PianOrchestra?

The leading Nickelodeons are putting in this marvelous Automatic Orchestra. It furnishes better music than a regular orchestra of 5 to 25 pieces, is always "on the job," and cuts out the enormous expense of musicians. The money saved pays rent.

Easy terms, less than paid to musicians. We supply the U. S. Gov't. with musical instruments. Write for big 96-page catalog & testimonial booklet showing Wurlitzer PianOrchestras in leading Nickelodeons.

The RUDOLPH WURLITZER Co
World's Largest Mfrs. Automatic Mus. Insts.
NEW YORK CINCINNATI CHICAGO
25-27 W. 32d 117-121 E. 4th 266-268 Wabash

Independent Films.

GREAT NORTHERN.

THE DEATH OF THE BRIGAND CHIEF.—For a considerable time, a company of soldiers have been endeavoring to catch a gang of brigands who have done great damage to the property of the inhabitants in the surrounding villages. At length they succeed in rounding up the brigands, who are taken and temporarily locked up in a shed guarded by two sentries under the command of a sergeant. The sergeant's sweetheart, full of pity for the exhausted and starving brigand chief, asks her fiance if she can bring the man some food. He permits her to do this, and the prisoner accepts it gratefully. After that, she persuades the sergeant to walk a little way home with her, which he does, although reluctantly, and after giving strict orders to the sentries to be on the lookout. The two sentries having taken part in the search, are tired, and after their sergeant has given them such a bad example of discipline, they fall asleep. The brigand chief, noticing the quietness, is successful in releasing himself from his bonds, and manages to steal away. He has hardly left, however, when the sergeant returns and finds the two sleeping sentries, and he quickly opens the door to assure himself of the prisoner's presence, and is much astonished on discovering he has escaped. He rouses the two sleeping sentries, and the three make a hurried search through the surrounding country for the prisoner. All is in vain, and there is nothing left to do but to report the matter to the superior officer. The sergeant is at once arrested for his negligence, and just as he is being taken away as a prisoner, his sweetheart appears on the scene. She hears the terrible news that the sergeant is to be shot at sunset for having neglected his duty. With tears in her eyes, she runs away to find the brigand chief, for she knows he is the only man who can save her sweetheart. Climbing over rocks, and cutting her way through bushes, she continues until she finds the hiding place of the brigand. Going on her knees, she tells the chief what has happened, and asks him to help her. For a moment the chief hesitates, after which he orders his men to remain where they are, and he himself accompanies the girl. Both hurry back to the quarters, arriving there the very moment the sergeant is placed in a position to receive the deadly volley of shots. The commanding officer is just lifting his sword to give the signal to fire, when the brigand chief rushes before him, reporting himself back as prisoner. With raised head, he exchanges places with the sergeant, and receives the shots instead, knowing that he had done one good deed in his life.

LUX FILMS.

THE REFUGEE.—A wounded corporal, who is on leave, is seen at the residence of his fiancee, when the order comes for him to return to his regiment. He bids farewell to his sweetheart and hurries off, leaving her grief to be assuaged by her parents, after, however, she has presented him with a locket and chain as a keepsake A month later, war has been declared, and our hero is selected by his officer to undertake a confidential mission. But the enemy are in ambush and waylay him, and after robbing him of the document with which he has been entrusted, take him before their commanding officer, and he is condemned to be shot. Led forth from his prison, he entrusts his sweetheart's keepsake to a soldier's care. His hands are then bound and he is about to be blindfolded prior to the execution, when the spirit of the soldier asserts itself and he decides to face death without the handkerchief over his eyes. He is led out, the firing party appears, and he is shot. But at that moment his comrades appear, and after a stern chase annihilate the enemy and gain a victory. In the encounter, the soldier to whom our hero has entrusted the keepsake, is wounded, but, escaping to the seashore, is found by the father of our hero's fiancee and the lady herself, who are shrimping, and taken by them to their home. Here they discover the keepsake and accuse the wounded soldier of being the murderer of the hero, but as the soldier expires he proves his innocence.

THE ADVENTURES OF A SANDWICH MAN.—We see the sandwich man walking along with a large sign on his shoulders, handing out advertising circulars. A beautiful young lady passes by and he immediately falls in love with her, at the same time forgetting all about the large sign on his shoulders. He walks along thinking of her and knocks down an extension sign with the sign he is carrying, which at the same time knocks him over. He then passes a cafe where a lot of men are seated. He throws down the awning, which covers up the men. He then throws down a couple who are making love to each other on a bisycle. A man is bringing a sack of coal into a house when the sandwich man comes along, knocks him down and upsets the bag of coal. When he picks himself up he is black as a negro. However, he is a very persistent wooer, and continues to follow the girl. He then passes a building with a scaffold on it. This he knocks down, and the men on top of it fall upon him and start to beat him. The girl then meets her real sweetheart and excitedly tells him of the ardent wooer who has been following her all this time. He is very angry and threatens to chastise him. In the struggle between her sweetheart and the sandwich man, the former throws the wooer Bob is brought before Lieut. Due who offers him into the water, who at the same time throws a man who is peacefully fishing at the foot of the embankment into the water.

A. G. WHYTE.

THE WAGES OF SIN.—Young, wealthy and greatly admired, with a worshipping husband and a beautiful child, Adele Wyndham was pointed out as a woman favored by fate. Still she was not happy; her husband gave too much of his time to business, the governess took entire charge of the child, so with nothing to occupy her time, she grew morbid and discontented. She felt that she would willingly sacrifice her whole life for one real thrill. If only something would happen—anything to put an end to her boredom. At a reception she met the artist, Lablanc, and his Latin temperament interests her. He must paint her portrait. Her husband, glad to humor her slightest wish, sent for the artist, who, quick to recognize his power over her, strengthened it every moment they spent together. At last, Lablanc succeeded in compromising her at a hilarious dinner in a well-known Bohemian restaurant. Adele had not meant to go so far, but the cunning Frenchman assured her that it was now too late to retreat and that flight was the only thing possible. Ashamed, afraid and quite bewildered at this sudden turn of things, she took her child, much against Lablanc's commands, and fled with him. Three years passed—a short time when one is happy, but to Adele it was a century. Lablanc, unable to retain his former customers, grew more and more surly and abusive. Scarcely a day passed now that he did not abuse her with drunken fury if she dared keep the little she earned by sewing to get food for herself and the child. One day, after tearing the clothes from her back and leaving her on the floor more dead than alive, he rushed out, snatching a pocketbook from a passerby as he went; but the man gave chase, and soon had Lablanc behind the bars. Adele was unable to enjoy her liberty, however, for the machine agent called, and finding her unable to pay, promptly carried off her only means of livelihood. Next, the landlord appeared, and ignoring her plea for mercy, threw her out into the snow, where, after wandering for hours, she fell, weak and exhausted. Her little daughter, seeing a carriage approaching, ran forward to summon aid.

So that the Frenchman might marry her, Wyndham had given Adele a divorce, and while he knew he could never love another woman as he had her, his loneliness induced him to ask Miss Grant, the governess, to remain and superintend his home. They had a quiet wedding at the little church, and were driving home when the child called to them to aid her mother. Wyndham lifted the dying woman into the carriage, but it was not until they had placed her on the couch and raised her heavy veil that he recognized his former wife. Adele implored his forgiveness, and upon receiving it, died content with the knowledge that at last their daughter was restored to her father's home.

INDEPENDENT M. P. CO.

THE TIDE OF FORTUNE.—The indolent, thriftless black sheep of the family—the good-for-nothing son of a rich banker—this is the young man we see bothering his busy brother, who is disgusted with the doings of the drunken ne'er-do-well, and leaves him alone in the room. Notwithstanding the entreaties of his two pretty sisters, he fills himself with liquor from a flask and stumbles out to meet his cronies.

They all imbibe freely at a fashonable cafe, and the young man starts home at dawn. He fumbles at the lock, and when he finally gets into the library he surprises two burglars at work. There is a quick scuffle, after which the cracksmen escape, leaving the stupefied young man alone. The commotion has awakened the family, and the black sheep stands before them with all the circumstances pointing to him as a thief in the family. This is the last straw to the suffering father and brother, and they bid him leave the house forever. He bows to the inevitable, kisses his sisters good-bye, and goes forth with heavy step.

Fate has ordained that men be not the masters of their destinies, and the fortunes of the father, in the course of years, turn unfavorably. The stock market has taken his all; his home is sold over his head, and in a last effort to recoup he appeals to his good son. Whether it is "the iniquities of the father" we cannot say, but the son he had so lovingly reared turns against him at the crucial moment, and he returns to his now squalid home and his hard-working daughters.

Meanwhile the fortunes of the black sheep have taken him to the golden West and in years of labor he has struck it rich. We now see him selling his claim, and he comes home. To his great surprise his father's house holds a new tenant, and he hears of the ill-fortune that befel him. Very unhappy, he begins to walk toward another section of the city, when a little girl selling newspapers accosts him. No, he doesn't want a paper, but he pities her, and reaching down for some change, takes one look at the face—it's his own little sister!

It is better that we should not try to tell in words of how he met his other sister, too; prepared a new home for father, without his knowledge, and conspiring with his sisters had the little family evicted, only to bring them to the new home, where the father, bewildered, learns for the first time of the happy return and regeneration of his son.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

A COWBOY'S REWARD (Bison).—Colonel Austin's daughter, Grace, a charming young girl from the East, is made a great favorite by the boys attached to her father's ranch, who shower candy and flowers upon her, regardless of the fact that her father prohibits such attentions. Bob, while riding through the woods comes upon Grace, fastens her loosened saddle and assists the girl to mount her horse, when the Colonel appears. He does not credit Bob's story and he himself escorts his daughter back to the ranch. Grace, much perturbed at her father's actions, writes a note of apology to Bob and incidentally plans for a meeting at the creek. They meet, and Bob fearing his sweetheart might catch cold, ties his handkerchief about Grace's head, which she wears back to the ranch. This act of chivalry reveals to the father that she had disobeyed his instructions, and in consequence he plans to send her back East. They start the next morning. After riding a short distance their Indian driver discovers they are being pursued by a band of hostile Indians. They try to cover their trail, thus outwitting their followers, and finally enter an old shack. The Indians come upon their place of refuge, take possession of horses and wagon, and begin to fire upon them. Blue Cloud, the Colonel's servant, escapes from the shack, returns to the ranch and gives alarm. Bob loses no time in going to the aid of the Colonel and his daughter, the other cowboys following after. Bob arriving first on the scene shows great heroism in fighting the Indians single handed, and the timely arrival of his comrades saves him from being slain. The Colonel, in gratitude for their rescue, forgives his daughter, and as the cowboy's reward gives him the hand of Grace.

PAULI (Ambrosio).—On the Duke of Cesena's grounds, while a masque ball was going on, Pauli, a famous conspirator, was saved from his pursuers by the quick foresight of the Duchess, who gave him her domino, which completely concealed his identity. The Duke arranges that Pauli leave for the Greek coast, where he will have safe refuge. Because of constant companionship with the Duchess, Pauli has fallen in love with her, and this the Duke discovers by seeing their shadows in a curtained window. Amazed as he was, the Duke did not utter a sound, but cautiously withdrew in the woodland shadows. The following morning, as the Duke and Duchess were taking their daily ride, a band of gendarmes suddenly sprang from a wooded patch. At that moment the truth flashed through the woman's mind and looking at the Duke she realized that betrayal came through him, and with a sudden outburst of rage, the Duchess lashes his face with her whip. Ascending the castle stairs she joins her lover, warning him that there has been foul play. Escape by this time has become impossible and they are encircled by a troop of gendarmes. Under the bailiff's discharge of musketry the Duchess is wounded. Pauli inflicts a wound upon himself and falls beside her. As they lie in the moonlight they regain strength enough to meet in last embrace.

ROMANY ROB'S REVENGE (Bison).—A mother and her two children, a son and daughter, are enjoying the pleasures derived from porch and lawn. Hilda's sweetheart, a military captain, enters and is bidden to get a spade, and join the son in fixing the garden. While he is fulfilling the mission, the family is approached by a brawny gypsy, who asks alms, and when refused becomes violent. The Captain sees him and finally succeeds in making the gypsy go, not without gaining the latter's hatred, however. He awaits an opportunity, when the others have entered the house and the young child is playing outside, to carry him off. To mislead any followers, he takes off the boy's shoes and stockings, puts them on a river bank and throws his cap in the water. A country boy has watched these proceedings and later, when the boy is being looked for, tells the Captain of the subterfuge. The gypsy takes the boy to his camp and puts him in a tent. The Captain and country youth have followed to watch, then the Captain leaves. He goes to his quarters, explains to the soldiers, who offer their aid, and then dons a gypsy disguise. When in this garb he enters the camp and displays a bottle, he is welcomed. They all go to their tents but the Chaptain, who finally locates the boy's hiding place. The child creeps out, is startled by the gypsy, when the Captain makes himself known. The boy crawls into his arms and thus are they found by the gypsies who surround them. The Captain signals to his soldiers, who dash on and level guns at the others, while the boy and his rescuer depart. The Captain with his charge returns to the cottage. He delivers up the boy and is ordered off the premises, when he removes his disguise and all are again happy.

GREAT WESTERN.

ON THE FIRING LINE.—A stirring American military drama. Lieut. Ralph Due, of the U. S. Signal Corps, takes leave of Edna, his sweetheart, carrying her picture away with him. Bob, a former sweetheart, whom Edna still cares for, calls and pleads for her hand but is refused. Brokenhearted, he starts on the downward path, until ejected from a saloon without friends or money, he enlists in the U. S. Army and becomes a private under Lieut. Due, neither being aware that both love the same girl. Drunk one day on post duty, good advice as to a future career as a soldier, to which he replies, "I joined the army to be shot and forgotten, not reformed." As the troop is later ordered away to protect an outpost, Lieut. Due tells Bob that his chance to prove his worth is now at hand. The U. S. Cavalry are seen mounting their horses, and after a hard ride they reach the outpost and are soon engaged in a stirring battle, horses and men plunging wildly over the hilly country, amid shot and shell. In the midst of the fight Lieut. Due is fatally wounded and falls from his horse. When Bob, beside him, sees the Lieutenant kiss the picture of Edna, he at once realizes that both love the same girl. He hesitates only for an instant, then resolves to save the Lieutenant if possible, and calls for aid. Edna receives the message that Lieut. Due is dying, jumps on her horse and rides wildly towards the hospital on the battlefield, reaching there just before his death. The Lieutenant, dying, recognizes Edna, and places her hand in Bob's, dies, surrounded by soldiers with bared heads and tear stained eyes.

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF LICENSED FILMS.

Monday, January 17.

Biograph—On the Reef (Dr.).....988 ft.
Lubin—He Got Rid of the Moths (Com.)....540 ft.
Lubin—A Slippery Day (Com.).....320 ft.
Selig—A New Divorce Cure (Dr.).....1000 ft.
Pathe—Testing Their Love (Com.).....561 ft.
Pathe—A Visit to Bombay (Col.) (Sc.).....544 ft.

Tuesday, January 18.

Edison—In the Nick of Time (Dr.).....975 ft.
Vitagraph—The Toymaker's Secret (Nov.)....969 ft.
Gaumont—Fatal Fascination (Dr.).....580 ft.
Gaumont—Getting Square with the Inventor (Comedy) .....393 ft.

Wednesday, January 19.

Essanay—Won by a Hold-up (Com.).....629 ft.
Essanay—Flower Parade at Pasadena, Cal. (Scenic) .....292 ft.
Pathe—The Bareback Rider (Dr.).....735 ft.
Pathe—An Aerial Acrobat (Sc.).....226 ft.
Urban—The Coastguard (Dr.).....747 ft.
Urban—Riva, Austria, and Lake of Garda (S.).204 ft.

Thursday, January 20.

Lubin—The Usurper (Dr.).....905 ft.
Biograph—The Call (Dr.).....989 ft.
Selig—The Courtship of Miles Standish (Dr.).1000 ft.

Friday, January 21.

Edison—The Coquette (Dr.).....495 ft.
Edison—The Luck of Roaring Camp (Dr.)....490 ft.
Kalem—The Magic Flower (Fairy Tale).....860 ft.
Pathe—The Painter's Sweetheart (Dr.).....525 ft.
Pathe—Fickle Fortune (Com.).....420 ft.

Saturday, January 22.

Gaumont—Swallowed by the Deep (Dr.).....977 ft.
Vitagraph—A Pair of Schemers (Com.).....743 ft.
Vitagraph—Five Minutes to Twelve (Com.)..162 ft.
Pathe—Count Tolstoi (Personalities).....213 ft.
Essanay—The Confession (Dr.).....960 ft.

Immediate Shipment

WE CARRY OPERA CHAIRS IN STOCK

If you want a GOOD CHAIR, at a LOW PRICE, we have it. Inquiries answered same day as received.

Ask for Catalog No. 305

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

The "A B C OF MOTION PICTURES" just out. What, when, why, where, how. Everything pertaining to the biggest money-making business out. How to run machines, equip theaters, build stage, install lighting, make rheostats, paint banners and signs, make slides for 3 cents each, what to charge, how to handle help, details of phonographic instruction, where to get film cheapest, how to save on supplies. 5,000 facts, pointers and suggestions which will save anyone going into the business $500.00 at the lowest calculation. Postpaid for a dollar. GARRETT SWIFT, 238 20th Ave., North, Minneapolis, Minn.

FOR SALE—100,000 feet of film in perfect condition, 1¾c. per foot. We will trade films at $2.00 per reel. Send us your list. ECONOMY FILM CO., Room 204, 108 Fourth Ave., Pittsburg, Penna.

INDEPENDENT FILMS

THE ACTOPHONE COMPANY.

Jan. 12—Robert Macaire; or, The Two Vagabonds.

LUX FILMS.

Dec. 29—The Gold Digger's Son.....891
Jan. 5—Drama at Sea (Dr.).....655
Jan. 5—Football Craze (Com.).....331
Jan. 12—Drama at Sea (Dr.).....655
Jan. 12—Football Craze (Com.).....331
Jan. 19—The Refugee (Dr.).....750
Jan. 19—Adventures of a Sandwich Man (C.)...232

FILM IMPORT AND TRADING CO.

Jan. 10-15—The Garibaldi Boy (Cines).....687
Jan. 10-15—Walkaway's New Boots (Cines)....390
Jan. 10-15—Hotstuff Takes on the Champions (R. & R.).....220
Jan. 10-15—The Rebel's Fate (Cines).....650
Jan. 10-15—The Law of Destiny (Aquila).....890
Jan. 10-15—The Terrors of the Family (R. & R.).230
Jan. 10-15—Brave Little Heart (Eclair).....675
Jan. 10-15—Toes and Teeth (R. & R.).....230
Jan. 10-15—Monarchs of All Nations (R. & R.).395

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY.

Dec. 8—Temptations of the Gold Fields (Dr.).750
Dec. 8—Gerhardi Mohr (Com.).....194
Dec. 18—Mother-in-Law Crazy with Music.....460
Dec. 18—The Butcher's Bill.....230
Dec. 18—In Southern Sweden.....292
Dec. 25—An Outcast's Christmas.....495
Dec. 25—Father Busy Papering.....360
Jan. 8—Child as Benefactor.....950
Jan. 15—Death of the Brigand Chief.....690
Jan. 15—Naughty Boys.....289

"IMP."

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES COMPANY OF AMERICA.

Oct. 25—Hiawatha 988
Nov. 1—Love's Stratagem.....954
Nov. 8—Destiny 864
Nov. 15—Forest Ranger's Daughter.....700
Nov. 15—Brave (?) Policeman.....300
Nov. 22—Levitsky Sees Parade.....704
Nov. 22—Honor Among Thieves.....296
Nov. 29—Her Generous Way 970
Dec. 6—His Last Game 941
Dec. 13—The Two Sons 955
Dec. 20—Lest We Forget.....916
Dec. 27—The Awakening of Bess.....985
Jan. 3—The Winning Punch.....957
Jan. 10—Right of Love.....975
Jan. 17—The Tide of Fortune.....975

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

Oct. 29—Mexican's Crime 1000
Nov. 5—Young Deer's Bravery.....950
Nov. 12—The Ranchman's Wife.....950
Nov. 19—An Indian's Bride.....1000
Nov. 26—The Parson's Prayer (Dr.).....550
Nov. 26—Dooley's Thanksgiving Turkey (Com.).400
Dec. 3—The Message of an Arrow.....1000
Dec. 10—Reunited at the Gallows (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 17—The Love of a Savage (Dr.).....990
Dec. 24—An Italian Love Story (Dr.).....900
Dec. 31—The Red Cross Heroine.....1000
Jan. 7—Red Girl's Romance (Dr.).....990
Jan. 11—A Redman's Devotion (Bison).....950
Jan. 12—An Episode of Napoleon's War with Spain (Itala).....775
Jan. 14—A Forester's Sweetheart (Bison).....950
Jan. 15—The Son of the Wilderness (Ambrosio).925
Jan. 18—A Cowboy's Reward (Dr.).....
Jan. 19—Pauli (Ambrosio) .....
Jan. 21—Romany Rob's Revenge (Dr.).....
Jan. 22—There Are Some Ghosts (Itala).....
Jan. 22—The Tempting Collar (Itala).....

THE POWERS COMPANY.
(Columbia Film.)

Nov. 2—Change of Complexion.....950
Nov. 9—All for the Love of a Girl.....950
Nov. 16—The Gypsy's Regret.....925
Nov. 23—A Red Man's Love.....830
Nov. 30—Pressing Business 850
Dec. 7—A Run for the Money.....950
Dec. 14—Manhood's Reward.....950
Dec. 21—Reunited by Santa Claus.....950
Dec. 28—Excelsior (Comedy) 950
Jan. 4—A Frozen Ape.....950
Jan. 18—The Little Heroine.....975

PHOENIX FILM CO.

Nov. 18—Millionaire Bootblack (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 25—Delayed Telegram (Com.).....900
Dec. 2—Answered Prayer (Dr.).....850
Dec. 9—Bad Case of Grip (Com.).....750
Dec. 9—July 4th, 1910 (Com.).....250
Dec. 16—Her Mother's Mistake (Dr.).....850
Jan. 6—Convicted by His Own Child (1).....1000
Jan. 13—Convicted by His Own Child (2).....1000

EXCLUSIVE FILM COMPANY.

Dec. 30—A Romance of the South.....875

Classified Advertising.

Rate 3 cents per word, Cash with order.

THEATER FOR SALE—Good paying five-cent theater. Best location. Will sell half or whole interest. Reasonable terms. Quick action to those meaning business. For particulars address BENJ. RADER, 1759 Pitkins Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

MANDOLIN AND GUITAR FAMILY QUARTETTE solicits engagements, nightly or weekly; classic music only. D. L. CADMUS, 191 Norwood Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

MR. MOVING PICTURE MAN—In answer to this ad we will sell you 4 beautifully colored, artistic announcement slides for $1.00. Send for list, every one new, a work of art. NIAGARA SLIDE CO., Lockport, N. Y.

FOR SALE—Edison exhibition model machine, friction takeup, in perfect condition, with 4 reels of film in perfect condition, $120.00. One machine all complete with fire boxes, perfect condition, 4 reels of film, $135.00. Lot of films at $15.00 per reel. MAYER SILVERMAN, 108-110 Fourth Ave., Pittsburg, Penna.

FOR SALE—1,000 ft. reels film, released to Dec. 1, $5 and $10 per reel. Lubin, Power's, Edison Ex. Model, $40 to $60; new, $100; Model B gas outfit, $25; odd slides, 5c.; sets, $1.50; paying moving picture theaters, cheap. For Rent—6,000 ft. film, 3 sets slides, $10; 9,000 ft., $12, one shipment. Will Buy—Machines, film. H. DAVIS, Watertown, Wis.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

AN EXPERT FILM HANDLER, experienced in all departments, with A-1 references, wants position as manager or assistant. Address A. B. C., care Moving Picture World.

MANAGER—At liberty after January 18. Thoroughly experienced in vaudeville and pictures, booking, etc. Good executive ability. Strict disciplinarian. Good correspondent. Capable of directing one or more theaters. A1 press and general advertising. Sober and reliable. Baritone singer, actor and producer. Best of references. Salary and commission. Responsible parties only. C. W. LAWFORD, Gen. Man., Earl Morgan Circuit, Grand Theater, Latrobe, Pa.

A-1 TENOR SINGER of experience wishes position. Good salary. Can show references from past employers if desired. ROBERT P. TOURNIER, 56 Oak Street, Providence, R. I.

EXPERIENCED LANTERNIST AND PHOTOGRAPHER wishes position with lecturer. Can furnish reference. Road or city. HARRY L. KEEPERS, 506 Lexington Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

AT LIBERTY—Trap drummer with full outfits for effects for pictures; play bells, etc. A. DRUMMER, 117 W. Cabarrus St., Raleigh, N. C.

Neosho Song Slides

$3.50 the set

These NEW ones are ready for immediate delivery:

Darling Make Me Dreamy
Name the Day, Honey, Do
Sue
Only a Dream of You
Mary Brown
Give Me a Spin in Your Mitchell, Bill

Write for our special standing order proposition

The Neosho Slide Company
100 S. Wood St., Neosho, Mo.

LICENSED FILMS.

BIOGRAPH COMPANY.

		Feet
Dec.	2—The Death Disc (Dr.)	995
Dec.	6—Through the Breakers (Dr.)	974
Dec.	9—The Redman's View (Dr.)	971
Dec.	13—A Corner in Wheat (Dr.)	953
Dec.	16—In a Hempen Bag (Dr.)	455
Dec.	16—The Test (Com.)	545
Dec.	20—A Trap for Santa Claus (Dr.)	989
Dec.	23—In Little Italy (Dr.)	956
Dec.	27—To Save Her Soul (Dr.)	986
Dec.	30—The Day After (Com.)	460
Dec.	30—Choosing a Husband (Com.)	531
Jan.	3—The Rocky Road (Dr.)	990
Jan.	6—The Dancing Girl of Butte (Dr.)	984
Jan.	10—Her Terrible Ordeal (Dr.)	952
Jan.	13—All on Account of the Milk (Dr.)	989
Jan.	17—On the Reef (Dr.)	988
Jan.	20—The Call (Dr.)	989

EDISON MFG. CO.

Nov.	30—The Wonderful Electro-Magnet (Com.)	400
Dec.	3—The Keeper of the Light (Dr.)	965
Dec.	7—What the Cards Foretold (Com.)	420
Dec.	7—My Lord in Livery (Com.)	520
Dec.	10—The House of Cards (Dr.)	960
Dec.	14—Fenton of the 42d (Dr.)	860
Dec.	14—The New Policeman (Com.)	100
Dec.	17—A Gift from Santa Claus (Dr.)	920
Dec.	21—A Happy Accident (Christmas Story)	450
Dec.	21—The Mischievous Elf (Com.)	540
Dec.	24—Faust (Grand Opera)	1000
Dec.	28—Tobacco Mania (Com.)	360
Dec.	28—The Fallen Idol (Com.)	330
Dec.	28—The Cap of Fortune (Com.)	290
Dec.	31—Fishing Industry at Gloucester, Mass. (Industrial)	975
Jan.	4—Pardners (Dr.)	995
Jan.	7—The Engineer's Romance (Dr.)	670
Jan.	7—Ashes (Sentimental)	310
Jan.	11—Bear Hunt in the Rockies (Descrip.)	975
Jan.	14—A Warrior Bold (Com.)	475
Jan.	14—The Parson's Umbrella (Com.)	220
Jan.	14—Troop "B," 15th U. S. Cavalry, Bare-back Monkey Drill (Descriptive)	285
Jan.	18—In the Nick of Time (Dr.)	975
Jan.	21—The Coquette (Dr.)	495
Jan.	21—The Luck of Roaring Camp (Dr.)	490
Jan.	25—A Woman's Strategy (Dr.)	975
Jan.	28—A Georgia Possum Hunt (Des.)	140
Jan.	28—The Skipper's Yarn (Dr.)	850

ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.

Dec.	29—A Policeman's Revolver (Comedy)	281
Jan.	1—A Western Maid (Dr.)	785
Jan.	1—Why He Did Not Win Out (Comedy)	213
Jan.	5—The Adventuress (Dr.)	525
Jan.	5—How Hubby Made Good (Com.)	473
Jan.	8—His Only Child (Dr.)	997
Jan.	12—Electric Insoles (Com.)	502
Jan.	12—The Old Maid and the Burglar (Com.)	498
Jan.	15—Review of U. S. Troops, Fort Leavenworth (Scenic)	1000
Jan.	19—Won by a Holdup (Com.)	629
Jan.	19—Flower Parade at Pasadena, Cal.	292
Jan.	22—The Confession (Dr.)	960
Jan.	26—The Modern Messenger Boy (Com.)	945
Jan.	29—An Outlaw's Sacrifice (Dr.)	996

GAUMONT.

(George Kleine.)

Nov.	27—The Village Scare (Com.)	381
Nov.	27—The Mixup at Court (Dr.)	590
Nov.	30—In the Consomme (Com.)	491
Nov.	30—The Broken Vase (Com.)	472
Dec.	4—How to Get a City Job (Com.)	501
Dec.	4—X-Ray Glasses (Magic)	416
Dec.	7—Listen (Com.)	344
Dec.	7—Top-Heavy Mary (Com.)	283
Dec.	7—In a Pickle (Com.)	374
Dec.	11—Daughters of Poverty (Dr.)	953
Dec.	14—Nothing Is Ever Lost (Com.)	495
Dec.	14—The Life Buoy (Dr.)	446
Dec.	18—The Shepherd's Flute (Dr.)	528
Dec.	18—Cambyses, King of Persia (Dr.)	486
Dec.	21—The Stranger (Dr.)	935
Dec.	25—The Greek Slave's Passion (Dr.)	967
Dec.	28—A Clever Sleuth (Com.)	623
Dec.	28—Hush Money (Dr.)	361
Jan.	1—The Legion of Honor (Dr.)	1009
Jan.	4—The Wreck at Sea (Dr.)	626
Jan.	4—The Avenging Dentist (Com.)	319
Jan.	8—On the Bank of the River (Dr.)	604
Jan.	8—A Seat in the Balcony (Com.)	371
Jan.	11—Shooting in the Haunted Woods (Com.)	570
Jan.	11—Towser's New Job (Com.)	393
Jan.	15—Decorated by the Emperor (Dr.)	698
Jan.	15—Railway on the Ice Sea (Scenic)	312
Jan.	18—Fatal Fascination (Dr.)	580
Jan.	18—Getting Square with the Inventor (C.)	393
Jan.	22—Swallowed by the Deep (Dr.)	977

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

(George Kleine.)

		Feet
Dec.	8—Capturing the North Pole (Dr.)	381
Dec.	15—The Red Signal (Dr.)	355
Dec.	22—Fiorella, the Bandit's Daughter (Dr.)	741
Dec.	22—From the Fighting Top of a Battleship in Action (Scenic)	263
Dec.	29—Battle in the Clouds (Scenic)	658
Dec.	29—Battle in the Clouds (Dr.)	658
Dec.	29—The Park of Caserta (Scenic)	201
Jan.	5—Tragedy at the Mill (Dr.)	612
Jan.	5—Shanghai of To-day (Scenic)	351
Jan.	12—True to His Oath (Dr.)	672
Jan.	12—Home of the Gypsies (Scenic)	321
Jan.	19—The Coast Guard (Dr.)	747
Jan.	19—Riva, Austria, and the Lake of Garda (Scenic)	204

KALEM CO.

Nov.	27—Judgment (Dr.)	988
Nov.	19—Pale Face's Wooing (Dr.)	930
Nov.	26—The Governor's Daughter (Dr.)	955
Dec.	3—The Geisha Who Saved Japan (Dr.)	955
Dec.	10—The Rally Round the Flag (Dr.)	955
Dec.	17—The Law of the Mountain (Dr.)	875
Dec.	24—The Cardboard Baby (Fairy Story)	855
Dec.	31—A Slave to Drink (Dr.)	950
Jan.	7—The Deacon's Daughter (Dr.)	950
Jan.	14—The Romance of a Trained Nurse (Dr.)
Jan.	21—The Magic Flower (Fairy Tale)

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Dec.	2—The Cub Reporter (Com.)	945
Dec.	6—She Took Mother's Advice (Com.)	465
Dec.	6—He Wanted a Baby (Com.)	460
Dec.	9—If Love Be True (Dr.)	950
Dec.	13—When Courage Fled (Com.)	250
Dec.	13—Jinks, the Grouch (Com.)	700
Dec.	16—Romance of the Rocky Coast (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	18—Two Christmas Tides (Dr.)	952
Dec.	20—The Policeman's Christmas Eve (Dr.)	440
Dec.	20—Three Christmas Dinners (Comedy.)	495
Dec.	23—Blissville the Beautiful (Comedy)	830
Dec.	27—The New Chief (Comedy)	495
Dec.	27—The Persistent Poet (Comedy)	525
Dec.	30—Three-Fingere Jack (Dramatic)	940
Jan.	3—Their Chaperoned Honeymoon (Com.)	816
Jan.	6—The Tattooed Arm (Dr.)	860
Jan.	10—Over the Wire (Dr.)	900
Jan.	13—Wild Duck Hunting on Historic Reel Foot Lake (Scenic)	550
Jan.	13—He Joined the Frat (Com.)	300
Jan.	17—He Got Rid of the Moths (Com.)	540
Jan.	17—A Slippery Day (Com.)	320
Jan.	20—The Usurper (Dr.)	905

GEORGE MELIES.

Dec.	1—Seeing Things (Com.)	286
Dec.	8—The Fatal Ball (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	15—The Living Doll (Dr.)	1000

PATHE FRERES.

Dec.	3—The Three Neighbors (Com.)	413
Dec.	3—Forced into Marriage (Dr.)	561
Dec.	4—From the Egg to the Spit (Ed.)	398
Dec.	4—A Cask of Good Old Wine (Com.)	535
Dec.	6—The Lady's Companion (Dr.)	804
Dec.	8—Impossible to Get Sleep (Com.)	315
Dec.	8—The Evil Philter (Dr.)	623
Dec.	10—Masquerader's Charity (Dr.)	394
Dec.	10—Bear Hunt in Russia (Scenic)	564
Dec.	11—Exploits of a Cowboy (Scenic)	446
Dec.	11—Willyboy Gets His (Com.)	502
Dec.	12—La Grand Breteche (Dr.)	900
Dec.	13—The Tramp's Romance (Dr.)	541
Dec.	13—Repairing the House (Farce)	413
Dec.	15—The Ugly Girl (Dr.)	620
Dec.	15—Punch and Judy (Juvenile)	364
Dec.	17—The Lucky Number (Com.)	538
Dec.	17—The Strong Tonic (Com.)	433
Dec.	18—Hector, the Angel Child (Com.)	620
Dec.	18—Honey Industry (Industrial)	331
Dec.	20—The Death of the Duke D'Enghien (Dr.)	951
Dec.	22—Contest for a Handkerchief (Com.)	459
Dec.	22—The Love Token (Dramatic)	515
Dec.	24—The Birth of Jesus (Biblical)	525
Dec.	24—Agriculture in Hungary (Ind.)	826
Dec.	25—The Good Doctor (Com.)	590
Dec.	25—The Happy Widower (Com.)	384
Dec.	27—Bad Bargain (Com.)	630
Dec.	27—Marvelous Garlands (Scenic)	295
Dec.	29—Oh, You Doggie (Com.)	187
Dec.	29—A Well Earned Medal (Dr.)	728
Dec.	31—A Live Corpse (Com.)	610
Dec.	31—Corsican Hospitality (Dr.)	390
Jan.	1—Tabby's Finish (Dr.)	426
Jan.	1—Trials of a Schoolmaster (Dr.)	528
Jan.	3—The Marriage of the Cook (Com.)	502
Jan.	3—A Victim of Circumstances (Dr.)	459
Jan.	5—The King's Command (Com.)	561
Jan.	5—The Overzealous Domestic (Farce)	410
Jan.	7—Modern Highwayman (Dr.)	600
Jan.	7—An English Boxing Bout (Sports)	298
Jan.	8—The Last Look (Dr.)	587
Jan.	8—His Opponent's Card (Com.)	367
Jan.	10—Miss Moneybags Wishes to Wed (Com.)	581
Jan.	10—Women in India (Educational)	377
Jan.	12—Camille (Dr.)	1033
Jan.	14—The Beggar's Repentance (Dr.)	692
Jan.	14—Story of a Leg (Com.)	285
Jan.	15—On a Racket (Com.)	600
Jan.	15—A Stag Hunt in Java (Scenic)	367
Jan.	17—Testing Their Love (Com.)	561
Jan.	17—A Visit to Bombay, Col. (Scenic)	544
Jan.	19—The Bareback Rider (Dr.)	735
Jan.	19—An Aerial Acrobat (Scenic)	226
Jan.	21—The Painter's Sweetheart (Dr.)	525
Jan.	21—Fickle Fortune (Com.)	420
Jan.	22—Count Tolstoi (Personalities)	213

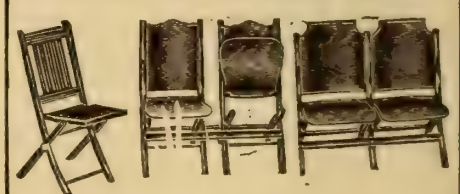
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.

Dec.	23—The Christian Martyrs (Dr.)	950
Dec.	27—Buried Alive (Dramatic)	1000
Dec.	30—A Daughter of the Sioux (Dr.)	985
Jan.	3—The Smuggler's Game (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	6—The Highlanders' Defiance (Dr.)	625
Jan.	6—Alderman Krautz's Picnic (Com.)	370
Jan.	10—A Tale of the Woods (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	13—Under the Stars and Stripes (Dr.)	900
Jan.	17—A New Divorce Cure (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	20—The Courtship of Miles Standish (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	24—The Ranch King's Daughter (Dr.)	700
Jan.	24—An Afternoon Off (Com.)	300
Jan.	27—The Devil, the Servant and the Man (Dr.)	950

VITAGRAPH COMPANY.

Nov.	6—From Cabin Boy to King (Dr.)	958
Nov.	9—Into the Shadow (Dr.)	642
Nov.	9—A Sticky Proposition (Com.)	323
Nov.	13—Launcelot and Elaine (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	16—Benedict Arnold (Dr.)	685
Nov.	16—Indian Basket Making (Ind.)	245
Nov.	20—The Sins of the Fathers (Dr.)	985
Nov.	23—Why They Married (Com.)	905
Nov.	27—Jean Valjean (Dr.)	990
Nov.	30—The Bridegroom's Joke (Com.)	690
Nov.	30—Dirigible Balloons at St. Louis (Scen.)	275
Dec.	4—The Life of Moses (Dr.)	981
Dec.	7—A Lesson in Domestic Economy (C.)	684
Dec.	7—A Day with Our Soldier Boys (Sc.)	302
Dec.	11—Gambling with Death (Dr.)	933
Dec.	14—The Professor and the Thomas Cats (C.)	405
Dec.	14—A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year (Dr.)	586
Dec.	18—Two Christmas Tides (Dr.)	952
Dec.	21—The Forgotten Watch (Comedy)	413
Dec.	21—The Cook Makes Madeira Sauce (C.)	561
Dec.	25—A Midsummer Night's Dream (Dr.)	991
Dec.	28—The Power of the Press (Dr.)	997
Jan.	1—Cupid and the Motor Boat (Dr.)	946
Jan.	4—The Life of Moses (Biblical)	868
Jan.	8—Richelieu, or the Conspiracy (Dr.)	992
Jan.	11—Call Boy's Vengeance (Com.)	320
Jan.	11—The Old Maid's Valentine (Com.)
Jan.	15—A Sister's Sacrifice (Dr.)	970
Jan.	18—The Toymaker's Secret (Novelty)	969
Jan.	22—A Pair of Schemers (Com.)	743
Jan.	22—Five Minutes to Twelve (Com.)	162

Folding and Assembly Chairs



Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use

Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue

PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.

NORTH MANCHESTER, - - - INDIANA

Open Twenty Four Hours Every Day—Write, Call, Wire or Phone Any Hour, Day or Night

ELECTRIC THEATRE SUPPLY CO., Inc. The Home of Good Film Service The Birthplace of Original Ideas

We handle everything needed by Moving Picture Exhibitors 44 N. Tenth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

We have every subject issued by the Licensed Manufacturers

MOTIOGRAPH, PATHE FRERES, POWER'S, EDISON and LUBIN MACHINES and PARTS ALWAYS ON HAND

Write for our new proposition:—Supplying two customers in the same town each with twelve reels a week, keeping each one's supply away from the other, and no repeaters to either.

·Essanay Films·

TWO FILMS YOU SHOULD FEATURE!

"THE CONFESSION"

A dramatic film that reaches highest in this week's releases of licensed films!

THIS WEEK

RELEASE OF WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 19.

A WESTERN COMEDY!

"WON BY A HOLD-UP"

(Length, approximate 629 feet.)

with

The gorgeously beautiful scenic,

"FLOWER PARADE AT PASADENA, CALIFORNIA!"

(Length, approximate 292 feet.)

RELEASE OF SATURDAY, JANUARY 22.

Beautiful production of Broadway quality. Incomparable photography!

"THE CONFESSION"

(Length approximate, 960 feet.)

Are You On Our Mailing List ? Get There

"THE MESSENGER BOY"

One of the funniest comedy films ever released by "The House of Comedy Hits." Length, 1000 Laughs!

NEXT WEEK

RELEASE OF WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 26

Uproariously funny, a real comedy hit! You'll find it in Essanay's.

"THE MODERN MESSENGER BOY"

(Length, approximate 945 feet.)

RELEASE OF SATURDAY, JANUARY 29.

A Western feature drama! One of the most beautiful of the series! Brilliant photography.

"AN OUTLAW'S SACRIFICE"

Length, approximate 996 feet.)

Essanay Film M'f'g., Co.

FACTORY and STUDIOS 1333 ARGYLE ST. - OFFICE 435 NORTH CLARK ST.
CHICAGO and LONDON, 5 NEW COMPTON ST. W.C.

PANTOGRAPH CORPORATION

First Release January 29, 1910

TITLE

A Tale of Colonial Days

An Episode in the Life of

ALEXANDER HAMILTON and AARON BURR

Length approx. 900 Feet Code, Episode

The film is beautifully tinted and treated by a special process of our own which gives exceptionally fine detail to the picture. For photography and scenic effects it has never been surpassed. It is a "Standard Film" of extra quality.

Wire Orders at Our Expense

BEAUTIFUL LITHOGRAPH POSTERS FURNISHED

PANTOGRAPH CORPORATION

1402 BROADWAY NEW YORK

Members of the N. I. M. P. A.

Exhibitors—Send us your names TO-DAY for weekly synopsis

FILMS FOR RENT

NEW FILMS—HIGH CLASS SERVICE

The Pioneer House, With 8 Years Experience And $250,000.00 Back Of It

Write To-day For Terms

EUGENE CLINE

57 and 59 Dearborn Street, Chicago

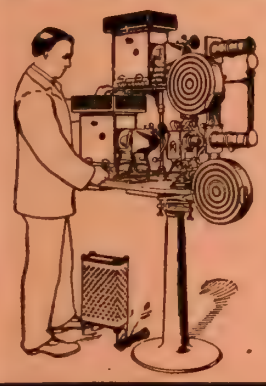
Vol. 6., No. 4. January 29, 1910 Price, 10 Cents

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

WHICH IS INCORPORATED WITH THE EXHIBITOR

ALL THE FILM AND SONG SLIDE NEWS

Published Weekly by THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING CO., 125 E. 23d ST., NEW YORK



The Motiograph Motion Picture Machine is A Wonder

AND WILL INCREASE YOUR BUSINESS

It projects Flickerless, Steady and Wonderfully Brilliant pictures, has Patented 1½ minute Rewind from main crank, revolving Magazines, Automatic Fireproof shutter, etc., not found in other Machines.—WILL WEAR TWICE AS LONG.

C. H. D. of Keokuk, Iowa, writes: Motiograph Making a Big Hit and Business increased wonderfully.

F. L. F. of Chicago, Ill., writes: "Used every day for seven months, and not one penny for repairs."
F. J. K. of Kansas City, writes: "Operating Motiograph nearly two years. Have operated all makes, but none to compare with Motiograph.—PRICES, $150.00 AND UP

The Enterprise Calcium Gas Outfit is the only satisfactory substitute for electric light Write for Catalog to-day

Western Representatives { S. Lubin Geo. Melies FILM

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564-572 West Randolph Street, Chicago

Calcium Gas Outfit

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

143 North 8th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Best and Newest Independent American and Foreign Films

SUPPLIES——18 REELS PER WEEK——SUPPLIES

PROMPT AND RELIABLE SERVICE

Members N. I. M. P. Alliance

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

Power's Cameragraph No. 5

Power's Cameragraph No. 6

Guaranteed for 1 Year

"Power's" Means Perfect in Moving Pictures

Power's Inductor for alternating current

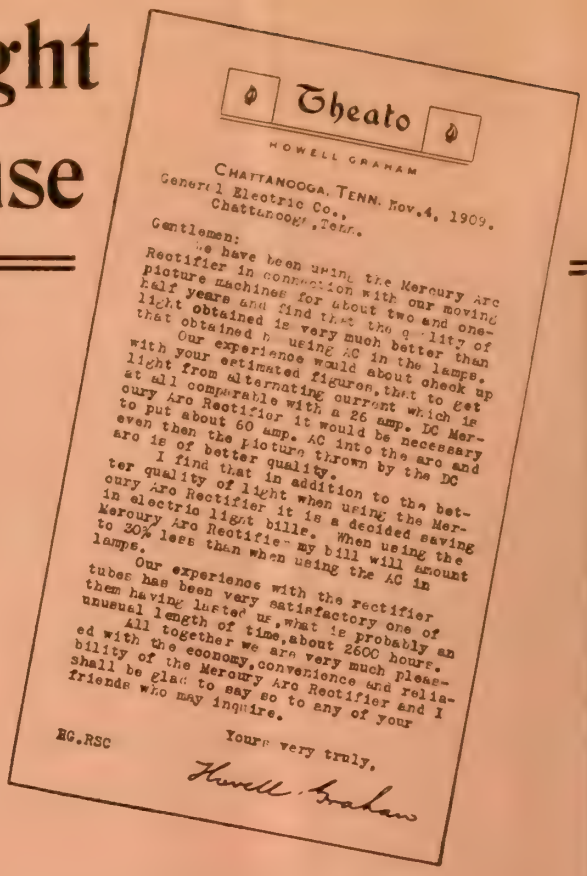
Power's "Bill Splitter" for direct current

Power's Tool Kit

Send for Catalog G

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115-117 Nassau St., New York

Better Quality of Light
30% Saving in Expense



Theato

HOWELL GRAHAM

CHATTANOOGA, TENN. Nov.4, 1909.

General Electric Co.,
Chattanooga, Tenn.

Gentlemen:

We have been using the Mercury Arc Rectifier in connection with our moving picture machines for about two and one-half years and find that the quality of light obtained is very much better than that obtained by using AC in the lamps. Our experience would about check up with your estimated figures, that to get light from alternating current which is at all comparable with a 26 amp. DC Mercury Arc Rectifier it would be necessary to put about 60 amp. AC into the arc and even then the picture thrown by the DC arc is of better quality.

I find that in addition to the better quality of light when using the Mercury Arc Rectifier it is a decided saving in electric light bills. When using the Mercury Arc Rectifier my bill will amount to 30% less than when using the AC in lamps.

Our experience with the rectifier tubes has been very satisfactory one of them having lasted us, what is probably an unusual length of time, about 2600 hours. All together we are very much pleased with the economy, convenience and reliability of the Mercury Arc Rectifier and I shall be glad to say so to any of your friends who may inquire.

EG.RSC

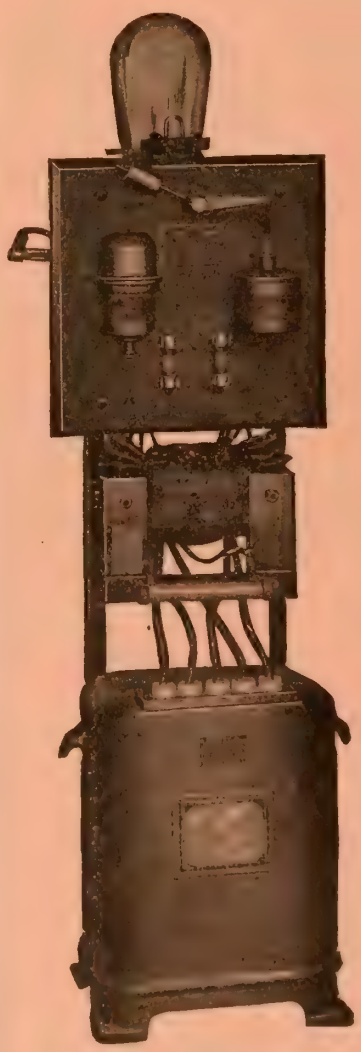
Yours very truly,

Howell Graham

Mr. Howell Graham, a prominent moving picture man of Chattanooga, Tenn., got these results in his theatre by using the—

G.E. Mercury Arc Rectifier

Read the letter in which he heartily endorses this device.



Many Similar Recommendations

Moving picture men all over the country are writing us their satisfaction with the Rectifier--justifying our claims for economy and better service afforded by its use by those limited to an alternating current supply.

It will pay you to investigate

Ask our nearest sales office to send a representative to see you. He will explain the operation of the G. E. Rectifier and just what it will do for you in improving pictures and saving money.

General Electric Company

Largest Electrical Manufacturer in the World

Principal Office: SCHENECTADY, NEW YORK

Sales Offices in the following Cities

Atlanta, Ga.
Baltimore, Md.
Boston, Mass.
Buffalo, N. Y.
Butte, Mont.
Charleston, W. Va.
Charlotte, N. C.
Cincinnati, O.
Cleveland, O.
Columbus, O.
Denver, Colo.
Duluth, Minn.
Indianapolis, Ind.
Kansas City, Mo.
Los Angeles, Cal.
Minneapolis, Minn.
Nashville, Tenn.
New Orleans, La.
New Haven, Conn.
New York, N. Y.
Philadelphia, Pa.
Pittsburg, Pa.
Portland, Ore.
Richmond, Va.
Salt Lake City, Utah.
San Francisco, Cal.
St. Louis, Mo.
Seattle, Wash.
Spokane, Wash.
Syracuse, N. Y.

2348

BISON FILMS

TRADE MARK

Regular Release Days—Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday, Saturday

FOUR REELS A WEEK—Tuesday, a "Bison"—Wednesday, Ambrosio—Friday, a "Bison"—Saturday, Itala

WE GOT 'EM ON A RUN

Since we started releasing four reels a week. Nothing but headliners. Every licensed exhibitor is beating it for an Independent Exchange to get Independent service. Do not be a sucker all your life and listen to a lot of Bull that the Licensed Exchanges are trying to hand you that the Independent service is no good. Let us say right here that we have them lashed to the mast. You are in a position to get 18 good Independent reels a week. There are many other good makes of Independent films within our ranks. If you are a Missourian, ask your exchange man to show you. He's got the goods, and we know it; but of course, do not stand for any unscrupulous or so-called Independendent Exchange slipping you a lot of conversation by telling you that they are buying everything, and in turn handing you a lot of Association junk. Make him show you. We will gladly furnish exhibitors information as to who the exchanges are that are buying our releases. We will tell you where you can go and get the real stuff. Just plant your optics on what we are releasing this week, and they are all corkers.

Tue. Jan. 25th—A "BISON"

A ROMANCE OF THE PRAIRIE

Code, Stun. Approximate Length, 975 Feet

Here is one of the high standard Bisons that will make the kids in the gallery holler their heads off.

Fri. Jan. 28th—a "Bison"

HIS IMAGINARY CRIME

Code, Slue. Approximate Length, 950 Feet

Here is another Bison that will raise the audience clean out of their seats, and make them gasp for breath.

Wed. Jan. 26th—"Ambrosio"

THE LAST KEEPSAKE—A CHOICE POLICEMAN

Code Snug. Approximate Length, 1 000 Feet

A double header from Ambrosio this week; a swell dramatic story together with a comedy on one reel, that will make you laugh yourself sick.

Sat. Jan. 29th—"ITALA"

THE TIMID ONE—A GOOD WINNING

Code, Soar. Approximate Length, 975 Feet

Here we have another double header from Itala, both comedies, and on the level they're so funny, they would make a horse laugh.

LITHOGRAPHS AND POSTERS FREE

Exhibitors:—We furnish as usual all exchanges handling these productions with one sheet four colored lithographs, also posters containing synopsis, absolutely free with each reel. Demand same from your exchange as they will positively increase your box office receipts.

Brief description of all subjects will be found on another page.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

Manufacturers of "Bison" Life Motion Pictures

429 SIXTH AVENUE, Cor. 26th Street - NEW YORK CITY

Phone 6690-1 Madison Sq. Cable Address: Nosib

A REVOLUTION

in the slide business; something never before attempted or heard of. Your entire weekly supply of sets shipped in one consignment every week for the amazingly low price of

25c PER SET PER WEEK

This remarkable 25c rate will put our service within the reach of all, and you surely can NOW afford to pay extra for your slide service. It is our aim to supply every picture theatre in the United States with our exclusive gilt edged slide service, which will enable the film houses to give all of their attention to their film service.

DON'T DELAY. WRITE TO-DAY

for our immense list. You have the privilege of selection, and we guarantee to ship what you select. All sets guaranteed complete from title slide to chorus. The largest slide renters in the world.

Chicago Song Slide Exchange

MASONIC TEMPLE - 9th Floor - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

VITAGRAPH FILMS

THE FILMS OF "QUALITY"

Tuesday, January 25

3d Series of THE LIFE OF MOSES

The Plagues of Egypt and the Deliverance of the Hebrews

Another Magnificent Reel in this Epoch-Making Biblical Series. They grow in impressive strength and popularity with each successive release. This reel is a marvel of scenic beauty and powerful dramatic action. Approximate length, 976 feet.

Saturday, January 29

THE GIRL AND THE JUDGE

The Most Intensely Gripping Dramatic Film Ever Produced. It is destined to create a veritable sensation in motion picture production. How a Southern Judge solved a great murder mystery and was tempted to conceal his discovery. A study in deduction more convincing than Sherlock Holmes. Approximate length, 980 feet.

The Two Concluding Reels of THE LIFE OF MOSES will be issued as follows: PART IV., "The Victory of Israel," Feb. 12. PART V., "The Promised Land," Feb. 26. Exhibitors will thus have the opportunity of showing all five reels before the end of Lent. Make your arrangements now with your exchange.

USE VITAGRAPH POSTERS. ORDER FROM YOUR EXCHANGE.

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA { NEW YORK, 116 Nassau St. CHICAGO, 109 Randolph St. LONDON, 25 Cecil Court PARIS, 15, Rue Sainte-Cecile

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY - 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

EDITORS: J. P. CHALMERS, THOMAS BEDDING, F. R. P. S.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rica and the Philippine Islands.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3⅜ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.

TIME DISCOUNTS: 5% two or more insertions, 10% three months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

G. P. VON HARLEMAN, Western Representative, 913-915 Schiller Building, Chicago, Ill. - Telephone, Central 3763

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 6 JANUARY 29, 1910 No. 4

Summary of the Week.

The popularity of the picture drama with the seekers after enjoyment is obvious by listening to the applause and watching the faces of the "gallery gods."

* * *

The meeting of the F. S. A. suggests some thoughts on the situation and the better regulation of the moving picture business. (Page 118.)

* * *

George Kleine compiles a library of educational subjects in motion pictures. The coming popular method of imparting instruction. (Page 119.)

* * *

Henry Lee, the gifted impersonator and lecturer and moving picture exhibitor, fills the New York Theater with an audience which justifies our arguments for an exclusive and model picture show house on upper Broadway. (Page 119.)

* * *

Biograph Stock Company migrates to the land of sunshine and flowers. New Biograph studio planned.

Pathe presents a popular and varied program and solves the difficulty of good vaudeville by getting it in the picture.

Vitagraph Company increase their output to three reels per week, beginning February 14. (Page 120.)

* * *

Suitable pictures for church work forms the theme which is discussed by two World correspondents. (Pages 121, 130.)

* * *

The World's dream of a practical school for moving picture operators has been realized, and Mr. Richardson, of The World's staff, will devote part of his time to its oversight. (Page 124.)

* * *

Our "Man-About-Town" throws the search light on some rather queer practices and hands out some sound advice to the exhibitor. (Page 121.)

* * *

"Lux Graphicus" discovers that Fra Elbert Hubbard is a man after his own heart and welcomes him into the circle of moving picture exponents. (Page 126.)

* * *

The Operators' Union of New York City have a rally meeting and a smoker and discuss fraternal matters. They also secure offices on "Moving Picture Row." (Page 129.)

* * *

Correspondents from far and near air their grievances, issue challenges and generally pick flaws in the moving picture game as it is being played. (Pages 129, 130.)

* * *

Posters, their source, novelty and usefulness are discussed on page 122.

* * *

Recently Hubert Latham, an aeroplanist, made an ascent with a moving picture camera and operator having a combined weight of two hundred pounds. Whether or no satisfactory views have been obtained, deponent sayeth not. If such is the case, however, they should be of vast interest.

Amongst the "Gods."

Whenever we go to inspect a moving picture we always, as these pages have witnessed for many months past, study the audience. The attitude of the audience towards the moving picture is the keynote of the business—the very pivot of the system of machinery which keeps the moving picture in evidence before the world to-day. If your audience is apathetic or takes to the bad habit of staying away, then, the future of the moving picture is in doubt.

Some months ago we wrote an article in which we pointed out that audiences are of many kinds, ranging between the moving picture equivalent of the opera goer and the humble patron of the lower East Side nickelodeon, who probably almost always falls into the category of the illiterate and the uneducated. As the audience varies, so do the theaters, especially in New York City.

Theater managers all the world over trace their chief success to the popular priced parts of the house. If the gallery applauds a piece, then its success is assured. In other words, the masses and not the classes hold the success or failure of public entertainment in their hands. On the other side of the Atlantic it is the pit and gallery, as it is commonly called, which makes or mars the success of an entertainment. All the falsely favorable criticism in the world, all the support of the plutocratic, will never convert a popularly assigned failure into a success. It is the cheap parts of the house alone which do that.

In New York City, just now, there is a well-known theater, the Circle, which has lately taken to the exhibition of moving pictures instead of the usual theatrical entertainment. And as this house possesses a gallery, we were the other evening in that gallery for the purpose of mixing with the "gods" and being for the time being one of them. The "gods" at the Circle follow the moving picture entertainment with the raptest possible attention. They laughed, they applauded, they appreciated and they were interested. There they sat, as critical of the picture as they would have been of a first-rate play. They were interested in the human side of each story just as they would have been in the human side of a play. In other words, we could discover no difference in the general attitude of the Circle "gods" towards the moving picture than we probably should have done in that of the "gods" in an ordinary theater where a big success is running.

This little fact is worth mentioning on two grounds; firstly, as another indication of the enormous hold which the picture has upon the public at large, and, secondly, that it is perfectly possible to conduct a house on the differential price system. Here in New York City the exigencies of the building laws forbid the erection of a proper moving picture palace with seats ranging in cost, let us say, from a dollar down. Were those laws abrogated, no doubt some capitalist would come forward and give New York what it does not at present possess, and that is a proper moving picture palace. The attitude of the Circle "gods" convinces us that the New York public, at any rate, is ripe for such an experiment.

The F. S. A.

The semi-annual meeting of the Film Service Association is to be held this week in New York City, practically on the anniversary of its virtual extinction as a potent factor in the moving picture business. It will be remembered that it met last year about this time—to be accurate, on January the 9th and 11th. It met to be put out of business by the newly formed Patents Company. Since then it has existed as a purely social body. It had a pleasant meeting last Summer at Atlantic City, where it dined and did nothing disagreeable. Next week's meeting, from all accounts, is to be similarly innocuous. In other words, a licnesed exchange man or renter, counts for little or nothing as a free agent in the film business. The F. S. A., therefore, is nothing but a purposeless mass of purposeless units.

It would be idle to say that the members of this association, though reduced to impotence, are satisfied with their lot. They are not. Several months passed before they exactly realized their position, and now realizing it, they are just wondering what is going to happen next. Not a very enviable frame of mind for an American business man to be in: and not to know from one week to the other whether he is going to be permitted to continue in business or not. That is the feeling of the average exchange man of to-day—a feeling that has been personally expressed to us from leading cities of the Union where there are licensed exchanges. In other words, the ordinary licensed exchange does not like the position of matters. He does not care to tell his manufacturer or the Patents Company. This being so, we do so for him.

If we thought these men had the courage of their convictions, we should not be surprised if many licensed exchanges did not voluntarily go independent, after listening to their tales of woe. Many of them threaten to. What bearing upon the general situation this will have it is hard to tell. Can the manufacturers exist without the exchange? Can they afford to ignore him and go direct to the exhibitor? Probably not. Are there too many exchanges for the volume of business? This is a question difficult to answer.

One fact, however, is perfectly clear, and it is this: that however pretty the superficial harmony of next week's meeting of the F. S. A. may be, below the surface there is discord, discontent and dissatisfaction. The exchanges complain that not only is their position in the business unsatisfactory, but that they are not making money. Many of them resent the restrictions put upon them; many of them are indignant at being told that they can continue in business so long as they are "good boys." It is time, we think, that the air should be cleared in this matter, and that the Patents Company and manufacturers should define their position towards the licensed exchanges. In the last twelve months of its existence, the F. S. A. has done absolutely nothing. Meanwhile its competitive organization, the N. I. M. P. A., certainly has done something. It is organizing its manufacturers and exchanges and has to-day, as compared with twelve months ago, several progressing and progressive independent manufacturers in the field, whereas then there were none. It can be seen that the position of a licensed exchange just now is not of the happiest. We shall be interested to know if anything practical comes of next week's meeting.

The Regulation of the Business.

In the film rental business order is emerging from chaos, slowly, very slowly, but nevertheless it is coming. In the beginning, men with little or no knowledge of the business jumped into the rental field with absolutely no idea but to make money. To conduct a legitimate business seemed farthest from their thoughts. To them the exhibitor was an easy mark—a man without rights. He was merely a means to an end, and that end was the making of every possible dollar out of him. Agreements and contracts were made without the slightest intention of fulfilling them. Customers were solicited by means of elaborate promises and held just as long as they would stand for any old kind of service, and then they dropped off, to be taken up by some other exchange and have the dose repeated. Stock was sent out without proper inspection, under the impression, seemingly, that it was cheaper to do so. Films which were nothing more nor less than junk were kept in active service just as long as they would hang together, and in every way the exhibitor was getting the worst of it.

The manufacturers finally woke up and saw that unless these abuses were at least in some degree rectified, the business, as a whole, would soon receive its death-blow, and the Motion Picture Patents Company was the direct result of this awakening. The abuses, in modified form, are still with us, but week by week they are being lessened. So far has this work of reform progressed that the exchange which tries to do business on hot air and gall is beginning to have a distinctly hard time of it, and that is as it should be. There is no reason on earth why film renting should not be carried on in a straightforward, businesslike manner, just the same as any other business. There is no reason why an exhibitor should purchase one thing and get another. That the Motion Picture Patents Company has operated to correct some of the crying evils which beset the business, no man who has watched events of the past year can, or will, deny. Many of the results attained have not come directly through that company, but they have come indirectly as a result of its entering the field. Much hue and cry has been raised about the amount of money collected by the company. Perhaps it is excessive, in the sense that the work might be performed for a less fee. Of that it is not in our premises to judge. Many assert, however, that the change which has come about as a result of the work of the Patents Company is well worth double the amount the company receives, so that, after all, they are a necessary and valuable adjunct to the moving picture business as a whole. This opinion is expressed by many exhibitors and exchange men who are not blind to their own interests.

But there is yet a vast amount of work to be done before the business can be said to be in a thoroughly satisfactory condition. There are still exchanges which should be either compelled to mend their ways or else leave the field. Abuses must be eliminated if the business as a whole is to live and prosper. Daily the great public is becoming better educated and more critical. Gradually it is evincing a disposition to pay increased prices for their entertainment, but, at the same time, it demands a much better show. That which passed muster a year ago would be received in chilly silence now. Junk and rainstorms have had their day and must be relegated to the has-beens. And it is right that they should.

The Motion Picture as an Educator.

We have at various times, in these columns, commented upon the importance of the moving picture in the educational field, and the time is slowly but surely coming when it will take the place of the antiquated blackboard in the school and college. In medicine, surgery, scientific research, agriculture—in fact, every branch of study, its use has either been demonstrated or its possibilities pointed out. And as a means of disseminating throughout the whole world the laboratory researches of the scientist it has no equal. The experiments are carried out in front of the camera and the pictures may be used to illustrate the lectures of the scientist all over the world at the same time.

As we have before announced, George Kleine, of Chicago and New York, has been assiduously working for some time on the preparation of a catalogue of educational film subjects, and, at a private demonstration in his office a few days ago, a MOVING PICTURE WORLD representative was given a glimpse of some of these educational films—some of them being of microscopic studies which must have been obtained only with the exercise of great skill and patience. These microscopic pictures emanated from the Urban studio, which has led the world in motographic educational subjects, and the perfection of the films shown may be realized when we say that the hair on the back of the ordinary house fly stood out like quills on the back of a fretful porcupine. One of the series was "Curious Caterpillers," and showed how our beautiful park trees were ravaged and destroyed by this pest. "The Fly Pest" was also very interesting and a timely illustration to aid in the present campaign against the house fly as a vehicle of disease. We are shown the fly invading a chunk of meat and laying its eggs. We see the hatching of the eggs and the maggots crawling over the meat. The maggots bury themselves in the earth for a few days and when they emerge they are still wingless, but on the eleventh day they are grown flies. We see them feasting on some dead fish, next they fly to the sugar bowl and deposit therein some of the microbes they have collected from the dead fish. Next he alights on the edge of a cuspidor and from thence to the mouthpiece of a nursing bottle, and, as a finish to the film, we are shown a baby sucking at his bottle, which, if it had not been sterilized, is covered with the germs left by the house fly.

But Mr. Urban here tries to offset the disagreeable impression created as we think of our own carelessness with the house fly, and he puts him through some acrobatic stunts for our amusement. The fly is shown juggling with dumb bells, balls, etc., and going through all manner of tricks which must have taken infinite pains to train.

After this interesting picture we were shown "Chemical Action," in which is demonstrated how various metals are dissolved by the acids, the combustion of steel filings, etc.

The exhibition terminated with a scenic picture, "The Val de l'Aude," an exquisite specimen of Gaumont photography and coloring. If we can be assured of a plentiful supply of such subjects we may safely venture the assertion that the moving picture is the most potent factor that has yet been promulgated for the world's enlightenment.

"The Life of the World."

Henry Lee's Interesting Moving Picture Travelogue.

Such entertainments as the one briefly described in the head line of this article do so much to popularize the moving picture with the better classes of the community that we consider it a duty to encourage them to the utmost limits of our powers. The other evening the handsome New York Theater was filled to its capacity with an audience clearly of high-class standing, who followed the entertainment with all the rapt closeness and attention that they might have devoted to an opera or a successful play. This is a spectacle that always fills us with confidence in the stability of the moving picture as an educational and entertainment factor.

Of the manager who presents "The Only New Thing Under the Sun," Henry Lee's "Life of the World," we have never before heard, but we think his business enterprise is being expended in the right direction. Personally he may in some sense be regarded as a competitor with Lyman Howe, Elmendorf, Burton Holmes in the popularization of the moving pictures. If he is to make this his program, we wish him every success. We think he will obtain it on lines such as those shown in his present entertainment.

Practically the entertainment consists of a series of moving pictures, interspersed with colored lantern slides, which take the spectator practically around the world. Starting from the North River, we cross the Atlantic to the British Isles, and then make for France, Russia, Italy, Egypt, India, Japan, and so, by way of San Francisco, once more across the American continent to Little Old New York. This program gives the organizer of the entertainment opportunity for a wonderfully varied display of moving and stationary photographs, in which (and here we speak with personal knowledge of the program down to Berlin) the salient features of the "life" of the world are shown. Indeed, we were very agreeably impressed by the expert manner in which those salient features were extracted from such an enormous program and shown to the large and interested audience.

The entertainment was in three parts and it was accompanied by orchestral music very judiciously chosen. The monologue, if we may so call it, was spoken by Mr. Henry Lee, the author of the story or lecture which accompanies the moving and stationary photographs. Incidentally Mr. Lee, who is a splendid lecturer, made up and appeared in a number of characters who form part of "The Life of the World." For example, he appeared as Mark Twain, Croker, Carnegie, Shakespeare, Dickens, Edward VII., Emperor William, Pope Leo XIII., Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Kipling, the Mikado, Joseph Cannon, Lincoln, and President Taft. These impersonations were very successful and to the taste of the audience, those of Twain, Shakespeare, the Mikado and Lincoln being especially convincing. We warmly congratulate Mr. Henry Lee upon his enormous success as a lecturer and as an impersonator. Besides being a graphic speaker, he is also a witty one, and frequently made his large audience break into laughter.

The lantern slides, of which there were many scores, were exceedingly well colored, and the moving pictures, on the whole, of excellent quality, though here and there they were somewhat aged and had in several respects deteriorated. The ocean pictures crossing the Atlantic were enormously realistic.

A special word of praise is due to the effects produced by voices at the back of the stage. These were extremely realistic and added materially to the success of the entertainment. We hope that innumerable audiences will have the opportunity of seeing Henry Lee's "Life of the World."

HENRY LEE.

One thing in this delightful show, the absence of flicker in the moving pictures, so impressed us that we made inquiry as to what make of projecting machine was used. It is but fair to say that it was the new Power's Cameragraph No. 6. We were informed that this machine was selected after competitive test, and really, where the films were in first-class condition, the projection was so perfect that we forgot we were looking at a moving picture, it was so like the real thing. We have since learned from Mr. Will C. Smith, who managed the projection apparatus, that the latest improvements in the Power's No. 6 machine place it, in his estimation, above all others, so, giving credit where credit is due, much of the success of the entertainment, from our point of view, belongs to Mr. Smith and the apparatus at his command.

VITAGRAPH COMPANY WILL ISSUE THREE REELS

Beginning with the week of February 14, the Vitagraph Company will increase their regular output to three reels per week. The release days will be Tuesday, Friday and Saturday. Extensive additions to the Vitagraph plant have been in progress for some time with this object in view and as a month ago we were informed that they had enough completed subjects on their shelves to carry them up to March, there is no indication that the factory facilities will be taxed beyond its capacity by the extra reel to be issued.

We are told that this step has not been taken without consulting with the exchanges and, although they could have increased their output long ago, it was only done in conformity to the increased demand for the Vitagraph product.

BIOGRAPH COMPANY MIGRATES TO THE LAND OF SUNSHINE AND FLOWERS.

New Biograph Studio in Progress.

Past history proclaims the fact that when the Biograph Company essays any move on the board it is the result of keen judgment and is carried out with that precision and finesse which commands success. Having exhausted all the facilities of their cramped but well utilized studio on Fourteenth Street they realized that they were handicapped in futher progress, therefore another site was looked for. After careful study of the advantages of several locations a plot of land in the Bronx was selected as the ideal spot, being high ground, removed from factory smoke, adjacent to romantic rural scenery and yet convenient to the main artery of New York City—the subway trains. As soon as the frost is out of the ground, building operations will commence, meanwhile the plans of the new studio and factory are being carefully discussed and by next Fall we will see things moving in the making of moving pictures. What the plans for this new equipment are is not for our readers to learn at present. Sufficient for the exhibitor to know that they provide every facility for the production of Biograph pictures on a much larger scale and with every provision for the futher perfection of that product both artistically and technically.

But this is not all. Acute minds perceived that the march of progress must not await the new habitation; the rural settings around this section had been well nigh exhausted: the inclemency of the season made journeys into the country a severe task. So on Wednesday, January 19, the entire Biograph stock company, with Lawrence Griffith, director-in-chief, was dispatched on fast trains to the sunny and picturesque lands of Southern California. With headquarters in Los Angeles, where a developing plant has already been installed, with a careful selection of scenarios suitable for that region and with the inspiring influence which a delightful climate must exert on the artistic temperament, we may look forward to seeing on the screen, pictures that will yet more and more maintain the Biograph name for quality.

PATHE PRESENTS A POPULAR PROGRAM.

It would seem that Pathe Freres have come to the relief of those exhibitors who must have vaudeville acts in their programs yet cannot afford to pay for good ones. In the Pathe program for the current week there are no less than four vaudeville acts excellently pictured. "The Bareback Rider" and "An Aerial Acrobat" of January 19; "Acrobatic Exercises by the Colibris Dwarfs" of January 24, and "The Strong Man" released to-day. The strong dramatic story of the first named and the realistic production of them all should make these pictures of great value to the exhibitor who caters to the popular audience.

Comedy and pathos are also well represented in the Pathe program. "Fickle Fortune" and "The Unlucky Fisherman" provoke many laughs. "Motherless," the Wednesday release, is a strongly pathetic story which is a desirable antidote to the lighthearted subjects issued the same day by the other licensed manufacturers.

The educational pictures, which are really more appreciated by the public than the exhibitor will allow, are also excellent and varied. We are taken on "A Visit to Bombay," we are introduced to the personality of the renowned and venerable "Count Leo Tolstoi" and we are given in ten minutes or less an excellent idea of "The Leather Industry" from the removal of the hide from the carcass to the tanned and finished product. Altogether a very excellent addition to the moving picture circulating library.

WELL-KNOWN WRITERS TURNING TO A NEW FIELD—THAT OF WRITING FILM SCENARIOS.

When such writers as Richard Harding Davis, Rex Beach and Elbert Hubbard (the latter having just closed a contract with the Selig Polyscope Company, Inc., Chicago, to make an extensive and elaborate film production of "Justinian and Theodora") turn to this fast growing field of amusement as a market for their composition, it clearly demonstrates to the minds of the semi-skeptical that the "survival of the fittest" will maintain its time-honored position. The advent of such writers in this new departure not only assures us better subjects, higher themes, more elevating pictures and an increased popularity throughout the country, but they are now finding themselves confronting a new era in amusement reviews. Referring back to Elbert J. Hubbard, for the benefit of those who are not familiar with this fascinating writer we wish to mention him as the editor of "Fra Magazine," "The Philistine" and many other well-known periodicals.

PICTURES FOR CHURCH WORK.

Your "Man-About-Town" very wisely advocates moving pictures for church work, yet he makes a slight mistake when he predicts that Dr. Leighton Parks, the rector of St. Bartholomew's Church, will be criticised by the clergy. The idea of Dr. L. Parks is not a new one and will not be unfavorably criticised by the clergy, as other ministers have made similar attempts, and, although supported by the clergy in general, had to abandon their idea of using moving pictures for church work, for the lack of proper pictures.

Many pastors have tried, in the past years, to pay the debts of their churches by showing moving pictures, and at one time several solicitors were making good money in booking films for churches. Gradually this business went down, as the good films were getting scarcer and scarcer and more than one show had to be stopped on account of bad films.

One day I recommended to one of these solicitors the "Four-footed Hero" of Selig, and after showing this film to one church, the solicitor had many orders for other churches. To-day, where could we find a copy of "Four-footed Hero" in any decent shape to be shown?

Another day I met in Bound Brook, N. J., a minister from Plainfield, N. J. He informed me that he had fitted a hall with a screen, a projecting machine, etc., but he was now at a loss to find enough good films to give a show once a week.

I am acquainted with a minister who is very anxious to show moving pictures if he can be assured a steady supply of decent films. He tried it, but he says that he cannot depend on the exchanges, as most of the renters do not seem to know all the films; they buy them and rent them without looking at them. The ministers claim that they cannot even depend on the Board of Censorship, as the censors seem to have a very poor conception of good moral lessons.

As to religious films, we have only very incorrect pictures, and as your "Man-About-Town" mentions the "Prodigal Son," allow me to say that the ministers do not care for the two known copies of the "Prodigal Son," as both of them, although masterpieces of the producing art, do not convey the proper meaning of the parable. The Bible tells us that the old man is waiting, watching for the return of his son, and when he sees him at a distance, he runs to him to welcome him back home. The first film of this name shows us the old man comfortably seated in his house, while the son comes to the door and calls a servant to notify the father. In the second film of this name, the manufacturers correct this first blunder by having the old father watching through a window, but then they omit the great feast of the killing of the fatted calf to celebrate the return of the son. The second film has another great drawback—the fact of showing the young man on a debauch, with dancing girls falling in his arms, etc. No minister would show such a scene in his church.

With the exception of the "Life of Moses" series and a few Christmas stories, I cannot recall a single other film of recent issue that is suitable for church work. No, the clergy and the newspapers will not criticise Dr. L. Parks; they will encourage him; but, like myself, they will doubt of his success, as after a few Sundays the learned doctor will be at the end of the available pictures for church work. Then, when the exchanges will send him bad films, he will have to stop his show, and his unsuccess will go down in history as a failure of the moving pictures for church work.

I know of two gentlemen, great church workers, who are ready to finance any serious movement for introducing motion pictures in churches, hospitals, etc., if they can be assured of a supply of decent subjects and of correct religious pictures, true to the teachings of the Bible. To my knowledge one of these gentlemen is a millionaire and contributes yearly vast sums of money to church work.

I have in my possession the books and papers of a man who four years ago was booking motion pictures for churches. He was then making a comfortable living, but as business went down for the lack of good subjects, he died some two years ago practically a pauper.

If Dr. L. Parks is criticised it will not be because the clergymen have faith in other methods for holding and directing the attention of the youthful, but because we have not the proper pictures to show.

Evidently we have a few good subjects that can be shown in church work. "The Unwritten Letter" of Gaumont, "The Old Couple" of Pathe, "The Good-hearted Policeman" of Gaumont, etc., are clean, good moral lessons; they are admirable, but they do not suit the majority of our manufacturers, as such productions do not show the villain knocking down a woman or do not show a murder, etc. Our manufacturers, listening to the demands of the unscrupulous exhibitors, want some highly sensational thrills or the silly chases. In other words, the manufacturers seem to believe that their duty is to show the dark sides of humanity—infidelity, divorces, burglary, murders, brutality, executions, etc.—while they pay little attention to the brighter sides of life.

If the manufacturers were to produce pictures fitted to be shown in churches, they would make more money, as we have more churches than moving picture theaters. They could strike a medium in producing films to be shown in churches as well as in theaters. J. M. B.

THE AGFA PRODUCTS FOR MOVING PICTURE WORK.

In the field of the manufacture of chemicals for the making of photographs, whether they be of the stationary or moving picture kind, the Agfa Company stands pre-eminent. The word "Agfa," our readers should know, is an abbreviation of a German name of the house, which is one of the greatest chemical manufactures in Europe, represented in New York City by the Berlin Aniline Works, of 213 Water street. The word "Agfa," then, known to photographers all the world over, signifies high-class products made for photographic purposes.

It is a good many years since, in the making of photographs, we commenced to use the "Agfa" developers. We are well within the mark in saying that we have used nearly every one of those products and have used them successfully, both on glass plates, celluloid films and on paper prints. Amongst developers we may mention "Agfa" Metol, Ortol, Eikonogen, Pyro, Glycin, Rodinal, Hydrokinone, Amidol. There are also the "Agfa" intensifiers, reducers and fixers, as well as their flash powders, the latter of which we have used for making at home pictures.

Each and every one of these products is available for use in the developing rooms of moving picture manufactures. Indeed, this present writer has made up many gallons of developers from "Agfa" products, and therefore we can recommend them to all our readers as being the acme of technical excellence for developing negatives and positives. We question whether there is a moving picture manufactory in the United States, or, indeed, in any other part of the world, which does not feel the necessity for using "Agfa" products.

One of the recent introductions of the company touches a branch of the work which is rapidly attracting much attention amongst moving picture makers. This is the tinting of the film. The Agfa Company, or rather the Berlin Aniline Works, have made up a list of fourteen colors for coloring or tinting photographs, whether they be slides or films. The colors are rose, orange, blue, green, brown, violet, maroon, vermilion, leaf green, pink, turquoise, purple, dark yellow and light yellow. These are sold in three-ounce bottles of concentrated solution at 50 cents each. They should be tried and experimented with by all those who are at work in the tinting of moving pictures.

But besides the actual making of moving pictures, there is usually done in every moving picture factory a great deal of ordinary photography, the taking of stationary negatives and the making of prints therefrom, for a variety of purposes, and for work of this kind the "Agfa" products will be found of special value. Large numbers of the readers of The Moving Picture World are interested in lantern slide making and in snapshot work and general commercial photography. To these also the "Agfa" products can be recommended. Our readers should apply to 213 Water street, New York City, for full lists and catalogues of these developers, etc.

A NEW BUSINESS HAS BEEN EVOLVED.

Of late the "independent" exchanges have found a brand new road to salvation in the "renovating" process. They are working it to about the limit, too, at least some of them are. Old junk is being rejuvenated by the cleaning process and is being extolled and rented as new stock. As a matter of fact, the films do look like new, so far as superficial appearance goes, when they come from the clean-'em-up-and-varnish-'em factories, but unfortunately those enterprising renewers of youth haven't as yet found any means of eliminating the hundred or more patches in each thousand feet of film, nor can they replace the pieces cut out, so that, while rainmarks are eliminated, the performance as a whole is rather weird, one never being able to tell just when one of the characters in the play will make a lightning change of position Strange how the independent exchanges, while cursing the licensed film loud and deep and asserting by day and by night that the independent product is "just as good," still cling to licensed film, even though it be old enough to wear whiskers. Is it because there is not enough independent product, or is because that alone will not please their customers?

THE KINEMACOLOR TRIUMPH IN NEW YORK.

Mr. Charles Urban on His Tremendous Success.

[From The Kinematograph and Lantern Weekly.]

Mr. Urban when once he is captured is, like the proverbial egg, "full of meat" to the interviewer, and we learned much of interest to the trade in the hour's chat we had with him yesterday at Urbanora House.

"I am more than gratified with my visit," said Mr. Urban "for, as you know, I had to live down a lot of prejudice and convince some strong skeptics over in the States that my natural color process possessed all I claimed for it. But besides this I had difficulties to contend with, which, of course, the man in the street little dreams of. For instance, my operator had to pass the official test and examination, my machine had to be put into thorough trim, a special motor had to be obtained so that we could arrange with the 25 ampere current that is allowed, and many restrictions and regulations, that our English showmen know nothing of, had to be overcome. Talk about 'hustle'—why, I can get more through in a day over here than I can manage in a month in the States. When all was ready my invitations were extended to the most pessimistic and the most prominent members of the trade whom we could think of, for I was determined to prove to them the importance and value of our process. From the time I landed at the wharf until our show on the Saturday night pressmen dogged me continually, and all and sundry, who could in any way find interest in the subject, were anxious to have a private view or to make some arrangement with me as to the future. But my visit was not to exploit the invention, but rather to answer the challenge that had been thrown out by the press and trade. It was a costly demonstration, but it accomplished the end I had in view. I got to America on Thanksgiving Day and four days after received the patents, which have taken two and a half years to get through, owing principally to their drastic and comprehensive completeness. I need not tell you about the demonstration except to say that the figure-heads of the film trade were present, and those who could not congratulate me after the show have since written eulogistic letters. One little instance is perhaps worth citing as showing the criticism even to the minutest detail. I had a chat with Mr. Bedding, one of the editors of The Moving Picture World, who has exceptional knowledge of photography, and he generously said when he saw the first picture: 'Good boy!! I admit that my judgment was wrong and that you have overcome the difficulties of three-color work; the only question I ask you is how from green and red you can possibly obtain your blue?' There was no need for a verbal answer, for in our flower study corn-flowers and pansies with their various tints of blue, their stereoscopic beauty and the sharpness of detail, even to the very petals, gave a most definite answer, and these and the local subjects which I took specially in the States, simply overcame such criticism and helped to glue the audience to their seats throughout the performance."

"Yes, Mr. Urban," we exclaimed, "we already know the beauty of your wonderful productions, but what the trade is most anxious to know is, what are you going to do now that your invention is brought to perfection and every country in the world recognizes its value?"

"As you know," said Mr. Urban, "the Provincial Palaces, Ltd., have our sole rights for England, and as I am getting twenty outfits ready for them they will soon be showing, and I expect by the beginning of the New Year both Manchester and Liverpool people will have Kinemacolor at their doors. I believe the company intend to open 140 theaters between now and the end of next year. I am gradually closing up contracts in various other countries, but my scheme is first to lay a solid foundation so that the structure when erected shall be firm and stable. I have had many flattering offers from the States, and from New York alone have had considerably more offers than I expected from the whole of the States, but I want to be fully prepared before definitely fixing up. At present we have about 100 subjects, but I must increase this number considerably before we can cater for the whole world. I have four men now taking negatives, and am training others both to print and produce the subjects, whilst others are being instructed in other departments. It is not a one man process, but time is needed to educate our men up to the standard of excellence that I have always striven for. The new machine, which I used for the first time in the States, is as near perfection as we shall ever get. The old machine weighed 30 pounds, but we have increased the weight to just on 80 pounds, and have managed by its rock steadiness to do away with the slight fringing, which people who have seen the subjects at the Palace may have noticed. We have done nothing in a hapbazard fashion. The patents are most exhaustive and are secured in every country, and all this has taken a tremendous time, but I feel we are now ready to give the people of the world the value of our experimenting in a perfection that will be a credit to the trade."

Posters for Moving Picture Shows.

Amongst those devoting special attention to the production of posters for moving picture theaters is the U. S. Lithograph Company, Association Building, Chicago, Ill., of which branch Thomas H. Quill is in charge. Mr. Quill, as we pointed out in The Moving Picture World several weeks ago, is well equipped by his knowledge and experience to produce special designs for moving picture houses. He sends us a specimen of the poster just produced by the U. S. Lithograph Company for the Exclusive Film Company, of Chicago. This is striking and effective as well as being artistic. It has a very tastefully produced border, in the center of which is a sketch from the story, "Her City Beaux." The whole thing is refined and artistic, and, exhibited either in an exchange or outside a moving picture theater, cannot fail to attract the attention of the public. We hope to see other specimens of poster work from the U. S. Lithograph Company. Judging by the excellent quality of the piece of work before us, we have no hesitation in recommending those having the preparation of the posters in hand to entrust the work to that company, on whose behalf Mr. Quill will give it special attention.

ORIGINAL POSTERS.

For two or three weeks the Vitagraph Company have been sending out a large poster which is a distinct departure from the usual flashy thing, which generally gives a wrong impression of the character of the subject. The Vitagraph idea is a group of large half-tone reproductions from photographs of some of the actual scenes in the film and these are surrounded by graceful and artistic designs of a subdued tint in harmony with the color of the photograph. These attractive posters are sold at a very low price and are in great vogue judging from the increased demand.

Another original and attractive poster is issued by the Great Northern Film Company for their picture "Anarchists on Board." It also contains an 8 by 10 inch photograph of the scene in which the bomb is discovered and beneath, printed in type large enough to be easily read in the lobby, is a brief synopsis of the story of the film. An excellent idea.

WHAT IS A POSTER?

I had an idea that a poster was for the purpose of advertising not only the title of the production to be shown, but to give also a picture of one of the most important scenes.

For some time I have remarked that some of the posters were exaggerated and were made very sensational to attract attention, in too many cases conveying a very false impression. As we must give justice to everyone, I must admit that some posters are truthful, as the scenes depicted on them are from still photos of the production advertised, while other posters are drawn from the fantastic imagination of the artist.

The posters of "Richelieu" are certainly the limit! Who is the artist? He must be an ignoramus of the first water to show us men dressed in stiff white shirts, high collars, swallow-tail coats and black pants—the dress for an evening party of 1910. Most likely the same artist will show us Julius Caesar in the uniform of a U. S. general.

The manufacturer who accepts such posters cheapens his own productions, as anyone with any common sense will come to the conclusion that if the costumes shown on the posters are so much out of date, the other details of the production must be as untrue. J. M. B.

Montreal, Canada.—The Gaiety Theater has been enlarged to a seating capacity of 700, but still find this insufficient for their patronage. Manager Attewell finds the use of Independent and Association films giving general satisfaction.

I will freely admit that so far as I was able to secure space in the colums of the Moving Picture World, and the paper was liberal in its concessions, I strongly advocated the support of Judge Gaynor's candidacy for Mayor. I urged everybody interested in the motion picture business to support him. Now I hope my readers will not jump to the conclusion that I am about to claim credit for the election of our present Mayor. As the burlesque tragedian would say, "Far be it from thus." Neither do I intend to tell my friends how good a Mayor the ex-judge is making. It is a little too early for that. He is starting out nicely and I honestly believe he will fill the office with credit to those who elected him and himself, but as I am not writing a political article I will switch on to the straight, or main, line. As I first stated, I was enthusiastic in my support of Mr. Gaynor and did what I could to keep his candidacy before the eyes of the motion picture people because I felt he was a liberal-minded man and, so far as he was concerned, would construe and administrate the laws liberally and not literally. The promptness and fearlessness with which he came to the rescue of the motion picture people in December, 1908, first introduced me to the subject of this article. Were I to say worthy man some of my readers might be tempted to say I was trying to grind an axe. However, Judge Gaynor is now Mayor of New York and since he has assumed that honorable office I find that some of the people who may have been influenced to a more or less extent by what I wrote during the campaign misconstrued my articles. At that time I spoke of Judge Gaynor as a friend of the picture people. I remember that in one of my articles I quoted quite freely from a speech Judge Gaynor made in Cooper Union, in which he featured the moving picture people and told of the impositions they had been subjected to. Now, not some, but many managers of nickelodeons and other moving picture theaters seem to have the notion that because Judge Gaynor is now Mayor Gaynor, their choice, that everything will go. I now get to the nail I wish to hit on the head. I believe Mayor Gaynor to be as liberal as he was when he was on the bench, but anyone who thinks that there is any laxity in his makeup is deceiving himself. The existing laws will be enforced, but with a liberal spirit; not to the extent, however, that violations will be winked at. Several instances have come under my notice the past week where exhibitors have had their attention called to some things in or about their places that are not as they should be and they have met the friendly advice with a retort to the effect that there was a moving picture man in the Mayor's chair. These people are liable to roll out of bed some morning and find themselves without a license. I have it from excellent authority that the Mayor will not intervene where a violator of the law falls into the hands of any of his subordinates. He will back up all of them if they enforce the laws equitably. A very active subordinate of the Mayor at the present time is Chief Croker, of the Fire Department. My advice to the exhibitors is that he be given respectful attention. Reports are abroad that Mr. Croker is prejudiced against moving picture places. If they are true it is fair to assume that he is so, not because of a dislike for the pictures, but of a zealousness in the interest of his department. Granting that he is prejudiced, it is policy to give his supervision careful attention. Of course, should his zeal carry him outside reasonable bounds an appeal to a higher authority would be perfectly proper, even to an injunction suit, but where everything appears to be right it is well to keep in the drive. These remarks are prompted by a report I received the other day regarding an exhibitor who was inclined to ignore certain requirements of the fire department and who went so far as to say that if he was pushed to the wall he would get satisfaction from the Mayor's office. That is a silly position to take in any event, and especially in cases where the actions of the fire department are justifiable. Even if imposition can be shown such a stand is a foolish one. The new Mayor was not elected to be the guardian of the moving picture houses and people who voice such sentiments only work injury in some way or another to that line of business as a whole. If any exhibitor is not complying with the laws he has as much chance to evade the consequences under the new Mayor as a cake of ice has of living in a live furnace. There is a distinction between enforcement and liberal enforcement of laws, but the latter can be very easily wiped out by abuse on the part of those they are intended to protect. That old fable about the goose that laid the golden egg bears very materially upon the situation in many respects.

* * *

I heard an exhibitor say the other day "I heard a great deal about Judge Gaynor being our friend during the campaign, but he has been in office almost three weeks and I fail to see what he has done for us." Of course such sentiments are hardly worthy of notice, except for reference in a contrary argument. In the first place the new Mayor has hardly had time to take his hat off and roll up his sleeves; secondly, what is expected of him on the line to which the criticism is directed? I will cite something, however, that may be news to many. Do you know that certain municipal agents have called at the various film exchanges seeking information that might tend to show that there is any graft business in the Department of Water, Gas and Electricity? Such is the fact, and these agents have also urged that at any time anything in the nature of a "hold-up" may transpire the evidence should be submitted and if it is corroborated and sustained there will be some new men in office. I also have it upon very good authority that these agents have within their jurisdiction the supervision of moving picture machine operators to the extent that if an exchange or exhibitor can show that an operator is imposing upon them and a hearing sustains the charges the operators' license will be cancelled. I hesitated about accepting this statement, but upon investigation I found it was pretty nearly correct. I also learned that the cancellation will apply where it can be shown that an operator attempts to secure pecuniary gain by "queering" service of one exchange to turn the service over to another. Many of the exchanges have been complaining of this for some time, but they could not see a means for counteracting it. It is not known how the department learned of such cases, but it is a safe guess that some of the exchanges have not been idle. The department is well informed on the situation, however. I learned the other day that when a municipal agent called at an exchange he was informed that some exchanges bribe operators to make exhibitors dissatisfied with the service they are getting and eventually lead him into the favored exchange. Upon learning this the agent stated that an authenticated case of this kind would mean immediate revocation of the bribed operator's license. He was asked if the case would be the same whether the operator received a spot cash consideration or received a commission on future business and the answer was that the cases were identical.

* * *

Here is something the postman left on my table the other day:

"Man About Town,

"Moving Picture World.

"I have diligently watched your articles to see if you would make mention of how many of the licensed exhibitors come to be cut off by the Motion Picture Patents Company. Not seeing what I sought, and knowing that your publication is desirous of being as fair to the licensed people as to the Independents, I decided to give you an idea of what is going on. Agents for the Independent exchanges call at a licensed exhibition house and persuade the proprietor to allow them to run a sample reel or two to show the quality of Independent goods. Arrangements are eventually made for the demonstration at a given time. They having been concluded, the Independent solicitor goes to the nearest telephone and notifies the Motion Picture Patents Company that if they will have one of their detectives at a certain licensed house at a certain time it will be found that the place is running Independent film. When the demonstration is made the detective is on hand and the next day the Motion Picture Patents Company cancels its license of the house and the Independents have one more recruit. On the theory that everything is fair in love and war I must give the Independents credit for every trick they turn, but I cannot endorse the action of the Patents Company in every case, especially when a man's license is cut off summarily without giving him a hearing. A friend of mine had a house in which he never ran other than licensed films from the day he started. An Independent solicitor pestered his life and finally he consented to look over one of his reels. I know that man did not have the remotest idea of giving up the licensed service and simply agreed to the trial run to get rid of the solicitor and had his mind made up to tell the party after the run that the service he was getting was good enough. Somebody saw the Independent reel run in his place and the next day his license was cancelled. My friend was obliged to take Independent service on short notice and is still taking it. The result is that he declares he will continue taking Independent service regardless of any drawbacks because he feels he should have been given a hearing before his license was revoked. I am not seeking to deter or prevent licensed people from bcoming Independents. My sole object in asking you to publish this is to put exhibitors on guard against tricks.

"EDIGRAPH."

I cheerfully give the above space because I think it contains many interesting features. The appeal for a trial strikes me as being worthy of some attention. The cleverness of the trick certainly commands admiration.

A SCHOOL FOR OPERATORS.

MR. RICHARDSON WILL DEMONSTRATE IN PRACTICE WHAT HE HAS TAUGHT IN THEORY.

F. C. Taylor, 51 West 28th street, has made arrangements with F. A. Richardson, whose name is well known to Moving Picture World readers, to superintend the school for operators. Mr. Richardson has investigated the new requirements of the Board of Examiners, which, we are told, are found to be a severe test for even some of the oldest operators, and those who have had difficulty in getting their licenses renewed will do well to call at Mr. Taylor's office, where they will learn something to their advantage.

Schools for operators are not only necessary but essential in the moving picture field. It has been said that every man thinks he can edit a newspaper, command a battleship or drive a locomotive. In other words, these things look so easy that a thoughtless person jumps to the conclusion that no long and arduous training is essential to the work. So it is with operating a moving picture machine. It looks so ridiculously easy to turn a handle that the fool rushes in where the angel fears to tread. And the result is that the moving picture field is crowded with thousands of men to whom the care of a machine should never have been entrusted, so utterly ignorant are they of the first principles of the subject. Moreover, the dishonest shark is abroad, and in the columns of the daily newspaper advertises for a small fee to teach the science and practice of operating. The result, of course, is that the fool parts with his money and is turned loose in the moving picture field to get a job by hook or by crook, to mismanage a machine, ruin an entertainment, and generally to bring discredit upon the moving picture in its public representation.

Only this week we were appealed to by a personal friend, who is resigning an important position as traveling operator in order to take an even better position—we were appealed to by him to send him the name of a possible successor in whom we and he could have confidence, and for the life of us we could not do it. Simply because the men with whom we come into personal contact have not had the necessary experience and do not possess the knowledge equipping them for the work of traveling with a good moving picture outfit. In other words, in this branch of work good men are scarce.

But good operators can always command good positions and good salaries. By good operators we mean men who are thoroughly au fait with the electrical end of matters. First of all, the use of electrical current is now almost universal, but here and there the calcium light is used, so that in addition to electricity as the illuminant, the up-to-date operator should know how to manage the mixed gases. Then it is, of course, essential that he should know something about the optics, nay, a very great deal, about the optics of a projector and the inter-relationship of the condensor and the lens. As to the management of the film and its passage through the machine, of the care of the machine, and, in fact, of the entire control of the projector end of matters, he cannot know too much. Successful operators like Mr. Richardson have given our readers the benefit of their experiences, which have been instrumental in helping a great many men to better understand their work. And yet, though we have published many articles on the subject, we could go on almost indefinitely from week to week printing elementary articles on the science and practice of operating, so great is the demand for information on the subject. Hence it is that we welcome the establishment of such a school as that which forms the subject of this article. This school is conducted by F. C. Taylor, at 51 West Twenty-eighth street, New York City, and the necessary tuition is given for a moderate fee. There are evening classes every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and the two cuts show first of all the class following the oral instruction by means of the blackboard, and secondly the individual novice being given personal instruction in the management of a machine. We hear very good accounts of this school, and can recommend our operating readers who want their knowledge polished up to apply to Mr. Taylor.

We have seen schools of operators at work, we have seen good men made out of indifferent men; but often men come along for the work who are not fitted either by nature or application to operate a machine. Generally speaking, it may be said that given something above the average of intelligence, care, and application, a man who takes up operating can find the work full of interest and attraction, and what is more, make a very good living out of it. If to the qualifications we have mentioned he adds those of being a mechanician, an electrician and something of a showman as well, he will be a success at the work.

A QUESTION OF VOLTAGE.

A Spring Valley (Minn.) operator writes, asking if it takes more current to operate an arc from 220 volts than with a pressure of 110 volts. He is using direct current. Most decidedly it does. With direct current, rheostats are in general use for reducing the current, and unless one has one built especially for that pressure it is necessary to use two in series. In any event a very much greater length of resistance wire of a given size is required for 220 than for 110 volts. Rheostats consume energy in the heat they produce through electrical friction, and the higher the pressure the greater the amount of heat generated in its reduction through a rheostat.

With a pressure of 220 volts very nearly as much current will be wasted in the resistance heat as is used in the operation of the arc itself. The same is true if rheostat resistance is used on alternating current. In this case there is a two-wire, 110-volt incandescent service and a three-wire circuit from which the projection circuit is taken. The company has run only the two outside wires into the theater, thus giving 220 volts. The question may be asked, Why have they done this?

The answer is simple: Were they to connect on one side, as it should be connected, they would have current at 110 volts, but there would be no corresponding load on the opposite side to balance. This is a condition the lighting company does not like, and possibly, it being probably a small plant, they are not in position to balance it in some other installation. The owner should, however, insist on a 110-volt connection. With alternating current one may use a transformer (economizer), and it is no more expensive to operate from one pressure than from another.

UNION OPERATORS TO HAVE A NEW EXAMINATION.

Harry Mackler, Chairman of the Examining Board of Branch Local 35, I. A. T. S. E., wishes to announce that as soon as the electric service can be installed at the office of the union, 216 East Fourteenth street, he will have a complete moving picture outfit for practical use for giving examination to candidates, who will be asked to give a practical demonstration in handling moving picture machines from both the electrical and mechanical ends.

THE MIRROR SCREEN.

In reply to numerous inquiries we wish to say that the mirror screen which has created so much interest is manufactured by the Mirror Screen Co., Shelbyville, Ind. They are expensive, but not so in comparison to the improvement made on the pictures.

The World Film Manufacturing Company, of Portland, Ore., received a bad blow when, on Monday, January 10, their whole plant, including factory, studio and offices, was gutted by fire and the fact that they carried little or no insurance makes the loss total.

The American Film Service (Chicago) have removed to their new quarters, 77 Clark street, occupying the bank floor, where, with improved facilities, they will increase the efficiency of their well known service.

The Metropolitan Booking Offices, Room 211, 59 Dearborn street, Chicago, are prepared to furnish censored vaudeville attractions. Eugene Elkins is the manager.

The Buckeye Film and Projecting Co. is a new independent exchange prepared to give an exclusive service, with offices in the Arcade building, Dayton, Ohio.

The California Film Exchange advise us that their growing business has compelled them to move from their offices in the Commercial building and they are now located at 1065 Mission street, on the ground floor. W. L. Markowitz, the general manager, writes that business is good and it will no doubt increase in their more convenient location. Prompt and careful attention to all orders is the slogan of this exchange, as it should be in all others.

The Electra Carbons, of which Hugo Resinger, 11 Broadway, New York City, is the importer (known also as the Pink Label Carbons), are extremely popular with all operators of moving picture machines, who find them to work evenly and steadily. They are, besides, economical and easy to handle, giving a uniformly good light. Owners of moving picture machines who have not tried these carbons should do so, and for that purpose obtain samples from the importer at the address given. These carbons are reasonable in price, which is another factor in their favor.

The Piedmont Film Exchange, with offices in the Acme Theater Building, Goldsboro, N. C., reports a steady increase in business. Mr. H. R. Mason, a man of experience in the film exchange business, is owner and manager. Only Independent films are used in the service and exhibitors will not find they are being served with patched up and cleaned old Association stock. The Piedmont is advertising a special offer for a few days and exhibitors in their vicinity should get in touch.

We are told by L. J. Rubinstein, sales manager for "Imp" films, that on a recent visit to Pittsburg and Philadelphia he was assured by exchange managers that the demand for "Imp" films was increasing with each issue. He found the independent exchanges in a happy frame of mind, and their solicitors reported that it was easy to get customers when they carried sample "Imp" film and assured the exhibitor that there would be a constant and increasing supply of the same or better quality.

EDISON MANUFACTURING COMPANY NOTES.

On February 4 the Edison Company will release three subjects (one reel), two of which are comedy and one dramatic. "The Surprise Party" and "The Bad Man from Riley's Gulch" are said to abound in laughter compelling situations, the latter in particular being recommended as being boisterously humorous. "His Just Deserts" is a powerful dramatic film, whose scenes were enacted in a real Southern iron foundry. The acting in this play is said to be particularly vivid, while the realism of the setting carries a conviction that artificially staged pictures always lack.

Richard Harding Davis' Film to be Released Soon.

The Edison Company announces that it has completed the first of the pictures, the stories of which are being written for it by Richard Harding Davis, the celebrated author. "Ranson's Folly" is the title of the film and, as may be inferred, it is built upon his well-known novel of that name. The picture is sure to create world-wide interest because of the prominence of the writer and the popularity of the book. The Edison people promise that all the military dash and spirit of the original story has been preserved in its pictorial form, in which it has been interpreted through the medium of an excellent cast of actors. The release date of "Ranson's Folly" is to be announced in the near future.

MOVING PICTURE OPERATORS HOLD A SMOKER.

On Monday, January 10, 1910, the members of Branch Local 35, I. A. T. S. E., held a smoker at their rooms, 402 Eighth avenue, at 12 o'clock midnight. The hall was crowded with members and their friends, there being about 350 present. Among the visitors present we had Brother Lang, business agent Local 35; Brother Dove, delegate of Local 35, and others interested in the labor movement. At one o'clock our worthy president, W. E. Cartwright, called the gathering to order. While the smoke was at its thickest he introduced Brother Lang, who spoke as follows:

"Brothers, I am glad to be with you to-night, and knowing the fight you are having for recognition, the smoke reminds me o fthe battles our forefathers had. I am one of you, as you can see by my pipe. If you recollect those few at the organization of the operators you will remember what an argument took place at that time in building a foundation of this Local. This auxiliary has the opportunity few other organizations have. It now has the foundation for a very strong organization, I might say the strongest of any organization affiliated with the A. F. of L. Taking in, as it does, the Greater City of New York and all the Boroughs, as well as all that territory from Coney Island to Newburg, N. Y., as no other local can be granted a charter by the I. A. T. S. E. for the operation of moving picture machines in that territory; but it will take time to develop the organization and bring it to the state it should be, and can only be done by the hearty co-operation of each and every individual member. One point of vital importance is at your election; you elect your officers, and whether you as individuals like them or not, remember that they were elected by the majority, and while they are in office boost them and be faithful to them. In the past for an organization like this you have been honored by the visit from President Gompers, the chief of labor organization of the United States, while a great many other organizations were unable to get him to attend their meetings. You have also been visited by James O'Connel, third vice-president of the A. F. of L., also President Barry, Secretary-Treasurer Hart of the I. A. T. S. E.; also organizer of the A. F. of L., Herman Robinson, and you may expect to be visited shortly by President John Mitchell. I think this is about all I have to say, and thanking you again for your invitation to be present to-night, I wish you all a happy new year."

Brother Finnerty was next called upon and announced that Mr. Brennan, the Member of Assembly who was to give us a talk, was unable to attend owing to a previous engagement, but would be here at a later date.

Brother Costello then arose and said: "Brother Chairman and Brothers: I have a very pleasant duty to perform—one of the pleasantest of my life, and that is to present, on behalf of the members of Branch Local, No. 35, I. A. T. S. E., this watch, chain and charm to our worthy president, W. E. Cartwright, as a token of our appreciation for the services he has rendered us in the past. I also wish to present our secretary-treasurer, Mr. Hugh Keenan, with this diamond ring in appreciation of his valuable services."

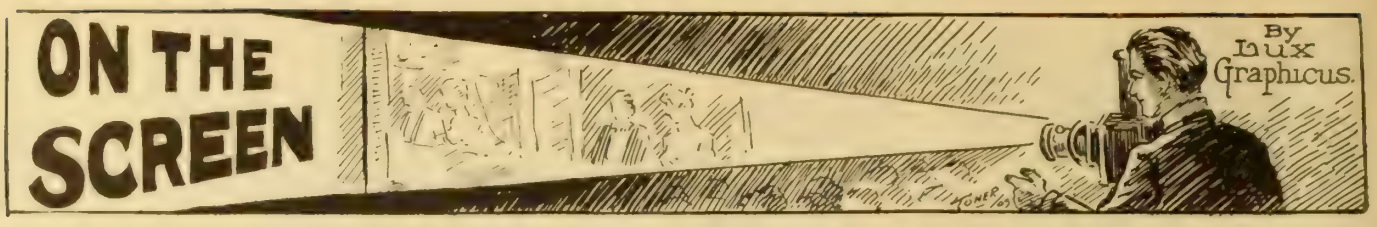
President Cartwright in reply said: "Brothers, you have got me up a tree. I was not prepared to make a speech. I can only say I thank you from the bottom of my heart. I feel much honored at your appreciation of my humble efforts in your behalf. I can only say, as I have said before, that I will always be on the job and do all in my power to assist any member of this organization. What little success I may have in labor organization I owe to my side partner, Brother Lang. Again I thank you."

Brother Keenan was called upon to respond and spoke characteristically, saying: "I am no speech-maker. I only handle the coin. I can only say I thank you. Anyone who has any dues to pay can come up and pay them."

Much applause greeted this characteristic remark of Brother Keenan and he sat down in the corner and tried to get the smoke out of his eyes. Brother Dove, delegate of Local 35, and Brother John Clark, the genial clerk of the Empire Film Company, one of our most earnest workers, each made some very flattering remarks, which, owing to lack of space, will not allow us to fill. Remarks were also made by Brother Mackler, chairman of the examining board, which we give in another letter.

I. G. SHERMAN,
Recording Secretary.

Montreal, Canada.—"Richelieu" and "Midsummer Night's Dream" were the pictures that packed the Prince of Wales Theater during the week of the 17th. All other moving picture houses are doing well.



The Fra is on our side. Just about a month ago we printed a paper by the Fra from the New York "American" in which he bestowed his pontifical benediction upon the moving picture. Since then I have seen that he is about to write moving picture scenarios. Still more recently, in taking up the January issue of his guide to the right amidst so much that is wrong, I read this passage:

"The nickelodeon is for folks who have nowhere else to go but home."

Altogether, to repeat myself, the Fra is on our side. Which is as it should be. The Fra, like ourselves, is on the side of freedom, progress and unconventionality.

* * *

The logical outcome of this, of course, is obvious to those who have studied Elbert Hubbard, his work, and his writings. It means that the Roycrofters and East Aurora are with us. Tentatively at present, and with a certain amount of timidity, because Hubbard, with all his surpassing appreciation of the things that are good and progressive, is somewhat late in arriving at the importance in the progress of humanity of the moving picture. I do not wish to chide him upon this, but I think that he should have risen to the facts of the case and the obvious scientific presentibilities of the moving picture a long time ago. That he has not done so is probably due to his exiguous environments. But, good man, he is breaking away from them.

* * *

Amongst my most cherished possessions are some books produced by Hubbard and the Roycrofters, of English classics, to which he and they have done the extremest justice in the way of paper and type. Then again there are a series of very beautiful portraits of many of my heroes, including Stevenson, Michael Angelo, Victor Hugo, and others. Also, if I wish to purchase a chair in which to take my ease I may obtain one from East Aurora for the wholly inadequate sum of $52.00; likewise I can buy a footrest for $5.00 or $6.00.

* * *

All of which commends me to the inner practicability of the Fra's outlook. He tells me in his last number that Carter and Beecham have formed a trust. They call it "The Liverpool," one of the wittiest things that Hubbard has said or any other man could say. The Fra takes in a wide angle of view and in that angle I am glad to see is included the moving picture. But I want the moving picture to occupy a somewhat larger place in the Fra's scheme. East Aurora is a kind of Mecca to which all of us aspire sooner or later to go. And when we go there we expect to see persons and things; and, according to report, nobody is disappointed although they may be surprised.

* * *

I am just wondering whether the Fra will carry his Philistinism and his protest far enough to become logical in the advocacy of the moving picture. All these years he himself has grown famous and prosperous on the stationary photograph; all these years he has posed on the simulacrum of printer's ink and paper. But at last he kinder thinks that this sort of thing is N. G. and that the moving picture is the one thing above all others to which the mind and the eye and the thought and the soul, likewise the Fra, turns when it needs what it needs.

Logically, therefore, the Fra, being one of us, must make moving pictures, and show moving pictures, and talk moving pictures. East Aurora must become that shrine of all others in the scheme of moving picturedom that so many of us have for so long hypothecated, predicated and vaticinated. So, East Aurora, here's to you!

* * *

Now Hubbard, past master in the graphic arts, get down to work and make some pictures and then we shall all come and see you. Just show us the "Life of Moses" as you conceive it pictorially, instead of writing about it; likewise the "Life of Rousseau," the "Life of Cromwell," the "Life of Jesus Christ" as you understand it. Get you down and make these pictures at East Aurora and the Oberammagau play will be a tame proposition to what the Fra can offer us.

Then we shall all be making those "little journeys" of yours, which so far are mere expressions in cold printer's ink on cold paper. Those are the little journeys I think that a great many people would in all seriousness like to make. Here I am writing seriously. The modern trend of graphic art leads towards the development of all schemes for reading and appealing to the eye by projected instruction. In other words the printed book is on its trial. Your professor, your teacher, your instructor, has agreed upon this fundamental principle, that the brain is best approached, not by the book, or the diagram, or by the spoken sound, but by the projected precept on the screen. In other words, less stress is imposed upon the mind in the inculcation of a lesson if that lesson be presented upon a flat surface for the eye and the brain to perceive and assimilate, than if the lesson should be contained within the covers of a more or less dry-as-dust book—even though "The Philistine" should be one of those books.

* * *

"The nickelodeon is for folks who have nowhere else to go but home." The ordinary individual spends a very small percentage of his time at home. If he had to depend upon home for his recreation and his inspiration he would be rather a dull individual. Home is rather a refuge than a resting place. Or, I might say, it is a combination of both. There are 1,600,000,000 people on this earth in a constant state of progression and retrogression, continually going backwards and forwards, to and fro, in and out, constantly seeking for some means to relieve the deadly monotony of this earth pilgrimage. Of that 1,600,000,000 it is reasonable to assume that each day of the year something like thirty or forty millions are looking to the moving picture as a means of palliating that painful monotony of life of which Hubbard, in his last "Philistine," unconsciously speaks, when he says that "the nickelodeon is for folks who have nowhere to go but home." These folks are the mentally halt and the blind and it is in the nickelodeon that they seek temporary relief from the carking cares of that focal point of carking cares—the home.

* * *

So that in this little line Hubbard touches a very human spot because with his fine humanity he recognizes the value of the nickelodeon, as it is inaptly called, and the moving picture as it is commonly known. In other words, he places himself in sympathy with a form of amusement scientifically conceived, which, when it is conscientiously presented to the public at large, appeals, in a pure, direct and simple manner to the best motions of the human mind and is designed, if not calculated, to assist in the human uplift. It is safe to say that at the present time in the United States there is not a single moving picure theater which is purposely designed to debase or degrade the minds of those who patronize it, which does not, in fact, send its audiences out rather better than when they came in; which does not, at any rate, teach some manly and womanly lesson; which does not make us, in fine, at least beter men, better women for what we see. Now the Fra, it appears to me by his recent writings and his contemplated action, recognizes all this, so, therefore, I conclude in the way in which I began, with these words "The Fra is on our side," and the Fra having come on our side I hope will remain on our side and wax exceeding famous thereby.

New companies are being constantly formed in England to exploit the moving picture form of amusement, the latest being the National Theater de Luxe Company, with a capital of $250,000. Plainly the Englishmen have faith in the moving picture business as a money-maker.

In London, recently, a mock trial was held, in which a moving picture lecturer was sentenced to twenty years penal servitude for giving his lecture in a distinct tone so that it could readily be understood by the audience. A pianist was also convicted of playing music appropriate to the pictures, and for that offense was sentenced for life to play to the inmates of an insane asylum. The pianist thanked the "court" for its leniency, and remarked that inasmuch as he had been living amongst lunatics ever since joining the ranks of the moving picture game he would feel quite at home in such a position.

"All on Account of the Milk" (Biograph).—A clever comedy, unusually well acted and offering a novelty in making milk a vehicle of Cupid's arrows. And then the mix-up is interesting. The daughter of the house plays maid and the contractor plays laborer, each fearful that the other will discover the deception and spoil the little love comedy. And when the mothers of the young people appear on the screen it looks squally, but suddenly they discover that they are old friends and true love's course takes on a much smoother mode of travel. This little comedy is to be commended. It is one of those clean, delicious little bits that amuse, and at the same time arouse the imagination of those who see the picture, influencing them to read into it all sorts of pleasant features which perhaps do not appear on the screen.

"Under the Stars and Stripes" (Selig).—A war story based upon events during the war with Spain. Quite the most thrilling portion is the wild ride of the dispatch carrier in his attempt to reach the cable office. He braves all sorts of perils, even to having a bridge blown up under him, and horse and rider plunge into the water. But he reaches the office and gets his message over the wire just as it is cut. The reproduction of the scene in the office of Consul-General Lee represents fairly well what probably actually occurred there, and the rest of the picture might easily be an accurate reproduction of actual occurrences. A love story runs through it, and when the handsome captain arrives just in time to save his Spanish sweetheart from being forced to marry against her will, the pleasure of the audience is plainly manifest. It is one of those Selig pictures, full of action; one is almost disposed to say, galvanic action, and the enthusiasm of the actors is infectious, exerting a powerful influence upon the enthusiasm of the audience. It is worth while to sit under the spell of one of Selig's war dramas. It makes one appreciate the influence which carries a man forward into battle into what he may believe is almost certain death.

"Wild Duck Hunting on Reel Foot Lake" (Lubin).—A picture which would be attractive for its scenic qualities alone. And indeed this is a very prominent feature, made so partially by the fact that this lake was formed during the throes of volcanic action. The scenery is picturesque, but attractive even though it is, the interest is increased by making it the background for a series of views of duck-hunting. The views were made during an actual duck hunt under the direction of one of the best guides in that vicinity. Reproduction of actual scenes of this character is to be commended, and when the selection of the viewpoint results in such pleasing pictures the interest is materially enhanced. Improvement in this type of picture has been marked of late and the opinion is ventured that this particular film will not be the least among the recent popular films turned out of late.

"He Joined the Frat" (Lubin).—A comic representing the experiences of a young man who was initiated into the mysteries of a Greek letter fraternity. The stunts he is forced to perform are funny, and perhaps are not such exaggerations of the real thing after all. It is one of those really funny pictures that Lubin knows so well how to produce.

"A Warrior Bold" (Edison).—A veteran of any war is a favored individual, and the one here represented is no exception to the general feeling on that point. If he were not, clearly he would not be permitted to smash things when describing his battles and then get clear. This picture is true to life, representing graphically the action of veterans in their arguments over how certain battles, or portions of battles, were fought. Interesting because it is a transcript from life, this picture will please audiences wherever it is shown. The acting and the photography are both so good that no question of its general excellence will arise.

"The Parson's Umbrella" (Edison).—A comedy enacted by colored people which might apply with equal force to white folks. Shakespeare observed many years ago that "Conscience doth make cowards of us all," and when the parson posts a notice, which is a work of art in itself, regarding the return of his umbrella, the huge pile in his back yard next morning furnishes conclusive evidence of wholesale umbrella appropriations. A good bit of comedy, well acted and satisfactorily photographed.

"Troop B, 15th U. S. Cavalry, in Difficult Drills" (Edison).—Foreign cavalry troops have often been reproduced in motion pictures, but so far as the writer remembers this is the first time a troop of United States cavalry has ever been thus photographed. The Edison Company offers a film which is certain to be popular. The American people are proud of their soldiers and sailors and hail them with delight whenever afforded an opportunity. This picture will give many thousands a chance to see United States cavalrymen in difficult and dangerous drills. It will serve another and perhaps quite as important purpose. It will prove that the personnel of the army must be high, because only men of the highest physical and moral type could ever master these drills.

"Romance of a Trained Nurse" (Kalem).—A melodramatic love story, containing numerous bits of more than ordinary interest and developing a narrative of power as it proceeds. Of course, true love does not always move along as those afflicted would like to have it, but even though clouds are conspicuous at various points in the progress, even to the extent that the little woman actually runs away, or attempts to run away, from love, yet in the end it all ends happily, and the audience, after feeling the alternate thrilling and depressing influences, is satisfied to see that the lovers are united forever and aye. Photographically the film shows improvement, while the acting of the capable stock company also improves with each film turned out.

"A Forester's Sweetheart" (Bison).—A picture which has some elements of interest, principally that of a love story which runs through it. Of course, there is a rival and many complications. The liveliest scene occurs after the long ride, when the rivals fight a duel with axes. However the minor incidents develop, Bob gets his girl in the end, and they ride away together.

"Review of United States Troops at Fort Leavenworth" (Essanay).—A satisfying picture of a review of United States troops at Fort Leavenworth, including some apparently desperate charges which look much too real to be comfortable. Then there is a display of work by the cavalry which is sure to please, since it introduces a number of exceedingly difficult, not to say dangerous, drills and acrobatic work which is a bit trying to the nerves even in a picture. A picture of this character has its uses in acquainting the people who see it with the army much more graphically than could be done in any other way. Actual representation is much more pleasing, and, withal, much more instructive, than many pages of description, no matter how illuminating the English in which it is written.

"On a Racket" (Pathe).—A bit of farce comedy from the Pathe studio certain to keep the audience in good humor throughout the length of the film. The acting and photographic quality of the work are both alike satisfactory and attractive.

"Stag Hunt in Java" (Pathe).—A well told and illustrated story of a stag hunt in a far-away portion of the world, where to those who see the film here everything is picturesque. The scenic qualities are remarkable because they reproduce all the marvels of the place, bringing a faithful account of the appearance of the land, and along with it the picturesque methods of hunting. It is an interesting and instructive film and deserves a long run.

"Decorated by the Emperor" (Gaumont).—A pathetic little story, representing an old soldier on the verge of starvation, who discovers in a dream the resting place of a purse of money presented him years before by the emperor for bravery. There isn't much to it, yet it rouses emotions which make it appeal to one even more forcibly than some of the stronger pictures do. Acting and photography are alike good.

"Railway on the Ice Sea" (Gaumont).—A marvelously beautiful reproduction of Alpine scenery. The original negative was made from the train on the way up Mount Blanc, thus reproducing accurate and wonderfully beautiful views of the scenery in the mountains. The film ends with the wonderful "Sea of Ice," and so well did the operator do his work that it actually creates the impression of immensity. Not all operators understand this feature of their work, but in this instance the interpretation is sufficiently sympathetic to convey to the one who sees the film something of the actual quality of the original. The reproduction was well done and the whole picture is thoroughly satisfactory.

"A Son of the Wilderness" (Ambrosio).—A story of Marseilles when that city was a Greek colony. It is a narrative of brigandage and has for its basis the capture of a village worker. His place is taken by his daughter, with whom the chief falls in love and frees her. Then comes a chase by villagers, with a capture and all the picturesque and thrilling features which go to make up a story of this sort. Photographically the film is an improvement over some previously released by this firm, and while the acting is largely of the swashbuckler type, it is alive and keeps the audience interested.

"A Sister's Sacrifice" (Vitagraph).—A pathetic story, representing a sister as giving up the man she loves, that a younger one might be happy. The picture's strength lies in its acting, which is sympathetic and interprets accurately emotions likely to be present and possibly controlling one under such conditions. The capable company performs its various parts with perfection.

"On the Reef" (Biograph).—A graphic illustration of a delicate question. It is impossible for one person to help loving another. The reason no man knows, yet examples of misplaced love are so common that they have ceased to excite interest. In the instance illustrated the girl accepts what seems to her the only alternative, and yet fate was unkind to her, since the matter could have been made right had her lover remained near her for only a few hours longer. Possibly this film may seem unreal to some, yet it is unquestionably far too real, and far too true to real life to make it pleasant for many who will see it. One's thoughts almost unconsciously wander to similar cases one may have known, and the almost tragic fate of the unfortunate girl in this instance arouses sympathy. Technically almost perfect, the picture is almost irresistible in its appeal.

"He Got Rid of the Moths" (Lubin).—Yes, he did; but his sulphur candles conveyed the impression to all the dwellers in the apartment house that they had been suddenly jolted into the place where sulphur is regularly utilized as fuel. The complications that follow are funny and admit of no question of the enjoyment of the audience. He got rid of the moths, but—and that "but" covers a long series of laughs.

"A Slippery Day" (Lubin).—When the Lubin comedians undertake to produce a laugh-maker that is actually convulsing, those who see it are certain of a few minutes of sport. The recent snow and ice afforded opportunity for the development of a fast comedy that will appeal to every person who has found it necessary to get about much of late. A wealthy individual starts for his office on foot, but after a series of disturbing adventures arrives home on all fours. In the meantime many funny things happen. It is alive and quite as funny as anything Lubin has sent out of late.

"A New Divorce Cure" (Selig).—A domestic drama in which a slow-going husband is almost supplanted in his young wife's affections by a pseudo scion of nobility, but succeeds in demonstrating to the misguided wife that she loves him. Reconciliation is effected and the so-called noble is summarily handled by the employees of the cafe. It is a case of invoking the aid of jealousy in settling a troublesome difficulty.

"A Visit to Bombay" (Pathe).—A beautifully colored film, giving a series of accurate pictures of Bombay, a wonder city of the East. It is technically up to the Pathe standard and is a valuable addition to their travel and education series. Such films are almost as good as actually visiting the places depicted, with no attendant discomforts.

"In the Nick of Time" (Edison).—A robbed bank, followed by a run of depositors, the run of an automobile for sufficient funds to tide over the difficulty, the blowing up of a bridge and the construction of a pontoon bridge by a detachment of the engineers' corps a revolver shot at the flying automobile, with a return volley that kills the guilty man, and the arrival in time to save the bank frum ruin, are enough thrills for one film. Yet, as here presented by the Edison players, it makes an entertaining picture. The work of the pontoon corps is a novelty well worth seeing. The whole picture is one that will appeal to any audience because of the lively action in it.

"The Toymaker's Secret" (Vitagraph).—To endow a toy, the product of his handiwork, with life, is the ambition of the old toymaker of the Tyrol. And in the complications which follow he is for a moment gratified, and then chagrined to find that he has been deceived. It is a weird, not to say ghostly, tale, which makes one a little creepy, and perhaps is none the less interesting for that reason. Many people like it all the better for that.

"Fatal Fascination" (Gaumont).—A love story in which the demon jealousy is used to gain the affections of one young woman, while it really kills another. One can scarcely understand the value of such a picture. To the ordinary person it seems almost useless and a waste of time and money to produce it.

"Getting Square with the Inventor" (Gaumont).—A humorous story in which an inventor is represented as inventing a motor which is capable of operating any sort of vehicle to which it is attached. After experimenting with a number, the victims turn on him and he gets all that is coming to him.

"The Tide of Fortune" ("Imp").—There were few dry eyes in the old Fourteenth Street Theater on Monday while the changing scenes in "The Tide of Fortune" were being flashed across the screen. Women had us for their handkerchiefs and strong men were visibly affected. The pathos of the story, however, did not prevent a round of applause at the close and this was in due appreciation of the excellent acting and photographic presentation of the subject. It was the headliner at the show for the day.

"Won By a Hold-Up" (Essanay).—A lively Western story of love and adventure, telling how a young couple win over the girl's father by catching him in a fake hold-up from which he is rescued by the young man. The whole scheme works out like a fairy story and even when those who helped, tell the story, the father pays no attention to them, but permits the love match to proceed. The film is lively, with plenty of picturesque action and an interesting setting. The photography is weak in places, but is in the main clear and of correct tonal quality.

"Flower Parade at Pasadena, Cal." (Essanay).—No description or criticism of this film is necessary. It is what its title indicates, a reproduction of a flower parade in that beautiful little city. Beyond that no amount of description could convey any more information. To those who have seen one of the parades its accurate reproduction will come as a revelation of beauty, which will carry the memory back to the original scene, while others can feel certain that they are looking upon a faithful representation of a festival impossible anywhere else.

"Aerial Acrobat" (Pathe).—An interesting picture of an acrobat performing for the amusement of the populace. The photography is sufficiently clear to make the picture appear little short of marvelous.

"The Coast Guard" (Urban).—While perhaps the story told in this film is not especially strong, like all love stories it is interesting. But the scenic qualities of the picture atone for much that may be lacking in the story. The picturesque and wildly romantic coast scenery is especially attractive and one may enjoy this without considering, except incidentally, the story itself. Like all of Urban's films the scenic beauties are above the ordinary, testifying to the ability of the operator and the one who chose the settings alike. Only experts are employed and the results are both artistic and pleasing. Perhaps it is a satisfaction to know that the guard redeems himself and is rewarded for his bravery with the restoration of his sergeant's stripes and his sweetheart.

"Riva, Austria, and the Lake of Garda" (Urban).—A faithful reproduction of views in the picturesque and romantic borderland between Austria and Italy. It is impossible to convey any adequate impression of the wonderful beauty of the scenery shown. The glassy surface of the lakes reflect back the mountains with every detail perfectly reproduced. Th operator performed his work well, conveying an impression of mountain scenery which looks like real mountains. The technical work is marvelously clear, and altogether the picture is a marvelously accurate reproduction of extremely beautiful mountain scenery.

"The Refugee" (Lux).—A war story which does not convey any information; neither does it amuse. Its usefulness as a motion picture may, therefore, be questioned. Some stories of soldiers are thrilling and arouse one's emotions, even though death may be an important feature. But there is nothing to arouse one in the death of a spy. While it is legitimate, according to the rules of war, such a scene is not inspiring and, so far as can be seen, serves no useful purpose.

"The Adventures of a Sandwich Man" (Lux).—A rough house comedy film purporting to represent the adventures of a sandwich man. If one followed all the different objects he upsets in his persistent following of a girl who passed him on the street it would make a long list, and after all would amount to nothing. In a way it may be funny, but the humor is of the broad sort.

"Anarchists on Board."—The Great Northern release of today is a picture story strong in plot, convincng in its rendering and, of course, excellent in photography. It is not every film maker who can commandeer an ocean liner to be placed at his disposal, but this is evidently what the people in Copenhagen did and they made the most of their opportunity. The wireless operator of this steamer is made the hero of the plot and this alone presents a feature of originality which should make this film very popular among the independent houses.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MOVING PICTURE OPERATORS' UNION

The moving picture operators of Greater New York have secured an office at 216 East Fourteenth street. It transacts all business pertaining to the union as well as to give the operators who are out of employment a place to gather and discuss ways and means to better their condition. The room will be supplied with the latest magazines and trade papers and will be used as a reading room as well as an employment bureau. Office will be open daily at 9 A.M. until 6 P.M. and will be in charge of Brother Simon Terr, an operator and manager of several years' experience. All operators out of employment are requested to call and register their names. The executive board of Branch Local 35, I. A. T. S. E., will meet at this address every Friday morning at 11 o'clock A.M. Candidates for membership in this local are notified to appear for examination on Monday, January 24, at 12 o'clock midnight. Any one in need of the services of a first-class operator can have their wants supplied by telephoning 4171 Stuyvasant. To our friends and others we extend a hearty invitation to visit us at our office. I. G. SHERMAN,
Recording Secretary.

THE MOVING PICTURE IN THE CHURCH.

Chicago, January 17, 1910.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir—I was a very much interested reader of your "Man About Town's" comments upon the radical action of Dr. Leighton Parks, of St. Bartholomew's Parish, New York City, in employing moving pictures as a feature in church services.

Church work, like all other institutions for advancement and betterment of the people, is primarily a work of education, and the fact that Rev. Parks, no doubt, after mature and careful deliberation, having seen fit to employ moving pictures to assist in his work of enlightening and educating his congregation, entitles him to the approval of the foremost and advanced educators of the day, instead of subjecting him to criticism on the part of those who are probably not so advanced in these matters.

The motive and underlying principles which, no doubt, actuated this advanced teacher in adopting this most approved form of education is one that should only be considered in its broad sense.

There is, however, one point upon which criticism may be based, and that is the lack of a sufficient number of suitable subjects for this class of work. Most of the effort on the part of the manufacturers of moving picture film has been, thus far, directed in the amusement field, with a strong tendency for running towards the grosser sentiments.

It has been argued that many such films have produced undesirable effect upon the audience, and, as such, moving pictures have received their just share of censure, but if it has the power of influencing the minds of the public in one direction, this same force could be as readily employed in a moral sense in influencing the masses in other directions.

Such, I take it, is the intent underlying the action of the Rev. Leighton Parks, and as such he should receive all the moral support and encouragement possible, and while there have been a number of very excellent films produced that are suitable for church and educational work, the list is still most inefficient, and the criticism, if any, should be directed to the manufacturers of films. Yours very truly,
S. L. RUBEL.

A CHALLENGE.

New York, January 17, 1910.

To the Moving Picture World:

Dear Sirs—Believing that I have the best moving picture camera in the world, I hereby challenge makers or operators of other makes of moving picture cameras to a competition test as to clearness, sharpness and steadiness of pictures.

I will take the picture on unperforated negative stock and perforate the developed negative afterwards in my projecting, indicating perforator and finish a positive print from it in the same length of time as others finish theirs.

My camera is the only non-infringing camera in the world, under obligation to none. I am also ready for a challenge on projectors, perforators and printers, for a most severe test, as to superiority, mechanical arrangements, workmanship and experts' opinion.

Yours very truly,
EBERHARD SCHNEIDER,
Manager of the German American Cinematograph and Film Company, 109 East Twelfth street, New York City.

?

YOU USE DEVELOPER OF COURSE—

HOW ABOUT

"AGFA"--METOL
"AGFA"--HYDROKINONE
"AGFA"--PYRO
"AGFA"--PARAMIDOPHENOL

Also Most Complete Line of Aniline Dyes For Film Coloring—Ask About It

BERLIN ANILINE WORKS
213-215 Water Street :: New York

SMILE-CRACKERS
"Laugh! Yes, they will all laugh"

PLAIN, 25c. COLORED, 50c. POSTPAID
"HOW JONES BECAME A MASON"
Set of 12 Slides, Plain, $2.85: Colored, $4.00, Postpaid
SLIDES FOR THE CHILDREN
"Little Red Riding Hood," "Cinderella," Etc.
A Large List of Unusual Slides Free
BRAYTON MFG. CO.
122 Randolph St. - Chicago

AN EXHIBITOR VOICES A GRIEVANCE.

Albia, Iowa, January 2, 1910.

The Moving Picture World:

Dear Sirs—In your paper of December 31, I note an article on "An Open Market," in which you say that the Patents Company held together during the last year on clear business grounds. I do not agree with you here. I think that they have held together on the $2.00 a week that they have collected from about 6,000 exhibitors. For this sum of money that we are paying out to them each week I do not think that we have received anything worth mentioning—not even a pleasant smile. But I do agree with you in this: that they are making the most out of their patents. But not like business men; for if a business man offers you anything for a certain sum of money, you get what you pay for. This the Patents Company have never done. Can you show me an instance where they have protected competition? I do not think that you can. Here in my town, where there is a population of 4,500, no less than seven different houses have started and died away during the last two years. I stood it out, because I borrowed money from a friend. When the Patents Company started, I was granted a license, and was guaranteed protection against competition. Shortly after, a new theater started. They got a license also. The Patents Company says that the town is large enough to hold two theaters, after seven of them failed. Do you call this business? We have not made a cent since December 9, and it is only a question as to which of us will hold out the longest. Now, Mr. Editor, I do not believe you would do business the way the Patents Company are doing it, if you had a chance. Of all the many principles that they started out with, I must say that they have stuck to one of them, for which they deserve credit, and that is, they have never failed to collect the $2.00 every week. Talk about Rockefeller! He is an angel in comparison with the Patents Company and its constituents. We exhibitors are a lot of fools. If we had told the Patents Company to go (where they belong) at the commencement, it would have made their little game look like thirty cents. This is the opinion of the majority of exhibitors whom I have met.

Wishing you a prosperous New Year, I remain,

Yours very truly, J. E. B.

[Our correspondent hits the nail on the head when he says, "We exhibitors are a lot of fools." But not in the sense he means. A town of 4,500 is well able to support two very prosperous picture shows, and two in any such territory is better than one. The vast amount of good that the M. P. P. Co. has worked has been well worth the $2.00 assessment. We have also had letters from exhibitors who have said that they would pay more rather than that the M. P. P. Co. should go out of existence. If J. E. B. would look backwards he might see where he has failed to make the most of his opportunity. Does he make his theater as attractive as possible? Does he advertise his show in the local papers and adopt other legitimate methods of drawing patronage and holding that patronage by giving the best show? Is he competing with his neighbor on the lines of quality—not quantity? Ten day old films can be rented reasonably, and if he would arrange with his competitor to each use the same service, and each give the same number of reels, they can probably save money and each give a distinct program. Then if they get the people in the habit of coming to their shows, they will each prosper and one show will advertise the other. It shows poor spirit to bewail conditions that exist through stress of circumstances. The M. P. P. Co. will continue on its way in spite of such complaints as the above. If, after giving a thorough trial to make the best of the situation, the two competing shows in Albia do not find that the town will give them adequate support, then we would suggest that they consolidate their interests and run one good show instead of fighting to a finish of one or both.—Eds. M. P. W.]

BROKEN PROMISES HURT THE BUSINESS OF MANY EXCHANGES.

Hartford, Wis., January 11, 1910

The Moving Picture World:

Gentlemen—I had been using independent films for eight months, and was pretty well satisfied until a representative from the ——— Film Exchange, of Milwaukee, Wis., stepped into my house and remarked that he could give me better service for less money; so I consented to let him ship me a trial service. Well, of all the services that I have used, this one was the worst. Their films were so full of rainstorms, patches, etc., that I at once told him to cut me off their list. For this service I paid $20.00, which included eight subjects and four sets of illustrated songs. After that I ordered service from a big Chicago renter, which was a little better, and for which I paid him $20.00. This concern supplied me with their service for a while, until I again decided to go independent. I was using independent films for a week, but did not care for them, so I decided to take service from a licensed exchange, that "soaked" me $30.00 for films that were in an actual state of putrefaction. "Gee, what the h—— kind of a game is this!" I said to my partner, who lately learned of a new independent renter and was advised to get his service. I decided to try him, and must say to all exhibitors that if they strike a good independent renter, stick to him, as he will soon find out that the independent renter will at least give you films that you can run. I am thoroughly satisfied with the service that I am now getting, and will not change for any proposition that a licensed exchange may have to offer. I would like to hear from other exhibitors.

Yours very truly,

E. J. M

[We print this letter because it reflects the feeling of many exhibitors who have complained to us about the habit prevalent among the exchanges to hold out all kinds of promises to get the business and then falling down after the first week or two. It is poor policy to break promises in business dealings, and the man who gives a little better service than he promises is the one who will win out every time.—Eds. M. P. W.]

AN ENGLISH MANUFACTURER SETS HIMSELF RIGHT.

27 Cecil Court, London, Eng., Jan. 11, 1910.

To the Editor, "The Moving Picture World":

Dear Sir—I have been much interested in reading Mr. Selig's impression of his visit to Europe, and note that he makes frequent use of my name. I have no objection to his doing that, but I must ask you to be good enough to permit me to correct some of his statements so far as they concern me.

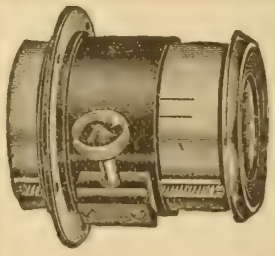
"The highest number of prints made from any one subject by Mr. Williamson was twenty-nine." This figure, which was quite right at the time, is now thirty-four, but refers to prints sold in England only, and to the previous 12 months only. The average sale in England when subjects are included of which no copies are sold may be about seven or eight, as stated. At the time of Mr. Selig's visit we had sent four shipments (not two only) of films to Mr. Murdock's order, in addition to samples. Mr. Selig's impression that I was dissatisfied with this business is quite right, but will you allow me to say in the light of subsequent events that I have every reason to be grateful to Mr. Murdock for the business he did for me under the circumstances. Mr. Selig did not see Murdock's contract in my office, that "impression" is certainly conveyed.

"The Bioscope" stated in a recent number that I was deliberately effacing myself as a producer of dramatic and comedy films, and correctly describes my position, but that hardly applies to the other English makers as Mr. Selig suggests. However, they are capable of looking after themselves in that matter.

Thanking you in anticipation of your inserting this slight correction, I am, dear sir,

Yours faithfully,

J. WILLIAMSON.



We make the best lenses in the world for projecting motion pictures and lantern slides. Can you spend a little money more wisely and profitable than by ordering a set of lenses which will

IT'S ALL IN THE LENS

IMPROVE YOUR PICTURES?

NEW PRICES

M. P. Projection Lenses any size with our improved jacket with spiral adjustment	$15.00
No. 1 Stereopticon Lenses	15.00
No. 2 Stereopticon Lenses	20.00

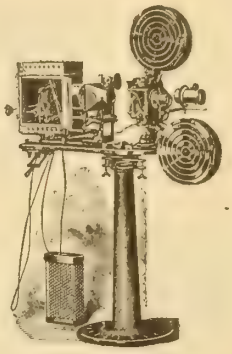
All dealers sell them on approval.

WRITE FOR OUR NEW CIRCULAR

When ordering state the size of your screen and the length of the picture wanted. Give the distance from the lens to the screen. Remit the price of the lens or furnish references.

GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN OPTICAL COMPANY
808 Clinton Ave., So. Rochester, N. Y.

"IT IS A BEAUTY"



Motiograph
No. 1 Flickerless

That is what every man says who knows anything about moving picture machines when he sees the flickerless

MOTIOGRAPH

in operation, giving full size pictures in my new show room, which is only two minute's walk from the 8th St. station of the 6th Ave. "L"

I can prove to any unbiased purchaser of a moving picture machine that he gets more for his money and a better machine when he buys the MOTIOGRAPH than if he purchases any other make. I have had hundreds of visitors buying

"HALLBERG" Economizers

Who have kicked themselves because they did not look at the MOTIOGRAPH before they placed their order for moving picture machine.

Do you realize what it means to have a quiet running machine, giving a rock steady flickerless picture on the sheet? Let me tell you—It means that you will get your competitor's trade, and your show will be spoken of as something new, out of the ordinary.

A look into my show room takes only a few minutes and it costs you nothing. I will demonstrate to you the MOTIOGRAPH, the "HALLBERG" Economizer and other "HALLBERG" Specialties in full operation.

J. H. HALLBERG

I make an allowance for your old machine, rheostat or current savers in trade

If you cannot call, write for free Booklet No. W-15

J. H. HALLBERG

28 Greenwich Avenue New York

Hallberg
A. C. Economizer

Attention

BONEHEAD'S SECOND ADVENTURE

Released January 27, 1910

Length, 500 Feet

AND A SCREAMING COMEDY

The Ordeal

Length, 495 Feet

PRODUCED BY

Centaur Film Co. of N. J.

Exhibitors will receive weekly advance notices upon request

Sole Agent

A. G. WHYTE

1 Madison Ave. New York City

Would You Invest $1.00 a Week To Make $25.00 to $50.00 a Week?

IF SO RENT A SET OF

NOVELTY
TRADE MARK
PUZZLETTES

from your exchange TODAY
Or from us direct. Rental $1.00 a week

NOVELTY SLIDE COMPANY
221 East 53rd Street 10 East 14th Street
NEW YORK CITY

MOTION PICTURE PIANO MUSIC

This is a book of descriptive music, regular sheet music size, and arranged for both hands. Specially selected, arranged and composed by one of the best descriptive Pianists in the U. S., who for the past twenty years has been Musical Director in all lines of Theatrical Productions. This work is the result of actual experience, and is now being used in hundreds of M. P. Theatres. Contains music, for all probable scenes, actions, characters, etc, and its suggestions are entirely practical. Increases the value of YOUR SHOW 100%. Descriptive circular sent free to anyone upon request. This book sent promptly upon receipt of price. $1.00 Remit either by P. O. or Express Order, Draft or Check to

GREGG A. FRELINGER
1009 Ferry Street Lafayette, Ind.

I'LL BET ON THIS

An exhibitor who lately turned Independent said to me, "I'll try the Independent films for a few week's but I warn you I'll go back to the licensed ones if you can't give me as good a program as I have been getting." If he had said that to me six months ago, it would have been different. Bnt now the Independent films are so gloriously good that I CAN HOLD HIS BUSINESS WITHOUT THE SHADOW OF A DOUBT. I wrote and offered him a bet on the proposition but he answered, after using my goods for two weeks, "If you keep up this pace, I won't bet because you'll win." This applies to YOU as well as to him. Try it for a week, two weeks or a month. If you don't like my Independent pictures, QUIT ME COLD and go back to your licensed exchange. BUT YOU WON'T QUIT, because I'll give you a service that will delight your heart and fatten your purse. If you haven't seen the last few weeks' releases of Independent films, you are not keeping abreast of the times. And that's something you've GOT to do in this day and age. Slip me a note.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

THE LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE

Headquarters

196-198 Lake Street : : Chicago

Minneapolis, Portland, Omaha, Salt Lake City, Evansville

(Canadian Office in Montreal)

"The biggest and best film renter in the world."

Among the Exhibitors.

Waterloo, Ia.—J. L. McClinton, formerly proprietor of the Dreamland Theater, is negotiating for a lease on the Soach Building, which he will convert into a first class moving picture and vaudeville theater.

Orange, N. J.—The Orange Theater is the latest amusement house erected here and is under the management of Eickman & Humphrey. It is located in the Holland Hotel, formerly used by the Marvel Theater.

Omaha, Neb.—F. A. Salmon has erected a motion picture theater here. This will make two ten-cent picture houses here.

Lewiston, Minn.—The Mystic Theater has been held to Gray & McDonough, who will run first-class moving pictures and vaudeville.

Hazardville, Conn.—Stevens & Jackson have opened moving picture houses here and in Somersville.

Palmer, Mass.—The Scenic Theater here has been closed on account of poor business.

Monson, Conn.—A new moving picture theater has been erected here.

Mankato, Minn.—The American Amusement Company, of Minneapolis, has purchased the Unique Theater from Mrs. Dame, which will be remodeled and a handsome front put in. They intend to have first class vaudeville and moving pictures.

Sioux City, Ia.—Miss Lulu Nolan has leased the Electric Theater and will conduct it throughout the Winter.

Virginia, Minn.—R. A. McLean, proprietor of the Bijou Theater, purchased the Grand Theater, in this city, from Harry Schanedling and J. S. Miscachkin and will manage both houses.

Sioux Falls, Ia.—George Collins has disposed of the Dreamland Theater here to some local party.

Nashua, N. H.—William P. Buckley, the new manager of the picture palace in the Eagle Hall, states that it is his intention to run his theater with first-class moving pictures and vaudeville.

Brattleboro, Vt.—Frank J. Mann and Charles L. Gibb have purchased, from John J. Leonard, the Empire Moving Picture Theater.

Louisville, Ky.—A new moving picture theater is being erected at Jefferson street, between Third and Fourth avenues, for the Princess Amusement Company.

Pawtucket, Conn.—The Pastime is the latest moving picture theater opened here.

Brattleboro, Vt.—George Lucas has sold, to C. E. Davis, the Lyric Moving Picture Theater.

Meriden, Conn.—The Scenic Theater has been opened by G. J. Wolens. The house was formerly known as the Russotania and had been closed for repairs.

Cattanooga, Tenn.—The Crescent Theater here, which had been closed for remodeling, has reopened.

Belfast, Me.—William H. Bray has purchased the Elite picture house here.

Monson, Mass.—A new moving picture theater has been erected here by Abel L. Reeves.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Emil Schmidt will erect ????

Nelson, Neb.—McClusky & Gee are the proprietors of a new moving picture theater which has been erected here.

Newark, N. J.—The building at 650 Bergen street has been converted into a moving picture palace for F. B. Glassner and George J. Seelig, who have taken a lease on it.

Mahanoy City, Pa.—A new moving picture theater has opened in the Hersher Building.

Bethel, Mo.—A first-class moving picture theater is being erected in the Mechanics' Hall for Roy Stafford and William Sanders.

Westport, Conn.—William L. Blasces has opened his new picture theater here.

New York City.—Plans have been filed for the erection of a moving picture theater, at 40 Eighth avenue, for Hyman Harris.

Vermont, Mass.—E. C. Davis has purchased the Lyric Theater from George Lucas.

Marlboro, Mass.—Avenitis & Christophis have been granted a license to erect a moving picture theater at 115 Main street.

Long Island City, N. Y.—F. M. Edwards, has sold his moving picture theater, The Comedy, to the Bustal Amusement Company.

Salem, Ohio.—Grant Snyder has purchased the Family Moving Picture Theater here from Doudendonfer Brothers.

Le Roy, N. Y.—Mrs. Ruth Baley has sold the Le Roy Theaterium to Arthur J. Fields.

Sheboygan, Mich.—Will O'Brien has purchased the Princess Five-cent Theater here of Lloyd Fairchilds.

Rochester, N. Y.—Maurice H. Kuhn is preparing to erect a large moving picture theater at 43 Clinton avenue.

Beloit, Wis.—Johnson & Cox have purchased the White Moving Picture Theater.

Cornell, Ill.—Joe V. Keoski is making arrangements to open a new moving picture show here.

Columbus, Ga.—J. F. McClendon has sold the Grand Theater here to Joe L. Brown.

Adrian, Mich.—Bob Ward has sold the Bijou Moving Picture Theater here to H. H. Russ.

Youngstown, Ohio.—C. W. Deibel is having plans prepared for the erection of a new vaudeville theater, to be located at the corner of Hazel and Federal streets.

Alden, Ia.—Henry Infelt has bought the Lyric Moving Picture Theater here from Mr. Campbell.

Buffalo, N. Y.—John G. Sattler will erect a new moving picture theater at 1820 Genesee street.

Waverly, Ill.—Thomas H. Crain has opened a new vaudeville and moving picture theater in his new opera house here.

Chicago, Ill.—E. G. Carlstrom has secured a permit for the erection of a new moving picture theater at 4932 Evanston avenue.

Roanoke, Ill.—Adamond Faucon and Alfred Bodhaine are making arrangements to start a moving picture show in the Duggan Building.

Quincy, Ill.—J. W. Crossan has purchased the nickelodeon here.

Hamilton, Ohio.—John J. Ryan, of Cincinnati, is planning to erect a large vaudeville theater here.

Chicago, Ill.—George and William Earle have secured a permit for the erection of a new theater at 2037 West Thirty-fifth street.

Fremont, Neb.—A. L. Koyen has purchased the Crystal Moving Picture Theater here of J. H. Shinn.

Williamsport, Pa.—Harry G. Willard has leased the Wilson Theater on East Third street.

Omaha, Neb.—Frank S. Morse has purchased the interest of Mr. Wallner in the two moving picture theaters of this city, which were formerly operated by Schmotzen & Morse.

Duluth, Minn.—The Parlor Theater, owned by E. A. Copelovich, has been forced to discontinue on account of poor business.

Eau Claire, Wis.—Frank Koppleberger has opened his new moving picture and vaudeville theater here, which is the finest in the State.

Duluth, Minn.—The Unique Theater, which for the past two years has been one of the leading moving picture houses in this section, has closed down, due to the lack of patronage given by the people. Mr. Douglass was the proprietor and manager.

Fond du Lac, Wis.—The Bijou Theater, one of the latest of moving picture theaters here, is being remodeled and fixed. The manager, Mr. Smith, is not at all satisfied with the present front, so has ordered a new one to be erected in its place.

Elroy, Wis.—The Nicolette Theater, which was formerly been conducted by J. H. Forbes, has been sold to R. H. Gardner.

Duluth, Minn.—A. C. Schott, who has been conducting a first-class moving picture theater here, has bought the theater owned by J. L. Gorman in the Voelker building.

Duluth, Minn.—The Orpheum Theater, formerly owned by John Cummings, has been sold to A. Baker.

Mahanoy City, Pa.—J. J. Quirk has erected a new picture theater in this city.

Fort Worth, Texas.—R. W. Healy has purchased a moving picture theater here.

Milwaukee, Wis.—A change has been made in the management of the Olympic Theater, situated on Clinton street. The new proprietors are Tingle & Jones.

Springfield, Mo.—H. M. Smith has purchased the Majestic Theater from Harvey W. Gardener.

Burlington, Wis.—Harry C. Hansen has procured the Crystal Theater here.

Wausau, Wis.—Fred Levenhagen, proprietor of the Majestic Theater, is remodeling that place and is installing a pit for the piano and orchestra.

St. Paul, Minn.—Licenses to operate moving picture theaters here were granted to D. W. Barry and Lewis Smith.

Rochester, N. Y.—William Bradstreet has leased Cook's Opera House, which will be converted into a moving picture theater.

Danielson, Conn.—Ira Warren has bought the interest of Abel Reeves in the Phoenix Theater.

Middletown, Conn.—The Crescent Theater is now under the management of Mr. Kendall.

Doylestown, Pa.—Otto Kolbe, the proprietor of Lenape Hall, has purchased the apparatus necessary for giving picture shows in that hall.

Washington, D. C.—The Meader's Theater is the latest moving picture and vaudeville house erected here and is under the management of the Meader Amusement Company. It has a seating capacity of about 480 and is located at Eighth and G streets.

Centreville, Mo.—Edwin Knox has opened the Star Theater on Water street.

Peoria, Ill.—Fred L. Pitts has closed the Unique Theater here, for reasons unknown to the public.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Emil Schmidt is having a one-story moving picture theater erected at 170 French street.

Bloomington, Ill.—A new moving picture and vaudeville theater has been erected at the corner of Washington and East streets. The New Casino is the name of the playhouse and it will be under the proprietorship and management of Lewis Goldberg.

Fort Pierce, Fla.—The new Electric Theater has opened its doors to the public and is under the management of Mr. and Mrs. Hollaman. It has been equipped with a wide, deep and commodious stage and elevated floor, and has a seating capacity of 580 people.

Cleveland, Ohio.—Sand & Hillenbrand, of Wheeling, W. Va., have purchased and taken possession of the Nickelodeon, heretofore owned by Paul Zoupolus.

Zanesville, Ohio.—The Home Theater here was robbed of two films, the property of the Duquesne Supply Company, of Pittsburg, Pa. The subjects are "The Light That Failed" and "Sandy the Poacher."

Lewisville, Ohio.—Work has begun on a building which will be converted into a first-class moving picture theater and will be under the proprietorship of John H. and James P. Whallen. It will be located at 318-320 West Jefferson street, opposite the Gayety Theater.

Carondelet, Mo.—A new moving picture showhouse is being erected at the southeast corner of Michigan and Robert avenues. It will cost $5,000 and is owned by G. Bermeinger.

Hays, Kan.—George Cox has bought the moving picture theater of Mr. Whitney.

Binghamton, N. Y.—L. A. Furness is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater at 299 Chenango street.

Conway, Ark.—Hugh Pence and Roy Rogers have leased the Ingram building here, and will convert it into a moving picture theater.

Philadelphia, Pa.—George F. Stumfig has secured a permit for the erection of a moving picture theater at 5012 Germantown avenue, which will cost $15,000 when finished.

Garrettsville, Ohio.—Tom Sanlers is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Hedrich, Iowa.—O. P. Strickler has opened a new moving picture theater in the Speirs building.

Belt, Mont.—Fred Johnson is making arrangements to start a new moving picture show in Miner's Union Hall.

Norfolk, Neb.—A. L. Keyes has purchased the Crystal Moving Picture Theater from J. H. Shinn.

Los Angeles, Cal.—The Imperial Theater Company have secured a permit for the erection of a new moving picture theater at 3940 Spring Grove avenue.

Cotter, Ark.—A new moving picture theater has been erected here for A. M. Henry.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Henry Hembeb, who is the proprietor of a moving picture theater located at 2646 Atlantic avenue, was fined $10 for admitting small boys into his show place without the company of parents or guardians.

St. Louis, Mo.—The property at Moffitt and Vandeventer avenue has been purchased by some unknown party, who will construct a first-class moving picture theater which will cost the proprietor $20,000.

Springfield, Mass.—An asbestos booth is being erected in the gallery of the Town Hall, where moving pictures will be shown.

Lewiston, Me.—Julius Cahn was granted a license to operate the Empire Theater.

Lewiston, Me.—A new moving picture theater has been erected in City Hall, which will be operated by the Douchs Brothers.

Westerly, Conn.—A new moving picture theater is being erected here.

Freehold, N. J.—Edward F. Skyms has engaged the store building formerly occupied by the Mt. Penn Stove Works, which he will have converted into a moving picture and vaudeville theater.

Hornell, N. Y.—H. A. Dudley is said to be negotiating for possession of the Hornell property just opposite the Erie station as a site for a vaudeville and moving picture theater which will seat 1,200 people.

Morristown, N. J.—Hulsizer & Hamilton, who recently sold the Bijou Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theater to H. A. & G. E. Babbitt, will open a similar theater in Hackensack in a few weeks.

Allentown, Pa.—The Orpheum Moving Picture Theater was forced to close on account of not regulating with the laws.

Danbury, Mass.—The Lyceum Theater, at 177 Main street, has closed.

Leominster, Mass.—A new moving picture theater is being constructed in Hillery block, Main street, for Martin C. Hillery, of Hartford.

Syracuse, N. Y.—The Novelty Theater, better known as "Morgan's," at 213 West Fayette street, is the leading 5-cent theater in this section. The manager states that he has started work for it to be enlarged and the seating capacity will be doubled to accommodate its thousands of patrons.

Baltimore, Md.—A new picture theater will be built at 1202 and 1204 Patterson avenue by Herman Hackerman. The cost will be $1,200.

Ironton, Ohio.—The Staab Moving Picture Theater, at 41 North Fourth street, is the latest picture house to appear in this city. The proprietor of this theater is Henry Staab, who announces that it is intention to run it as a first-class theater, with all the latest illustrated slides and moving pictures, so he can succeed in defeating his competitors.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—J. J. Ryan has filed plans for the erection of a moving picture theater here.

Clinton, Mass.—McNamara & Coughlin have purchased from Alfred Castigloini the Hudson Opera House, on Market and South streets.

Worcester, Mass.—The Grand Theater has opened and will be devoted to moving pictures.

Springfield, Mass.—The Scenic Theater, in the St. Joseph Temperance Hall, has opened again with a new manager in charge.

Allentown, Pa.—The Nickelet Theater, 716 Hamilton avenue, was purchased by Chester A. Gwynne and Mrs. Isabel Himmelwright. The manager will be Mr. Gwynne.

Medina, N. Y.—On account of the license fee of $100 imposed in Lockport, two of the moving picture theaters have gone out of business.

Cleveland, Ohio.—The Old First National Bank Building on Euclid avenue has been leased for a moving picture theater.

Bath, N. Y.—A string of moving picture and vaudeville theaters are promised to be erected in the leading cities of southern New York by Horace A. Dudley, of Hornell.

New Rochelle, N. Y.—A new picture theater, La Rochelle, has been opened here by Mr. Hammel and is well equipped.

New York City.—A new moving picture theater has been opened at 235 Avenue A by Weiser & Korn for Joseph Finger.

ELECTRA

Pink

Label

·TRADE MARK·

CARBONS

Superior to all other Carbons on the market

WHY experiment with other Carbons, when the HIGHEST GRADE ELECTRA CARBONS can be had at reasonable prices from the

SOLE IMPORTER

HUGO REISINGER

11 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

IMP

Another Double Header, January 31st

"Coquette's Suitors"

A picture which gives Miss Lawrence the best opportunity she has had for months to work up some hilarious comedy. This picture is about 660 feet long. The rest of the reel, about 330 feet, shows

"Sports in the Snow"

A novelty picture that your patrons will welcome. Cleanest kind of fun, and a laugh for every foot of the film. In my next advertisement I think I can announce definitely when the "IMP" will begin its two-releases-a-week plan. Meanwhile if you re not on my regular weekly mailing list, send in your name at once.

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America
111 E. 14th St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres.

Just a Lttle Different

If you want Film Service from a House, who is just a little different from the others that you know

Just slip us an inquiry—and we will help to make your theatre successful

THE ONE BIG FILM HOUSE

The Pittsburg Calcium Light & Film Company

Pittsburg, Pa. Des Moines, Ia. Rochester, N. Y.
Wilkes Barre, Pa. Cincinnati, Ohio.
Omaha, Neb.

RELEASE DAY, JANUARY 29, 1910

A Tale of Colonial Days

An Episode in the Lives of

ALEXANDER HAMILTON and AARON BURR

This film is beautifully tinted. Scenic effects are wonderful and Photographic results are sublime.

Wire orders at our expense

Approx. length, 900 ft. Code, "Episode"

PANTOGRAPH CORPORATION

1402 Broadway, New York City

Release of February 6, 1910

His Daughter's Legacy

Approx. Length, 980 ft. Code, "Daughter"

Beautifully tinted

OUR FILMS SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES

Nyack, N. Y.—The Comedy building, on the corner of Lafayette avenue and Orange avenue, has been remodeled for a new motion picture show.

Manchester, N. H. Frank McAllister, who was the manager of the theater at Lake Massabesic during the past Summer months, has filed plans for the erection of a moving picture show in West Manchester, which will be located on the West Side.

St. Paul, Minn.—A building permit was issued for alterations in the building at 447-449 Walasha street, between Seventh and Ninth, for a first-class moving picture and vaudeville theater. Jack J. Flynn will be the manager and proprietor.

Norwich, Conn.—There are four moving picture theaters here and another coming. Work has begun on a plot of ground where the Broadway Theater will be erected.

South Norwalk, Conn.—The manager of Blascer's Theater reports good business and is having a new booth put in.

Fredericksburg, Va.—The Star Theater has opened again and will continue to run first-class moving pictures and vaudeville. A great crowd went to see the grand opening and were well pleased with what was shown.

Attleboro, Mass.—The Bates Theater, of which Chas. R. Bates is proprietor, have closed for a few days on account of repairing.

New London, Conn. Manager Walter T. Murphy, of the Lyceum Theater, announces that he will have vaudeville besides moving pictures.

Hartford, Conn.—The Scenic Theater here was forced to close on account of lack of patronage from the people.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—The new moving picture theater which is being erected at Erie avenue, near Michigan avenue, is having a troublesome career before it is allowed to operate. The members of the Hyde Park Methodist Church have measured the distance between the nickelodeon and the church and find that it is 100 feet. The law prohibits here an amusement hall nearer than 300 feet to a church.

Toledo, Ohio. The Hart Theater is the latest nickelodeon to open its doors to the public, and is under the proprietorship of the Hart Brothers, who report that since it has opened it has been a big success. Its location is at 605 Summit street.

Greenpoint, L. I., N. Y.—William Blarney and Peter Heidelberger have taken a lease on the property at 740-742 Manhattan avenue, which formerly was occupied by the old Union Avenue Baptist Church, and will convert it into a high-class picture palace, which will be known as the Garden Theater.

Bucyrus, Ohio. The Majestic Theater here opened and a great crowd of enthusiastic frequenters of moving picture theaters were present at the grand opening.

Stapleton, N. Y.—It is reported that a theatrical corporation has purchased the Lehmar property on Canal street and purpose erecting a house of amusement devoted to vaudeville and moving picture attractions.

Cobleskill, N. Y.—Northup & Gordons have had a moving picture theater erected here which can seat 270 persons.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A $40,000 moving picture theater has been erected at 111 South 52d street for T. Reece Howard.

Hackensack, N. J.—Owing to the great success of the Bijou Theater, on Main street, its manager, R. F. Dechert, declared that the house will be enlarged so that its patronage will be greater. The seating capacity at the present time amounts to 287.

Newburyport, Mass.—Under the management of Shom & Graham, the Star Theater will again open its doors and will continue to run moving pictures as they did before closing.

New Holland, Pa.—Krause & Spangler, who are well-known moving picture theater men in this section, have taken a lease on the Hess Hall, with which they intend to operate a first-class picture house.

Peoria, Ill.—A new 10-cent moving picture theater is being built here and it will be under the ownership of Vernon C. Seaver.

Little Rock, Ark. The Best Theater, one of the finest picture houses in this city, has at last opened and was received by the people with a great welcome. Mr. Peckham, the manager, states that his theater is the only house which is absolutely fireproof in this section.

Marboro, Mass. A new picture theater, the Grand, has been erected here, in the Preston building.

Chicago, Ill.—Ross & Kochendorf have sold their theater at 1421 W. Van Buren street to Carmine and Lawrence Romagnaw.

Chicago, Ill. A. Suder sold to Richard A. Robly his moving picture theater at 202 East 47th street for $3,000.

Hayward, Wis.—Robert Gordon sold his picture palace to Frank Felix.

Waukesha, Wis.—L. Jones and Lingh are now the proprietors of the Olympic Theater here, and they intend to run only high-class moving pictures and vaudeville.

South Africa.—The price of admission to moving picture theaters here is 12 cents.

Sterling, Ill.—William Bailey and John Peters opened a new moving picture theater on West Third street, to be known as the Gem.

Athens, Ohio. E. C. Burchfield has sold the Grand nickelodeon here to W. B. Wells.

Quincy, Ill.—A. Newman is making arrangements to open a new moving picture show here.

Roanoke, Del. Alfred Bodhaine is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater in the Duggan building.

Statesboro, Ga.—W. D. Morgan is preparing to open a new moving picture theater here.

St. Paul, Minn.—W. D. Barry is preparing to open a moving picture show at 999 Payne avenue.

Brooklyn, N. Y. E. Marks has secured a permit for the erection of a moving picture theater on Pitkin avenue.

Reno, Nev.—Arthur J. Aylesworth has purchased the Grand Theater on Virginia street.

Sioux Falls, S. Dak.—S. B. Buxton and others are making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Milwaukee, Wis. I. N. Ollinger has secured a permit for the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Sterling, Ill.—W. W. Gibson has purchased C. C. Shierty's moving picture business here.

Mishawaka, Ind. Miss Frances Hume has purchased the Electric Theater at 122 North Main street.

Sioux Falls, S. Dak.—S. B. Buxton, Abe Riredecel and L. H. McClellan have formed a partnership, and will open a new moving picture theater here.

Bryan, Ohio. J. S. Spear has purchased the moving picture theater here known as the Grand from Rochards & Rhoads.

Farragut, Iowa.—J. C. Overmeier has purchased the interest of Guy Wilcox in the moving picture show here.

Atlanta, Ga.—N. H. Bullock and T. P. Holland have purchased the American Theater at 100 Whitehall street.

Muscatine, Iowa.—E. A. Myers and T. A. Lisy are making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here in the Toohey building on Sycamore street.

Huntsville, Texas.—E. Phillips is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater at the corner of Main and Cedar streets.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Art Theaters Company will erect a new moving picture theater at 2812 North Vandeventer avenue.

Scranton, Pa.—The Bim Amusement Company has purchased the Arace building here and will convert it into a vaudeville and moving picture theater.

Hermiston, Ore.—The Newport Abstract Company wil erect a $6,000 theater here.

Brattleboro, Vt.—The Empire Theater here has been purchased by John J. Lenard.

Hackettstown, N. J.—George W. Wilson, who has been conducting moving picture shows successfully in the Opera House for the past two months, has renewed his lease on the hall for one year.

Little Rock, Ark.—The Jo Jo Moving Picture Theater, at 222 Main street, is being enlarged and fitted up with new chairs. J. E. England is the present manager.

Torrington, Conn. Frederick R. Matthews has disposed of his share in the Gem Moving Picture Auditorium, on Water street, to George D. Stevens.

Canastota, N. Y.—The Orpheum Moving Picture Show, in the Cronk Block, reports doing good business and have changed proprietors.

Palmer, Mass. The Scenic Theater here has closed on account of poor business.

Meriden, Conn. Charles M. Nellis' barber shop, in the Old O'Brien Building, 30 East Main street, has been converted into a moving picture show. Mr. Nellis has given up the barber business and will manage his theater, which will be known as the Gayety and can seat about 100 people.

East Norwalk, Conn. A new moving picture theater is to be erected in an empty store on Washington Street bridge.

Barton, Vt.—Thomas F. Tighe has secured the location for a moving picture house and will start to remodel it as soon as possible.

Binghamton, N. Y.—A new moving picture theater is being erected in the Konkle Block.

Quincy, Mass. The Auditorium Moving Picture House has been forced to go out of business, as the building where the show was held has been sold.

Myersdale, Pa.—A new moving picture theater has been erected here, which will be able to seat about 1,000 people. J. F. Reich is the manager and proprietor. The name of the theater is Reichl's Auditorium.

Oconto, Wis., Dec. 17. H. V. Cole, who recently opened the Gem Moving Picture Show on Main street, has had the floor of this theater elevated in the rear and tapering down to the main floor in front of the stage, which gives the Gem an opera house like appearance and will make it comfortable for the patrons.

NEW INCORPORATIONS.

New York City. National Theater Corporation; capital, $30,000. Director, W. R. Haile.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Amherst Theater Company; capital, $4,000. Directors: Frank Bernstein, Nathan Swerdloff and Soloman Swerdloff.

New York City. Levin Construction Company; capital, $1,000. Directors: Hyman Levin, Charles H. Kalm and Davis Weinstock.

New York City. Allison Sangor Company; capital, $5,000. Directors: James Murry Allison, Benjamin Sangor and M. T. Corcoran.

New York City. Penn Amusement Company; capital, $10,000. Directors: Peter C. Eckhardt, William B. Kelly and Delia Rowan.

Portland, Me.—The Fireproof Fiber Co. Capital, $600,000. Directors: Charles L. Hutchinson and Philip M. Clark.

Wilmington, Del.—United Moving Picture Advertising Company. Capital, $100,000. Directors: Wm. M. Cramer, J. Luckens Anderson and Charles M. Burbaker.

Roanoke, Wis.—The Bell Theatrical Company. Capital, $15,000. Directors: E. M. Bell, J. S. Bell and C. G. Bell.

St. Louis, Mo.—Smith Slide Manufacturing Company. Capital, $3,000. Directors: Harry J. Friedman and George Blumenstock.

Cincinnati, Ohio. The Magnetic Film Exchange Company. Capital, $40,000. Directors: Francis B. James, Spencer M. Jones, L. W. Moore and L. G. Hitchcock.

Brooklyn, N. Y. Sea Shore Amusement Company. Capital, $3,000. Directors: Isidore Goldsmith, Lewis Levine and Lewis H. Hall.

Wilmington, Del. The Co-Industrial Company. Capital, $500,000. Directors: Aaron L. Voorhees, George P. Bechtel and Emil G. Bental.

New York.—Buffalo Jones African Company. Capital, $1,000. Directors: Francis W. Bird, George W. Dutton and Mansfield Ferry.

Yonkers, N. Y.—Bowery Witching Wave Company. Capital, $50,000. Directors: Theophilus Van Kannel, Charles A. Belling and Harry Kolbe.

Renew Your Films

EXCHANGES!

Get your money out of your old films by using our process

WE REMOVE DIRT AND SCRATCHES

Send your old film to us that you think is out of commission and we will make it as good as new.

WE

can do anything but put in new sprocket holes.

OLD RELIABLE FILM RENOVATING CO.

134 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

J. S. SPEER.

Write for References from 60 Exchanges

EXHIBITORS! ATTENTION!

Do you wish an Exclusive Independent Film Service, free from Repeaters, Rain-Storms and Junk films? If so, write us to-day, and get full particulars of our Moderate price, Guaranteed Anti-Rain Storm, strictly INDEPENDENT, film service. Remember, we guarantee strictly Independent films, not old Association Junk, as we have regular releases with all leading American, and best of Foreign film manufacturers. We give a better service than is promised. Write to day.

THE BUCKEYE FILM & PROJECTING CO. (Inc.)

309-311 Arcade Bldg., Dayton, Ohio

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF LICENSED FILMS AT A GLANCE.

Monday, January 24.

Biograph—The Honor of His Family (Dr.)..988 ft.
Lubin—Cupid, D.D.S. (Com.) .....356 ft.
Lubin—Adoring an Ad. (Dr.) .....515 ft.
Pathe—Acrobatic Exercises by the Colibris Dwarfs (Acrobatic) .....574 ft.
Pathe—The Unlucky Fisherman (Com.).....358 ft.
Selig—The Ranch King's Daughter (Dr.)....700 ft.
Selig—An Afternoon Off (Com.).....300 ft.

Tuesday, January 25.

Edison—A Woman's Strategy (Dr.).....975 ft.
Gaumont—The Price of Patriotism (Dr.)....574 ft.
Gaumont—Sea Side Adventures at Home (Com.) .....371 ft.
Vitagraph—The Life of Moses, Part 3 (Dr.).976 ft.

Wednesday, January 26.

Essanay—The Modern Messenger Boy (Com.).945 ft.
Pathe—Motherless (Dr.) .....1046 ft.
Urban—Tommy in Dreamland (Com.).....491 ft.
Urban—The Lass Who Loves a Sailor (Dr.)..417 ft.

Thursday, January 27.

Biograph—The Last Deal (Dr.).....991 ft.
Lubin—Marble Quarrying in Tennessee (Industrial) .....441 ft.
Lubin—The Flirto-Maniac (Com.).....420 ft.
Selig—The Devil, the Servant and the Man (Dr.) .....950 ft.

Friday, January 28.

Edison—A Georgia 'Possum Hunt (Des.)....975 ft.
Edison—The Skipper's Yarn (Dr.).....850 ft.
Kalem—The Man Who Lost (Dr.).....930 ft.
Pathe—The Leather Industry (Industrial)....394 ft.
Pathe—The Scarecrow (Com.).....574 ft.

Saturday, January 29.

Essanay—An Outlaw's Sacrifice (Dr.).....996 ft.
Gaumont—The Great Divide (Dr.).....741 ft.
Gaumont—Wild Waves at St. Jean-de-Lux (Scenic) .....243 ft.
Pathe—Cousin Lou for Mine Com.).....564 ft.
Pathe—The Strong Man (Farce).....440 ft.
Vitagraph—The Girl and the Judge (Dr.)....980 ft.

SCENERY

For M. P. Theatres

I am making a specialty of small sets of Wood Scenes consisting of Back Drop 4 Wood Wings, 2 Cut Wood Borders, which is all you need for Vaudeville Acts between Pictures. This scenery is all fireproof to meet the demands of the Fire Underwriters. All packed ready to express to any part of the United States in the following sizes according to price.

Set No. 1	Drop	8x10	Wings	3x8	Borders	2x12	$ 50.00
" 2	"	9x10	"	3x9	"	3x12	65.00
" 3	"	10x12	"	3x10	"	3x14	80.00
" 4	"	11x12	"	3x11	"	3x14	90.00
" 5	"	12x14	"	4x12	"	3x16	125.00
" 6	"	14x24	"	4x14	"	4x30	175.00

These Sets are ALL READY to set up and GIVE SHOW

Send deposit of one THIRD
Balance C. O. D. subject to inspection

TURNER CO.
Theatrical Stage Properties
Paper Machie Work
552 7th Ave. New York

References: T. M. A. No. 1 N. Y.
T. P. U. No. 1 N. Y. or T. P. U. in Theatre of your own town or city

Films For Sale 50 new reels of perfect film, extra good condition, to close out, at $18.50.
Second hand Edison machines for sale at a bargain. Parts to fit all machines in stock.
MAYER SILVERMAN, 322 Fulton Bldg., Pittsburg; Pa.

FOR SALE

One copy of Pathe's Hand Colored Passion Play, 3,114 feet, in fine condition, $200.00. One Edison Ex-Model Moving Picture Machine in perfect running order, $50.00. One new model B Gas Machine with special Roco Jet burner $25.00.
SOUTHERN PHOTO & FILM CO.
Athens - - - - G.

BIOGRAPH FILMS

TRADE MARK TRADE MARK

RELEASED JANUARY 24, 1910

The Honor of His Family

A BIOGRAPH STORY OF THE CIVIL WAR

To the Virginian family pride and honor meant everything, and when old Col. Pickett bids his son George adieu on the young man's departure for the front, his injunction was, "My boy, emulate the brave deeds of those who have gone before you. Be fearless, brave, and fight, fight." George was the last of a haughty military family, and there was not a prouder man in the South than the old Colonel as he bid him good-bye. George, however, was not of the same metal, and when the first skirmish occurred he ran away in fear. What a shock to the Colonel! His son a coward. The boy enters the home and the father resorts to desperate means that the honor of the family may remain unsullied. Taking the body to the field of battle, he makes it appear that he died, sword in hand, with face toward the enemy.

LENGTH, 988 FEET

RELEASED JANUARY 27, 1910

The Last Deal

A STORY TEACHING A WHOLESOME LESSON

In this subject a most powerful moral is presented against all forms of gambling, and it is indeed a most convincing lesson to those given to such follies. A young cashier, at the solicitation of a friend, is induced to try stock gambling, using his employer's money when his own ran out, with the usual result. His books to be examined, he confesses to his employer, who grants his wish for time to make up the deficit. Taking his wife's jewelry, he raises some money and goes to a gambling parlor in hopes of winning more. Meanwhile, his wife's brother, whom he has never seen, arrives from the West, and hearing their plight, goes to same parlor with same purpose. He does not know who it is he is driving to the corner and has finally broke, until he arrives at his sister's home just in time to prevent a fatality.

LENGTH, 991 FEET

A Full Description of these Subjects will be Found on Another Page

Release days of Biograph Subjects — MONDAY and THURSDAY

Get on Our Mail List and Keep Posted. Write for Our Descriptive Circulars

BIOGRAPH COMPANY
Licensee of the Motion Picture Patents Co.
11 EAST 14th STREET :: NEW YORK
GEORGE KLEINE, Selling Agent for Chicago (52 State St., Chicago, Ill.).

Films I have a system of keeping away from Repeaters. No reels older than one year. This sounds bad but not half as bad as it is to hand you gunc three years old.
I am open and frank and tell you what you get for your money—Try me for a week anyhow. You can't lose.
PURDY'S FILM EXCHANGE
300 EAST 23d STREET, Cor. 2nd Ave., NEW YORK CITY

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER

Miror Vitae Products," Projectors, Cameras, Film-Making Machinery, Films, Slides, Stereopticons, Specialties, Lens Grinding, etc. Special condensors, carbons and lugs.

109 East 12th Street, New York

"TITLE POSTERS"

Are THE Thing for Advertising
MOVING PICTURES

They cost 5c each or by mail 6c. The full service of one poster for every licensed subject released for a month costs only $7.50 including prepaid delivery charges.

Free Sample for the Asking

TITLE POSTER CO.
231-233 Bowery, New York

A Poster for Every Picture

THE STORIES OF THE FILMS

Do not Show the Photographic or Acting Values. We Carefully Select All the Best for Our Service

COME WITH US AND BE SATISFIED

THE PHILADELPHIA PROJECTION CO., 44 N. 9th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

BIOGAPH COMPANY.

THE HONOR OF HIS FAMILY.—As Shakespeare said, "Cowards die many times before their death; the valiant never taste death but once," so we may assume that George Pickett, Jr., felt the imaginary hand of death several times before the real hand's final clutch. George was the son of old Col. Pickett, and the last of a haughty military family. The old Colonel was proud of the records of his ancestors, and he himself had bravely barred all smirch from the family 'scutcheon, for to him "life was but a word, a shadow, a melting dream compared to essential and eternal honor." The war declared, the little Southern village make their offering to the cause—a company of volunteers in command of young George. There wasn't a prouder man in all the South than Col. Pickett as he grasped his son's hand at his departure. His last behest was, "Go, my boy; emulate the brave deeds of those who have gone before you. Be fearless, brave, and fight, fight." Amid encouraging cheers, the fluttering flags and handkerchiefs of the fair maidens, and to the beat of the drums, the volunteers march to their post. The old Colonel is beside himself with joy, and as his faithful servants gather about him he exclaims: "Ah! my boy. He's the stuff. The name of Pickett is still alive." Meanwhile, on the field an attack is made and the conflict is furious. Young George is overcome with fear, and deserting his men runs to safety. Wildly he dashes through the woods, each volley from the guns striking terror to his soul. The old Colonel, at home, is viewing with field-glasses from his window the smoke of the battle. He sits down with a satisfied air and remarks, "My boy, he is leading them on to victory, and——" At this moment young George bursts into the room and crouches, nearly dead with fear. At his entrance the old Colonel is stunned, confused and amazed. He does not realize the cause of his appearance. At length the truth dawns on him, verified by the boy's confession that he ran—a coward. What a blow to the old father. His boy a coward. His boy will be hanged as a coward. What a blot on the honor of his family. As he denounces his boy a thought occurs to him. "He shall not hang." Approaching his son, he bids him arise, which he does, only to fall back mortally wounded. Hiding his body until nightfall, he then carries it out to the scene of the skirmish, where he lays it, sword in hand, facing the enemy's lines, thereby making it appear that he died in the conflict. The officers call to extend their sympathy to the old Colonel for his son's disgrace. This he spurns. "My son a coward? Never. He is there either fighting or slain for the cause. Come, gentlemen, we shall see." Going to the field, they, of course, find the body, and appearances are favorable for the son. Returning home, the old man drops into a chair, crushed and disappointed, his heart breaking. The honor of his family remains unsullied; but, oh, at such a price.

THE LAST DEAL.—In this Biograph subject a most powerful moral is presented against all forms of gambling, and it is indeed a convincing lesson to those given to such follies, for although the hero was rescued from his desperation by means of the game, still the ordeal he passed through was so terrible that he swore never to tempt fate again in the game of chance. At the solicitation of a friend, who paints his possibilities in brilliant hues, he uses his employer's money in stock gambling. His is the experience of so many others—he loses, and of course takes more in the vain hope of recouping. It is the old story. He finds his neck in the noose of desperation, particularly as he learns that his books are to be examined by the expert accountant. Discovery is inevitable, so he confesses to his employer, who grants him one day to make up the deficit. It seems hoping against hope, but he goes home and tells his wife of his troubles and she allows him to take her jewelry on which to raise a portion of the amount, but he declares he can borrow the balance. Pawning the jewelry, he takes the proceeds to a gambling parlor, with the virtual impression of at least doubling them. So he enters the game. Meanwhile, his wife at home is praying that he may be successful in obtaining the amount of his indebtedness, of course not knowing the method he has adopted. While she is thus employed, her brother from the West, whom she has not seen in years, and who has never seen her husband, arrives. He notices her uneasiness, and when he learns the cause, and the short time there is to make good, pulls out his roll of ready cash, but finds it far too short of the required amount. At length an idea strikes him. He is an expert gambler and will go to the parlor and try his luck. He enters the game, just as his brother-in-law, whom he does not know, is enjoying a streak of good fortune. He has hardly started before things begin to come his way, and at last the game is between him and his brother-in-law, the others having drawn out. Being an experienced gambler, never losing his nerve, he has the best of it. It is a desperate battle, ending with the Westerner in possession of all the chips. The poor husband staggers home, and driven to the wall, is about to finish it all in the conventional way, when the Westerner enters. Each now sees who his vis-a-vis was, and the young man is able to make restitution, but he loses his position, for he has lost the reputation of trustworthiness. The Westerner, however, is prosperous and promises to assist him, at the same time impressing him with the criminal folly of gambling.

EDISON MFG. CO.

A WOMAN'S STRATEGY.—Nellie, the heroine of this picture, having been wooed and won by a young bank clerk, is living in her first great joy of perfect happiness, unsuspicious of the danger that threatens them both because of the infatuation of another employee of the same bank where her fiance is employed. She is suddenly awakened from her dream of happiness by the arrest of her loved one in her own home. This is caused principally by the accusation of the rejected suitor for her hand and heart. She believes her lover innocent, though confronted with what seems to be absolute proof of his guilt, as the stolen money was found upon her lover's person. It has been said that nothing shall be hid, no guilt so secret but what sooner or later shall be found out. This is clearly shown in this dramatic picture, and all through so slight a thing as the pricking of a thumb by a pin. The wrapper around the stolen bundle of bills has been tossed aside—it falls into Nellie's hands—the marks of a thumb print are visible upon its surface. With this evidence in her possession, a woman's love and devotion call forth the instinct of a trained detective, and by the trick of a decoy letter, a sensitized sheet of music and a woman's wit, the guilty party is found out. He proves to be her former suitor, and the picture culminates in the vindication of innocence and the condemnation of guilt.

A GEORGIA POSSUM HUNT.—Br'r Possum has of late sprung into prominence by reason of the patronage, actual or supposed, of the President. This picture shows how he is hunted 'way down Georgia. All the action takes place at night, and, save the last scene wherein the hungry hunters are devouring possum by the light of the fire, the scenes are all in the moonlight. The whole hunt has been photographed from the calling of the darkies together with the horns on through the various wood scenes in which the white folks follow and look on, through the swamps, until finally in the moonlight the possum is seen climbing a tree to what he fondly believes is safety. Then the dogs appear, barking about the foot of the tree, next the darkies and the lookers-on, and before many seconds the sapling has been bent, the possum is dislodged, and, after being rescued from the dogs, is held aloft in triumph. At this point the white folks usually disappear from the hunt, and the subsequent scenes show the darkies making merry and dancing while "possum and taters" are being cooked.

THE SKIPPER'S YARN.—This story deals with an old fishing skipper who, while standing by his ship, which is in dock, is accosted by a stranger who applies to him for work as a common sailor before the mast. The old skipper takes him aboard, perplexed by the fact that something in the stranger's face recalls other days. He ponders long and vainly to discover where he has seen this man whose face is so strangely familiar. Meeting him on deck during one of the lonely watches of the night, while far out at sea, it suddenly dawns upon him who the stranger is. One day the skipper comes upon his crew seated around the forecastle hatch telling yarns. They urge him to tell them a story, and, with the stranger seated nearby, the old skipper spins his yarn, which runs as follows:

Twenty years before he and a shipmate landed upon a foreign shore. There they fell in with an old Hindoo tattoo-man. They decided to have their arms and breasts tattooed in the manner of all sailors. While being tattooed at the old Hindoo's house, they met his daughter, a beautiful dark-eyed maiden of the Orient. Both sailors fell in love with her, but Jack, the teller of the yarn, won her heart. His shipmate, seized with jealousy, determined to have revenge. Stealing a hidden letter, which Jack had written to the girl, he carried it to the Hindoo, and offered to buy his daughter from him. The Hindoo rose in all his wrath and attacked the sailor. To protect himself the sailor grappled with him. The struggle was too fierce for the old Hindoo, who fell, striking his head violently upon a stone step, and in a few moments passed away. The sailor, realizing what he had done and fearing detection, placed his shipmate's stolen letter in the dead man's hand and fled. The letter fastened the guilt upon Jack, who was seized, thrown into prison and condemned to death. Escaping from prison, he worked his way out of the country and danger.

The yarn concluded, the skipper bares his arm to show the tattoo marks, the mute reminder of the one romance and tragedy of his life. But what of the shipmate, a sailor asked; had he ever met him again? He had, and that only recently. Suddenly turning upon the stranger at his side, the old skipper pulls back his shirt and exposes to view the tattoo marks that correspond to his own. The guilty wretch is found at last. He is seized by his comrades and dragged below, while the old skipper sobs out his grief upon the deck.

ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.

THE MODERN MESSENGER BOY.—The story opens in a well-appointed messenger station, with the usual gathering of messenger boys, romping, joking, playing tricks on each other. "Izzy," our hero, is the ringleader of the lot, and it is he who usually receives the greater number of messages to deliver, chiefly because the manager wants to keep him out of the office.

"Izzy's" first assigment is to deliver a message to one Mrs. Smith-Jones. The lady is dressing for some social function when "Izzy" arrives, and as her maid is having her day off, she is having difficulty in buttoning her dress behind. "Izzy" is pressed into service, and after much experimenting and exploring about feminine negligee, gets her dress hooked up, but to the dismay of Mrs. Smith-Jones, "Izzy's" dirty hands have quite ruined the dress.

With the usual rapidity of the average messenger boy, "Izzy" moseys along to deliver the other messages. On the promise of a good tip, "Izzy" promises to take Dodo, Mrs. Brown's bull pup, for an airing. While en route Dodo strikes the trail of a cat, and the messenger boy, unable to manage the dog, is dragged through the snow and mud, much to the detriment of his spick and span uniform.

Now it happens that the Richleys are giving a swell banquet at their home, but when they come to seat themselves at the table discovery is made that the guests number the unlucky "thirteen." All agree that it will never do to tempt Fate in this manner, and the butler is sent ou to invite the first passerby, and it is "Izzy" who happens along at this moment. Willingly, indeed, but when he is asked to make a speech he becomes so enthusiastic that he accidentally overturns the table.

"Izzy" makes his escape and then looks over his other messages to see where he shall go next. "Call at Mrs. Blinkly's." Mrs. Blinkly, it happens, has an appointment at her club and wants "Izzy" to look after her baby. During her absence "Izzy" endeavors to amuse the baby in feeding it, and himself, and reading the lurid adventures of "Old Sleuth." Some time later the mother returns and "Izzy" continues on his way.

"Izzy," purely as a matter of business, mind you, visits the house of a young lady of seven years and escorts her to a party. On the way he protects the little lady from the insults of a drunken man, who is considerably worsted in a fistic encounter with "Izzy."

He next directs an old maid to an address she is seeking, but considerable confusion results when the old maid is caught in an avalanche of snow from the porch of the house she is entering.

After many other adventures, "Izzy" starts on his return trip to the office. But on the way back he can't resist snowballing people, with the result that he leads a merry chase when two gentlemen, the victims of his icy missiles, try to catch him. But "Izzy" loses them and enters the office. The other boys are joking him because of his big day's work, when they have been comparatively idle, but they are made envious when "Izzy" exhibits the fruits of his day's work, several dollars in hard cash.

AN OUTLAW'S SACRIFICE.—Walt Malone, who is none other than the "Black Knight," a highwayman and night rider who has long baffled the county sheriff and his many posses, has won the love of Nona McMahon, posing with her as a cowboy from up country.

The McMahons are in trouble. Crops and cattle have been bad for several years and old McMahon has been forced to mortgage the homestead. The money-lender has been lenient up to this time, but struck by the beauty of Nona McMahon, he endeavors to win her love.

However, she loves Malone and firmly declines McDermott's offer. McDermott threatens to foreclose, but the girl is unmoved. The money-lender

Buy the Best Machine First

The price of an Edison Kinetoscope is simply the price of the best motion picture machine. The price of a cheap machine is its own price plus the price of an Edison Kinetoscope, which you are certain to have to buy later.

A cheap machine costs more to operate, requires more repairs, constantly burning up your profits, and wears out quickly.

EDISON KINETOSCOPE

gives the clearest, steadiest pictures, keeps the same crowd coming night after night and builds you up a substantial, profitable business.

Why throw away a big proportion of your profits on repairs? Why not have an Edison and get all the profit there is in it?

Our book, about the Edison Kinetoscope, gives full particulars, and will be sent you to-day if you'll ask for it—and also a copy of the Edison Kinetogram.

EDISON FILMS

Releases of January 25 and 28

RELEASE OF JANUARY 25

A WOMAM'S STRATEGY

Dramatic. A clever girl discovers a thumb print upon the wrapper of a bundle of bills which her lover is accused of stealing from the bank where he is employed. By an ingenious trick she discovers the real thief, upon whom she fastens the guilt at her lover's trial. Novel in theme and splendidly acted. An intensely absorbing film.

No. 6579 Code, VESCOVILE App. Length, 975 feet

RELEASE OF JANUARY 28

A GEORGIA POSSUM HUNT

Descriptive. A real hunt, carrying the audience through the woods and swamps of Georgia under the leadership of real negroes, who are entirely natural in their actions. The scenes are all by moonlight and are indescribably beautiful. The last scene shows the darkeys enjoying a feast of "possum and taters."

No. 6580 Code, VESCULORUM App. Length, 140 feet

THE SKIPPER'S YARN

Dramatic. An old skipper recognizes among his crew a former shipmate who, twenty years before, had fastened a crime upon him in the Orient which wrecked his life and lost him his sweetheart. The story of the crime is unfolded in the film, and at the close of the narrative the skipper dramatically denounces the guilty man before his mates. Superbly enacted and photographed.

No. 6581 Code, VESCULOS App. Length, 850 feet

Releases of February 1 and 4

RELEASE OF FEBRUARY 1

A JAPANESE PEACH BOY

(A Japanese fairy story for children, written and portrayed by Mlle. Pilar-Morin.)

No. 6582 Code, VESCUNTUR App. Length, 940 feet

RELEASE OF FEBRUARY 4

HIS JUST DESERTS (Dramatic)

No. 6583 Code, VESEVINUS App. Length, 350 feet

THE SURPRISE PARTY (Comedy)

No. 6584 Code, VESCVUS App. Length, 330 feet

THE BAD MAN FROM RILEY'S GULCH

No. 6585 Code, VESGUEAR App. Length, 315 feet

ORDER DISPLAY POSTERS OF THESE FILMS FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR THE A. B. C. COMPANY, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

EDISON MANUFACTURING CO.

MAIN OFFICE and FACTORY: 72 LAKESIDE AVE., ORANGE, N. J.

New York Office: 10 Fifth Avenue. Chicago Office: 90 Wabash Ave.

KINETOSCOPE JOBBERS

Geo. Brock, 70 Turk St., San Francisco.
Howard Moving Picture Co., 504 Washington St., Boston.
Yale Film Exch. Co., 622 Main St., Kansas City.
P. L. Waters, 41 E. 21st St., New York City.
Lake Shore Film & Supply Co., 314 Superior Ave., N. E., Cleveland.
Chas. A. Caleduff, 4th & Green Sts., Philadelphia.

Office for United Kingdom: Edison Works, Victoria Road, Willesden, N. W., England.

Dealers in All Principal Cities

O. T. Crawford's Film Service

ACKNOWLEDGED

"BETTER THAN THE BEST"

Let us convince you that we can give you just the service you require. Better write to-day.

O. T. CRAWFORD FILM EXCHANGE CO.

1401 Locust Street, ST. LOUIS, MO.
319 Fourth Avenue, LOUISVILLE, KY.

CHEAP

Steel Frame Theatre Chairs

ABSOLUTELY Non-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small theatres and Moving Picture shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also Seating for Out-of-Door Use.

Address Dept. W,

STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich.

New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue

Boston Office: 224 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

LECTURES

on Suitable Subjects in Moving Pictures are a pleasing and attractive feature and always appreciated by your patrons. The peer and pioneer of lectures or "picture readings" with moving pictures is acknowledged to be

W. STEPHEN BUSH

Pleased to correspond with exhibitors

44 North 10th Street - - - Philadelphia, Pa.

FOR SALE

Half interest in the lease and business of a REAL THEATRE. Now playing Vaudeville and Moving Pictures to good business.

Seating Capacity, 1100, Balcony, Gallery and Lower Floor

15,000 POPULATION 15,000

Drawing population 40 000 in a radius of 6 miles

Notice Party buying must take full charge and management of the business, as I am too busy to give it my proper attention.

Address WM. HEXTER, care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City

Independent Film Service

PIEDMONT FILM EXCHANGE

GOLDSBORO, N. C.

Write us today for our Special Offer

No Old Association Films Used in Our Service Whatsoever, but Exclusive Independent Films of the Real Good Kind. . . .

Song Slides Free to Customers

Films, Machines, Songs Slides Constantly on Hand For Sale

WRITE US TODAY

goes to old McMahon, but the old gentleman swears he will go to the poorhouse, sooner than sell his daughter in that way.

In the meantime Malone has been idle and things are growing irksome for him. To make one grand coup and then quit the game is his desire. He hears that the mountain stage coach is soon to carry a large amount of gold for the Western Express Company to the bank in El Paso, and he decides to make a try for the loot.

The hold-up occurs at a lonely place in the mountains, but it is not as profitable as he has expected. Also, he fears that his identity has been discovered. He returns to his dugout, resolved to see his sweetheart and then quit the country, for the time at least.

It is late at night when he rides through the little Western town and sees the notice posted by the sheriff of $5,000 for his capture, dead or alive. Malone shoots down the sign, then rides off to McMahon's. The girl greets him pleasantly, evidently not having heard that he and the "Black Knight" are one and the same person and that a price is set on his head.

Their conversation consists chiefly of plans for the future, of their love for each other, each one fearing to divulge what is most on their minds—the McMahons' financial troubles and Malone's necessity for quitting the country immediately. The girl, however, is unable to restrain her anxiety and shows Malone a note from McDermott, stating that if $5,000 due is not paid by noon to-morrow they must vacate.

Malone looks thoughtfully at the ground, then turns to the girl and in a straightforward, manly way tells her he is the criminal whom the Davis County authorities are seeking. He insists that no crime on his slate is worse than his having deceived her, and insists that he can eradicate it only in allowing her to turn him over to the sheriff and claim the reward.

"You've got to do it, Nona," he insists, thrusting a revolver into her hands. "I'm no good to you now and—you need the money."

The girl shakes her head emphatically, exclaiming that she could never do it. But he swears he will turn himself over anyhow, and is about to leave, when the girl, thinking that Malone's sacrifice is for her mother and father as much as for her, says she will do his bidding.

"But I love you and I'll wait for you, even if it be all my life that you are gone," she whispers as they approach the sheriff's door.

And a moment later the sheriff opens the door to find Malone, his hands held high above his head, the girl with the pistol leveled at him, waiting for him. The manacles are slipped on and Malone and the sheriff go into the jail, while the girl drops sobbing on the doorstep.

GAUMONT.

(George Kleine.)

THE PRICE OF PATRIOTISM.—At the time of the Civil War in France a Republican officer is in command of a marching force who have some prisoners in charge. These Royalist insurgents are to be shot the next day.

The wife of the Republican officer arrives just at the moment when they are reading the prisoners' letters. Both the officer and his wife are much impressed by one of the letters addressed to a prisoner by his sweetheart.

The officer's wife makes up her mind to save this prisoner at all costs. Accordingly, as soon as night has fallen, she assembles the soldiers by singing the Marseillaise—the Republican national air. This arouses the men to a great pitch of enthusiasm. While their patriotic fever is at its height, she slips away to where the prisoners are bound to posts, and cutting the bonds of the one whose love letters she had heard read, she sets him free.

The guard comes around at about this time, captures the woman who has enabled the prisoner to escape, and brings her before her own husband, the commanding officer. She is sentenced to be shot, but at that moment the enemy attacks. She seizes a flag and rushes on the enemy. At the first volley she falls, fatally wounded, thus paying "The Price of Patriotism."

SEASIDE ADVENTURES AT HOME.—Frank is a young man with a great sense of humor. Financial embarrassment does not worry him. He wants to take a trip to the seaside, but lack of funds prevents him. Happy thought! Bobby, his landlady's little boy, has a fine toy-train. Frank appropriates it and hitching his trunk on behind, makes a comfortable day coach into which he climbs. Toot! toot! All aboard for Coney Island! The train travels rapidly around the room, stopping five minutes for lunch at a station (his landlady's sideboard). Then the journey is continued to the next stopping station, where Frank couples on a "sleeper" (his bed), in which he continues his journey until finally "Coney Island" is reached.

The sea (his landlay's kitchen, where Frank has previously turned on the water faucet and left it running, so that there is now about seven feet of water in the room) looks tempting for a swim; so much so that Frank retires behind a screen, soon reappearing in a neat bathing suit and plunges into the "briny ocean," splashing around and enjoying himself immensely.

THE GREAT DIVIDE.—Bob Weatherhead, a young boatman, is in love with Mary, his beautiful young neighbor. Mary's father refuses to give his consent to his daughter's marriage with a boatman. Poor Bob goes away in despair, swearing that he will never love another girl.

Soon after, Mary falls ill and her father realizes now that he has broken her heart. He hastens to fetch her lover, but only brings him back in time to bid his sweetheart good bye, as she expires in his arms. The next scene is forty years later. The faithful lover has kept his word and never married or loved another.

A young couple, very closely resembling his dead sweetheart and himself, as he used to look forty years ago, come to the ferry and are taken across the water by the old boatman. After he has landed them on the further shore, he sits down in his boat and is lost in sad recollections of his deceased love. Suddenly she appears to him in a vision, seated at the stern of his boat. He starts up to clasp her in his outstretched arms, but she vanishes. He then falls dead and the two faithful spirits depart together across "The Great Divide."

WILD WAVES AT ST. JEAN-DE-LUX.—"Break, break, break, on thy cold, gray stones, oh Sea! And I would that my lips could utter the thoughts that occur unto me!"

These beautiful lines of Lord Tennyson come spontaneously to the minds of those who see this film, for no picture could more exquisitely portray the mighty, restless, irresistible ocean than does this superb motion picture taken on the rugged shores of the Basque provinces of beautiful France. There is a sense of awe and a realization of the boundless infinity of nature and of man's helplessness and insignificance when we behold the tossing, dashing, surging billows of the sea as they break over the rocks and the stone bulwarks erected by human hands, gradually wearing them down to fine sand. No scene in nature has so powerful an influence for good or so deeply stirs the heart of man as the deep and dark blue ocean.

KALEM MFG. CO.

THE MAN WHO LOST.—The romance of a bachelor, who, after bestowing his blessing upon two happy young lovers, sees in the reverie that follows his own love romance of twenty years before re acted before his eyes.

Scene I. The Love Romance of John Fulton's Adopted Daughter Awakens Old Memories. At the opening scene we find John Fulton, a well to do bachelor, reading his paper. Standing at his back is his foster daughter, a beautiful young girl. She is impatiently watching for someone. Fulton notices her evident expectation and rallies her about it. As he returns to the perusal of his paper she crosses to him and kneels at his side. She has something to tell him, but knows not how to say it. Finally she hides her face and murmurs the name "Bob." So that is it. Fulton smiles slyly, then as the thought comes to him that this means he is to lose his daughter, his face grows stern. Then it softens again and he gently strokes her head. At this moment across the lawn comes Bog Adams. Fulton greets him, then smiling indulgently, he passes over the blushing girl to him. Cutting short their thanks at his ready consent to their engagement, he waves them away. As they stroll away he watches them for a moment, then returns to his seat. But all desire to read is gone. The sight of these young lovers brings back to him a vision of the girl's mother. As he sits looking out he lives over again those scenes of twenty years ago.

Scene II. Caroline Meets Her Fate and John Fulton in a Game of Blind Man's Buff.

Scene III.—John Proposes to Caroline.

Scene IV.—A Month Later The Stranger Wins Caroline's Hand. A month has passed, a month of suffering for John Fulton. He learns that his hope is blasted when he comes across Caroline and the stranger in secret conversation. The stranger bending over her pours out the story of his passion. Caroline listens in trembling, happy silence. Now his arm steals around her waist, and as she slowly yields to his pleading he draws her to him until she is finally folded in his arms.

Scene V. John Learns the Real Character of the Stranger by Discovering Him Embracing Another Woman.

Scene VI.—John Warns Caroline Against the Stranger. Caroline in a burst of anger stamps her foot, declares she is going to marry the stranger, and runs into the house crying bitterly. John, left alone, walks sadly up and down the garden path.

Scene VII.—"You Will Fight Me for This." A few days later the stranger and a couple of friends, all slightly intoxicated, are having a merry time at one of the tables in front of the tavern when John Fulton passes by. The stranger halts John and invites him to drink, but John refuses. At this the stranger laughs insultingly and intimates it is because he has stolen John's girl. John's face pales with anger as he cries, "Don't you dare mention her name here." His friends try to stop the stranger, but he rips out an oath coupled with Caroline's name. John dashes the contents of a wine glass into the stranger's face. He starts forward, but his friends hold him back. Thoroughly sobered, he glares at John and through his set teeth mutters, "You will fight me for this," and John Fulton replies, "At any time and place."

Scene VIII.—The Duel.

Scene IX.—Caroline's Flight. The next morning after breakfast John is opening his morning paper when his mother enters hastily and inquires if he has seen Caroline. John says "No." At this moment the maid hands to his mother a note she has found pinned to Caroline's pillow. It is addressed to John. He opens it with trembling fingers and reads Caroline's note of farewell, telling him she has gone with the stranger. With a cry of pain John drops to a chair as he realizes his dream of future happiness with Caroline is over for all time.

Scene X. A Dying Mother's Bequest. Three years have passed since that morning when John read Caroline's note of farewell. As he and his mother are having tea on the veranda, a carriage drives up to the steps. When his mother hurries back, there steps from it a middle-aged woman dressed in black and carrying in her arms a two-year-old baby girl. She inquires if this is John Fulton, and holds out a letter. John recognizes Caroline's handwriting and eagerly tearing it open he reads the dying Caroline's appeal to him to care for her baby daughter. With tear dimmed eyes John takes the child, and as he sees in its baby face the likeness to the Caroline he loved so well, he folds it to his heart while a great light floods his face.

Slowly John Fulton's thoughts return to the present. Brushing the tears from his eyes, he rises to his feet and turns to see the lovers returning arm-in-arm from their stroll. He calls and the girl comes running. She is the baby of the scene just past. Taking her face in his hands he gazes at it fondly. Grasping Bob's hand, he says, "You must always be good to my little girl," and as he sees their joyous countenances he smiles happily at the thought that he has faithfully executed the loving trust left him by his beloved Caroline of twenty years before.

LUBIN MFG. CO.

HE GOT RID OF THE MOTHS.—Billy Barker is a bachelor occupying a suite on the ground floor of a fashionable apartment house. An invitation to a wedding causes him to think of his dress clothes, which he has not had out for a few days. To his dismay he finds that the moths have invaded his wardrobe and not only the evening clothes but all his other suits have great holes in the cloth where the greedy insects have fed. Forgetful of the wedding, Barker heads for the drug store, where he demands the strongest moth murdering medicine they have in stock. The clerk suggests that a sulphur candle would do the trick, but a single candle will not satisfy Barker's thirst for revenge. He buys a whole box and takes them home. He lights half a dozen and goes off downtown.

A SLIPPERY DAY. The morning after the blizzard old Moneyton starts to walk to his office, since the cars are not running and it is impossible to get the automobile out. He is not particularly well pleased with the idea before he starts, but his distaste is made positive about seven seconds later when he slips down the slight terrace that raises the grass plot above the sidewalk. He is wading knee deep in the fleecy snow and it aggravates the rheumatism that is bad enough anyhow in poor weather. He makes a little progress when he slips and falls. The fall is in part due to his efforts to dodge a visitor from the rural districts who is coming the other way. He carries the farmer with him and when he rises is so flustered that he falls down again and takes a few encores for good measure. He manages to get his balance and makes slow progress, but presently he falls again and this time he carries two young women with him in his descent. They pelt him with snow and hurry out, leaving him to regain his feet unassisted. A policeman is the next victim and the man of the law takes him into custody for assault, but Moneyton is unable to keep his feet and carries the policeman with him in some of his falls. Rather than take him all the way to the station the officer throws him into a snowbank and leaves him there. Moneyton goes on his way down the street, spreading havoc and devastation wherever he goes, until at last he is seen crawling on all fours back to his own domicile, with the determination to transact his business by telephone for the day at least, but the sight of another wayfarer taking a header into a pile of the beautiful snow brings a laugh to his lips.

THE USURPER.—Francis Scott, a lonely old bachelor, dies leaving his extensive fortune to his only living relative, his nephew, Richard Kirby, a Californian. Dick is delighted with his good fortune even while he mourns the death of his uncle, whom he has never seen, for he is engaged to Anne Marlowe, a fellow clerk in the offices of Fern & Co. Bert Humphreys also loves Anne, but his attentions have been most unwelcome, for he is addicted to drink, and his familiarity is resented by Dick when he tipsily seeks to steal a kiss from the girl. Bert is resentful of Dick's good fortune and plans with some of his cronies to abduct his successful rival and with the papers of identification go to New York and represent himself as his heir. The plan succeeds, and Dick, bound hand and foot, is held a prisoner in a cabin in the woods near his suburban home across the bay from San Francisco. Bert has no trouble in usurping Dick's place with the law firm and begins to spend money royally, trusting to his accomplices to hold Dick a prisoner until he has had his fling in New York and is ready to take flight with the bulk of the estate. But the men indulge in a drunken quarrel while Dick has his bonds loosened that he may eat, and with quick action the prisoner overcomes his jailers, secures their revolvers and escapes. He makes his way to Anne's home to learn that she has become alarmed at his silence and has left for New York to search for him. He arranges with the manager of Fern & Co. to accompany him to New York, where he denounces the usurper, who is turned over to the police, while Dick and Anne, reunited, plan a speedy marriage.

PATHÉ FRÈRES

Will Release

—THE—

POSTMISTRESS

Length, 918 Feet

A vivid portrayal of a most dramatic story. The Postmistress—a widow—in order to save the life of her child, pilfers some of the government's funds to pay the stony-hearted doctor. The same day the Postal Inspector arrives to audit her accounts. How the poor widow is saved from disgrace makes as pretty and pathetic a story as has ever been presented in moving pictures.

Released Wednesday, Feb. 2nd, 1910

BE SURE AND GET THIS ONE!

For Other Releases see the Bi-Weekly Bulletin

Watch for the announcement of

In Ancient Greece

To be released soon by

PATHÉ FRÈRES

NEW YORK 41 West 25th Street
CHICAGO 35 Randolph Street
NEW ORLEANS 813 Union Street

Pacific Coast Agency—Turner & Dahnken, 136 Eddy Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Get Your Posters from the A. B. C. Co., of Clevland, Ohio

SLIDES
of Highest Quality

LATEST SONG SETS

The Spot That My Heart Calls Home.
The Flower of Singapore.
Kitty Grey.
The Wreck of the Good Ship Love.
In The City Where Nobody Cares.
I Rather Say Hello Than Say Good Bye.
I Love My Steady. But I'm Crazy About My Once In Awhile.
Candy
I Have Got Something In My Eye.
Kitty.
Chasing The Eagle.
If I Thought You Wouldn't Tell.
Anywhere.
I've Got Rings On My Fingers And Bells On My Toes.
Amina.

High class slides made and colored to order from prints and negatives

Scott & Van Altena
59 Pearl St., New York City

NEW SLIDES
For the Following Songs—JUST OUT

When the Daisies Bloom.
Shaky Eyes.
Mandy How Do You Do.
Margarita.
Love Me Dreamy Eyes.
Nora Malone.
By the Light of the Silvery Moon.
There's Nothing Else in Life Like Love, Love, Love.
Take Me Back to Sunshine Land.
Mary you're a Big Girl Now.
My Dream of Long Ago.
When I Fell in Love With You.
Rosenbaum.
When You've Won the Only Girl You Love.
Just a Girl Like You.
In the Harbor of Sunshine and Love.
Round Up.
Would You be Satisfied, Sally?
You'll Come Back.
Put On Your Old Grey Bonnet.
Heinz.

DeWITT C. WHEELER
120 W. 31st St., N. Y. City

FILMS HOWARD MOVING PICTURE CO. FILMS

Repair Work a Speciality. Agents for Motiograph, Power's and Edison Machines. Supplies and Sundries.

564 Washington Street, - - Boston Mass.

Established 1894. (Opposite Adams House). Incorporated 1908.

Canadian Exhibitors

Looking for a first-class film service, write the Crystal Palace Film Exchange for particulars. We handle both Licensed and Independent films and can give you a right up-to-date service. We own and operate the most successful Moving Picture Theaters in Canada.

Located at

141 Yonge Street, Toronto.
331 St. Lawrence Blvd., Mont.
27 King Street East, Hamilton.

Agents for Power's and Edison Machines.

Crystal Palace Film Exchange
141 Yonge Street. Toronto, Can.

Moving Picture Theatre For Sale

In town of 20,000. Best location and finest equipped. Vaudeville facilities. Don't miss this chance. Address

J. E. B., Care of Moving Picture World

WANTED TO BUY

500 Reels of subjects at all prices and quality; Independent films preferred.

CHAS. STREIMER
60 West 14th Street N. Y. CITY

CUPID, D.D.S.—Just because he has money is no reason why a man should not have the toothache as well, and Stockson has a tooth that seems to ache clear down to his toes. He paces the library like a newly caged lion, while an anxious valet dodges books and bric-a-brac and urges a visit to the dentist. Argument at last prevails and Stockson starts for the dental office as cheerfully as a small boy on his way to the woodshed with father. Dr. Flip, the dental surgeon, boasts the D.D.S. that marks the expert, but he has a lot of trouble getting at the molar and has to tie his patient into the chair before he can even touch the aching tooth. The roots hold and Stockson makes a few comments on Flip's skill that brings Daisy, Flip's assistant and the girl he wants to marry, on the scene. She is shocked at the language, and to cut short the performance prevails upon Flip to let her have a trial. She gives one skillful twist and the deed is done; but Daisy has extracted more than a bi-cuspid from the rich client, for she drew his heart as well. He returns to see her again and prevails upon her to become Mrs. Stockson, while Flip advertises for an assistant and is particular to specify that it shall be a man.

ADORING AN AD.—Jack Boyer starts for town from his suburban home and while waiting for the train buys a magazine to while away the time while he is getting his shoes shined. He idly turns over the advertising pages and is struck by the beauty of one of the models shown in a cut. He becomes so engrossed in her good looks that he is oblivious of the arrival and departure of the train, and when reminded of this fact can only reward his informant with a sight of the pretty face. There is no manufacturer's address on the advertisement, so Jack seeks the publisher of the magazine for information, and his persistence brings him the address of the advertising firm which placed the ad. They in turn send him to the photographer who took the picture, and who sells the address. But the address is incorrect, for the model has moved, and Jack is forced to give up the chase. At last, when he has abandoned hope, he encounters his divinity on the street, but his joy in the meeting is tempered by the fact that she is in charge of two small children. They are not her own. Her married sister comes out of the house to claim the kiddies and Jack persuades the little model to be married right away.

MARBLE QUARRYING IN TENNESSEE.—Tennessee marble is famous the country over and there is a demand for it even in Europe, where the clean grained stone is much appreciated. This industrial tells, in remarkably clear photography, the processes used in quarrying the stone. Intelligent captions explain the processes without delaying the movement of the film and add greatly to the interest of the spectator. An industrial always serves as a welcome interruption in the succession of dramatic stories, particularly when, as in the present instance, the subject possesses the artistic value of a scenic release.

THE FLIRTO-MANIAC.—A wealthy man, whose peculiar mental kink leads him to make violent love to every woman he meets, is confined in a sanitarium, from which he manages to escape by locking his keepers into a wardrobe. He assumes the auto togs of the superintendent and fares forth upon the street, where he encounters many strange adventures. His insanity leads him to perform the most ridiculous stunts, and finally he is pursued by a bevy of old maids, who have heard that he is hiding in the park and go in search of him.

PATHE FRERES.

TESTING THEIR LOVE.—Two chaps are in love with the same woman, the Countess Charming, and both happen to call on her at the same identical hour, each armed with a huge bouquet. She receives both swains very graciously, but gives neither very much encouragement, as she puts little faith in their avowals of love. They sit one on each side of her, glaring at each other over her head, for each feels if the other were not present he would be successful in winning the lady. After a most uncomfortable half hour for all parties concerned the discouraged lovers decide to take their leave. Just as they reach the gate, however, the butler stops them, handing each a note from the countess, who has decided to test their love in rather an unusual way, so bids them go with her the next day on their wheels to her Summer estate, where she will give them a chance to prove their devotion to her. The bicycle party starts off the following morning, and when they reach her chateau she tells them that she has decided to marry the one who will ride through the stone wall enclosing the place head first. The boldest appearing of the two bravely mounts his wheel and makes a dash for the wall, but when he reaches it he gets cold feet and stops stock still. The other lover then tries and goes crashing through the stone enclosure without injuring a hair of his head, as the countess had an opening in the wall covered up with paper made to represent stone, in order to test the love of her admirers. The brave fellow gets his reward and is taken to the heart of his adored one, on whom his bravery has made a great impression.

A VISIT TO BOMBAY.—Seeing this wonderfully colored film is the next best thing to paying a visit to this fine Indian town. Views of both the old and new city are given, and while the former is the most picturesque, the latter, of course, is better built, possessing really fine up-to-date buildings, such as the Anglican church and the big market. Various mosques and pagodas are also seen. The street scenes are of course most unusual and therefore interesting to foreigners. The natives in their loose, gaily colored trousers walking about in their bare feet with up-to-date buildings on every side of them seems indeed incongruous. One of the most interesting things in the film are the wonderful Elephanta caves hewn out of the mountain and which are visited daily by crowds of tourists.

THE BAREBACK RIDER.—With a smile of anticipation on his face Clown Toddie on coming from the circus hastens to his little home, where the two he loves best on earth are awaiting him—his beautiful wife, the well-known bareback rider, and his little daughter. But there is a peck of trouble in store for the clown, although he never suspects it, and the cloud bursts when he picks up a note left for him at his home, telling him to keep an eye on his wife and signed "A Friend" (this "friend" being the ringmaster, whose attentions Toddie's wife had refused to accept). This comes like a thunderbolt to poor Toddie, who thinks his wife an angel. They have always been like lovers together and their one thought is to save enough money to educate their little daughter and prepare her for a life very different from their own in the circus ring. For a moment Toddie wrestles with himself. He can't believe evil of his wife and he won't believe it. But still after a while he decides to watch her to prove to himself and the unknown "friend" that she is without fault. A view is given of the triumph of the bareback rider in the ring, where her feats meet with storms of applause, and we see her greeted with warm hand clasps by the circus people as she comes behind the scenes after her turn. The next view is where the veil is lifted from Toddie's eyes, for, determined to carry out his plan regarding his wife, he visits their little home at an hour when he knows she thinks he is at the circus and sad to relate finds her entertaining the man who has broken up their home. Stung to the quick, the clown orders the unfaithful woman from his house, and notwithstanding her pleading refuses to let her remain under his roof. Toddie is soon called to do his turn in the ring, and with his heart breaking he must needs leap into the sawdust and with his wonderful grimaces make everybody present laugh. One of his stunts is a trapeze act, but while on the rope at the tiptop of the building his fevered imagination calls up a picture of the wife he has lost, smiling and encouraging his rival. The audience sees that something is wrong with the clown, and in a twinkling he comes tumbling down in their midst, the thought of his troubles being more than he could bear. He is carried out with tender care by the circus people while another scene is introduced that there may be no hitch in the show. One year later we see a crippled old man accompanied by a pinched and unhappy looking little girl begging outside of a fashionable restaurant. A richly dressed woman and her escort having just driven up, their automobile stops a moment while the woman gives the beggars a coin. Both father and daughter recognize the woman, although she does not seem to know them, sickness and poverty having wrought such a change in them since this very woman broke up their happy little home. The little girl pleads with the clown to let her go to her mother and beg her to come back to them, but he stubbornly refuses. The little one steals out, however, and hurries back to the restaurant, where she manages to sneak in to where her mother is dining with a rollicking party. The woman notices the little one as she enters and before long recognizes her as her own child and clasping her to her breast begs her to take her to her father. The film closes with the happiest of scenes showing the happy father, the repentant mother and brave little daughter united forever and a day.

THE PAINTER'S SWEETHEART.—An artist while sketching in the woods one day is set upon by a band of brigands and taken prisoner. His little sweetheart wonders sorrowfully why her lover stays away from her so long until a youth comes to her and tells her the news of the artist's capture. The girl makes up her mind immediately to disguise herself as a boy and join the cutthroat band. She bravely goes to their camp and offers her services. As a test of her courage she is blindfolded and handed a dagger and told to stab a man who is tied to a tree. They lead her to the tree and she makes the fatal thrust, thinking herself a murderer. She is greatly relieved, however, when the bandage is removed from her eyes to find that it was all a ruse to try her courage and that she had sunk the knife into the bark of the tree instead of into a human breast as she had thought. Complimenting her on her bravery, the brigands now look upon her as one of their own. Watching eagerly for an opportunity to speak a word in private with her lover in order to plan his escape, fortune favors the girl when one day she is told to keep an eye on their prisoner. They go off together, she pretending all the while to dog his footsteps while the others are about. When her chance comes she lets him flee and then runs breathlessly back to the camp to tell the men their bird has flown. She accompanies them as they hurry after him and manages to throw one of them over a precipice while she outwits the others and after an exciting chase she joins her lover and they hasten away to safety.

FICKLE FORTUNE.—Poor Muggs being penniless and hungry decides that he must find some way out of his difficulties or starve to death, so looking over the contents of a garbage can he finds a broken statue, which he uses to good advantage. Holding the broken head on his shoulders, he stations himself at a corner and awaits his chance. In a short time along comes a man intently reading his paper and not looking where he is going. Our friend goes back a few steps and manages to be turning the corner from the opposite direction just as the newspaper reader turns also. The consequence is that there is a collision and the head of the statue goes flying through the air. The owner of same moans and sighs that he will have to pay for the valuable article and so works upon the other man's sympathies that the latter finally gives him what he claims the statue is worth and hurries on. Muggs hugs the coins to his breast and as he passes a window he notices a maid cleaning a gentleman's coat. She leaves the window for a moment and our friend gently pulls the garment down and puts his own threadbare one in its place. He now decides to look for a hat. He soon finds one, as he notices a man with a very stunning top hat sauntering through the park and evidently looking for a seat. Muggs hovers near him and just as he is about to sit down on a bench he places his stovepipe under him and cries out when the unconscious stranger squashes it beyond recognition. Being a kind-hearted fellow, the stranger offers his admirable headpiece to Muggs in exchange for the one he ruined. Decked out in his swell coat and hat, Muggs is now ready to present himself at a fashionable restaurant. The waiters fly to his call and he partakes of a most satisfying meal. When he has finished and the bill is presented he finds to his horror that he left the money he got for the statue (every cent he had in the world) in the pocket of his old coat he substituted for the one he is now wearing. He therefore becomes seized with terror and flies from the place.

When the waiter discovers that he has gone without paying his bill he hurries with the news to the proprietor, who finds the guest's coat and hat still on the peg and going through his pockets finds a large sum of money. Accompanied by the waiter, the proprietor hurries after the absent-minded guest. The latter, on seeing them running in his direction, thinks, of course, that they are going to have him arrested and runs all the faster. They finally catch up with him, and he is just about to throw himself on his knees and beg for mercy when the proprietor hands him the coat and the banknotes, and Muggs, taking in the situation at a glance, haughtily thanks the proprietor, and after handing him the amount of his bill struts along thinking what an awfully lucky dog he is after all.

SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.

HIS VACATION.—A clerk in a large commercial business company is officially notified that he is at liberty to take his two weeks' vacation. Much elated, he informs his fellow-clerks of the good news. Upon reaching his home, his wife, having vacation ideas of her own, immediately sets him to work. Of course the back-yard fence needs whitewashing. This he does, and is almost happy in the task. Just done with this bit of muscular improvement, when she is aware of the fact that there is quite an amount of aprons and other material to be washed. The clerk's vacation progresses accordingly, whereas he had dreams of fishing tackle, rod and running brooks. Scarcely through with this work when he, remonstrating, is placed at work with the lawn-mower, for assuredly the grass has grown a bit too high. Finally, after having taken up the carpets, cleansed and beaten them, the astonishing news is brought to him by his wife that the stove-pipe is smoking. Now, he has never known that pipe to smoke before, and he longed for a pipe of his own, but tobacco was a luxury that his vacation did not permit of, so to the kitchen he goes, and in his endeavors, well meant but ill spent, he topples with stove-pipe and all to the floor. Absolutely exhausted, Mr. Clerk's wife assists him to bed. A physician is called, who administers drops none too palatable, and after a day's rest the clerk, with hands and muscles sore, gladly returns to his place of employment, willing to remain there for the future, with pen and pencil and no vacation.

THE RANCH KING'S DAUGHTER.—In the hurly-burly of American life people are apt to forget the history of their own country. The material progress and wealth that required so many decades to clear of obstruction has been so dazzlingly immense as to

CALEHUFF
A Member of the
FILM SERVICE ASSOCIATION
Headquarters for only the best of latest
FILMS and SONG SLIDES. No junk.
MACHINES, SUPPLIES, Etc.
LATEST SONG SLIDES
$5.00 per set
N. E. Cor. 4th & Green Streets,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS The Big Ticket. Any Printing. Any Colors.

5,000	$1.25	20,000	$4.60	50,000	$7.50
10,000	2.50	25,000	5.50	100,000	10.00

Get the Samples — Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

F. C. TAYLOR, 51 West 28th St., New York City

We have on hand at all times second hand machines in A1 CONDITION at prices equal to one-half of original cost. We are also Agents for The Motiograph and American Moving Picture Machines, and carry a large stock of accessories.

Our Operating School meets every Monday, Wednesday and Friday evening. Complete course, $15.00. We positively guarantee you a $15.00 position.

CALL, WRITE, OR 'PHONE 1405 MADISON SQUARE

INTERNATIONAL FILM COMPANY 110 WEST 34th STREET NEW YORK

NOTE OUR SPECIALTY
A1 Films at 2 cents per foot

Dealers in Films, Moving Picture Machines, Carbons, Tickets, Song Slides, Announcement Slides and everything pertaining to the Moving Picture business.

Want to Buy 1000 Reels Independent Film

INDEPENDENT

We rent new Films. Handle all the leading Makes, both AMERICAN AND FOREIGN; beautiful Posters; exclusive Feature Service. Write for prices.

CINCINNATI FILM EXCHANGE, 214-16 West 5th Street, CINCINNATI, O.

KEEP YOUR EYE ON US

AMERICAN FILM BROKERS—German Savings Bank Building
147-157 4th Avenue, New York City

300 sets second-hand Song Slides from $1.50 up. Films like new very cheap. Announcement Slides, Machines and Accessories of all kinds. Write for lists.

PITTSBURG McKENNA NEW YORK

Did you get one of our NEW CATALOGS?

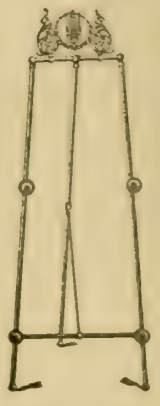
Prepared especially for the man who wants information concerning

Brass Railings, Picture Easels, Grilles, Etc.

WRITE NOW TO

McKENNA BROS. BRASS CO.

1st Ave. and Ross Street PITTSBURG — "It's the Front that Attracts the Business" — 238 Broadway NEW YORK



fascinate the present with such allurements as to give little time for thought to the agencies that rendered the present prosperous conditions of the great ranch owners possible. The factors in the last, most excitingly strenuous; the most personally dangerous and the most effective period in the removing of these obstructions are many of them still lingering on the scene, but the great busy public, far from the noise of the turmoil and struggle, are apt to forget the toil, peril and hardships of the class who redeemed from actual barbarism that vast unutilized territory which now forms a portion of this great American commonwealth—the once Wild West. Half the thrilling story of the heroism and sacrifice will never can never—be told. Such object lessons as this picture gives throw a vivid light on the written history that cannot fail to be of great value to all, but especially to youth, and add to their interest in books treating of those chapters of our national annals. The history of the plains dating back to the vivid days of the wandering buffalo herds, the cattle rustlers and the echo of the coyote from the sage brush of the foothills. These are the incidents upon which are based the story of "The Ranch King's Daughter," having for its heroine Bessie, the daughter of the Ranch King, loved by all alike. She has two suitors one the foreman of the ranch and the other an employee, who in reality is the leader of the rustlers. The latter, seeing that his suit is unproductive of gain, hits upon a plan of revenge. Accordingly she is seized and carried to the Indian stockade. A thrilling rescue by her preferred admirer, entailing a desperate running fight and final safe arrival home, culminates in a happy reunion. Lazarro, the cattle rustler, meets justice at the hands of the faithful cowboys, who would have died to save the daughter of their master.

VITAGRAPH COMPANY.

THE GIRL AND THE JUDGE. In the parlor of a Southern mansion a girl is seen seated at the piano, idly strumming the keys, as if expecting someone. Her father is sitting on the veranda reading. Two rival suitors for the girl's hand arrive at about the same time and are shown into the parlor. She appears to favor each alike and they ask her to choose between one or the other just as her father enters the room, and she sidles up to him and intimates that this is her choice. Both are discomfited.

While the young lady is dismissing one caller the other accompanies the father into his study, where he is shown a collection of antique firearms. In the center of the table on which the weapons are displayed there also stands a large microscope. The young man here begs the father for the hand of his daughter, but is told that he first must win her heart, and loud words are spoken. The young man at last apologizes and departs. While he is in the next room, picking up his hat, gloves and riding whip, he hears a report of a gun and rushes back into the study to find the father shot through the heart and a smoking pistol on the table. The daughter, her other suitor, who happens also to be the district judge, and the servants all rush in, and the natural inference is that the old man has been shot by the rival suitor. He vehemently protests his innocence, but the evidence is against him and he is placed under arrest.

As the man is a friend of the judge, although his rival in love, the judge cannot believe it possible that a crime has been committed, and he sits down to try and solve the problem. As he does so he accidentally places his hand under the microscope and receives a sharp burn. This sets him thinking. Is it possible that this could have discharged the pistol? He closes the doors and places some powder in the pan of the old pistol and he lays it down in its former position. In a moment there is a flash. The mystery is solved. He is about to rush out and proclaim the innocence of his rival when he stops and thinks. "No. Under the cloud of guilt he is no longer a rival. I am his judge and can be merciful but the girl must be mine."

His mind is still unchanged when the trial takes place, and when the jury finds the prisoner guilty of murder the judge pronounces the sentence.

One month later, as the judge is calling on the girl, she shows him a letter from the mother of the condemned man:

"Dearest Virginia: All hope is lost. I begged the Governor on my knees to pity the agony of a mother's breaking heart and pardon my son, but he refused. My boy's innocent young life will be taken."

At sight of this the judge breaks down and confesses to the girl that his rival was innocent, but that his great love for her tempted him to conceal the proof. This he now feverishly explains to her, as he shows her the microscope and the position of the pistol, and they both hasten to the Governor's office, where the mother is making a last appeal. The Governor has again refused, when the judge enters and explains to the Governor, who hastily writes a pardon, which the judge himself takes to the prisoner.

And here comes the anti-climax to this absorbing story. The girl has followed and congratulates the prisoner on his release, but she realizes that now is the time she must make her choice. As the judge bows his head in humiliation and turns away she realizes the depth of a love that had tempted the judge from the path of honor, and placing her hand in his she tells him that he is her choice, while the discharged prisoner sadly gives them his congratulations.

KALEM FILMS

Issue of January 28, 1910

"THE MAN WHO LOST"

LENGTH 930 FEET (Approx)

is a great dramatic production by the KALEM COMPANY'S SOUTHERN STOCK COMPANY. It is a story of intense heart interest in which it is proven that a loser may at the same time be a victor. And it is the work of those sterling actors whose portraits are now available for every first-class licensed house in America.

The Lobby Display Fame

is the biggest kind of a hit. Orders are pouring in on us from every side, and we are now compelled to announce that THE FIRST ORDER FROM EACH CITY WILL RECEIVE IMMEDIATE ATTENTION. Later orders will have to wait their turn. Price, $16.00 each, f. o. b. New York.

Two Kalem Reels Each Week

Commencing with the first week in February, we will put out two great headliners each week, on Wednesday and Friday. Note these first issues and order them of your exchange.

February 2—THE STEPMOTHER (Dramatic)
February 4—THE LITTLE OLD MEN OF THE WOODS (Mystery)
February 9—THE CONFEDERATE SPY (War)
February 11—THE ENCHANTED BROOK (Fairy Comedy)

Kalem posters can be obtained from your exchange or by mail from the A. B. C. Co., of Cleveland, O.

Free Descriptive Lectures Sent to all Applicants

KALEM CO., Inc.

Eastman Kodak Building

235-237-239 WEST 23rd STREET
NEW YORK CITY

LUBIN FILMS

RELEASED MONDAY, JANUARY 24, 1910.

Cupid, D. D. S.

Given a millionaire with an aching tooth, an unskilled dental surgeon and an able woman assistant, the opportunity for comedy is plentiful and adroitly handled. The clever little assistant throws the dentist over for the millionaire and everyone is happy but the tooth expert. Plenty of live comedy and a thread of dainty sentiment. LENGTH, 340 FEET.

Adoring an Ad.

Ever see a pretty girl staring out at you from the advertising pages of a magazine and wonder who she was? The hero of this story fell in love with a Hair Health girl and was led a merry chase, but it was not until he had given up that an accidental encounter revealed her to his delighted gaze. An unusual story told in unique fashion by means of good acting and photography as good. LENGTH, 515 FEET.

RELEASED THURSDAY, JANUARY 27, 1910.

Marble Quarrying in Tennessee

This time the industrial takes precedence over its companion subject, not because the comedy is not as strong, but because these interesting scenes from the heart of the famous Tennessee marble belt are out of the ordinary. The processes are clearly explained in terse captions and the release is one of exceptional attractiveness. Some of the quarry views are worthy the painter's brush. LENGTH, 441 FEET.

The Flirto-Maniac

That's another name for a man with a sentimental brain-storm. This one escaped from the sanitarium and went about making love to every woman he saw. The sanitarium officials feared that some woman might be fooled into marrying him before they learned of his insanity, but the shoe was on the other foot. Even a flirto-maniac could not stand the bevy of old maids who pursued him, and he sought refuge in the asylum after a lively chase. LENGTH, 420 FEET.

Send for catalogue of our 1910 machine

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY 926-928 MARKET STREET PHILADELPHIA, PA

Independent Films.

GREAT NORTHERN.

ANARCHISTS ON BOARD.—Prince Albert is sent as king's messenger to a foreign country on an important diplomatic mission, and carries with him some very valuable documents. Some anarchists having heard of this voyage of the prince, plot to assassinate him, and bribe one of his servants to furnish them with the particulars of the contemplated journey. This servant overhears a conversation between the prince and his accompanying staff of detectives, and according to this news-the anarchists manage to board the steamer Slavonia, on which the prince is to travel. Hidden in a large packing case, in which they were smuggled on board, they escape the observation of any of the officers or crew. The only one who is suspicious of the case is the wireless operator, and he calls the attention of the captain to it, but is not listened to. The anarchists have little difficulty in prowling around the steamer, and in placing their infernal machine, which is regulated to blow up the steamer at a certain hour, so as to give them plenty of time to escape the disaster. In the meantime, however, the police on shore happen to hear of the affair, and arrest the servant, who confesses everything. With the aid of the wireless telegraph, a message is sent out to sea, informing the captain of the news. But the difficulty for the captain is to find the place where the machine is placed, and he is now vexed that he did not listen to the advice of the wireless operator. In feverish haste the whole boat is searched, during which time the anarchists take advantage of the excitement and escape in a small boat, and now can be seen in the distance from the ship. A number of the crew volunteer to give chase, and a boat is lowered and the race commences between the two boats. The crew's boat finally succeeds in catching up with the anarchists, and after an exciting combat the anarchists are taken prisoners. On their return to the steamer, they are at pistol's point forced to tell where they have concealed the infernal machine and the time of the explosion. The wireless operator is in an almost exhausted condition after the search, but he fearlessly picks up the bomb and throws it overboard, after which the strain proves too much for him and he sinks to the deck unconscious. He soon recovers, however, and is handsomely rewarded by the prince for his pluckiness.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

HIS IMAGINARY CRIME.—It is a bad game to run when a crisis is at hand, as will be demonstrated by this film. A young chap sees a man forcing his attentions upon a woman, and upon going to her aid becomes involved in some angry words with the man. As a final result, the young fellow picks up a rock, which he throws, and the other man falls to the ground. Fearing he has killed his opponent, and at the girl's suggestion, he runs away. Other people who have come upon the scene start after. He jumps on a freight train and rides some distance; then we see him dragging himself from place to place, becoming hungry, tired, and looking most miserable. He enters a Western town, the marshal of which is talking, and when casually pointing, happens to look at the poor traveler, who darts off. This arouses suspicion, and he is again pursued. He finally is lodged on a ledge of a precipice, from which situation it seems almost impossible to escape. In the meantime a young Western girl starts from her home to shoot game, and comes to the precipice; she sees the young man's dollemma, and saves him with her lariet. Both mount her horse and return to her home, where he is refreshed. In great perturbation, he tells of his supposed crime. The Westerner claps him on the shoulder and goes into the house. When he again comes out he brings with him a paper, which instills new life in our young friend, who finds that he merely bruised the man, and instead of being a fugitive from justice, is really a hero. It is an easy conclusion to guess—a few months later, the Western girl and he are joined in wedlock.

A ROMANCE OF THE PRAIRIE.—Cupid evidently whispered in the ear of Ray's horse that the time to run away had come, for the animal, without warning, starts off, almost pulling Ray out of the wagon. However, her fate, in the shape of a cowboy, sees the runaway, and after a hard ride stops the horse, and volunteers to drive Ray home. Upon reaching the ranch, Ray explains the circumstances to her father, who, in deep gratitude, thanks the cowboy. A few months hence when the father sees them together on the porch, and learns that they love each other, he becomes angry, refuses his consent to a wedding, and takes his daughter into the house. The persistent lover next plans for an elopement, and when Ray consents to the arrangement, he steals up to the ranch with an extra horse for his sweetheart. She makes her escape from her home through the window, and off the yride. The Chinese servant, however, sees them go and informs the father. The irate parent decides to follow after, and rousing his cowboys, all start in pursuit. Meantime Ray and her lover are riding as hard as they can to reach the office of the Justice of Peace. The father, with his followers, is on their trail, the former smileless, the others jovial. Ray and her companion rouse the Justice and are being pronounced man and wife, when the father enters. He is obliged to forgive and bless the couple, who receive hearty cheers from the other boys.

INDEPENDENT M. P. CO.

NEVER AGAIN.—When an anti-drink crusader gets a real, human "jag" on, her sister agitators usually do things about it. Well, that's just exactly what happens here, when the militant Mrs. Henpecker faints in her husband's office because she saw her husband take a drink. While she is unconscious everybody in the place concludes that whiskey ought to revive her, and without the knowledge of the others, the clerks, office boys, stenographer and even a visiting salesman, each administer whiskey. When the doctor arrives, he certainly prescribes the same stuff, and forces a liberal draught down her throat. The result of it all is that when she revives she is well soused; and what can one expect to happen when the members of her church and temperance society see her? It all happens.

ROSE OF THE PHILIPPINES.—The young American lieutenant is deeply in love with the handsome Spanish-Filipino girl, and one day, as he is visiting her in the little bamboo cottage, their love-making is interrupted by the appearance of a corporal who bears a note that tells the young officer to report at headquarters at once, and that the next tansport is to take him home. The girl cannot read but sees that his expression has changed, and asks him why. He cannot tell her, but caressing her fondly, leaves her.

To headquarters he goes, and the commanding officer hands him a letter in which his father says that he has provided for his future at Washington; that he should come home at once and marry the girl to whom he is engaged. The realization of the great bearing this has on his love for the Filipino girl overwhelms him, and he sinks into a chair, dropping the letter to the floor. In this he has not been unobserved, for the girl has been peering in through the lattice, and now, stealthily, she picks up the letter.

Meanwhile, the lieutenant, pacing the room, is suffering untold tortures. Thrice he resolves to leave and thrice he resolves to stay. Finally, as the time for departure draws near, he follows the call of his love and cables home that he will come, but with another bride!

Handing the cable to the corporal, he sets out to tell the dusky beauty the news. And none too soon does he arrive, for, her heart strings torn asunder by the prospects of the bitter disappointment, she is about to end it all with one thrust from the keen blade she holds in her hand. And the Rose is saved for both of them.

A. G. WHYTE.

SECOND ADVENTURE OF BONEHEAD—INITIATED INTO THE ROYAL GAZABOS.—Bruce Lloyd was in the seventh heaven, for not only had he won Clare Sutton's consent to an early marriage, but her father's approval and hearty congratulations. But he had forgotten the ambitious and commanding Mrs. Sutton, who no sooner learned of her daughter's engagement, than she announced that Sir Percival Bonehead had been selected as a docile and more suitable son-in-law.

Fate, however, was for once against the energetic lady, for scarcely had she ordered the rebellious Clare to her room and followed to sing the Earl's praises, than Harry Way and Joe Howard dropped in on their way to the club, where they were preparing for the masquerade. Howard had on his bear's suit, and this gave Sutton and Lloyd an idea—they would send a letter to Sir Percival saying that he must join their lodge, the Royal Gazabos, if he wished to marry Clare—and what they would do to him—well—

The Earl, being determined that nothing should prevent him from winning the Sutton millions, duly arrived to be initiated into their secret order.

Way, with Howard in devil's costume, blindfolded his Lordship, and taking him to the top of the house, quietly dropped him through the chimney, and as he landed in the fireplace below, Sutton and Lloyd, in bears' costumes, pounced upon him and succeeded in tearing off every shred of the Earl's outer garments. In this ridiculous predicament, he managed to dart out of the door, and seeing a blanket on a horse nearby, snatched it and ran panting down the street. The owner of the blanket gave chase. Thus attired, with an officer and a mob at his heels, Sir Percival ran straight into the arms of Mrs. Sutton, who, Clare had seen to it, was ready to appear the moment her father and lover sent word.

One glance at his Lordship and the scandalized lady fainted in the arms of her delighted husband. Clare and Lloyd fled to the minister, and Sir Percival, a sadder, and let us hope, wiser man, was led away by the officer.

MR. MANAGER:

Don't you think that a new firm with a brand new stock of song slides made by the best makers, can give you a better song slide service than you have been getting? A week's supply of brand new illustrated song slides, shipped at one time for one week's service, 50c. per week. We have a number of perfect sets of slides of the great Cherry Mine Disaster which we will sell for $6.00 a set, with printed lectures. Great business getters. (To get you on our mailing list we will sell you for 35c. in stamps the swellest announcement slides that you ever saw, entitled

"GOOD NIGHT"

LINCOLN TRANSPARENCY EXCHANGE

16th Floor, Masonic Temple - - Chicago, Ill.

THE MASTERMARK OF PICTUREDOM

Release Date January 24th Length, 700 Feet Code Word, Daughter

DO YOU ENJOY THE GREAT WESTERN PICTURES MADE BY SELIG?

THE RANCH KING'S DAUGHTER

A typical "Selig" film on a Colossal scale—a lurid type of Western plain life among the Indians.

On This Reel Also

"AN AFTERNOON OFF"

A pleasing comedy.

Length, 300 Feet

TRADE MARK

THE DEVIL SERVANT AND MAN

Just the picture to get your patrons talking—a feature film with an absorbing story.

Length, 970 Feet Release Date January 27th Code Word, Devil

Some Real Ones Coming

"COURTSHIP OF MILES STANDISH"

"WIZARD OF OZ"

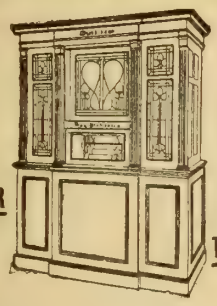
And others

SELIG POLYSCOPE Co. Inc., 45-47-49 Randolph Street, CHICAGO, U. S. A.

THE MASTERMARK OF PICTUREDOM

Wurlitzer

33 YEARS LEADERS IN MUSIC



BETTER MUSIC AT SMALLER COST — FOR ALL MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

Have you investigated the Wurlitzer PianOrchestra?

The leading Nickelodeons are putting in this marvelous Automatic Orchestra. It furnishes better music than a regular orchestra of 5 to 25 pieces, is always "on the job," and cuts out the enormous expense of musicians. The money saved pays rent.

Easy terms, less than paid to musicians. We supply the U. S. Gov't. with musical instruments. Write for big 96-page catalog & testimonial booklet showing Wurlitzer PianOrchestras in leading Nickelodeons.

The RUDOLPH WURLITZER Co

World's Largest Mfrs. Automatic Mus. Insts.

NEW YORK CINCINNATI CHICAGO

25-27 W. 32d 117-121 E. 4th 266-268 Wabash

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a space saver, life saver and money saver. Shipped built up. It is the only sanitary theatre chair. Used by Keith, Proctor and Poli. It folds up automatically and is revolving, making the theatre all aisles. It is a friend to the public.

Send for our circular A. Write today.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO.

CANAL DOVER, OHIO

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows Grand Stands. Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2.

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.

ASHLAND, OHIO

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS

1402 Broadway

FORT WAYNE, INDIANA. 738

INDEPENDENT FILMS

THE ACTOPHONE COMPANY.

Jan. 12—Robert Macaire; or, The Two Vagabonds.

LUX FILMS.

Dec. 29—The Gold Digger's Son.....891
Jan. 5—Drama at Sea (Dr.).....655
Jan. 5—Football Craze (Com.).....331
Jan. 12—Drama at Sea (Dr.).....655
Jan. 12—Football Craze (Com.).....331
Jan. 19—The Refugee (Dr.).....750
Jan. 19—Adventures of a Sandwich Man (C.)...232

FILM IMPORT AND TRADING COMPANY.

Jan. 17—Arthur's Little Love Affair (Com.)...750
Jan. 17-22—Jealousy, a Bad Counsellor (R. & R).500
Jan. 17-22—A Young Girl's Sacrifice (Aquila)..880
Jan. 17-22—The Miners (Comerio).....425
Jan. 17-22—Romeo and Juliet at the Seaside (Meester).....500
Jan. 17-22—Mammy's Boy Joins the Army (Cines).....490
Jan. 17-22—Muggins (Cricks & Martin).....650
Jan. 17-22—The Freebooter's Captive (Eclair)..970

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY.

Dec. 18—The Butcher's Bill.....230
Dec. 18—In Southern Sweden.....292
Dec. 25—An Outcast's Christmas.....495
Dec. 25—Father Busy Papering.....360
Jan. 8—Child as Benefactor.....950
Jan. 15—Death of the Brigand Chief.....690
Jan. 15—Naughty Boys.....289
Jan. 22—Anarchists on Board (Dr.).....
Jan. 29—A Woman's Destiny (Dr.).....740
Jan. 29—The Foxy Soldiers (Com.).....235

"IMP."
INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES COMPANY OF AMERICA.

Oct. 25—Hiawatha 988
Nov. 1—Love's Stratagem.....954
Nov. 8—Destiny 864
Nov. 15—Forest Ranger's Daughter.....700
Nov. 15—Brave (?) Policeman.....300
Nov. 22—Levitsky Sees Parade.....704
Nov. 22—Honor Among Thieves.....296
Nov. 29—Her Generous Way 970
Dec. 6—His Last Game 941
Dec. 13—The Two Sons 955
Dec. 20—Lest We Forget.....916
Dec. 27—The Awakening of Bess.....985
Jan. 3—The Winning Punch.....957
Jan. 10—Right of Love.....975
Jan. 17—The Tide of Fortune.....975
Jan. 24—Never Again (Com.).....615
Jan. 24—A Rose of the Philippines (Dr.).....985

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

Nov. 26—Dooley's Thanksgiving Turkey (Com.).400
Dec. 3—The Message of an Arrow.....1000
Dec. 10—Reunited at the Gallows (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 17—The Love of a Savage (Dr.).....990
Dec. 24—An Italian Love Story (Dr.).....900
Dec. 31—The Red Cross Heroine.....1000
Jan. 7—Red Girl's Romance (Dr.).....990
Jan. 11—A Redman's Devotion (Bison).....950
Jan. 12—An Episode of Napoleon's War with Spain (Itala).....775
Jan. 14—A Forester's Sweetheart (Bison).....950
Jan. 15—The Son of the Wilderness (Ambrosio).925
Jan. 18—A Cowboy's Reward (Dr.).....
Jan. 19—Paull (Ambrosio) .....
Jan. 21—Romany Rob's Revenge (Dr.).....
Jan. 22—There Are Some Ghosts (Itala).....
Jan. 22—The Tempting Collar (Itala).....
Jan. 25—A Romance of the Prairie (Bison)....950
Jan. 28—His Imaginary Crime (Bison).....950
Jan. 26—The Last Keepsake (Ambrosio).....
Jan. 26—A Choice Policeman (Ambrosio).....
Jan. 29—The Timid One (Itala).....
Jan. 29—A Good Winning (Itala).....

THE POWERS COMPANY.
(Columbia Film.)

Nov. 2—Change of Complexion.....95●
Nov. 9—All for the Love of a Girl.....95●
Nov. 16—The Gypsy's Regret.....925
Nov. 23—A Red Man's Love.....83●
Nov. 30—Pressing Business .....85●
Dec. 7—A Run for the Money.....95●
Dec. 14—Manhood's Reward.....950
Dec. 21—Reunited by Santa Claus.....950
Dec. 28—Excelsior (Comedy) 950
Jan. 4—A Frozen Ape.....950
Jan. 18—The Little Heroine.....975

PHOENIX FILM CO.

Dec. 9—Bad Case of Grip (Com.).....750
Dec. 9—July 4th, 1910 (Com.).....250
Dec. 16—Her Mother's Mistake (Dr.).....850
Jan. 6—Convicted by His Own Child (1).....1000
Jan. 13—Convicted by His Own Child (2).....1000

EXCLUSIVE FILM COMPANY.

Dec. 30—A Romance of the South.....875

Classified Advertising.

Classified advertising, no display, three cents per word, cash with order. Postage stamps accepted for small amounts.

MERCHANDISE.

WILL BUY latest style machine and calcium light. Must be in good order for reasonable price. Will also buy theater in good location in New York or in the New England States. Address, Box 239, Unionville, Conn.

FOR SALE.—1,000 ft. reels film released to Jan. 1, $5 and $10 per reel. Edison, Lubin, Power's machines, $40 to $60; new, $100; Model B. gas outfit, $25; 3,000 ft. Pathe hand colored Passion Play, $100; double dissolving stereopticon, new, $40. For Rent.—6,000 ft. film, $10; 9,000 ft., $12, one shipment. H. DAVIS, Watertown, Wis.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED.—Lady pianist who can sing, for traveling show. Box 239, Unionville, Conn.

M. P. PHOTOGRAPHER WANTED by substantial producing company to take full charge of dark room and camera equipment. Salary and interest in business to man of genuine ability. Address, with references, "OPPORTUNITY," care Moving Picture World.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

AT LIBERTY.—Licensed operator and wife A-1 pianist. Both experienced and best references. G. L. PALMER, Box 307, Sidney, N. Y.

SITUATION WANTED.—Moving picture operator desires position; has had three years' road experience. Address H. McKING, Mills Hotel, Bleecker St., N. Y. City.

OPERATOR with new Power's No. 5 wants work; free trial; salary moderate. "POWERS," care Moving Picture World.

AN EXPERT FILM HANDLER, experienced in all departments, with A-1 references, wants position as manager or assistant. Address A. B. C.,

MANAGER—At liberty after January 18. Thoroughly experienced in vaudeville and pictures, booking, etc. Good executive ability. Strict disciplinarian. Good correspondent. Capable of directing one or more theaters. A1 press and general advertising. Sober and reliable. Baritone singer, actor and producer. Best of references. Salary and commission. Responsible parties only. C. W. LAWFORD, Gen. Man., Earl Morgan Circuit, Grand Theater, Latrobe, Pa.

THEATERS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE.—Moving picture and vaudeville theater; good location; seating four hundred. City of seventy thousand. Reason for selling, other business. Address, J. G., Moving Picture World.

Neosho Song Slides

$3.50 the set

These NEW ones are ready for immediate delivery:

Darling Make Me Dreamy
Name the Day, Honey, Do
Sue
Only a Dream of You
Mary Brown
Give Me a Spin in Your Mitchell, Bill

Write for our special standing order proposition

The Neosho Slide Company

100 S. Wood St., Neosho, Mo.

LICENSED FILMS.

BIOGRAPH COMPANY.

		Feet
Dec.	9—The Redman's View (Dr.)	971
Dec.	13—A Corner in Wheat (Dr.)	953
Dec.	16—In a Hempen Bag (Dr.)	455
Dec.	16—The Test (Com.)	545
Dec.	20—A Trap for Santa Claus (Dr.)	989
Dec.	23—In Little Italy (Dr.)	956
Dec.	27—To Save Her Soul (Dr.)	986
Dec.	30—The Day After (Com.)	460
Dec.	30—Choosing a Husband (Com.)	531
Jan.	3—The Rocky Road (Dr.)	990
Jan.	6—The Dancing Girl of Butte (Dr.)	984
Jan.	10—Her Terrible Ordeal (Dr.)	952
Jan.	13—All on Account of the Milk (Dr.)	989
Jan.	17—On the Reef (Dr.)	988
Jan.	20—The Call (Dr.)	989
Jan.	24—The Honor of His Family (Dr.)	988
Jan.	27—The Last Deal (Dr.)	991

EDISON MFG. CO.

Dec.	17—A Gift from Santa Claus (Dr.)	920
Dec.	21—A Happy Accident (Christmas Story)	450
Dec.	21—The Mischievous Elf (Com.)	540
Dec.	24—Faust (Grand Opera)	1000
Dec.	28—Tobacco Mania (Com.)	360
Dec.	28—The Fallen Idol (Com.)	330
Dec.	28—The Cap of Fortune (Com.)	290
Dec.	31—Fishing Industry at Gloucester, Mass. (Industrial)	975
Jan.	4—Pardners (Dr.)	995
Jan.	7—The Engineer's Romance (Dr.)	670
Jan.	7—Ashes (Sentimental)	310
Jan.	11—Bear Hunt in the Rockies (Descrip.)	975
Jan.	14—A Warrior Bold (Com.)	475
Jan.	14—The Parson's Umbrella (Com.)	220
Jan.	14—Troop "B," 15th U. S. Cavalry, Bareback Monkey Drill (Descriptive)	285
Jan.	18—In the Nick of Time (Dr.)	975
Jan.	21—The Coquette (Dr.)	495
Jan.	21—The Luck of Roaring Camp (Dr.)	490
Jan.	25—A Woman's Strategy (Dr.)	975
Jan.	28—A Georgia Possum Hunt (Des.)	140
Jan.	28—The Skipper's Yarn (Dr.)	850
Feb.	1—The Japanese Peach Boy (Fairy Story)	940
Feb.	4—His Just Deserts (Dr.)	350
Feb.	4—The Surprise Party (Com.)	330
Feb.	4—The Bad Man from Riley's Gulch (Com.)	315

ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.

Jan.	1—A Western Maid (Dr.)	785
Jan.	1—Why He Did Not Win Out (Comedy)	213
Jan.	5—The Adventuress (Dr.)	525
Jan.	5—How Hubby Made Good (Com.)	473
Jan.	8—His Only Child (Dr.)	997
Jan.	12—Electric Insoles (Com.)	502
Jan.	12—The Old Maid and the Burglar (Com.)	498
Jan.	15—Review of U. S. Troops, Fort Leavenworth (Scenic)	1000
Jan.	19—Won by a Holdup (Com.)	629
Jan.	19—Flower Parade at Pasadena, Cal.	292
Jan.	22—The Confession (Dr.)	960
Jan.	26—The Modern Messenger Boy (Com.)	945
Jan.	29—An Outlaw's Sacrifice (Dr.)	996
Feb.	2—The Wrong Man (Com.)	554
Feb.	2—A Voice from the Fireplace (Dr.)	486
Feb.	5—Sensational Logging (Scenic)	1000

GAUMONT.

(George Kleine.)

Dec.	14—Nothing Is Ever Lost (Com.)	495
Dec.	14—The Life Buoy (Dr.)	446
Dec.	18—The Shepherd's Flute (Dr.)	528
Dec.	18—Cambyses, King of Persia (Dr.)	486
Dec.	21—The Stranger (Dr.)	935
Dec.	25—The Greek Slave's Passion (Dr.)	967
Dec.	28—A Clever Sleuth (Com.)	623
Dec.	28—Hush Money (Dr.)	361
Jan.	1—The Legion of Honor (Dr.)	1009
Jan.	4—The Wreck at Sea (Dr.)	626
Jan.	4—The Avenging Dentist (Com.)	319
Jan.	8—On the Bank of the River (Dr.)	604
Jan.	8—A Seat in the Balcony (Com.)	371
Jan.	11—Shooting in the Haunted Woods (Com.)	570
Jan.	11—Towser's New Job (Com.)	393
Jan.	15—Decorated by the Emperor (Dr.)	698
Jan.	15—Railway on the Ice Sea (Scenic)	312
Jan.	18—Fatal Fascination (Dr.)	580
Jan.	18—Getting Square with the Inventor (C.)	393
Jan.	22—Swallowed by the Deep (Dr.)	977
Jan.	25—The Price of Patriotism (Dr.)	574
Jan.	25—Sea Side Adventures at Home (Com.)	371
Jan.	29—The Great Divide (Dr.)	741
Jan.	29—Wild Waves at St. Jean de Lux (Scenic)	243

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

(George Kleine.)

		Feet
Dec.	8—Capturing the North Pole (Dr.)	381
Dec.	15—The Red Signal (Dr.)	355
Dec.	22—Fiorella, the Bandit's Daughter (Dr.)	741
Dec.	22—From the Fighting Top of a Battleship in Action (Scenic)	263
Dec.	29—Battle in the Clouds (Scenic)	658
Dec.	29—Battle in the Clouds (Dr.)	658
Dec.	29—The Park of Caserta (Scenic)	201
Jan.	5—Tragedy at the Mill (Dr.)	612
Jan.	5—Shanghai of To-day (Scenic)	351
Jan.	12—True to His Oath (Dr.)	672
Jan.	12—Home of the Gypsies (Scenic)	321
Jan.	19—The Coast Guard (Dr.)	747
Jan.	19—Riva, Austria, and the Lake of Garda (Scenic)	204
Jan.	26—Tommy in Dreamland (Com.)	491
Jan.	26—The Lass Who Loved a Sailor (Dr.)	417

KALEM CO.

Nov.	19—Pale Face's Wooing (Dr.)	930
Nov.	26—The Governor's Daughter (Dr.)	955
Dec.	3—The Geisha Who Saved Japan (Dr.)	955
Dec.	10—The Rally Round the Flag (Dr.)	955
Dec.	17—The Law of the Mountain (Dr.)	875
Dec.	24—The Cardboard Baby (Fairy Story)	855
Dec.	31—A Slave to Drink (Dr.)	950
Jan.	7—The Deacon's Daughter (Dr.)	950
Jan.	14—The Romance of a Trained Nurse (Dr.)
Jan.	21—The Magic Flower (Fairy Tale)
Jan.	28—The Man Who Lost (Dr.)	930

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Dec.	6—He Wanted a Baby (Com.)	460
Dec.	9—If Love Be True (Dr.)	950
Dec.	13—When Courage Fled (Com.)	250
Dec.	13—Jinks, the Grouch (Com.)	700
Dec.	16—Romance of the Rocky Coast (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	18—Two Christmas Tides (Dr.)	952
Dec.	20—The Policeman's Christmas Eve (Dr.)	440
Dec.	20—Three Christmas Dinners (Comedy)	495
Dec.	23—Blissville the Beautiful (Comedy)	830
Dec.	27—The New Chief (Comedy)	495
Dec.	27—The Persistent Poet (Comedy)	525
Dec.	30—Three-Fingere Jack (Dramatic)	940
Jan.	3—Their Chaperoned Honeymoon (Com.)	816
Jan.	6—The Tattooed Arm (Dr.)	860
Jan.	10—Over the Wire (Dr.)	900
Jan.	13—Wild Duck Hunting on Historic Reel Foot Lake (Scenic)	550
Jan.	13—He Joined the Frat (Com.)	300
Jan.	17—He Got Rid of the Moths (Com.)	540
Jan.	17—A Slippery Day (Com.)	320
Jan.	20—The Usurper (Dr.)	905
Jan.	24—Cupid, D.D.S. (Com.)	356
Jan.	24—Adoring an Ad. (Dr.)	515
Jan.	27—Marble Quarrying in Tennessee (Industrial)	441
Jan.	27—The Flirto-Maniac (Com.)	426

PATHE FRERES.

Dec.	13—Repairing the House (Farce)	413
Dec.	15—The Ugly Girl (Dr.)	620
Dec.	15—Punch and Judy (Juvenile)	364
Dec.	17—The Lucky Number (Com.)	538
Dec.	17—The Strong Tonic (Com.)	433
Dec.	18—Hector, the Angel Child (Com.)	620
Dec.	18—Honey Industry (Industrial)	331
Dec.	20—The Death of the Duke D'Enghien (Dr.)	951
Dec.	22—Contest for a Handkerchief (Com.)	459
Dec.	22—The Love Token (Dramatic)	515
Dec.	24—The Birth of Jesus (Biblical)	525
Dec.	24—Agriculture in Hungary (Ind.)	826
Dec.	25—The Good Doctor (Com.)	590
Dec.	25—The Happy Widower (Com.)	384
Dec.	27—Bad Bargain (Com.)	630
Dec.	27—Marvelous Garlands (Scenic)	295
Dec.	29—Oh, You Doggie (Com.)	187
Dec.	29—A Well Earned Medal (Dr.)	728
Dec.	31—A Live Corpse (Com.)	610
Dec.	31—Corsican Hospitality (Dr.)	390
Jan.	1—Tabby's Finish (Dr.)	426
Jan.	1—Trials of a Schoolmaster (Dr.)	528
Jan.	3—The Marriage of the Cook (Com.)	502
Jan.	3—A Victim of Circumstances (Dr.)	459
Jan.	5—The King's Command (Com.)	561
Jan.	5—The Overzealous Domestic (Farce)	410
Jan.	7—Modern Highwayman (Dr.)	600
Jan.	7—An English Boxing Bout (Sports)	298
Jan.	8—The Last Look (Dr.)	587
Jan.	8—His Opponent's Card (Com.)	367
Jan.	10—Miss Moneybags Wishes to Wed (Com.)	581
Jan.	10—Women in India (Educational)	377
Jan.	12—Camille (Dr.)	1033
Jan.	14—The Beggar's Repentance (Dr.)	692
Jan.	14—Story of a Leg (Com.)	285
Jan.	15—On a Racket (Com.)	600
Jan.	15—A Stag Hunt in Java (Scenic)	367
Jan.	17—Testing Their Love (Com.)	561
Jan.	17—A Visit to Bombay, Col. (Scenic)	544
Jan.	19—The Bareback Rider (Dr.)	735
Jan.	19—An Aerial Acrobat (Scenic)	226
Jan.	21—The Painter's Sweetheart (Dr.)	525
Jan.	21—Fickle Fortune (Com.)	420
Jan.	22—Count Tolstoi (Personalities)	213
Jan.	22—A Russian Heroine (Dr.)	761
Jan.	24—Acrobatic Exercises by the Colibris Dwarfs (Acrobatic)	574
Jan.	24—The Unlucky Fisherman (Com.)	358
Jan.	26—Motherless (Dr.)	1046
Jan.	28—The Leather Industry (Industrial)	394
Jan.	28—The Scarecrow (Com.)	574
Jan.	29—Cousin Lan for Mine (Com.)	564
Jan.	29—The Strong Man (Farce)	449

SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.

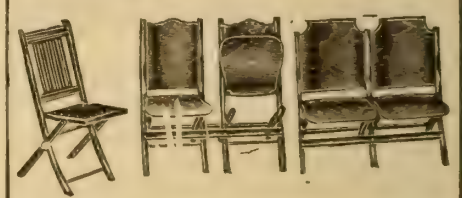
Dec.	23—The Christian Martyrs (Dr.)	950
Dec.	27—Buried Alive (Dramatic)	1000
Dec.	30—A Daughter of the Sioux (Dr.)	985
Jan.	3—The Smuggler's Game (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	6—The Highlanders' Defiance (Dr.)	625
Jan.	6—Alderman Krantz's Picnic (Com.)	370
Jan.	10—A Tale of the Woods (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	13—Under the Stars and Stripes (Dr.)	500
Jan.	17—A New Divorce Cure (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	20—The Courtship of Miles Standish (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	24—The Ranch King's Daughter (Dr.)	700
Jan.	24—An Afternoon Off (Com.)	300
Jan.	27—The Devil, the Servant and the Man (Dr.)	950
Jan.	31—Shooting an Oil Well (Industrial)	715
Jan.	31—Our German Cousin (Com.)	285
Feb.	3—Politics (Dr.)	1000

VITAGRAPH COMPANY.

Nov.	27—Jean Valjean (Dr.)	990
Nov.	30—The Bridegroom's Joke (Com.)	690
Nov.	30—Dirigible Balloons at St. Louis (Scen.)	275
Dec.	4—The Life of Moses (Dr.)	981
Dec.	7—A Lesson in Domestic Economy (C.)	684
Dec.	7—A Day with Our Soldier Boys (Sc.)	302
Dec.	11—Gambling with Death (Dr.)	933
Dec.	14—The Professor and the Thomas Cats (C.)	405
Dec.	14—A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year (Dr.)	586
Dec.	18—Two Christmas Tides (Dr.)	952
Dec.	21—The Forgotten Watch (Comedy)	413
Dec.	21—The Cook Makes Madeira Sauce (C.)	561
Dec.	25—A Midsummer Night's Dream (Dr.)	991
Dec.	28—The Power of the Press (Dr.)	997
Jan.	1—Cupid and the Motor Boat (Dr.)	946
Jan.	4—The Life of Moses (Biblical)	868
Jan.	8—Richelieu, or the Conspiracy (Dr.)	992
Jan.	11—Call Boy's Vengeance (Com.)	320
Jan.	11—The Old Maid's Valentine (Com.)
Jan.	15—A Sister's Sacrifice (Dr.)	970
Jan.	18—The Toymaker's Secret (Dr.)	969
Jan.	22—A Pair of Schemers (Com.)	743
Jan.	22—Five Minutes to Twelve (Com.)	162
Jan.	25—The Life of Moses, Part 3 (Dr.)	976
Jan.	29—The Girl and the Judge (Dr.)	989

The "A B C OF MOTION PICTURES" just out. What, when, why, where, how. Everything pertaining to the biggest money-making business out. How to run machines, equip theaters, build stage, install lighting, make rheostats, paint banners and signs, make slides for 3 cents each, what to charge, how to handle help, details of phonographic instruction, where to get film cheapest, how to save on supplies. 5,000 facts, pointers and suggestions which will save anyone going into the business $500.00 at the lowest calculation. Postpaid for a dollar. GARRETT SWIFT, 238 20th Ave., North, Minneapolis, Minn.

Folding and Assembly Chairs



Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use

Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue

PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.

NORTH MANCHESTER, - - - INDIANA

Open Twenty Four Hours Every Day—Write, Call, Wire or Phone Any Hour, Day or Night

ELECTRIC THEATRE SUPPLY CO., Inc. The Home of Good Film Service The Birthplace of Original Ideas

We handle everything needed by Moving Picture Exhibitors 44 N. Tenth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

We have every subject issued by the Licensed Manufacturers

MOTIOGRAPH, PATHE FRERES, POWER'S, EDISON and LUBIN MACHINES and PARTS ALWAYS ON HAND

Write for our new proposition:—Supplying two customers in the same town each with twelve reels a week, keeping each one's supply away from the other, and no repeaters to either.

·Essanay Films·

Trade Mark Trade Mark

RELEASE OF WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 26th

The Messenger Boy

A Full Reel Comedy of the "Essanay Kind."

Length, approx. 950 Feet.

See full description in Stories of the Films.

Scene from "An Outlaw's Sacrifice"

RELEASE OF SATURDAY, JANUARY 29th

An Outlaw's Sacrifice

One of the Best of our Western Pictures. Order Quick!

Lenght, Approx. 996 Feet.

See full description in Stories of the Films.

ESSANAY COMEDIES

"You don't know good comedy until you see an Essanay." There's a laugh in every foot.

ESSANAY WESTERN

Still in the lead in Western subjects! Photographically great, beautifully picturesque. Everybody wants them!

Big Feature! SENSATIONAL LOGGING Coming Soon!

A great industrial picture bound to create a great wave of excitement in the film world when it is released on Saturday, Feburary 5th. One of the most spectacular films ever released. Don't let it get by you!

Essanay Film M'f'g., Co.

FACTORY and STUDIOS 1333 ARGYLE ST. - OFFICE 435 NORTH CLARK ST.
CHICAGO and LONDON, 5 NEW COMPTON ST. W.C.

GREAT NORTHERN

QUALITY FILMS

NEXT RELEASE
Saturday, January 22nd

ANARCHISTS ON BOARD

OR

The Thrilling Episode on the S. S. "Slavonia"

Full Reel Feature Production of Special Interest

Lithographs and Posters Free

Released Saturday, January, 29th

A WOMAN'S DESTINY

Dramatic Feature—Length about 740 Feet

THE FOXY SOLDIERS

OR

How Schmidt Got to the Masquerade

Comedy—Length about 235 Feet

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO. 7 E. 14th STREET NEW YORK

FILMS FOR RENT

NEW FILMS—HIGH CLASS SERVICE

The Pioneer House, With 8 Years Experience
And $250,000.00 Back Of It

Write To-day For Terms

EUGENE CLINE

57 and 59 Dearborn Street, Chicago

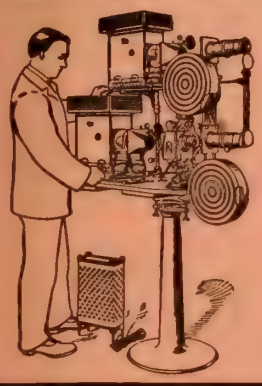
Vol. 6., No. 5. February 5, 1910 Price, 10 Cents

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

ALL THE FILM AND SONG SLIDE NEWS

TH WHICH IS INCORPO... THE EXHIBIT

Published Weekly by THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING CO., 125 E. 23d ST., NEW YORK



The Motiograph Motion Picture Machine is A Wonder

AND WILL INCREASE YOUR BUSINESS

It projects Flickerless, Steady and Wonderfully Brilliant pictures, has Patented 1½ minute Rewind from main crank, revolving Magazines, Automatic Fireproof shutter, etc., not found in other Machines.—WILL WEAR TWICE AS LONG.

C. H. D. of Keokuk, Iowa, writes: Motiograph Making a Big Hit and Business increased wonderfully.

F. L. F. of Chicago, Ill., writes: "Used every day for seven months, and not one penny for repairs."

F. J. K. of Kansas City, writes: "Operating Motiograph nearly two years. Have operated all makes, but none to compare with Motiograph.—PRICES, $150.00 AND UP

The Enterprise Calcium Gas Outfit is the only satisfactory substitute for electric light Write for Catalog to-day

Western Representatives { S. Lubin Geo. Melies FILM

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564-572 West Randolph Street, Chicago

Calcium Gas Outfit

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

143 North 8th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Best and Newest Independent American and Foreign Films

SUPPLIES——18 REELS PER WEEK——SUPPLIES

PROMPT AND RELIABLE SERVICE

Members N. I. M. P. Alliance

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

THE PERFECTED

Power's Cameragraph No. 6

will be on exhibition in Room No. 423 Imperial Hotel, Broadway and 32nd Street, New York, January 28th, 29th and 30th, during the Convention of the Film Service Association. We cordially invite all Exchanges, Exhibitors and Operators to call and inspect this model, deliveries of which will begin February 15th, 1910.

Manufactured by

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115-117 Nassau Street, New York

Imperial Film Exchange

Having built up a large business by giving the closest attention to the wants of all customers, the various offices of the Imperial Film Exchange offer every advantage to the prospective exhibitor.

Our Motto: A square deal to everyone. Our experience in all lines of the moving picture industry, since its infancy, is at your service. If you contemplate opening a theatre, it will be to your advantage to consult us.

Our offices are never closed. You will always find someone in charge, ready to serve you or give you reliable information on any point.

Write, phone, or, better still, call at any of the following offices

If you want to know about ASBESTOS BOOTHS call on us

We carry a full line of A. B. C. Posters

WILLIAM F. STEINER, President
LON VAIL, Representative

TROY: 239 River Street
LEE LANGDON, Manager
FRANK NOELES PAUL PAGE
Representatives

NEW YORK CITY
44 West 28th Street
TELEPHONE CALLS
NEW YORK: 2095 Madison Sq.
TROY: 184 Hudson River
WASHINGTON: 2181 Main

WILLIAM DEVERY, Sec-Treas.
J. S. LEVIN, Representative

WASHINGTON, D. C.
439 Ninth Street, N. W.
TOM MOORE, Manager

Write AT ONCE for our
FREE ILLUSTRATED CATALOGS

NOVELTY Puzzlettes
Announcement Slides
Song Slide Service

Satisfaction Guaranteed or Money Cheerfully Refunded

NOVELTY SLIDE COMPANY
221 East 53d Street 10 East 14th Street
NEW YORK CITY

Dame Partington Up-to-Date

It is to laugh! There is just about as much chance of stopping the Independent movement with bluffs as old Dame Partington had when she tried to sweep back the sea with a broom! Exhibitors all over the map are awakening hourly to the fact that Independent films are money-bringers. They are almost hysterically enthusiastic in their praise of my films and my service. I am in a better position than anybody in America to feel the public film pulse, and I tell you, sir, it is beating a tune of Independent victory! Independent films not only stand on their merits, but they carry no "ten per cent." penalty and no $2.00 a week tribute. Try them! And if you don't like them, quit them. Find out what's going on!

CARL LAEMMLE, President
THE LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE
Headquarters
196-198 Lake Street : : Chicago
Minneapolis, Portland, Omaha, Salt Lake City, Evansville
(Canadian Office in Montreal)

"The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World"

GOOD SCENERY CHEAP

For M. P. or Opera Houses, Any Size, Any Kind, Any Design

We have Equipped More Picture Houses with Vaudeville Scenery than All Others Combined

OUR PRICES TELL WHY

SET No 1—Drop curtain, 8x10 ft., any design.
4 Wings to match, 3x8 ft.
2 Borders, 2x12 ft. (1 Fancy Teaser.—1 to match Set.) $40.00
SET No 2—Drop curtain, 10x12 ft., any design.
4 Wings, 3x10 ft.
2 Borders, 2x14 ft. (1 Fancy Teaser.—1 to match Set.) 50.00
SET No. 3—Drop curtain, 12x14 ft., any design.
4 Wings, 3 ft. 4 in. x12 ft.
3 Borders, 2 ft. 4 in. x16 ft. (1 Fancy Teaser.—2 to match Set.) 60.00
SET No. 4—Drop curtain, 14x16 ft , any design.
4 Wings, 3 ft. 6 in. x14 ft.
3 Borders, 3x18 ft. (1 Fancy Teaser.—2 to match Set.) 75.00
SET No. 5—Drop curtain, 15x18 ft , any design.
4 Wings, 4x15.
3 Borders, 3 ft. 6 in. x18 ft. (1 Fancy Teaser.—2 to match Set.) 90.00

If Tormentos desired, add for 2. 10.00
If Rolling Pole, with Pulleys and Ropes desired, rigged and ready with instructions to hang, add 5.00

WE ALSO MAKE DOUBLE SIDE SCENERY CHEAP

When writing, mention width of stage opening, height from stage to ceiling, depth of stage and whether mountain, rural, horizon, street, woods, parlor, kitchen, palace, garden, rustic, prison, hotel, or other scene preferred.

Diamond Dye Scenery for Road Shows, the Money Saver

Expert Scenic Artists Sent to Your Theatre if Desired
(Southern Territory Only)

CUT THIS AD. OUT, IT MAY NOT APPEAR AT PRICES AGAIN

TERMS: ⅓ Cash, balance C. O. D. by express, allowing inspection

DIXIE SCENIC WORKS
140 St. Charles Street - New Orleans

ELECTRA

Pink ELECTRA Label

·TRADE MARK·

CARBONS

Superior to all other Carbons on the market

WHY experiment with other Carbons, when the HIGHEST GRADE ELECTRA CARBONS can be had at reasonable prices from the

SOLE IMPORTER

HUGO REISINGER
11 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

SCENERY FREE

... For Moving ... Picture Theatres

For FULL INFORMATION, HOW TO GET FREE SCENERY—a complete set front TORMENTOS, FANCY DRAPERY and one or two LEG DROPS, according to depth of your stage, and Back Drop representing a GARDEN SCENE, with BRICK WALL, showing spaces for ADVERTISEMENTS of LOCAL STORES near your PICTURE THEATRE. Write at once. COPY THE FOLLOWING FORM and mail it to us.

	Feet	Feet
Inside Measurements of your Picture Frame,	.....	x.....
Size of your Picture Sheet,	.....	x.....
Distance from Picture Frame to Back Wall	.....	x.....
Distance from Side Wall to Side Wall, Back of Frame,	.....	x.....
Height from Stage Floor to Ceiling,	.....	x .....

TURNER COMPANY

Scenic and Theatric Studio

552 7th Avenue New York

M. P. MEN.—You have to put on Vaudeville Acts or lose money

If You Show Poor Films

Your theatre will be lonesome. But for "A Full House" and lots of company You must get on our Service ::

The Pittsburg Calcium Light & Film Company

Pittsburg, Pa. Des Moines, Ia. Rochester, N. Y.

Wilkes Barre, Pa. Cincinnati, Ohio.

Omaha, Neb.

RELEASE DAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1910

His Daughter's Legacy

A DRAMA

This story is wonderfully told by superb acting, artistic scenic effects, and unsurpassable photography

SENSATIONAL

Yet Clean and Wholesome

BEAUTIFULLY TINTED

WIRE ORDERS AT OUR EXPENSE

Approx. Length, 980 feet Code "Daughter"

PANTOGRAPH CORPORATION

1402 Broadway, New York City

Exhibitors: Send us your name and address

IMP

(Released Feb. 7th)

Justice in the Far North

If this story had come from the pen of Jack London it could not be more gripping in its intensity, more powerful or thrilling. Mark my word, this film will long be remembered as one of the classics of moving pictures. Remember the release date. Remember the title!

NOTICE TO EXCHANGES

If you say the word, we will be glad to send your reels several days in advance of release dates so you can give private exhibitions to exhibitors whom you are trying to win over to the Independent cause. You'll find this will work like a charm and that "Imp" films will convince the Doubting Thomas every blessed time. Just say the word!

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America
111 East 14th Street, New York
Carl Laemmle, Pres.

BISON FILMS

TRADE MARK

Regular Release Days—Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday, Saturday

FOUR REELS A WEEK—Tuesday, a "Bison"—Wednesday, Ambrosio—Friday, a "Bison"—Saturday, Itala

A BIG FEATURE COMING

YOUNG DEER'S GRATITUDE

RELEASE OF FEBRUARY 11th

Never in the history of the motion picture business has there been a finer subject produced than the one above mentioned. Considerable time and money has been spent in bringing about this film; and we assure our patrons as well as others that this particular film is a masterpiece, far surpassing any of our former releases to date. A typical Western picture, acted by the original "Bison Stock Company."

Tue. Feb. 1st—A "BISON"

THE FEMALE BANDIT

Code Dusk

Fri. Feb. 4th—A "Bison"

BY HIS OWN HANDS

Code Duty

Wed. Feb. 2nd—"Ambrosio"

HERO AND LEANDER

Code Dwell

Sat. Feb. 5th—"ITALA"

LOVE AND TREASON

Code Due

LITHOGRAPHS AND POSTERS FREE

Exhibitors:—We furnish as usual all exchanges handling these productions with one sheet four colored lithographs, also posters containing synopsis, absolutely free with each reel. Demand same from your exchange as they will positively increase your box office receipts.
Brief description of all subjects will be found on another page.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

Manufacturers of "Bison" Life Motion Pictures

429 SIXTH AVENUE, Cor. 26th Street - NEW YORK CITY

Phone 6690-1 Madison Sq. Cable Address: Nosib

VITAGRAPH FILMS

THE FILMS OF "QUALITY"

Tuesday, February 1

CAUGHT IN HIS OWN TRAP

A Clever Comedy Based on a Novel Idea—Papa catches two lovers spooning, by seeing them in a mirror which he arranges for the purpose. They turn the tables on him when he kisses the maid. Approximate length, 503 feet.

THE SKELETON

Fast and Furious Fun—in which a skeleton furnishes the chief reason. Approximate length, 440 feet.

Saturday, February 5—Magnificent Production of

TWELFTH NIGHT

Adapted from Sheakespeare's Comedy—One of the greatest classical play adaptations ever produced by this Company, famous for its motion pictures of this class. Approximate length, 970 feet.

THREE REELS PER WEEK—Tuesdays, Fridays, Saturdays

In response to numerous requests from exhibitors everywhere, the regular Vitagraph releases will be increased to THREE REELS PER WEEK, commencing the WEEK OF FEBRUARY 14, the new release days being TUESDAYS, FRIDAYS and SATURDAYS.

The Two Concluding Reels of THE LIFE OF MOSES will be issued as follows: PART IV., "The Victory of Israel," Feb. 12. PART V., "The Promised Land," Feb. 22. Exhibitors will thus have the opportunity of showing all five reels before the end of Lent. Make your arrangements now with your exchange.

USE VITAGRAPH POSTERS. ORDER FROM YOUR EXCHANGE.

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA { NEW YORK, 116 Nassau St. CHICAGO, 109 Randolph St. LONDON, 25 Cecil Court PARIS, 15, Rue Sainte-Cecile

Film EXCHANGES!!

Exchange Your Old Films

for film you did not buy and that your customers have not had but would like to.

You can't afford to buy all the film that is made, but you can afford to spend three dollars to have a reel that all your customers have seen exchanged for one they have not seen.

Figure it out yourself, you can reduce your purchases and still supply your trade at the same price and guarantee no repeaters.

Send me list of the reels you did not buy, together with a list of film on hand that you will exchange, being sure to mention maker's name and makes you would like to exchange them for, giving the length.

This is your golden opportunity to save one-half of your present film expense.

Why spend all of your hard-earned money for film, when you can exchange the film now lying idle on your shelves for ones you did not buy.

Write quick, sending lists to Exchange Film Trading Co.

10 EAST 15th STREET - - - - NEW YORK

THE TWO LEADERS OF 1910

CALEHUFF'S Day and Night SERVICE

AND

EDISON'S LATEST IMPROVED MODEL B KINETOSCOPE

I know, you know, and every other wise exhibitor will learn that to give the Best Show and get the most money he must use this combination to beat his opposition

IF YOU ARE DISSATISFIED WITH YOUR PRESENT SERVICE

Write, Wire, 'Phone, Ride or Walk to 4th and Green Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.

BUYING

42 Prints of Licensed Films

Sole State Rights for Pennsylvania of JOHNSON-KETCHELL FIGHT supplying 5 Exhibitors out of 6 in a small City of 10,000 Can you beat it?

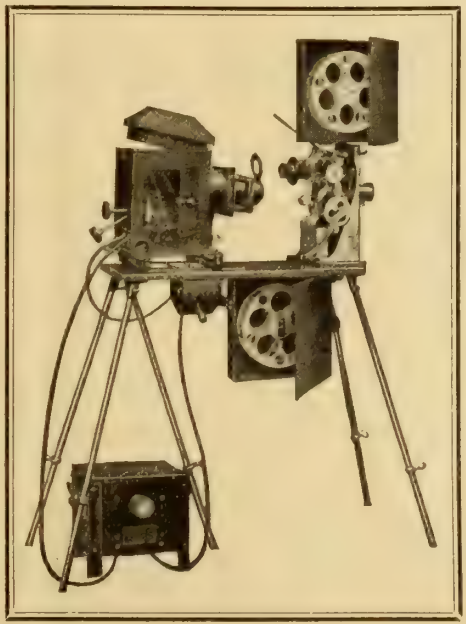
But get in touch with a Live Exchange that is not only up-to-time but a minute ahead of it.

NEW IDEAS
NEW METHODS
NEW SERVICE

To delay is to lose money—be wise and consult

CHAS. A. CALEHUFF

Edison Jobber in Kinetoscopes



ON THE SIDE

Expert Machinists to fix your machines. Supply House for all Accessories for same.

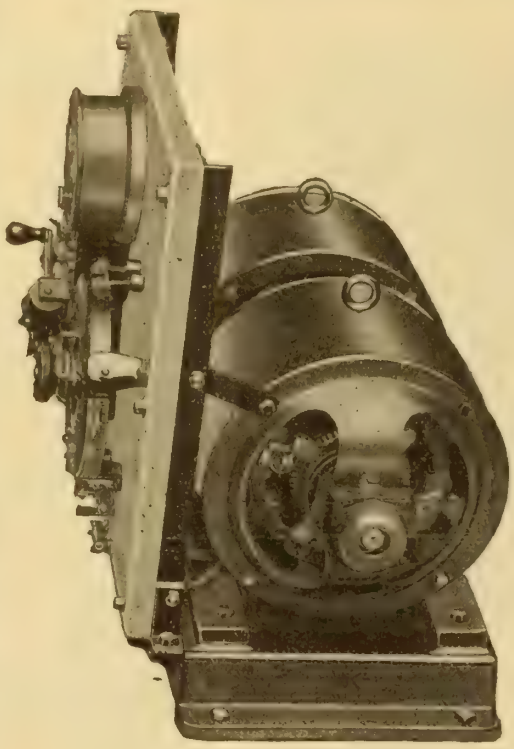
Chairs, Booths, Electric Wiring, Posters, Signs, Drop Curtains, Scenery, Tickets—Every thing to equip a Moving Picture place from the ticket office to the back wall.

POWER'S, PATHE, LUBIN and MOTIOGRAPH MACHINES in stock

Song Slides, Singers and Talent Furnished

If Money is Any Object to You

PLEASE READ THIS



With every M. P. Arc Lamp there must be used some device to cut down the supply voltage and steady the arc. On direct current a resistance is used which causes many troubles. The heat from it is objectionable. It must be designed for just so much current and if you try to put more through it, a burn out is likely. All the heat means electricity wasted, for which you generally pay a good price.

What We Can Do

Install a device as per cut

It will save 35% to 90% of the cost of electricity for the lamp

It stops all the heating—It will give a steadier arc—absolutely

It can be instantly adjusted to give any volume of current within its capacity, five sizes to meet any requirements

N. I. films require more current—You can get it with this device and reduce your electricity bills at same time. Make us prove it

Bulletin 65 W

HELIOS MANUFACTURING COMPANY, PHILADELPHIA

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY - 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

EDITORS: J. P. CHALMERS, THOMAS BEDDING, F. R. P. S.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rica and the Philippine Islands.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3⅜ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.

TIME DISCOUNTS: 5% two or more insertions, 10% three months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

G. P. VON HARLEMAN, Western Representative, 913-915 Schiller Building, Chicago, Ill. - Telephone, Central 3763

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 6 FEBRUARY 5, 1910 No. 5

Summary of the Week.

European competition not to be slighted.

The sign in the sky points to the coming Broadway moving picture palace.

Quantitative competition bound to have a depressing effect on quality.

The Center of Things—New York City, the scene of great moving picture discussion this week. The Empire City has supplanted Paris as the hub of the moving picture industry.

The "Man-About-Town" discourses on the N. I. film—the F. S. A. Convention—the activities of the manufacturers, etc.

The better regulation of the business as an aid to its success is pointed out by W. Stephen Bush.

How the uplift societies treat the moving picture problem is humorously described by Hugh F. Hoffman.

How the European manufacturer views the American market (a translation from a Paris journal) and an American rejoinder.

More absurdities and historical inaccuracies in the pictures are pointed out by Hans Leigh.

An exhibitor points out some evils of the film renting business.

"Lux Graphicus," looking ahead, sees great advancement coming in the development of the moving picture drama.

Among the film renters up-to-date methods are in vogue—the automobile delivery wagon.

Notes from Chicago—The Standard Film Exchange moves—Motiograph sends demonstrator on the road.

Cincinnati exhibitors dined by exchanges.

Editorial Note.

"Let us enlarge the film market" is the title of an article appearing in our contemporary, "The Cine-Journal," of Paris, which we print elsewhere in this week's MOVING PICTURE WORLD. It represents the views of some European manufacturers recently in this country. At the same time we append to this translation another article giving the American side of the controversy. It is to be understood that we do not hold ourselves editorially responsible for the opinions expressed on either side. We are simply anxious that both sides of the matter should be fully discussed in the pages of the WORLD and presented to the reader. We do not wish to prolong the controversy as there is evidently some considerable feeling in Europe with regard to the recent experience of the Europeans in this country. Time, however, will no doubt clear the situation and straighten things out.

Innocents Abroad.

In Europe the American tourist who descends upon the Old World in the Summer is an object of sheer amusement. His or her capacity for "doing" a vast amount of territory in an inconceivably short space of time and of persuading, or rather deluding, himself or herself that the place has really been "done" by this method, is a subject of endless admiration. In our own transatlantic days, the American tourist, traveler, business man on his annual Summer trip was a kind of stock joke to us, simply because of his amazingly rapid expedition, and the strenuous way in which he crowded into a few weeks what a European would take months to do.

Of course, your flitting European tourist who simply goes for pleasure, need not be considered seriously; he or she takes her tabloid doses, skims through in a few days or weeks a world that has taken thousands of years to build, and comes home to "God's own country" satisfied with the outing. Enough said on this head; it does not call for serious criticism. But when business and pleasure is the motive of the trip, then something more serious is called for. We think it is called for in the case of the moving picture field just now. Last Summer a number of very prominent men in this field visited Europe and favored the American public with their impressions. Those impressions were interesting, and, so far as they go, are valuable, but we are bound to take the liberty of remarking that we know the European moving picture field and its possibilities rather more intimately than some of our tourist friends of last Summer.

We would also like to say that too much importance should not be attached to these printed remarks about the European manufacturer of moving pictures. To believe the authorities we are quoting, the manufacture of moving pictures in Europe—and by Europe we mean Great Britain, France, Italy, Germany and the like—is at a very low ebb, indeed, and that the only place on the face of the earth where the moving picture is properly made, is in the United States. This is absolutely wrong. It is all very well to be patriotic in matters of business, but it is, we think, far safer to be impartial, to be just, and above all things to be clear-sighted. It is true at the present time that the American film has a great vogue in England, it is true, also, that the European film in this country at the present time do not stand much of a chance. Well! It is not given much of a show.

The manufacturers in this country take advantage of the open European market, but they do not reciprocate by opening the markets of this country to European productions. Perhaps those gentlemen who have published interviews on their European impressions will take note of this fact. And there is another aspect of the matter. Speaking generally, European technique is not behind the technique of American work. Great Britain, perhaps, in the dramatic aspects may be somewhat behind the American product, and that is all that can be said. The coming season will, we know, inform the American film maker that he will have to reckon with very severe competition indeed from his transatlantic confrere.

Sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. At present the American film holds the market in Great Britain, and it is only right that the European films should have an equal chance on this market. What we desire in this article to point out is this: that the published interviews last Fall and recently with regard to the situation in Europe are based upon a very slight knowledge of the actual state of affairs there. The American film manufacturer will be wise to realize that as he is competing and successfully competing, in the foreign market, the foreign manufacturer has a right to come here and do the same.

The Sign in the Sky.

We hope the gentle reader will forgive our insistent harping upon the part which we think Broadway, New York, should play in the handling of the moving picture. We have long had hopes of Broadway; and now and again it seems that those hopes are to be realized. Friend Ganes flatters but to deceive. For example: The other day when we passed his handsome house we saw that he was running a juggling act. You could not, unless you looked closely, ascertain for certain that Mr. Ganes' Manhattan Theater was, either wholly or in part, devoted to the moving picture. The facade was, in our opinion, defaced by the juggling poster. Juggling is all very well in its way—we love it—but we don't want it in a moving picture house.

But if Mr. Ganes disappoints us, somebody else does not. On the occasion of our visit to Henry Lee's entertainment, which we described last week, we happened, in crossing the Great White Way, to look up at the heavens: which is a way we have. And we saw outlined against the black sky in bright letters, "Motion Pictures." And being somewhat inclined towards respecting signs and portents, we took cognizance of this little fact. The sign to which we refer is placed immediately above the roof garden of the New York Theater.

Of course, this is a very little sign, but nevertheless it is an important sign, because it shows that there are others who think as we do, namely, that the moving picture show should enjoy its full share of Broadway patronage. Broadway is the amusement center, the very focal point of the entertainment world of the United States of America, and that is why we want to see the moving picture featured on Broadway in a suitable, dignified, handsome fashion—which it is not at present. Between Twenty-third street and Fifty-ninth street are a half-dozen theaters which just nibble, as it were, at the picture. There is Mr. Ganes; there is Keith & Proctor; there is Mr. Hammerstein; there is the New York Roof Garden; there are the Majestic and the Circle theaters; but not one of these does the thing in the proper way and does it justice. But still, with that sign in the sky we are "not without hopes," and being full of hope we shall hammer away at this subject until we are instrumental in securing the moving picture new and dignified recognition in the greatest amusement artery of the United States.

Quantitative Competition.

About this time last year we began in the pages of the WORLD to point out to the makers the necessity of looking to the quality of their pictures for public favor. The interim has shown that we were quite right in our advocacy. The manufacturers, with few exceptions, have accepted this view of things and are giving us better photographs, better stories, better acting. All round the standard of film manufacture in the United States has been raised enormously. So that to-day the moving picture is something of an artistic and technical production, and occupies a far more distinguished position than it did twelve months ago. Much, however, remains to be done, and much, it is gratifying to know, is being done.

So far, so good. But there is another form of competition setting in, and we are in some doubt as to whether it is really a step in the right direction. This is the competition of quantity. Makers who a year ago were putting out one reel are now putting out two, and those who have been putting out two, are to release three and four per week. This argues generally a greater all round output, and, of course, greater activity in the factories and greater activity in the selling end. It means, too, that there will be more frequent changes in the theater; it means, too, we suppose, that the feature subject is not to be shown more frequently than the filler; it means, in short, tremendously increased production.

Will it mean overproduction? Will it mean those common American symptoms of prosperity, inflation, satiety, slump, panic? What does it mean? The tendency in many older industries is to limit the output by the demand. Anybody can inform himself on this point by studying the policy of the United States Steel Corporation.

Not being in the inner secrets of the film manufacturers, we cannot divine the reason for this policy of increasing the output. As observers of the situation, however, we are not satisfied that this tendency is for the general good of the business. We should be sorry to see film production overdone. From the point of view of the public, on whose behalf we very largely write, not enough is made of films that are already produced. With a new policy of extra releases, it appears to us quite probable that the public will be less satisfied than they are at present. Variety, we know, is charming, but too much of it is apt to be puzzling and to set up satiety. You can have too much of a good thing. Quantitative competition may lead to a glut in the market. We hope, however, it will not. We shall see.

* * *

It would seem that American producers might well become a trifle more strenuous in their endeavors to improve the matter of film perforation. One foreign firm has succeeded in producing perforations which hold the picture as steady as the proverbial brick house, and what one has done there is no legitimate reason another cannot also do. It may be readily granted that there are other things of great importance, still it is doubtful if any one of them equals this, since no matter how perfect other things may be, a picture bobbing around on the screen like a fishing smack in a storm, spoils the effect. It is readily granted, also, that great improvement has been made in the matter of perforation within the past twelve months. But, for all that, perfection is still several jumps ahead of some of our American producers. If no one had yet discovered a way to attain practical steadiness on the curtain there would be some excuse for its lacking, but this is not the case, and what one has done another may do if sufficient energy and money be expended to attain the desired end.

The Center of Things.

This week, as we have already stated, the F. S. A. holds its semi-annual meeting in New York City. Various matters of interest to its members will be discussed. More or less official programs of the questions that are to be considered have been put forth. These will probably deal with the present position and future of the business in its aspects as it affects the renter, such as his relationship towards the manufacturer, towards the exhibitor, towards the Associated and Independent manufacturers, etc. The position of a licensed exchange man at the present time is somewhat indeterminate. That position in fact needs defining, we might almost say solidifying. Possibly one outcome of this week's convention will be the clearing of the air in this matter. If something definite be done in this respect then some importance can be attached to whatever decisions may be come to at the convention. Meanwhile, THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD wishes the members a very pleasant meeting and expresses the hope that the result of it will be of advantage to the members of the Association as a body and to the moving picture business as a whole. We have recently interviewed many members of the Film Service Association and these, while they talk freely, but not for publication, on the situation, all are seemingly sincerely anxious to promote the success of moving pictures. They are in the game for the good of it and are disposed to use every legitimate effort to further the best interests of the manufacturers and to work in harmony with exhibitors. Beyond this we do not think it possible for any member of the Film Service Association at present to go, nor do we think any amount of newspaper talk will change the aspect of the situation.

This meeting reminds us that the tendency of the times is to more than ever regard New York as the center of things in the moving picture field. It is extraordinary to reflect what enormous interests, financial, manufacturing and otherwise, are focused in New York City. Whenever an important meeting is to take place, New York nowadays seems to be the scene of it. This time last year Chicago seemed to be asserting itself as something of a rival to the Empire City, but that time has passed. We probably have seen the last of any important meeting connected with the film business in Chicago. Here in New York City both the F. S. A. and the Alliance hold their meetings. The associated manufacturers also meet here, so do the independent manufacturers. Moreover, the principal importing agencies have their headquarters in the city, Lux, Eclair, the Film Import, Great Northern and others being represented. Coming to the manufacturers, we find that in and around the city there are no less than seven of the largest film manufacturers with plants in New York City and vicinity. Philadelphia has one; Chicago has four; but even so, the general tendency of the film manufacture is to gravitate towards New York as the center of things, or certainly as the headquarters of the film producing industry in the United States.

New York, too, we are constantly reminded, has something like five hundred moving picture theaters within its limits, so that here again, with the enormous number of people who frequent those places, New York once more stands out as the principal center of things in the American moving picture field. It may safely be said, in respect of the moving picture, that what New York does to-day, the rest of America does to-morrow.

But more than this, not only is New York the center of things as regards the American moving picture, but it is rapidly becoming the world's metropolis in the same regard. London and Paris are great places in their way, but neither possesses the number of manufacturers, the number of exchanges, the number of theaters and therefore the vast, compact nickel and dime-paying public as does New York. New York dominates both the old world and the new and therefore may be very properly regarded as the world's metropolis of the moving picture. It is fitting, therefore, that such a meeting as that of the F. S. A. should be held in the center of things.

New York, again, is the histrionic and literary center of the United States. The best acting is seen here; the best books are written and published here. These two facts have an enormous influence on the moving picture, as our columns are constantly testifying. The best, too, in the art world of the United States is attracted to New York. We cannot nowadays afford to overlook the question of artistry in the moving picture. The artistic influence is one to which the moving picture just now is laying itself deliberately open. That influence is best found in New York City and is another fact of importance to be mentioned in connection with the subject. Here, then, we have a combination of circumstances which in respect of the moving picture makes little old New York the center of things American, if not universal. There must be a metropolis of every country—some central point to which population and all its many interests chiefly gravitate, and as with other branches of industry so it is with the moving picture, which finds its center of things in the common center of the country.

We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of the Helios Manufacturing Company on another page. We have investigated the merits of this controller and believe it to be just the thing that large users of direct current have been in need of. The reputation of the Helios concern is ample guarantee that it will do all they claim for it.

The Echo Amusement Company, on Webster avenue, New York City, has placed an order with J. H. Hallberg for a complete moving picture and stereopticon installation as follows: One Motiograph No. 1 flickerless moving picture machine, one double dissolving stereopticon, one 60 to 70 ampere 200 volt 60 cycle "Hallberg" automatic electric economizer for the moving picture machine, two "Hallberg" economizers of 35 amperes each for the dissolving lamps. The equipment also includes one "Hallberg" spot light with color wheel, operating on a 30 ampere economizer. The Tremont Theater is one of the largest moving picture theaters in Greater New York, and the distance from the lens to the screen is 105 feet, which requires the powerful light given by the 60-70 ampere "Hallberg" economizer.

The Nicholas Power Company has engaged the services of Mr. F. H. Richardson, late of Chicago, as inspector. Mr. Richardson will inspect all new machines under actual show conditions before they are shipped out to customers, thus making doubly certain that every adjustment is as it should be, besides detecting and remedying any weak points present when the mechanism comes from the machinists.

Rumors have been circulated to the effect that the new Power's No. 6 mechanism is not a success and that it will be withdrawn from the market. It may be stated authoritatively that this is erroneous. The Power's Company is well pleased with the performance of the new machine, in fact the company is enthusiastic over it, and is preparing to fill orders which are coming in beyond the present capacity of the plant.

Last week there was a demonstration of the No. 6 mechanism here in New York and those who witnessed the performance pronounced the pictures to be perhaps the best they had ever viewed in point of steadiness and brilliancy of illumination.

The rumor probably grew out of the fact that in the haste to fill early orders a few No. 6 heads were put out which did not come up to the specifications. The machine as now perfected, however, gives distinct promise of performing all the company claims for it and operating to please both customer and audience.

As this issue of the Moving Picture World leaves the press a convention of moving picture film renters is in session at the Imperial Hotel in New York City. It is the annual convention of the old Film Service Association. Although officially stamped as a "dead one" by the Motion Picture Patents Company about a year ago, the F. S. A. is still very much in evidence. Following the inquest held upon the association by the Patents Company last Spring, the organization survived the post mortem as a social successor. It was a good move, for although some prestige was lost on account of the features being purely social, there are many film renting exchanges that swear by "the old F. S. A." To them the association is considered as big a factor in the motion picture business to-day as it ever was. According to the official announcements regarding the program for the three-day convention now in session at the Imperial Hotel, there will be something more than sociability on tap. General discussions relative to the business will be held and one of the leading topics on the list bears upon non-inflammable film, its durability and future. As a promoter of profanity this film has been a gigantic success and I can make a royal guess as to what will be said about it during the talks arranged for. It must be admitted, however, that the "N. I.," as the film is referred to by most exchanges, is giving better satisfaction than it did during the close of last Summer and the early Fall, and it seems quite clear that it will eventually surmount criticism. "That N. I. drove me to the red-eye liquid," said an exchange man from West to me yesterday. It is expected that several of the film manufacturers will be in attendance at the convention as honorary members and perhaps some of them will be able to span the N. I. chasm in informal talks. I was surprised at the enthusiasm evinced by film exchanges in regard to the convention. It convinced me that the F. S. A. has not been dead, but sleeping, and during the sleep some of the members have been having some pretty lively dreams. It is a 100 to 1 shot that the Motion Picture Patents Company will not officially receive or recognize anything the F. R. A. may do, but it is equally certain that anything looking to the welfare of the business as a whole will not be ignored.

Many faces that figured prominently in the F. S. A. convention of a year ago are missing from the present convention, notably Swanson and Laemmle. These two war horses are now in the Independent ranks, but I would stake my best suit of clothes against a nickel that both of them would like to be at the Imperial this week. The associations cultivated in the old organizations left many pleasing recollections and despite the bitterness displayed since the advent of the Patents Company there is still a strong brotherly feeling between many of the former and present F. S. A. men. As I look back and consider the great changes that have taken place during the past twelve months I am led to ponder over the possible changes to be recorded during the coming year. Who can make a good guess as to what will transpire?

* * *

When the last F. S. A. convention was held it was decided to hold the next one at Palm Beach, Fla. The chill the members experienced when the Patents Company practically declared the organization out of existence made them anxious to seek a more congenial climate. Almost at the eleventh hour it was decided to abandon the Palm Beach idea and hold the convention in New York. It was a wise move. Had it been held in Florida I believe the attendance of delegates would have been so light that the convention would practically be a failure. It would have been a grand trip, but the wise heads concluded that the members of the association could accomplish more in the metropolis than in the land of flowers and oranges. Speaking of this yesterday, one of the delegates from the West said he regretted that the Palm Beach plan had been abandoned because he had looked for months with pleasure upon the prospects of getting in touch with the famous Florida water. He said he had sampled nearly all the waters on the market and his cup of happiness would have been filled if the Florida trip had been carried out.

* * *

Mayor Gaynor again went upon record during the past week as a liberalist in connection with moving picture shows. A Brooklyn man had tried for months to get a license for a nickelodeon, but failed owing to the opposition of a church located a block from the place. The former Mayor sustained the objections, but Mayor Gaynor overruled them.

* * *

The latest bugaboo concerning moving pictures is that the nickelodeons are attracting attendance from the free lectures held in the public schools in Greater New York. At the same time it is stated that the Board of Education indignantly denies the truth of the report. The Board no doubt knows what it is talking about.

* * *

The licensed manufacturers have secured control of the motion pictures that were taken of ex-President Roosevelt's hunting trip in Africa. It will be several weeks before they will be ready for exhibition. I understand that the pictures are of a very interesting character, and will make good. Some people are inclined to think that the drawing power of the pictures will be like that of fight pictures and will exhaust itself in a week or two. I do not think they should be classed with fight pictures. The latter appeal to a certain class of people. The Roosevelt pictures will interest all classes—men, women and children. The novelty may wear off after the first week or two, but when Roosevelt returns to this country the pictures will have a boom. Not so with fight pictures. When they once go on the shelf they stay there. The fight and fighters are forgotten and the sports keep their attention fixed upon coming events.

* * *

Two of the licensed manufacturers in New York have sent out companies in search of new locations for picture work. The Biograph Company, as mentioned in the last issue of this paper, sent a company of people to Southern California last week and last Thursday the Vitagraph Company sent a party of actors and actresses to Jamaica, West Indies. Verily, no expense is spared by the film makers to get what they want and give the picture patrons what they desire. The step taken by these companies is not a new one, but it is none the less commendable. The Kalem Company had a company in the Southern States for some time several months ago and the Essanay people have been working in the Southwest and California for some time. There is some significance in the step taken by the Vitagraph Company. The departure of its company with two or three camera men for the West Indies follows closely the announcement of that company of the production of three reels a week.

* * *

A correspondent, evidently an exhibitor, asks me to suggest some good scheme whereby a manager may improve the attendance at his house. The best scheme I know of is good management. There are thousands of exhibitors in the field, but not thousands of good managers. I have often referred to this and pointed out that one great mistake made by exhibitors is lack of energy and effort. It is difficult to frame a suggestion that would fit all cases. Local conditions differ, but good management applies to all. The good manager is constantly on the alert to learn what his patrons want and gives it to them. The nickelodeon manager of to-day is on the same footing as the regular theatrical manager. His responsibility is the same and if he is not qualified to maintain it all the worry and work he can cram into each twenty-four hours will avail him nothing. Too many managers look upon picture houses as a slot machine. There was a time when the people walked up to the box office, dropped in their nickels and dimes and accepted what they got as a matter of course. But times and things have changed. The people are looking for their money's worth and they look to the managers to give it to them. I said in one of my letters some time ago that a man may know how to weigh sugar, cut up meat or make a suit of clothes, but be a very poor entertainer. That is what a picture house manager really is. The people seek entertainment and the manager must know how to furnish it to keep from going to the wall. It is suicidal to throw all the responsiibility on the pictures. They do their part and the manager must do his part. Someone gave the wise admonition, "Know thyself." With a slight variation I recommend it to the manager—"Know thy people."

REGULATION MEANS SALVATION.

By W. Stephen Bush.

The urgent and imperative need of the hour in the moving picture industry is a more drastic regulation, and this regulation is a plain duty imposed by the necessity of circumstances on the manufacturers. The improvement of the moving picture is universally conceded, it is no longer open to dispute that its environments are better than they ever were and that a high standard of quality is maintained. Cui bono? To what use? The golden days, the memory of which it seems even a surgical operation cannot erase from the tablets of old, old exhibitors' memories, the days when the boom was at its height, when one reel and a song won nickels galore, are past never to return. If you look for nickelodeons with 175 seating capacity yielding $200 and $300 per week you will find them in the land of Nowhere only. Competition, education of the public in moving picture lore, the natural recession from a boom to normal conditions, have changed the face of things and the competition has grown senseless, and war to the knife is the order of the day in altogether too many towns and cities.

Is it intended to let the ruthless laws of supply and demand and of the survival of the fittest take their course? Is it a matter of indifference to the powers that be, if thousands of dollars are wasted in the struggle and the grim specters of Ruin and Disintegration begin to stalk on the confines of the kingdom of moving pictures? There is no need for sacrifices, there is no reason why legions of men with a little money and much ill-directed ambition should be allowed to break into the moving picture business, inflate real estate values, get into debt to film exchanges, injure the prestige the moving picture would otherwise enjoy in the public eye and by their strange antics make it difficulty and at times impossible for the capable and competent exhibitors to make ends meet. Will the makers of films profit by such a condition of affairs? They will, if the exchanges profit, but it is a well-known fact that no licensed exchange is making the profits it ought to make, if the same strong hand that operated on the patient for the sever case of independicitis some time ago would stretch out once more and reduce the number of licensed M. P. theaters by future regulation. Licenses today are granted as a matter of course. The beneficent workings of a system of wise and discriminating selection are conspicuous by their absence. Capital instead of being encouraged is frightened away. Why invest heavily in a good, first-class M. P. theater if any Tom, Dick and Harry may not indeed cripple you, but make your profits uncertain and diminish them?

It may be urged that a sharper regulation would entail vast expense and a complicated machinery for its proper and effective enforcement. I believe that if regulation were attempted and carried out, the benefits to the licensed exhibitors would be so great and of so lasting a nature that they would be glad to assist in a substantial way in the enforcement of the regulations. It would pay them to do so. I could at this moment recite the names of many towns and cities where the moving picture business has been ruined for some time to come through fatuous and ruinous competition. I could write obituary notices by the score of exhibitors who went into the picture business neither wisely nor well, doing harm to themselves, to others and to the industry in general. No doubt things are in the West much as they are in the East and the evil knows no geographical limits. Two exhibitors will prosper in one place where three will starve. The two will pass their prosperity along just as the three lean ones will pass along their misery to the exchange and, much diluted it is true, to the manufacturer. What an amount of waste could be stopped by proper regulation. The town that has two prosperous exhibitors is good for twenty-four reels and they can all be new, or of the same degree of newness, as far as that particular place is concerned. The convalescence of the moving picture body from a financial point of view would be rapid. There would be a good average of continuing health. The public appetite for moving pictures, now too often spoiled by gorging to the point of nausea, would grow once more and resume its former edge of keenness.

I doubt not that the patient will live through the crisis in the worst of events, but why have a crisis, if it can be averted? The silly cry of "Trust" is about as useful as the scream of the man with the decayed tooth, when he approaches his fate in the dentist's chair. The tooth must be pulled and he is a poor and most unprofitable dentist who is too tender hearted to apply the instrument, because the patient screeches with pain. Why rescue the patient from the horrors of independicitis, if in the end he is to die through lack of nourishment?

IN THE LIONS' DEN.

By Hugh F. Hoffman.

I was invited to attend a meeting of the Civic Betterment League.

How they ever came to invite me, the Devil's deputy (meaning exhibitor), I probably never shall know. I have my suspicions of a certain young man; his name is Plenty, and the name describes him well.

The invitation came in the form of a plain postal card requesting my presence at a meeting of the Civic Betterment League of Jersey City; topic to be discussed, Moo-ving Pictures; signed by the secretary, Mr. Plenty, son of old Josephus Plenty, the man who sent Sam Parks to jail.

Now the reason I suspect Mr. Plenty is because he seemed to me to be the only normal critter at that abnormal gathering. His greeting put me at ease in an insant in spite of the indication on the faces of some of the ladies present that it were better if I had been led in handcuffed so that I could do them no bodily injury.

The meeting took place at the Whittier House, a charitable institution in the poorer section of Jersey City. It being wet weather, the attendance, luckily for me, numbered only about twenty, mostly women, one or two of whom were young and pretty; new recruits, I suppose.

"Bob" Fleming.

Mr. McCall.

"Teddy" Ransom.

The male, or basso profundo section consisted of our well named friend, Mr. Plenty; Robert L. Fleming, president and special officer of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children, of Jersey City; the Hon. Teddy Ranson, J. P., secretary and special officer of the S. P. C. C., of Jersey City; Robert A. McCall, probation officer of some Newark society for the suppression of something or other and two other men who, from the sound of their voices and delicacy of movement, should more properly be included in the ladies' list.

As I entered they were holding a preliminary bout over the licensing of newsboys. While this debate was going on I chatted pleasantly with Mr. Plenty, and I gathered from his remarks that occasionally he shied off from the bunch and took in a moving picture show, ex-officio, for his own benefit and recreation. He was a clean, healthy, happy, broad-minded young man with a barrel of energy and good nature. He told me he had often been in my place and enjoyed my lectures on the pictures as they moved upon the screen.

In telling me this he let the cat out of the bag. I deduced from his remarks that followed, that being the unsalaried secretary of an uplift society was dry business for a man of his vim and bounce, so long as the meetings consisted of much talk and little action. Therefore he had put up this job on them. He had heard my lectures and had an idea that I could hold my own when it came to argument. He invited me on his own responsibility, without consulting the others. For the other side of the debate he had invited those well known suppressors, Messrs. Fleming, Ransom and McCall, with the full intention of getting us all there and "sickin;" us onto each other while he sat back and enjoyed the fun. These, I say, are my suspicions, but I cannot prove them.

The preliminary bout about the licensing of newsboys prospered finely until it came to a question of who was to pay for the badges that the boys were to wear. Some of the members thought it would be too much of a hardship to make the boys pay for them out of their hard earned pennies. On the other hand, the City Fathers had been approached and had refused to be bothered making an appropriation. This put it squarely up to the salaried suppressors present, who could not see why they should be expected to go down in their jeans for the price of the badges, so the whole project ended in dismal failure.

Then the decks were cleared for the moving picture question. A dull sickening silence prevailed while the two opposing sides took mental stock of each other. Presently the elderly matron of the institution broke the ice as follows:

"It seems, Mr. H., that there is considerable fault to be found with moving pictures as they are at present displayed. Can you say anything to us on that subject?"

"I believe," said I, "that it is customary for the prosecution to open a case." Whereat my friend, Mr. Plenty, presiding, quickly assured me that I was not on the rack, but simply at an informal, impartial meeting where both sides of the story were to be heard verbatim. Did you get that? Verbatim.

"Very well," I answered, somewhat reassured; "then I will put the question that I always ask at the beginning of any reply to disbelievers in moving pictures, and that is: How many of you have ever been into a picture parlor or 'Nickelette,' as you call them?"

There was a general exchange of inquiring glances among the opposition forces, each looking to the others for voluntary admissions. Seven hands were raised among the twenty members present, the five men and the two lady members who were young and pretty.

"That's about what I thought," spoke I, in triumph, and then went on to tell them how most of the criticism is being done by those who never see what they are denouncing.

"Your argument is good so far as it goes," returned the matron, "but while we may not care to visit these places, we have the newspapers to go by, and if the things they say about them are true they must be perfectly horrid."

"Now you have touched a tender spot, but I am glad you called attention to that subject: Blackmail." With just indignation I went on to relate how I had called upon our local editor and asked him why he had hounded us exhibitors with such persistency. I told them that this same editor had admitted to me that he had never been into a "Nickelette" and was writing his editorials on mere hearsay. I told them further how this editor had politely intimated that if the "Nickelette men" were to get together and keep a standing "ad" in his columns, the paper would feel in duty bound to protect an advertiser. I went on to tell those present how I had reported this editorial interview back to our Managers' Association, and how our members had voted "Millions for defense but not one cent for tribute," and that was why the attacks had become more bitter than ever.

I thought I had them going when they came back at me with a flank movement—verbatim.

"Isn't it true," ventured a timid schoolma'am from a rear seat, "that there is a great deal of crime and murder and arson and all that sort of thing shown every night in these places?"

"There is occasionally some one of those things in the dramatic subjects, but we don't exactly wallow in it. Besides, I can truthfully say that there is never a crime shown in moving pictures but what the full punishment of that crime is shown at the end. We try to vary our program with comedy, dramatic and educational subjects."

"Well, don't you think that the exhibition of crime has a tendency to make children and some adults have a yearning to emulate what they see?"

"I have only my own experience to go by. In my younger days, when I was a 'gallery god,' after papers were sold, I witnessed the most blood-curdling of melodrama and yet I am not a murderer. As a boy I saw Fagin teaching the pickpockets in Oliver Twist, before moving pictures were ever heard of, and yet I am not a thief. On my mother's knee I first heard the story of Bluebeard, with all the shocking details of his gory wives, and still I have never spent a minute behind prison bars."

"We are willing enough to concede that in your case, Mr. H.," spoke the matron, "but don't you really believe that there are children with parents that neglect them who might easily be led into a life of crime by what they see in these pictures?"

"I do not. A criminal is born and not made. Many inspiring biographies are written of men who began life as friendless orphans and worked out their own salvation. On the other hand, we read every day in the papers of men like Harry Thaw who have had every advantage and turn out to be the most depraved of wretches."

All this time the salaried suppressors were jotting down notes. Mr. Ransom, trembling under his weight of misdirected zeal in his high strung nervous anxiety to plunge into the fray. Mr. McCall, in his well-fed, leisurely way, sat regarding his perfectly manicured fingers, calmly waiting his turn. Mr. Fleming struck his favorite attitude of staring at the ceiling in open-mouthed content.

"Why," interposed a lady with a high pitched voice that seemed to frighten her, "why is it necessary to have anything at all in your pictures that deals with crime?"

"I will answer with a question. Why is it necessary to have anything in your books that deals with crime? The whole of literature from beginning to end is nothing but a long story of crime. The Bible itself is but the record of a great murder culminating in the crucifixion. I believe the nursery rhymes that we read to our children, from 'Cock Robin' to 'Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves,' contain the most revolting accounts of bloodshed on paper. Even our daily papers, if you please, while they are denouncing our pictures of crime, are filled with it themselves, including illustrations thereof."

From Mr. McCall: "Well, how does that excuse you fellows? If literature is full of crime children shouldn't be allowed to read it. That's just the point we want to make. We are after the parents who neglect their children and that's just why we are going to have this law passed keeping children out of these places. Make it a crime for parents to allow their children to visit them alone."

"Have the parents been consulted at all, Mr. McCall?"

"We don't need to consult the kind of parents I mean. They neglect their children and that's what we're here to stop."

"Well, what about the parents who bring their children to our shows?"

"They can't send them alone. If they want to spoil their own children, we can't help it. You would be surprised if you knew how many complaints and arrests there are in Newark of children stealing money to go to these places. The same story, day after day."

"Did you ever steal any money when you were a boy, Mr. McCall?" (Laughter.)

"Not that I can remember."

"Well I did; long before moving pictures came around. I stole it to buy candy; why not abolish candy? I did it to buy toys; why not abolish toys? I got it to go to theaters; abolish them all while you're at it, don't stop half way. I never stole pennies after I got old enough to know better, and I want to say right here, ladies and gentlemen, I have met and known personally every moving picture manager in this town; they are all gentlemen, and I will stake my word on it that not one of them, if he knew it, would take a stolen nickel from a child. The chances are more than likely that he would march the youngster home by the ear. Take it from me—verbatim."

Teddy Ransom could stand it no longer. He was on his feet, his black eyes glowing with that fire of genuine impulse for which he is noted. His pale face livid; his raven black hair falling in disorder from beneath his broad, black sombrero. The loose, flowing black tie and sombre clothing completed the perfect picture of a zealot. There he stood breathing like a mad bull.

"Has anyone here ever seen a picture called 'The Female Highwayman'?" he thundered. "Have you ever shown it?" addressing me, to which I nodded "yes."

"Ladies and gentlemen, there is a picture that shows to the innocent children of this city how a woman goes about robbing people right and left, and each time she succeeds in her work there is a round of applause from the audience. She enters a jewelry story, inspects some jewelry, and there, in full view of these susceptible children, she conceals a diamond in chewing gum under the show case, returning for it later. And now, Mr. H., I want you to answer me fairly and squarely, do you consider that a fit picture for a child or anyone to see?"

"You are taking advantage of me, Mr. Ransom," I replied. "You are digging up skeletons. I did show that picture about three years ago, when moving pictures were young and crude and subjects were scarcer than now. What you call applause for that picture was only laughter. Laughter at the funny predicament in which she always left the police, not applause. You omitted also to state that the lady met her just fate in the end. I do not defend that picture for an instant, but I do think you ought to confine yourself to the present and not to the past."

"Well, what about 'The Great Train Robbery'?" he roared.

"There's no use talking to you if you're going on that way, Mr. Ransom," waxing warmer. "I asked you to mention some picture of recent make, and now that you are specifying pictures by name, I defy you to name one picture made within the past year or so that would lead anybody into crime."

The meeting was getting warm. The wall flowers were getting their nerve, and all hands were talking at once. Chairs had been abandoned. I was the center of a group, answering questions like a rapid fire gun. Little side arguments were going on. Ransom was ramming around talking sometimes to himself and again to others. He answered the description of a Russian revolutionist wound up.

"Don't let that fellow scare you," whispered my patron saint, Mr. Plenty, "I'm running this shebang."

"I'm sorry I haven't my list with me," said Ransom, "but if I had I could mention plenty of pictures that are bad."

"Dead ones, I'll gamble," I retorted. "Why don't you say a word about the good ones we show? Tell them about the 'Return of Ulysses,' 'The Prodigal Son,' 'The Life of Abraham Lincoln.' You will have all these ladies believing that we are conducting kindergartens of crime for crime's sake."

"Isn't it possible for you exhibitors to examine your pictures when you get them?" asked Mr. Plenty.

"Listen to me, my good friend. It takes fifteen minutes to run a reel of pictures; a man having a three-reel show would have to spend forty-five minutes looking over his show; then what about the other thirty or forty men standing in line waiting for theirs? The last man would get home about 2 A. M. with his pictures."

"I see you're right about that," said my level-headed friend; "but couldn't there be a censorship established at the City Hall composed of one from our society, one police official and one exhibitor?"

"We don't need any censors here. We poor fellows are only exhibitors. We don't make the pictures, but we get all the blame. All we can do is to take what the manufacturers give us. They are the men who are going to make or mar the business, and they are the men to censor, and sometimes I think they need it myself."

"Well, isn't there something we can do to help it?"

"Now you're talking," said I. "When you say we, you include us. These reform societies are always working against us, never with us, when they would find us only too glad to work hand in hand with them for the good of it all."

McCall and Fleming and Ransom had gone.

"You mustn't mind what they said," smiled Plenty.

"I don't mind it a bit," I laughed. "They only said what they are paid to say."

"I guess you're right. Good-night," said Plenty.

EUROPE PITTED AGAINST AMERICA.

"LET US ENLARGE THE FILM MARKET."

Under the above heading one of the European manufacturers, who visited this country a few months ago to size up the American market, contributes the following article to the "Cine Journal" of Paris. He prefaces it with a letter to the editor urging upon him the importance of using his efforts in getting the European manufacturers together in taking quick and decisive action to defeat the "American invasion."

The following is a translation of the article, from which we have expunged some rather uncomplimentary personal remarks:

General Situation of the Market in the United States.

There are about 10,000 exhibitors of which 4,500 could have a satisfactory service from the independent importers, if those importers were united in a manner to furnish a daily program of good quality mixed with a few of the American independent films, judiciously selected.

One reason why many of the licensed American exhibitors would be happy to enlist themselves under the independent banner is that the licensed service supplies them all with the same program, placing them in a bad position when four of them are side by side on the same street.

It is then urgent upon us to take advantage of this dissatisfaction on the part of the licensed exhibitors, and to use same before the trust can remedy this state of affairs, in creating its own competition by the means of a second program to offer to the exhibitors.

As I said; many exhibitors paying their license, would be disposed to give up the trusts, if they had the guarantee of obtaining a program composed of good productions released regularly.

General Situation of the Importers of Independent Films.

The Film Import and Trading Company.—This company actually sells, or rather makes an attempt at selling European productions.

International Producing and Projecting Comapny.—This company, of which the president and several directors enjoy a well established social standing and a good personal fortune (enabling them to do some positive and satisfactory work for the independent cause), are disposed to give up the game, as the European manufacturers have not thought proper, at least at this time, to come to an understanding with the said company.

The Motion Picture Patents Company, or the trust, keeps in check the independents by means of the lawsuits they bring against exhibitors, renters, manufacturers and importers.

It is certain that if all these lawsuits, started by the trust, are not fought by some one with ample means to do so, the independent cause will be ruined and the sale of independent American and European films will be totally suppressed and this for about four and one-half years.

Not a single independent European film could be sold today in the United States if the president of the International Producing and Projecting Company had not gone before the American Congress, at its last session, to safeguard the interests of the European manufacturers. The results are partly due to the social standing of the directors of the I. P. P. Co., also to their financial position.

In a few words, I will say what has been done for the independent cause, since the rules of the trust went into effect in January, 1909.

January, 1909.—Enforcing the new rules of the trust, called the Motion Picture Patents Company. Disorganization and confusion of the independents.

February, 1909.—Mr. Murdock, seeing a chance to do for the film industry, what he has done in the theatrical line for the Western Vaudeville Manager Association, decides to create a competition to the trust and to organize an independent movement. He communicates with the European manufacturers and gets contracts to obtain the goods.

April, 1909.—The trust attempts to disintegrate the International Producing and Projection Company so as to kill once more the independent cause. Having met a failure, the licensed manufacturers made an affidavit, under oath, declaring that their industry must be protected by a high tariff on the ground that the metre of negative film averaged them from 50 to 70 francs, against 20 francs, the cost of the metre of European negative films.

May-August, 1909.—Mr. Murdock takes charge of the independent party before the Congress of the United States. On account of his political influence, he prevents the strangling of the independent party and obtains the same duty, even with a small reduction on the existing tariff, and now the licensed manufacturers cannot come back on this question of tariff, under the penalty of being accused of perjury, a grave crime under the American Code.

During the Summer of 1909, the sale of European films in the United States, through the efforts of the International Producing and Projecting Company, had fallen very low, for reasons too long to name in this statement, yet known to all the manufacturers.

At the close of the Congress of the United States, the general attorney of the trust, who had been beaten twice by Mr. Murdock, threatens to pursue him and, without wasting any time, some ten injunctions are served by the trust on a number of independents.

Mr. Murdock, wishing to clear the situation, comes to Europe; he falls sick and consequently cannot accomplish the work he had planned to do with the European manufacturers. As the different suits pending in the courts of the United States could not be postponed, the representatives of the International Producing and Projecting Company had to return to Chicago.

October, 1909.—The European manufacturers decide to pay a visit to the United States to investigate the situation.

November 30, 1909.—The European manufacturers have been to the United States, the general indecision and unreasonable attempts some of them made contributed to render the situation of the market so much more complex. The lack of cohesion and of decision on the part of certain representatives of the important houses can be considered as having weighed heavily on the situation and seems to have determined the confusion and general rout, to the delight of the trust.

If the importers of independent films are told that they can sell their films in the United States without being directly molested by the trust, it is certain that the trust will quickly find a way of stopping this sale, by serving injunctions on the independent exhibitors for violation of patents rights and force them to close.

The direct sale of imported films, by means of offices opened in New York or through American manufacturers, will meet the same defeat.

Direct individual sales will be a complete financial failure for the following fact: Patrons giving standing orders will not pay and accept the goods unless there exists a strong organization that can enforce them to live up to the contracts, in fact force them to make money against their own will and keep them from slashing the prices.

If we want to sell imported films it is necessary that this sale be made through the medium of persons who, by their financial resources and political influence, can beat the injunctions to be served by the trust.

For the above named reasons, it is absolutely urgent to make a quick decision, as it is a question of life or death for the independent films.

Any delay is a new step towards a complete defeat and the Americans will soon conquer the European market and impose their regulations on Europe as soon as they have assured the final success of their rule in the United States. And they will do so if we are not on the lookout.

I close this statement in hoping that the interested houses will not show any bitterness against each other unless they have decided to charge to profit and loss the films they expect to sell in the United States, but, on the other hand, to help to organize a strong movement, able to give them four and one-half years of good business. This movement will not only defeat the Americans on their own ground, but will show them that they have to fight in Europe against a strong organization.

It is necessary, I repeat, to make a quick decision from the fact that the European manufacturers who visited the United States have certainly given, by their way of acting, the impression that they are persons that do not know what they are doing nor what they want. And the Americans will not be slow to see the importance of this fact that the Europeans are so weak and so excitable that the least commercial difficulties upset them, another incentive for the American manufacturers to put more energy into attaining their final object—that of supplanting the European manufacturers in America as well as in Europe.

America's Reply.

We showed the above translation to a gentleman who has large interests in the moving picture business, which brings him in direct touch with all branches of the trade throughout the country. Being a manufacturer of other accessories, we pointed out to him that he was expected to look upon the film question with an open mind, and as the political swirl no doubt had considerable effect on the course of his own business, he was asked to give his views on the moving picture industry in America during the past year, or since the formation of the Motion Picture Patents Company. He dictated the following:

American View of the Situation.

We seem to be going along nicely. The Motion Picture Patents Company has served a few injunctions, just enough to retain their prestige, but not enough to rout the independents. No real gain has been made on either side. If the licensed manufacturers have lost a few exhibitors, the independents have lost their share and the account is pretty well balanced. The old Film Service Association was a good move at the time, but as many abuses had to be corrected, the manufacturers, profiting by the experience gained, superseded the Film Service Association with the Motion Picture Patents Company. After another year of experience, the manufacturers will find that the M. P. P. Co. does not yet answer all the needs and we may have a new combination, an improvement on the present M. P. P. Co.

The Motion Picture Patents Company has done much good, as in maintaining the prices they have enabled the manufacturers to much improve their work. The M. P. P. Co. has done some real work in putting the industry on some sound, systematic basis, perhaps too much of it, as the exchanges are too heavily handicapped and seem to be no more than obedient servants, giving their time, energy and capital to promote the interests of the manufacturers, with very little profit to themselves.

The independents cannot show better results; on the contrary, they show dissension in their ranks.

Really, I see no reason for an immediate change. True enough, we have once in a while a little skirmish, but the danger soon passes away and once more we sail on a smooth sea. Yet a storm is coming.

Dangers of an Open Market.

I do not agree with the "Cine-Journal" on the direction of the storm. As the "Cine-Journal" sees the storm coming from the "trust," they urge a big combination of the independent interests and want said interests to be placed in the hands of some one importing concern that will serve them faithfully as the safest harbor in sight.

I see the storm coming from the independent side and if the independent clouds are allowed to gather together, we can expect a storm, a real deluge. I see the real danger in the unlimited number of new manufacturers.

To explain the danger in store for us, from this extraordinary crop of new manufacturers, let us follow the cue of the "Cine-Journal" and go back in history.

January, 1909.—The formation of the Motion Picture Patents Company caused a panic and those not taken in saw no chance of ever placing out their goods. The M. P. P. Co. was for a time a bad scarecrow and kept many men under cover.

Spring, 1909.—Murdock appeared as a "saviour"; and if, through his European agent, he had kept supplying the best imported films, he would have made a success for himself and for the independents, but, following his agent, he took advantage of the necessities of the independents to unload on them all the trash from Europe.

About this same time some bold men came from under cover as independent manufacturers. They were closely watched by the M. P. P. Co., who tried to stop them, and by other anxious independents wishing to enter the manufacturing field.

Summer, 1909.—The new independent manufacturers made good, they heeded not the injunctions and the detectives of the M. P. P. Co., and this encouraged other men to bring out their cameras and start to make pictures—I beg pardon, reels of film.

Autumn, 1909.—More independent manufacturers are coming out.

Present Day.—The slow progress or cessation of legal action on the part of the Motion Picture Patents Company is the signal for a regular invasion of new manufacturers; they are appearing so fast that it is impossible to keep track of their number and even of their names; they are springing up from every corner of the United States, and it is only a question of time when we will have one manufacturer for every exhibitor, or at least for every exchange.

The real danger is in this wonderful crop of new independent manufacturers. They are not good business men, they have not enough capital and most of them have not the experience. What will be the result? They will have to slash prices so as to sell enough prints to pay their daily expenses.

I should not say that they will cut the prices, as they are already doing it. A new manufacturer, who has already a number of pictures and good enough productions to make a first release, does not want to release as he knows that the independent exchanges are not willing to pay the full price of 11 cents, and if this manufacturer should release he would have to sell at 11 cents to keep faith with the Alliance. Yet this manufacturer, needing money to go ahead, offers his copies at 7 cents, and no one can say a word, as he is not making a regular release.

To my knowledge we have some fifty independent manufacturers who are releasing or working to release within a short time and, as some of them are bold enough to promise two reels per week or more, we can say that within a few weeks the independents will have an output of perhaps seventy-five reels. The question arises: Where are those manufacturers going to find enough exchanges to buy such a large output and where will they find theaters to show all those reels? Any man with some common sense will see that this wonderful crop of new manufacturers will mean anarchy to the industry, as those manufacturers will cut and cut the prices.

If both licensed and independent interests do not put a stop to this great crop of new manufacturers, there will be no limit, and, week after week, we will see new names coming up. Last month one independent manufacturer made a clean sweep, he discharged every one from the office boy to the manager and reorganized under a new management. Now it is reported that the old manager is going to start for himself, that the darkroom man has already completed arrangements to start for himself, that the stage manager is forming a new company and it is even rumored that the camera man is also contemplating a factory for himself. Would it not be wiser for those five men to combine their interests in one good company, instead of starting five competing factories with limited capital and poor experience? Would it not be wiser still for them to go back to their former ways of making a living? But this is a free country and they are free to burn their own (or other people's) money!

Some persons will tell you that all those new manufacturers will die, one after another, as they will never be in a position to line up with the good manufacturer. True enough in certain countries, but not in the United States, where we have too many push cart men in the exhibiting end of the business.

What do they know? The dollar and nothing else. They cannot judge a good picture from a bad one, a decent production from an immoral one, they have no taste, they have no education; and as they cannot judge, they prefer highly sensational thrills, no matter how badly such pictures are produced.

When these exhibitors see that the manufacturers are selling their prints to the exchanges at 7 cents or less, they will clamor for a cheaper service and, even if they are licensed exhibitors, they will go under the independent banner for the sake of a cheaper service. To meet such competition the licensed manufacturers will be forced to cut, or reduce their expenses, and instead of producing high-class pictures, they will have to lower themselves to the mark of those cheap manufacturers and put out only cheap pictures.

I am not opposed to new manufacturers, but I want honest manufacturers, to keep up the prices, to do good work, men who can elevate the industry instead of pulling it down. Such men should be recognized. But the man who starts with no experience, with no capital and who simply wants to foist an inferior product on the public should be barred out.

This is logic. I know all the exchanges, and I declare that there is not an exchange (independent) in a position to buy a weekly output such as we are sure to get if all those new manufacturers are coming on the market. The rents and wages will have to be paid, then the manufacturers will sell at any price for the sake of meeting their obligations, if they can meet them.

The only way to stop all those new manufacturers is to close the market to them. And this could be done if the licensed manufacturers would take in a few more of the best European manufacturers with the best independent American manufacturers. The Motion Picture Patents Company would then have an output of some thirty or more good reels each week, and, with such an output, they would have enough to supply all the theaters, and no theater would be foolish enough to run the rejected product. This combination would obviate the fault the "Cine-Journal" finds with the M. P. P. Co. of not having two programs, so as to give different pictures to theaters on the same street.

This will be the outcome of the business; a new combination controlling all the interests; a new organization capable of dictating to the theaters to show pictures only, no vaudeville and only short shows; a combination to make money for everyone, the manufacturer, the renter and the exhibitor.

OBSERVATIONS BY WIDE-AWAKE EXHIBITORS.

The Editors Invite Contributions for this page from Exhibitors who can Express an Idea that will be Beneficial to the Business.

FALSE HISTORY IN MOTION PICTURES.

By Hans Leigh.

From time to time we read articles praising the moving picture as a recorder of history, and we are told that the educational influence of these so-called historical subjects upon the rising generation will be of great value.

But there is only one kind of history which can be of any use to anybody.

That is true history.

The trouble with the kind of history handed out by some of the manufacturers of moving pictures is that it isn't true.

Not long ago I pointed out a quantity of this species of history which had been woven into a film called "The Death Disc."

A little later I saw more of it—a lot more of it—in a film entitled "Julius Caesar."

Since then I have received a big consignment of very rotten film-history labeled "Beethoven."

The picture, which is misnamed a tragedy, but which to the educated mind is nothing more than a farce, deals with the great master at the age of about fifty-six or seven. The first few hundred feet are grotesquely meaningless, as far as an average audience can judge.

Then, we are led to believe that Beethoven has become suddenly deaf. This of course distresses him a great deal. He attempts to conduct an orchestra, but by reason of his deafness makes a terrible mess of it. Further unhappiness is caused by the misbehavior of his nephew, and the last drop in the master's cup of bitterness is reached when he detects the nephew in the act of robbing him. The shock is so great that Beethoven is seized with heart disease, or apoplexy, or something, and dies. The action of this piece, judging from the fact that the characters wear the same clothes all through it, covers about one year.

The incidents are disjointed and uninteresting, and the acting execrable. The only thing which makes the play remarkable is the freight of historical lies it carries. Briefly, these are as follows:

The lie—that Beethoven became deaf in his old age. The fact—that Beethoven's first symptoms of deafness appeared at the age of thirty, and that within three or four years his hearing was entirely gone.

The lie—that Beethoven was unable to conduct an orchestra in consequence of his deafness. The fact—that Beethoven's greatest works were produced after he became stone deaf, and that twenty years later he achieved one of the greatest triumphs of his life when, at Vienna, in 1824, he conducted the orchestra which played his own Ninth Symphony before one of the most distinguished audiences which ever listened to a concert. At that time Beethoven was so deaf that he could not hear the storm of applause which swept the house, and he was unaware of his triumph until one of the lady singers turned him around so that he saw the enthusiasm in the faces and actions of his auditors.

The lie—that Beethoven died of some sort of a seizure, in consequence of his nephew's crime. The fact—that Beethoven died in bed of dropsy following a long illness from inflammation of the lungs. According to the picture artist, Beethoven steals nimbly down stairs to detect his nephew, while in reality the master lay in bed a hopeless and helpless wreck.

But, I hear the reader exclaim: "Those are only three lies."

I regret that I cannot instance more tergiversations on the part of this picture artist. I can only produce three lies because this film contains only three alleged facts, none of which are true.

The life of Beethoven contains much that is dramatic—much that might have been woven into this play to make it interesting, but this seems to have escaped the picture artist. Perhaps he hadn't the scenery necessary to its production. Certainly he hadn't the actors.

EVILS OF THE FILM RENTING BUSINESS.

I have felt so discouraged and disgusted at time with the ignorance and carelessness displayed by some operators, that I have been sorely tempted more than once to quit the business. It has been no infrequent occurrence to receive a return shipment of films from some customer and then find upon inspecting the reels that my best and costliest reels had been unnecessarily damaged by having the sprocket holes forced almost the entire length, caused by no other reason than excessive tension placed upon the take-up in rewinding. I am certain that I am not alone to suffer in this respect. This same evil has no doubt been experienced by every exchange in the country. If every operator would devote as much attention to the tension spring and take-up attachment as he does to the lubrication, lenses, etc., using just a little judgment instead of slashing a film through as many do, many thousands of dollars would be saved to the exchanges every year. And not only that, the film being in better shape as far as perfect sprocket holes were concerned, would mean a more satisfactory service.

I ask the co-operation of every operator to eliminate this, the greatest evil of the film renting business. Never have your tension on film any greater than will barely turn a full reel of film in the lower magazine on the take-up when you turn the crank of the machine.

It is not always ignorance that causes an operator to place and leave such an excessive strain on the slowly rewinding film, but rank carelessness. Film is not a piece of rubber that will stretch to suit any requirement that may be placed upon it. When adjusted to this high, unnecessary tension the film has got to give, and the consequence is big damage to film and your exchange. After sprocket holes have once been started the time will shortly come when the reel can be consigned to the scrap-heap.

My plea to the operators is to carefully consider the troubles that come to the concerns that rent films. It is not a path of roses, as many may presume. If you take proper care of the films you rent, it will be sure to be noticed, and the result will be better service, the outcome of a better understanding and more confidence between exchange and exhibitor. F. T. BOLNE.

MORE ABSURDITIES.

By Hans Leigh.

When an American manufacturer attempts to produce a foreign drama from settings arranged in New York or Chicago, there may be some small excuse for errors. But when the subject is an American one, created in America, staged in America, and acted by Americans, the exhibitor has a right to expect that the manufacturer will pay some attention to the possibilities.

In many cases this expectation is not realized, and films are sent out for exhibition which must make any intelligent showman tremble for the reputation of his house, and which cannot help but have an injurious effect upon the future of the motion picture business.

Such a film, in my humble opinion, is "Reunited at the Gallows." This play opens with the chance meeting of a young man and a young woman who is described as a factory girl, but who bears more resemblance to a vaudeville actress. They exchange a few words and then part. The same evening, or possibly the next, the girl receives a letter from her swain in the following laconic style:

"Helen—I will marry you to-night, if the marriage will be kept secret. JOE."

But does the girl refuse this proposal as any self-respecting young woman would do? Not at all. She jumps at the chance. The minister for them; and yet the whole transaction, as far as the audience can see, is accompanied by no more sentiment or passion than would be involved in the purchase of a pound of tea. Can such things be? Well, if so they should have no place in a motion picture drama.

We now see the sexton of a church pretending to sweep the leaves away from the front door of the sanctuary. It is merely a pretense, because he does no more than move the leaves to and fro. This is a trifle, to be sure, but the stage manager might just as well have given that actor a lesson in sweeping before putting the piece on.

The villain presently arrives, and in the most casual manner invites the sexton to commit a crime which would be likely to land him in the State prison for the rest of his life—to perform, in fact, a mock marriage.

The villain does not seem to fear that the sexton will call a policeman and make a charge against him. He makes his dangerous proposition with all the nonchalance with which he might order the Chinaman to hand out his laundry.

And does the good sexton hesitate? Not for a moment. He enters easily and pleasantly into the diabolical plot, with no more qualms than though he had been loaning a hymn book to a lady.

The whole conspiracy is arranged in about one minute, and the villain goes off to seek his victim.

But now the rector appears on the scene, and by some kind of clairvoyance, in which the audience has no share, he finds out that the sexton has something on his mind. He questions him and the sexton confesses.

"Aha," cries the parson, "I have a thought. I shall disguise myself as you. Then I shall perform the ceremony which will be binding, and the biter shall be bitten. Run down to the toy shop and get the disguise."

The sexton vanishes, and presently returns with a white wig and a pair of whiskers, which he found by chance at the toy shop and which are the exact counterpart of his own.

And now, where shall they go to effect the disguise? To some quiet room where it can be done with proper secrecy? Oh, not at all—quite unnecessary. The front steps of the church will do very well as a dressing room. It will be cooler than a stuffy bedroom, and besides it will afford the old ladies and the children in the neighborhood a little much-needed entertainment—to see their pastor making up like a circus clown.

So a chair is brought out and set up in full view of the street, and the pastor, taking off his coat, kneels down on the pavement and gets busy with the grease paint.

When he has finished the sexton gets into a skirt which is short enough to give a nice view of his pantaloons and his great, manly feet. Then he throws a shawl over his head, and the two are ready for "bear."

Presently the bride and groom arrive. He politely avoids looking at the sexton's boots and the pastor's whiskerinos, which are all too palpable to the audience. They are ready for the ceremony.

And now does the pastor lead the way up the aisle, while the organ peals the Wedding March? Not a bit of it. The front steps for them.

This does not seem curious to the happy pair, and so the ceremony is performed under the blue arch of heaven, and in the presence of a select audience of dogs, babies, street arabs, policemen and street car drivers—who, it is needless to say, are not allowed to appear in the picture.

Now what does all this imply? Simply that the picture artist was able to borrow the front steps of a church, but couldn't get inside, and that he didn't have the money to pay for a suitable setting in canvas.

I would at this point like to convey the idea that the acting in this drama is just about as rotten as any I have ever seen in the worst class of ten-twent-thirt attractions.

Later on, the girl disappears, and the villain is convicted of murder on evidence which, in real life, would be insufficient to hang a squirrel. He is sentenced to death, and the audience is next introduced to him in a setting which is supposed to represent a condemned cell. But it isn't a cell at all. The setting looks like the seamy side of a garden wall, and the masonry is such as should send the builder of it to the gallows. It is about as bad a bit of masonry and as little like that of a prison cell as any bit of stonework I ever saw. But apparently the artist hadn't the money to pay for a set piece, and so everything had to go.

The condemned man, I may add, is dressed by the artist in prison stripes. Now I may be wrong in this, but I think it is a pretty safe thing to say that criminals condemned to death are not required to wear the stripes. I never saw or heard of a man in this condition wearing stripes, and I don't believe they do it.

That is about all I have to say of "Reunited at the Gallows," and it seems to me it is enough.

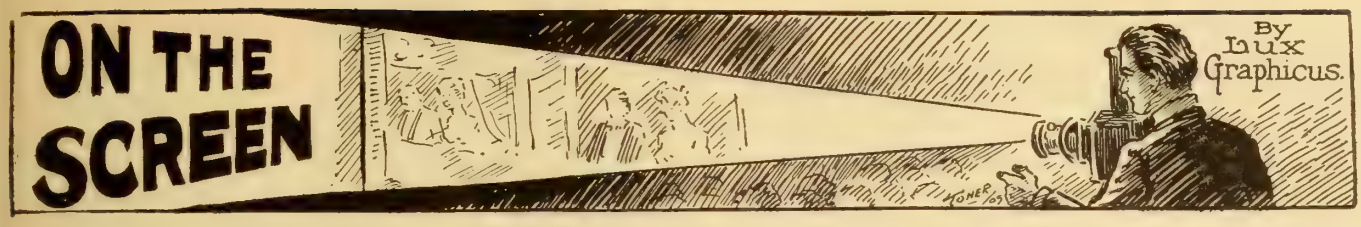
I would like to ask the manufacturer how long he expects the exhibitors and the public to stand for this kind of rubbish. The film is an Independent film, and I have recently "gone Independent;" but if I am to stay Independent, I want better stuff than this.

RICHARDSON CRITICIZED.

I have noted, page 124, your issue of January 29, an article entitled "A Question of Voltage." The statements contained therein are not strictly correct.

Mr. Richardson's first statement, which is misleading, starts on the fourth line, as follows: "With direct current, rheostats are in general use for reducing the current, and unless one has one built especially for that pressure, it is necessary to use two in series." All moving picture arc lamps, or, in fact, any arc lamp in which the carbons are not tightly enclosed with a globe, must burn with a voltage between 40 and 50. At a lower voltage the arc hisses and does not produce satisfactory volume of light, and if the voltage is above 50 the arc becomes unsteady. On account of the instability of the arc, it is necessary that a ballast of some sort be used in connection with the arc to steady it, and usually this ballast consists of a metallic resistance. If the line voltage is 110, then, regardless of the volume of current which is required to give the desired illumination, this resistance must be sufficient to cut down the voltage from 110 to approximately 45 volts, or, in other words, it must in itself absorb 65 volts Manufacturers of the rheostats purposely proportion them to accomplish this purpose, but Mr. Richardson states that, coupling two of these rheostats in series answers the purpose for 220 volts. He is mistaken in this, as, of course, the total resistance required to cut down from 220 to 45 volts must be sufficient to absorb 175 volts, although many moving picture manufacturers send out two rheostats coupled absorbing 65 volts each, and, therefore, the rheostats will pass a greater volume of current than they are capable of, and this results in serious overheating of the rheostats. It is much better to have one rheostat capable of absorbing 175 volts than to have two rheostats, one of which might absorb 65 volts and the other one 110, but in no case should two 65-volt rheostats be placed with a lamp on a 220-volt circuit, as the excessive heat will sooner or later prove disastrous.

In the start of the second paragraph Mr. Richardson states: "With a pressure of 220 volts very nearly as much current will be wasted in the resistance as heat as is used in the operation of the arc itself." This is altogether wrong, because a moving picture lamp, when operating on 220 volts consumes only 45 volts, whereas the resistance must consume 175; therefore, the resistance actually uses up almost four times as much energy as is utilized in the lamp, and on a 110-volt circuit the rheostat uses up on and one-half times as much energy as is used in the lamp. H. M. C.



New factors are constantly asserting themselves in the moving picture field. Some of us, myself amongst them, who foresaw the appearance of these factors and ventured on a little prophesy were laughted at for our foresight. But he laughs best who laughs last. Not many months ago I spoke of the time when Clyde Fitch, Augustus Thomas and other dramatists would be called upon to write moving picture plays. Fitch unfortunately died, yet here we have Rex Beach, Richard Harding Davis, Elbert Hubbard, Rev. Madison C. Peters and other noted dramatists and authors busy with their pens. Now who would have thought this only a year ago? I wonder what we shall see in this respect this time next year! Some of us, too, foresaw the time when not merely would the dramatic writer and playright be as prominent in the moving picture field as he is in the ordinary theater, but also that the star actor and actress would "arrive." And the star actor and actress have arrived. There is not a reputable manufacturer of moving pictures in the United States to-day who does not possess a regularly organized stock company. And in those companies are star performers.

* * *

So far, star performers of the calibre I have in mind, can be counted on the fingers of the hand and there would be fingers to spare. But so swift, so sudden has been the change in this respect that week by week the standard of acting excellence in the moving picture stock companies of the United States is rising in response to the pressure of public demands. And it is therefore clear that the same set of conditions will sooner or later prevail on the moving picture stage as on the ordinary stage. The public demands them.

* * *

The public, indeed, has its favorite actors and actresses in the silent drama as in the talking play. Manufacturers themselves are recognizing the value of the personalities of the actors and actresses who make the films. They are printing their portraits and distributing them. Some of these portraits have been published in The Moving Picture World. They are shown in entrances of moving picture theaters. I should not be surprised if before long they do not figure on postal cards. To have your portrait widely distributed on a postal card is the highest pinnacle of histrionic celebrity.

* * *

All this, of course, is symptomatic of the fact that the manufacturers, recognizing the enormous value of the acting end of their productions, are engaging the best possible talent for the work—men and women with reputations made on the ordinary stage, or those who give the highest promise for the work. This is as it should be. Moreover, it is inevitable that individuality asserts itself on the m. p. stage; that a competent actor or actress has practically the same chance of coming to the front on the moving picture stage as he or she has on the ordinary stage. That is what they are doing. So it comes about that the personalities of these good people are of growing interest to the public.

* * *

This is made clear by the fact that such a celebrated artist as Pilar-Morin has identified herself with the moving picture stage. It is pretty safe to predict that what this lady has done and is doing will be done by other eminent artists. So we shall have the star system in vogue. I do not wish to discuss this system in the abstract. In my opinion, however in the concrete, it is a good thing for the public. The public knows good acting when it sees it. It does not know why, precisely; it is not competent to analyze, criticise, compare or discriminate, but it knows by instinct or intuition or mere reason—it knows when a thing is good, and, knowing that much, it calls for more.

* * *

That is just what is happening in the moving picture theater at the moment. The public is looking at the picture from the acting aspect and when it arrives at the conclusion that the picture is well acted, it wants more of the same kind of work. And getting more of the same kind of work with the same performers in the film it necessarily follows that personal interest or rather interest in the identities of the chief performers is aroused, sustained, and maintained so long as the particular performer is before the public.

* * *

It is common talk in moving picture circles now that the success of a particular film or of a particular company's films are traceable to one or two performers. You hear talk of this man or that woman in such and such a film, just as you hear talk of Maude Adams or John Drew in such and such a play. The consequence is that the very highest class of moving picture acting talent is in request amongst manufacturers. Some of the latter have spirited away each other's performers. So you get a replica of the kind of thing that goes on along Broadway. Bad blood is created by this mild form of brigandage, but of course it is inevitable. Your Broadway star provokes competition amongst managers and I suppose moving picture makers, being human, are always keenly alert for headliners.

* * *

The outcome of all this of course is that the public interest in the picture heightens on account of its personalities and moreover that a continuation of that interest in the picture is only to be sustained by giving good acting in the film. All this will probably lead to a higher level of acting in the picture. Slowly but surely the Pathe standard is being reached—or, I should say, the French and Italian standards. Only the highest class of acting ability being utilized in those films. There is one thing I am glad to note by personal contact with many clever actors and actresses, that they do not consider it beneath their dignity to work for moving pictures. There is surely nothing undignified about the work.

* * *

Then again romantic interest is beginning to attach itself to the moving picture film. If you have money and yachts and desire a little temporary notoriety, there is always a pretty Broadway actress on hand to elope with you and be married to you before a Hoboken Justice, or you can arrange the usual divorce case in the same way. I am just wondering whether these elements will enter into the moving picture stage. Possibly not to the same extent, as you do not hear the dear creatures talk and therefore cannot be lured away by the seductive tones of the graceful beings who charm you on the screen. Moreover, there is this drawback: there is no stage door, so you cannot wait outside for the girl with a bouquet of flowers, or you cannot send her a present. You do not know where to find her so as to invite her to the usual little dinner at Rector's or some other Broadway palace. This, of course, makes the romantic end of the moving picture stage somewhat more difficult of realization than the ordinary talking stage.

* * *

So, perhaps, your moralist will say that the moving picture stage makes for the surer conservation of conventional morality. The performer on the screen becomes, then, what he or she should become on the ordinary stage—a mere personality with whom the public has no concern whatsoever off the stage or outside of the theater. This is probably one on the side of the moving picture stage, for it keeps us all from eloping with our favorite actress and diminishes the number of divorces. I have not yet felt inclined to elope myself or to send billets doux to the charming heroines of the moving picture stage. From what little I know of them and their position in the world, if I were tempted to do anything of the sort, I should probably arouse the ire of indignant relatives. For the ladies and gentlemen on the moving picture stage are sacro-sanct; are all churchgoers and useful members of society, chosen not only for their acting ability but for their invulnerability to the attentions of amorous admirers.

B. W. Beadell, of the Waterproof Film Company, who, with W. A. Daniels, are exhibiting their apparatus at the Imperial Hotel, will remain in the East for some time and visit the exchanges.

THE USURPER (Lubin).

A strongly dramatic story of a man who impersonates a rival in a love affair and succeeds in obtaining a portion of an inheritance to which he is heir. Some strong situations are worked out, each one of which adds materially to the interest of the story. Like most of the Lubin dramas, it is without a dull moment and the interest of the audience is maintained at the highest pitch throughout. The photography is clear and without disfiguring halation or blur, while the acting satisfactorily interprets the author's development of the idea. Altogether it is a film which will arouse interest and receive favorable comment.

THE CALL (Biograph).

Certain professions and certain business enterprises exert a peculiar fascination upon their votaries, and once engaged in them it seems almost impossible to sever the connection. The circus is perhaps as strongly magnetic as any of them, and this fascination is strongly represented in this film which is really a reproduction of life under the white top, as it is known. Even though the heroine is happily married and undoubtedly realizes the abuse frim which she escaped, the fascination is too strong and she succumbs. But, fortunately for her, the artificial character of the life appalls her and she returns to her home in time to prevent her letter announcing her return to the old life falling into the hands of her husband. The film is a brilliant study in the influence of an occupation upon character, and the effect it may have upon the individual, even after years have passed. The film may be considered unique in two respects: First, it presents very strongly the peculiar enchantment of circus life; and, second, it is a remarkably accurate representation of circus life. Probably no better was ever produced in motion pictures. The picture will appeal to some because of its pschycological suggestiveness and to others because it illustrates a circus. Not all films please such widely divergent tastes.

THE COURTSHIP OF MILES STANDISH (Selig).

Always Longfellow's poem relating the story of Miles Standish's wooing of the pretty Priscilla will be interesting. Always there will be sympathy for the older man, and the younger, too, and always there will be admiration for the young woman who had sufficient tact to encourage the young man who appealed to her heart. Marked by great beauty of descriptive expression and delightful appreciation of the subtleties of character development, the Selig players have caught the inspiration of the poem and have translated it into pictures so forcibly and with such precision of interpretation that the characters, who everybody loves and admires, move across the screen like living entities. There is Standish, the vigorous hero, with an air savoring strongly of braggadocio. There is Alden, young, lithe and typical of his surroundings, and Priscilla. For years everybody has loved her, and this adequate representation of her many virtues will increase that love. There are stirring scenes, too. One when Standish threatens Alden, and another during the Indian attack; but when Standish joins the hands of the young lovers and gives them his blessing a hush falls on the audience. Love has completed its true work. The staging is a faithful reproduction of the life and times represented, and affords an accurate representation of the home life of the period. The Selig Company has apparenly absorbed something of the spirit of the time and reproduces it with fidelity to the original and with a spirit which makes it attractive. It is a picture well worth while. It instructs and entertains at the same time. Many favorite poems, those productions of the heart that will live forever, are capable of equally graphic illustration and producers could scarcely do better service in popularizing both literature and art than to present them as graphically as this one is presented.

THE LUCK OF ROARING CAMP (Edison).

The reproduction of Bret Harte's most famous story is an achievement deserving the highest praise and when the work is done with such fidelity to the spirit of the time and occasion, the wild, rough, mining camp life around the time of "Forty-nine" is so virile with human interest, and withal so typically American that one welcomes this picture because it puts in concrete form the characteristics of a time and the appearance of the men who made it. Some of the present generation have seen something approaching it, but none know much of what occurred a half century ago, excepting as they read of it. Adequate illustration is scarcely ever attempted, and more often than not when it is there is an artificial air about it which seems to stamp it as tainted with imaginary scenes and situations. But the Edison producers are not open to that charge. They have reproduced a typical mining camp of the time and present it with all the picturesque features of the original. The arrival of the widow and her child; her death soon after and the heterogeneous collection for the benefit of the child; his discovery of gold and adoption by the camp are all reproduced so faithfully that the figures seem almost like real personages as they move across the screen, performing their parts silently, but none the less graphically. After one has seen this excellent picture he will have a better idea of that wild, picturesque life which has passed away forever.

"MOTHERLESS" (Pathe).

A sumptuous production of the famous drama, "The Two Orphans." Probably this play is known to substantially everyone. It is the story of a girl and her foster sister, who through favorable circumstances rise from poverty to riches. It offers something of the melodramatic, something which appeals almost irresistibly to the audience, partly, perhaps, because it represents two unfortunates who overcome adverse conditions and acquire a position of affluence. This sort of thing always appeals, and when it is as well done as it is in this picture, the appeal is even stronger. Both actors and photographer have performed their parts satisfactorily, producing a picture which will be popular wherever shown and which will undoubtedly rouse the sympathetic emotions of a vast majority of people in all the audiences who see it. The claims for its excellence made by its producers are amply justified and the picture is one that will stir the heart, even though one may be unconsciously indifferent.

"The Coquette" (Edison).—A love story that is different, in that it administers deserved punishment to a coquette who deceives two soldiers. Not always in pictures of this sort do coquettes obtain their just deserts, but in this instance her perfidy brings sorrow and remorse in its train. The film allows no particular feature in the acting and develops no strongly dramatic situations, excepting possibly where the dying soldier discovers the ring he has given the girl upon his comrade's finger and tells him the truth. The picture is interesting, but does not approach greatness.

"Fickle Fortune" (Pathe).—A graphic representation of the troubles which may be heaped upon a man when Fortune betrays him with her fickle fancies. The Pathe players are adepts at this sort of work and their comedians can impersonate to perfection the actions of a man who is thus betrayed.

"Swallowed by the Deep" (Gaumont).—A fairy story representing a young sailor making a promise to return to the queen of the fairies of the sea whenever she sounds her horn in return for her assistance in securing a goblet which carries with it the promise of obtaining a princess bride. The shell sounds just as he and his bride are about to retire for the first time. He lingers, and in revenge the castle and all its inmates are gradually buried in the sea. The story has no particular strength, but the magical disappearance of the castle adds some interest to the film. Photographically, the picture is quite up to the Gaumont standard.

" A Pair of Schemers" (Vitagraph).—An uncle desires to say who his nephew shall marry, but the young man does as he pleases and marries his own choice. The uncle suddenly appears and interesting and lively complications follow, which are finally settled to the entire satisfaction of everybody. It is a lively enough comedy, and the Vitagraph players make the most of what may be considered somewhat limited possibilities.

"Five Minutes to Twelve" (Vitagraph).—A comedy introducing a somewhat lengthy chase, but with a messenger boy this instance made interesting by the numerous collisions and overturnings which always follow one of these wild flights. Several novelties in tumbles are produced in this instance, in front, a somewhat unlikely combination, perhaps, but in which add materially to the sport. And the crowd returns crest-fallen when the messenger boy merely goes to a lunch counter and purchases a large wedge of pie, which he devours for his lunch.

"Count Tolstoi" (Pathe).—An addition of value to Pathes' list of well known personalities. One of the most influential men of his time, anything which serves to increase the knowledge of, or the acquaintance with, a man like Tolstoi is beneficial to everyone who sees it. And in this film the Pathes have added appreciably to this knowledge and understanding. It is an educational film which must be helpful to everyone who sees it, regardless of whether he is acquainted with Tolstoi and his work or not.

"The Confession" (Essanay).—An intensely dramatic murder story, offering opportunities for some strong work and featuring the pschycological disturbance which follows a murder when the murderer is a sensitive and somewhat nervous individual. In this instance it ultimately kills the murderer, as it has often done in real life, and the effect upon the mind. The Essanay Company have worked this picture out with much dramatic power and even though the subject has a tendency to induce depression, it is so well done that interest increases from the beginning to the end of the picture.

"Romany Rob's Revenge" (Bison).—A dime novel subject, as represented by the title. It tells in a rather graphic style the story of the stealing of a child by a gypsy who was incensed because alms was refused, and the melodramatic rescue by a gentleman who dons the gypsy's garb and enters their camp in disguise. The film is picturesque and displays to good advantage many of the interesting characteristics of the gypsies. The photography is spotty in places and might be strengthened throughout the film with a little more care on the part of the operator. Dramatically, the interest of the subject is maintained, though without any feature of special importance.

"The Honor of His Family" (Biograph).—A study in the standards of honor maintained by some men and the cowardice of a son from whom much was expected. It is dramatic to the highest degree, and reaches its climax when the old colonel kills his son, drags his body to the battlefield and leaves it lying where appearances, at least, will be in the son's favor. It is one of those pictures of which adequate description is impossible and must be seen to be appreciated. Perhaps it is more attractive for what it suggests than for what it actually shows. The conception of honor so graphically portrayed here might not be the one which would appeal to everyone, but the sufferings of the father, which are faithfully depicted, are sufficient to create a feeling of deep sympathy for him; and may be those who sympathize with the father will agree that the son received more than he deserved, though the sense of justice is somewhat marred by the false appearance which the father placed upon his death by placing the body in a favorable position upon the battlefield. So many delicate questions are suggested by this picture that it promises to be popular, and to appeal strongly to very many people.

"Cupid, D. D. S." (Lubin).—A comedy filled with plenty of clean humor. The combination is irresistible. A dentist with a pretty woman assistant, a millionaire with an aching tooth and Cupid loitering around the place looking for victims. The assistant accepts the millionaire, leaving the dentist forlorn, while the fun is fast and furious at times, while again it is a dainty humor which appeals directly to the risibles of all who see the picture. Such a combination in the hands of Lubin's players can be better imagined than described.

"Adoring an Ad." (Lubin).—Ever look at the pretty girl staring at you from a magazine page and wonder who she was? The hero of this picture did, and when he determined to discover the identity of the original he was led a merry chase. But a happy accident assisted him materially and he succeeded in his quest. The story is told by good acting, and illustrated by good photography, with all the snap and dash of the Lubin players to supply the life of the piece.

"Acrobatic Exercises by Calibri's Dwarfs" (Pathe).—An interesting picture giving an exhibition of novel and complicated acrobatic stunts, with numerous acts not commonly seen. The photography is remarkably good, showing the actors with clearness and precision. Like all Pathe films it is unusually attractive and interesting.

"Unlucky Fisherman" (Pathe).—A story of a fisherman's unlucky adventures which will cause many a laugh. The Pathe players excel in pictures of this kind, and this is no exception to the rule.

"The Ranch King's Daughter" (Selig).—A thrilling Western drama, emphasizing some of the features of Western life which made their impression upon the history of the country, making possible the great prosperity which followed the steady advance of the cowboy Westward. Here is a love story, with jealousy as the influence which causes the disappointed lover to sieze the girl and carry her away to an Indian stockade, a thrilling rescue, with a running fight and finally safe arrival home. The man who steals the girl gets justice at the hands of the cowboys. Such pictures seem rough, yet they unquestionably depict actual life as it used to be on the plains and in them these phases of life live, to be reproduced for the benefit of generations yet to come who will know nothing about it excepting what they learn from books, or see in pictures like this.

"The Modern Messenger Boy" (Essanay).—A new version of the messenger boy joke which seems more like a pipe dream than any reality. Issy's adventures are quite up to the limit of fun, representing the young man performing all sorts of service for different people, from hooking a lady's dress to minding a baby. His strenuous day's work yields him rich returns, however, and perhaps that, after all, is the main proposition to be considered. His numerous escapades are all funny, so funny that the audience scarcely ceases to laugh from the moment the picture appears on the screen until the last flash is gone.

"Tommy's Adventures in Dreamland" (Urban).—Perhaps Tommy had been partaking of some form of forbidden food; perhaps he had an inborn inclination to dream unthinkable dreams. It is hard to say just what was the cause. Yet, whatever the reason might have been, this series of adventures was of the kind that one sometimes reads about, but seldom sees. The clear photography and the clever acting combine to make it an extremely attractive picture.

Never Again (Imp).—When a temperance crusader somehow gets throttled by the demon she is supposed to be pursuing you can see for yourself what a series of complications will result. In this instance the unfortunate worker was given whiskey so frequently and so liberally that she became a shining example of how not to do it. It is a roaring farce and cannot fail to raise a laugh.

Rose of the Philippines (Imp).—A love story between a young American officer and a Filipino girl. There is the tale of being ordered home and almost a heartbreak for the poor little Filipino maiden, who is barely saved from plunging a knife into her heart by the arrival of her lover with the news that he is going to take her with him. So all ends well and once again Cupid is vindicated.

Romance of the Prairie (Bison).—Love on the prairie at racehorse speed, with a lover kicked off the place by an irate father, an elopement, with a pursuit by the father, a hurried visit to a justice of the peace and a wedding, at which the father arrives in time to give the couple his blessing. It is all rush and activity, and carries one along irresistibly from beginning to end. The dash of the cowboy is in it, and careering horses create an atmosphere difficult to describe, but easily appreciated when the picture is seen.

Woman's Strategy (Edison).—A story in which a thumb print, aided by a woman's wit and devotion, result in the release of an innocent man and the conviction of the guilty one. Jealousy causes one man to fasten guilt upon another, but he reckons without the woman's wit and is ultimately convicted himself. The story is instinct with human passion, emphasized by the players sufficiently to hold the attention of the audience throughout the picture. A good story well told, making use of novel means to prove a man's guilt.

Price of Patriotism (Gaumont).—A war story which sends a tingle through one's veins, since it shows what a woman can do when aroused to the proper pitch by circumstances. The unfortunate prisoner is released, but the woman who befriended him pays the penalty with her own life. War will eventually be understood in all its horrors, largely by means of motion pictures.

Life of Moses—No. 3 (Vitagraph.—The third in the great series released by this house. This one deals with the plagues of Egypt and the deliverance of the Hebrews. The picture follows the Bible narrative closely, but the story, known to every Sunday school worker in the land, becomes more graphic and conveys a more accurate impression than merely reading it is able to do. The effect upon those who see it is naturally much stronger than the mere reading, and the consequence is it will do more good. The film is sumptuous. The setting is undoubtedly one of the greatest pieces of work ever undertaken by a motion picture house. One feels almost as though present with the Hebrews in this miraculous deliverance, and one may almost say that one acquires a fresh and much more comprehensive conception of the occurrence. It seems more real, and causes one to sympathize with the unfortunate Hebrews in those afflictions which were laid upon them for their own education and development. The strength of the picture is so apparent and its richness and beauty is so pronounced that one can scarcely overpraise it. The work deserves all the unbounded good things said about it.

LEADERS AMONG THE FILM RENTERS.

Ask anybody who is the most popular man amongst the film renters in New York and they will tell you "Bill." Everybody knows the genial proprietor of the Imperial Film Exchange, William F. Steiner, and everybody admires his character and his methods of doing business. The manufacturers have had no more staunch supporter and the exhibitors no one who is more solicitous of their interests. Progressive always, he was the first to institute twentieth century methods into film service—the use of the automobile. At the close of the show in the local theaters served by the Imperial Film Exchange, an automobile rolls up to the door and collects the reels. These are taken back to the office and inspected by the night shift and booked for their route the next day, thereby saving customers much time which is usually wasted in some exchanges in the morning when a crowd of operators and managers all arrive at the same time with their reels and anxious to get away with the program for the day.

The success of this innovation reached even to Philadelphia and Charles A. Calehuff came over to investigate. Now "Charlie," as he is familiarly called, also aspires to being the most popular film renter in the Quaker City, so he very promptly decided that Steiner's idea was a good one, but that he would go him one better. He ordered a car specially built for the work and the sleepy town awoke one morning to rub their eyes in wonder at Calehuff's Automobile Film Service. And it is an excellent service, welcomed by everyone, and Mr. C. Calehuff is doing something to retain to Philadelphia its reputation of the old sleepy town, as with this new auto service, Mr. Operator does not need to leave the arms of Morpheus early in the morning to run down town to change his reels on time for the show. The happy Philadelphia operator, who claims to be overworked, can remain in bed an hour or two longer.

Early in the morning Mr. Calehuff's clerks prepare all the reels to be delivered in Philadelphia. Said reels are carefully packed in the automobile and so arranged by streets as to insure a prompt delivery. The chauffeur starts at a given time and he must cover his route according to a well prepared schedule, and the route has been so well studied that each operator knows exactly at what time the auto is due at his place. If Mr. Operator's watch is as correct as the watch of the chaffeur he does not need to run the risk of catching cold in front of his place. Let him be on time with his old reels and Calehuff's chauffeur will not disappoint him. When late, the operator will have no more excuse that he was detained at the film exchange or missed his car.

Another great advantage of Mr. Calehuff's innovation is the elimination of mistakes and of much confusion by keeping the operators away from the exchanges. It is a well known fact that a busy exchange looks a good deal like a Tower of Babel, when all the operators are clamoring to be served first and confusing the clerks in indulging in loud talking, jokes, singing and an abuse of cigarette smoking. The possibility of keeping the operators from collecting every morning at the exchanges and oxertaxing the patience of the much abused clerks should be considered by every renter wishing to avoid these troubles, not to mention the friction between exhibitors and renters from mistakes. The Automobile Film Service is the remedy.

While the chauffeur makes his city deliveries and collections the clerks prepare the reels for the outside exhibitors and when the automobile returns the chauffeur takes a trip to the express companies and railroad stations to deliver the outgoing reels and collect the incoming ones.

The chauffeur wears a neat gray uniform and is a determined fellow, who does not care for joy rides, but wants to make a reputation for himself of keeping his schedule, and we warn the operators not to keep the automobile waiting, as the chauffeur will not stand for any delay behind his schedule time.

We have no doubt that Mr. Calehuff's innovation will be adopted by all first-class exchanges.

CALEHUFF'S AUTOMOBILE FILM SERVICE.

CHICAGO NOTES.

Standard Film Exchange Moves.

The moving of an important film exchange is not an easy work, yet the Standard Film Exchange has just completed the task without the least interruption in the film service. At the new quarters, 159-161 Washington street, everything is yet a little topsy turvy; the desks are not in place; the carpenters are busy putting up partitions and the painters are conspicuous with their brushes and their pots of paints. Under these conditions, it would not be fair to give at this writing a description of the place, which in all appearances, will be one of the most up-to-date film exchanges when everything is installed.

After a tour of the country, I cannot say that the moving picture shows of Chicago have kept pace with the great improvements noticed in other cities. I find the same old places that I used to visit with changes not to their advantage and many of them have succumbed to the temptation of showing cheap vaudeville.

The Orpheum is still the same old place, drawing the crowds. Why? Because it is the place where the manager believes that a certain decorum is necessary to please lovers of moving pictures. At the Orpheum you are sure to see the best pictures on their release day and it is the place where visitors are courteously shown seats by polite, clean and uniformed ushers. I do not care what certain exhibitors say, but a clean place with attentive employees is always sure to be on top. The public is tired of these careless exhibitors who believe that anything is good enough for 5-cent visitors. A theater is a good deal like a restaurant. No matter how good the food can be, you will eat it with a certain disgust if it is served by dirty waiters, on soiled table cloths or dirty dishes. For this reason, polite, well uniformed ushers give a certain respectability to the place, and if even the pictures are not as good as they should be, the patrons are satisfied.

The Chicago exhibitors are either very poor musicians or ignorant of the effects of music on moving pictures. A real lover of motion pictures can spend hours looking at the screen and his mind is so wrapped with the subject that he does not need anything to stimulate him. The general public is not such a good connoisseur and he needs something to wake him up, and this is where the music comes in to keep up the interest.

When an exhibitor has a good pianist or orchestra to follow the pictures and adds some sound effects, he makes the pictures so realistic that he keeps the audience interested, but when he dulls the pictures, by omitting music and sound effects, or when he puts his audience to sleep with the same old monotonous tune, he is then compelled to give vaudeville, as even the cheapest and silliest act will be a stimulant on a sleepy audience.

The 5-cent theater on State street is doing a poor business —everyone will say because they show no vaudeville—wrong. The business is poor because the pictures are shown without music, except the occasional wheezy notes of an old organ placed in the lobby. The Lyric, also on State street, shows pictures without music, but instead of having an organ in the lobby, they have an old, out of tune, self-playing piano near the screen, to play during the intermissions. Yet two years ago the Lyric was one of the best paying places. On Madison street they have a fairly good looking place with a real innovation—a real pipe organ. The music is soft and pleasing, but it is not the proper music for certain illustrated songs and certain motion pictures. Think of an organ pealing out its melodious notes while an Indian runs after a woman, the woman falls over a roof, kills herself, another man is murdered, etc. Is it not a derision to play the sweet notes of a pipe organ while on the screen is depicted a barroom scene with cowboys drinking and fighting? The pipe organ is certainly an innovation, but should be reserved for appropriate pictures, or could be played during the intermissions. On the other side of Madison street, at the Casino, they have a piano worked by a muscular woman. It was not playing, but a hammering of the keys without respect to time or tune. No wonder that the piano is out of tune, as no instrument can stand such constant rough usage. "The Call" of the Biograph was on the screen. If I was to criticise the picture I would not do justice to the manufacturers, as the piano was acting too much on my nerves to appreciate the good acting and good work of the Biograph Company. I hate cheap vaudeville, yet I welcomed the most vulgar and silly dialogue between two colored minstrels, as the pianist had to stop and take a rest. No wonder that cheap vaudeville is getting such a hold on the Chicago audiences. From the Casino I went to the Pastime, another good looking place, but with the same disrespect for appropriate music. This

J. H. HALLBERG

Members of the Film Service Association and Manufacturers

I greet you upon your visit to this city during the Convention, and take this opportunity to cordially invite you to call at my Show Room, 30 Greenwich Ave., which is only two minutes walk from the corner of 8th St. and 6th Ave., where I will be pleased to exhibit to you the full line of

HALLBERG
Specialties for Theatres

I will show you in actual operation the

HALLBERG
Automatic Electric Economizer

for direct or alternating current, 4000 candle power Flaming Arc Lamp, Spot Lights with Color Wheel, and the new

HALLBERG
Incandescent Lighting System

guaranteed to save 60 per cent. on the bill with direct current, and over 70 per cent. with alternating current. I am also a wholesale jobber of the celebrated Electra Pink Label Carbons and will be glad to make your personal acquaintance during this Convention, which I am sure will be to our mutual benefit.

J. H. HALLBERG

30 Greenwich Ave. NEW YORK

The Excela Soundograph

The only complete and up-to-date effect-producing machine ever invented is now complete and ready for the exhibitors. Everybody pronounces it a wonder. Almost any sound or effect imaginable is easily and realistically produced by simply turning a crank, pulling a handle or pushing a button. The effects are all mounted in a handsome cabinet structure, 25 x 40 inches square and 42 inches high, with means exterior for the operation of each effect separately, or they can be operated in combinations. The Soundograph can be located either in the orchestra, pit or back of the screen as the exhibitor prefers. No expert operator is required, any one person is all that is needed to operate the Soundograph and produce perfect sound effects. A boy or some other employee of the theatre learns quickly to work the effects, thus relieving the exhibitor of the services of an expensive operator. It will put life and realism in your pictures and delight your audiences. It holds their interest and attention to the end of the reel and assures you of big box office receipts every day.

Let us ship you a Soundograph now

PRICE, $150.00

EXCELA SOUNDOGRAPH CO.

PITTSBURG, PA.

Office 1101 Empire Building

time the pianist was not a muscular woman but a very weak person, with no energy, no sentiment in the playing, any old monotonous tune, just the right thing to rock baby to sleep. I do not exaggerate, as I never saw before such an indifferent, sleepy crowd at the sight of "Old Glory" on the screen. Generally the appearance of the American flag brings forth a lot of cheering, but in the present case the audience was dead. No offense to Chicagoans, their patriotism is too well known to doubt them, but they had been put to sleep by the monotonous piano. The picture on the screen was the film of the Kalem Company (which should have never been released) "Japanese Invasion" of last July. At the last scene when the Japs are repulsed and "Old Glory" floats over the remains of the invasion, the Eastern audiences used to get wild, to throw up their hats and applaud again and again. At the Pastime nothing of the kind, "Old Glory" did not bring one applause nor the least cheer, everyone was chloroformed by the dull music. If the pianist had started a lively patriotic tune at this last scene, he would have excited the audience and would have carried the house and the cheap vaudeville act following the picture would have been a frost.

Someone suggested that the managers should reserve one side of the house for women, as the only solution to the question of big hats. I fear that such an attempt on the part of managers would mean their ruin, and I am not sure if the Lyric has not lost some of its patronage by starting a fight against the hats. Two years ago, the manager of the Lyric called my attention to the fact that he had reserved the left side of his house for women and the right side for men. When President McAdoo, of the Hudson and Manhattan tunnels, reserved some cars for the exclusive use of ladies, the women rebelled at the idea of being separated from the men. I fear that the manager of the Lyric suffered also, but this time on the part of the men refusing to be separated from the women. Do all you can to give the best service and you are sure to get it—in the neck.

Manufacturers should try not to clash on titles or give titles with a similar meaning. I fear that the Edison Company is not doing very well with "In the Nick of Time." Unless I am under the wrong impression, I believe that another picture has been produced under the same title and it seems that I am not the only one with the same impression, as in front of a Madison street show place, where the film was advertised, I heard some persons pass the remark that it was an old film. I knew better as I had with me the list of releases, but all the spectators are not so fortunate as to carry the Moving Picture World with them. This is a warning to the manufacturers; evidently the manufacturers will sell the same amount of copies but the exhibitor will be the loser and, as the manufacturer cannot exist without the exhibietor, it is better for him to be careful in the selection of his titles.

As I am told of a place where they employ the services of a talented pianist, composing his own music to follow the pictures, I will go to see him, as I am anxious to find some good notes for Chicago for next week. J. M. B.

THE MOTIOGRAPH IN THE OLD WORLD AND THE NEW.

One of the features of the Great London Earl's Court Exhibition last Summer—let us call it a sort of miniature Coney Island with a more serious touch about it—was a display of pictures sent over by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company to which Mr. J. W. Erwin lectured. The projection end of matters was in the capable hands of Mr. F. W. Swett, an electrician and operator of diversified experience. The Southern Pacific display was one of the most popular features of the Exhibition, both pictorially and technically, and we have since learned that the company received from the Commissioners of the Exhibition a diploma of merit.

No small share of the Southern Pacific's success in Europe was due to Mr. Swett, who also, by the way, had the opportunity of introducing the Motiograph moving picture machine to the English market, where it appears to be becoming popular. Since his return to the United States, the Enterprise Company are so gratified with Mr. Swett's success in their behalf in England that they have made him an offer to take up a position in their house in the capacity of traveling demonstrator, a position which he has accepted, much to the regret of the Southern Pacific, who handed Mr. Swett a fine testimonial as to his ability and personal character. The Enterprise Company are to be congratulated on securing his services. He has such an enthusiastic belief in the practical value of the Motiograph and is himself so expert in its use as well as in the use of moving picture projection machines generally, that we do not doubt, on his long trips on behalf of the Enterprise Company, he will make a great success.

EXHIBITORS AND RENTERS FRATERNIZE.

CINCINNATI EXHIBITORS DINED BY EXCHANGES.

Enthusiasm prevailed at the dinner by four Cincinnati film exchanges to the motion picture theater managers of Cincinnati at the Gibson House Wednesday night, January 19. The committee in charge consisted of I. W. McMahan, Cincinnati Film Exchange; Thomas A. Reilly, Southern Film Exchange; A. Dresner, Magnetic Film Service Company, and James L. Steele, Pittsburgh Calcium and Light Company.

The motion picture managers of Cincinnati have a strong organization, "The Motion Picture Exhibitors and Renters' Protective Association of Hamilton County," and the film men recently joined hands with it. The officers of the association are: President, T. A. Nolan; Vice-President, F. A. Bott; Treasurer, George W. Hill; Counsel, Louis B. Sawyer, and Secretary, Paul Alwyn Platz.

This was the initial banquet of a series that will be given, and the film men and motion picture managers will be brought into closer social relations. The organization also keeps watch on affairs of the motion picture world, and has accomplished a lot of good in its short existence. Last Spring it had the motion picture theater license in Cincinnati cut from $300 to $150 per year.

It is the intention to extend the organization all over Ohio, so that the motion picture theaters and film men will have subsantial backing.

WASH YOUR FILMS.

As this notice is intended to call the attention of the renters and exhibitors to the advisability of showing clean pictures and as the manufacturers have already been acquainted with the process of the National Waterproof Film Company, I will not give a description of the machinery and means employed for the coating of films, but I will try to show the necessity of washing them.

I spent an afternoon at the plant of the National Waterproof Film Company, of Chicago, an entirely new building erected purposely for the business, which shows that the company has great expectations. And why not? Are they not the friends of the industry in offering to the renters a chance to show only good, clean pictures? It is no secret that dirty films have done more to injure the business than anything else.

I witnessed, with great interest, the waterproofing of a film and as the said film moved from the coating tanks onto the numerous carriers I could see the coating solution even up on the surface of the emulsion and gradually dry, then the film rewinds in a perfectly pliable condition and ready for delivery.

If the coating slightly increases the thickness of the film it reels closer on account of the smooth surface and from the fact that the film lies perfectly flat on the reel. The coating allows the film to run more smoothly through the projecting machine without the help of beeswas, maintain a more regular loop and consequently giving a steadier picture. The main object of the coating is to protect the sensitive surface of the film, which is so easily soiled and scratched, and to give a chance to the renter to wash his films without any danger of ruining the picture. Evidently careless operators or defective machines will occasionally scratch a film, but even so the picture need not be a rain storm on the screen, as a washing will free the scratches from any dirt.

Many renters cannot get enough rental out of their films to make their investment a profitable one, because they have to deal too much with careless or inefficient operators who do not care in what condition they return the films. I have often said that if the operators were to furnish their own machines they would be more careful and have less trouble, and if the exhibitors had to purchase the films they would see that they are run carefully and kept in good order for the sake of making as much as possible of the investment.

If we cannot change existing evils we can try at least to improve present conditions and if the renters want to wash their films I feel confident that they will see a great increase in their cash receipts. If the exhibitors clamor for first run pictures it is not because they are over anxious to get the very latest subjects, but because even films only a week old are already too dirty to be shown on the screen to please a public growing each day more and more critical.

What does the public know or care if "The Christian Martyrs" of Selig is a new release or a film six weeks old. If it is a clean copy they will be pleased with it, they will appreciate the work, they will praise it to their friends, but if it be a copy badly scratched and full of dirty spots they will be disgusted; they will walk out to go to another show and perhaps praise a very inferior but clean production. The exhibitors have fully recognized that a good picture must have a good frame, so little by little the small store shows are making room for elegant houses, richly decorated, well ventilated, with comfortable seats, clean, attentive uniformed ushers, etc. Well, if an expensive frame is necessary to enhance the beauty of a good picture, it is equally necessary to have a clean picture to maintain the harmony of the place.

Although some of the exhibitors are changing their service for the sake of getting cheaper rates, my experience on the road has shown me that the greatest grievance of the exhibitor is the bad condition of the films and there is no doubt in my mind that the enterprising renters who will make it a practice to wash their films once a week will be the winners and will derive more profits from their investments than the careless fellow who thinks that anything is good enough for the exhibitor.

The National Waterproof Film Company make a washing machine for the use of the renters. The machine is very compact, is very simple, cannot get out of order and can be operated by a young girl. The reel to be washed is placed on a spindle. The film passes between two soft brushes placed in a tank filled with plain water and soap. As the film emerges from the tank it passes through four wringers to remove any water carried by the film, then passes through six discs fitted with tires of absorbent cotton and the film rewinds on the reel placed at the top of the machine, perfectly clean and dry and ready for delivery. A reel can be washed in ten minutes.

This washing machine will be on exhibition at the Imperial Hotel, New York, during the F. S. A. convention, January 29-31. J. M. B.

LUBIN PROGRESS.

The largest glass enclosed studio in America, if not in the world, is being erected in the heart of Philadelphia by the Lubin Manufacturing Company. The magnitude of the place may be understood when we say that four companies can be at work at the same time without interfering with each other. A large tank also forms a part of the equipment and is also under glass. Adjacent to the studio is a large four-story machine shop and also a long two-story film factory. In this building the undeveloped negative from the camera is received at one end and passing through the successive departments the printed positives are issued from the other end. In the machinery building are also the executive offices.

Considerable improvement has been noted of late in the Lubin product, and we are assured by the new executive head that when the new factory is ready in March that the world will see the Lubin films jump to the front in every respect. We have in preparation a detailed account of the new Lubin plant which will be illustrated in an early issue of The Moving Picture World.

Meanwhile we want to say a word about the Lubin 1910 Projecting Machine.

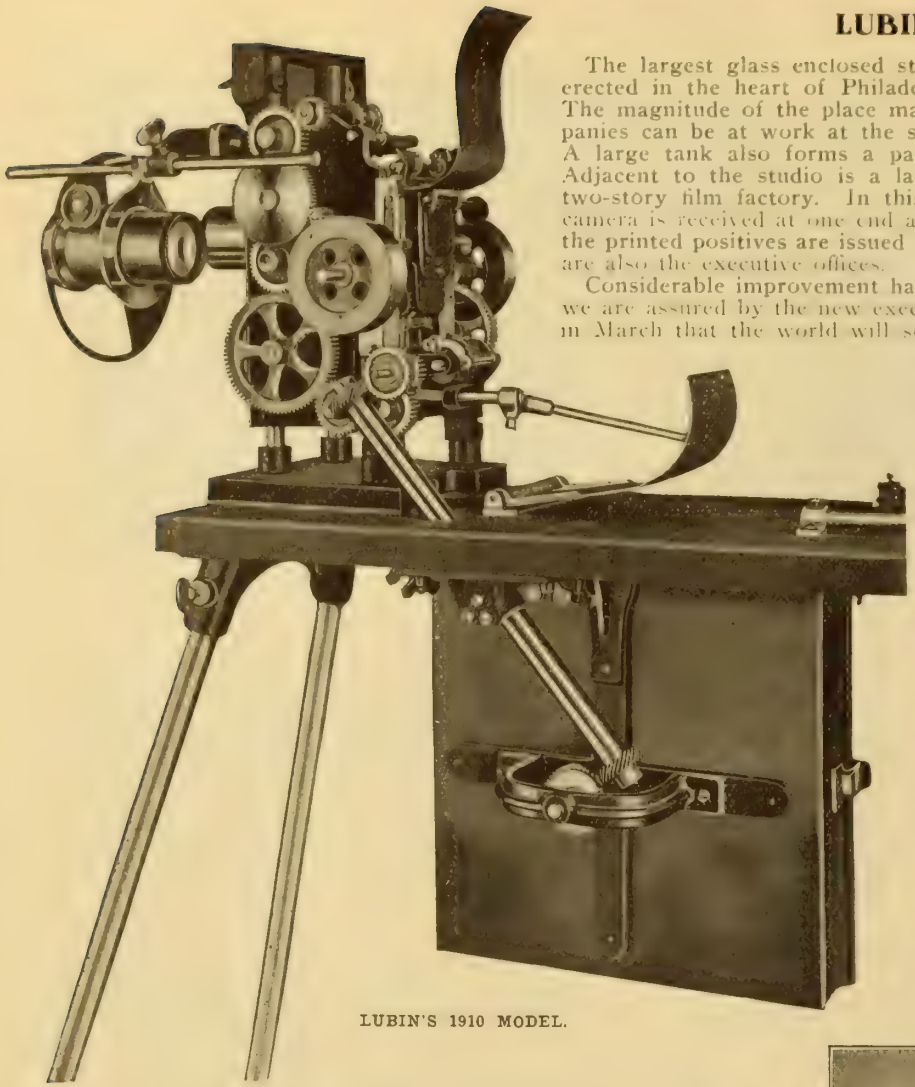
In Lubin's new projecting machine we notice some meritorious improvements which will interest prospective purchasers. The first improvement is the rewinder, which is a new departure. The old rewinding belt is replaced by a rod and spiral gears, which by a positive movement winds the film absolutely perfect. The rewinder does not pull the film from the mechanism nor does it allow the film to slack in the fire box.

By placing the shutter before the lens, Mr. Lubin claims that the flicker is greatly reduced, which is generally caused by a shutter inside the mechanism. Aside from this, an inside shutter cannot be regulated, while an outside shutter can be adjusted to any focus lens and to any distance of the machine from the screen.

As much depends on the exactness of a sprocket wheel, the Lubin sprockets are cut on the shaft. The star and sprocket are both cut on the shaft, thus making an uneven movement absolutely impossible, which is generally caused when the star and sprocket are cut separately and assembled later on.



LUBIN'S 1910 MODEL.

The fire trap on the magazines prevents fire entering the box and will not scratch the film nor injure same in any way.

The automatic fire shutter is a special patented device with all the advantages of the best devices on the market and some of its own. The fire shutter works absolutely perfect and will never refuse to rise or fall at the proper moment.

The condenser holder is a new patented device which enables the operator to replace instantly a broken condenser with a new one without being compelled to unscrew the cone or wait until the lamp house cools off.

Lubin's 1910 Marvel is a one-pin movement machine built with the greatest care by experienced machinists and in which the best grade of materials are used. All the other parts of the machine and the lamp house, table, rheostat, etc., are built with the same care.

To show the wonderful improvements achieved in the new machine, we have borrowed from Mr. Lubin cut No. 2, showing his second machine, the one made in 1896, which was the first machine ever advertised for sale, the practice then being to leave the machines on royalty. At this early stage of the ndustry the extreme length of a film was 75 feet and, as both ends were cemented together, they had a sort of endless film, which could be run over and over again without a stop. They had no rewinder, no reels, the box shown under the machine contained a majority of the film, which was carried from there over pulleys to the rear of the machine, then to the top and so down through the projector and into the box again. The first rewinder was put out in 1899, the bottom of the bench carrying a rewinder back of the receiving reel, the film coming through and being clipped to the reel for rewinding. As can be seen on cut No. 2, the arc light was not encased; the first lamp house came out about 1898.

The Film Import and Trading Company have applied for a preliminary injunction against the Centaur Film Company, of New Jersey, restraining them from trespassing on the rights of the Centaur Film Company, of New York, for which the F. I. and T. Co. are sales agents.

AN EARLY LUBIN MODEL.

EDISON NOTES.

F. H. Stewart, the Edison Manufacturing Company's traveling representative, has been doing the large cities of Southern and Eastern Massachusetts for the past three weeks, giving demonstrations of the company's new improved Model "B" Kinetoscope. The exhibitions have been generally well attended and the company is highly pleased with the results that have been achieved so far.

The Edison Company expects to release at an early date "Ranson's Folly," the pictorial adaptation of Richard Harding Davis' great story of a Western army post. In the scenario form, which was prepared by the author, it is said that extreme care was taken to preserve all the absorbing incidents of the novel, and special attention was given to the production, for which a special cast was engaged and the most minute detail of fidelity in respect to character, scenery and costumes insisted upon. If this is true, "Ranson's Folly" ought to be the most notable film release of the year, for those who have read the book will recognize the tremendous dramatic possibilities that lie in the story.

"A Victim of Bridge," E. W. Townsend's production, dealing with social life among New York's "Four Hundred," will be released on February 22. It is said that the gowns worn by the actresses in this play are the latest Parisian importations, and that the scenery and properties throughout are thoroughly in harmony with the costumes. It is claimed to be the most lavish and correctly staged production ever given to a picture play.

ESSANAY NOTES.

Under the title of "Sensational Logging" the Essanay Company releases on Saturday, Febraury 5, a scenic and industrial subject which promises to make a sensation. The picture is one of the most beautiful since the "Wonders of Nature" film, released by the Essanay Company last August. Lumbering processes in the Cumberland Mountains of Kentucky and Virginia are pictured from the felling of the trees to the time they start on their journey down to the sawmills in Ohio. The film's title obtains from the last scenes, when a large dam on Russel's Fork, a tributary of the Big Sandy, is exploded, releasing over 100,000 logs, which are floated down to Elkhorn on the Big Sandy. Photographically the film is exceptional and those acquainted with Cumberland Mountain scenery will proclaim it worth seeing.

"The Essanay Guide," the Essanay Company's new bulletin of films, made its appearance this week. Typographically it is one of the prettiest bulletins we have seen. It contains twelve pages, is done in two colors ,and profusely illustrated. Each page of description is set in a colored border after the "old print shop" style. The "Guide" is issued fortnightly. The Essanay Company are anxious to obtain the names of exhibitors who have not been receiving the Essanay bulletins for their mailing list.

Another triumph for the Essanay Company is their "Aviation at Los Angeles" picture, to be released soon. Paulham, Curtis, Knabenshue and other aviators are seen in close up views at their machines and in flight. The picture is one of the most interesting aviation pictures ever issued.

The Essanay Company are advertising for moving picture scenarios, needing particularly strong comedy subjects at present. The Essanay company's scenario department has issued a small booklet on "How to Write a Moving Picture Play" which is valuable to the aspirant in picture play writing.

VITAGRAPH NOTES.

"The Passing Shadow" has a thrill and strength of human sympathy seldom if ever equalled, in which a father's pride and iron will struggle with a father's love for the mastery.

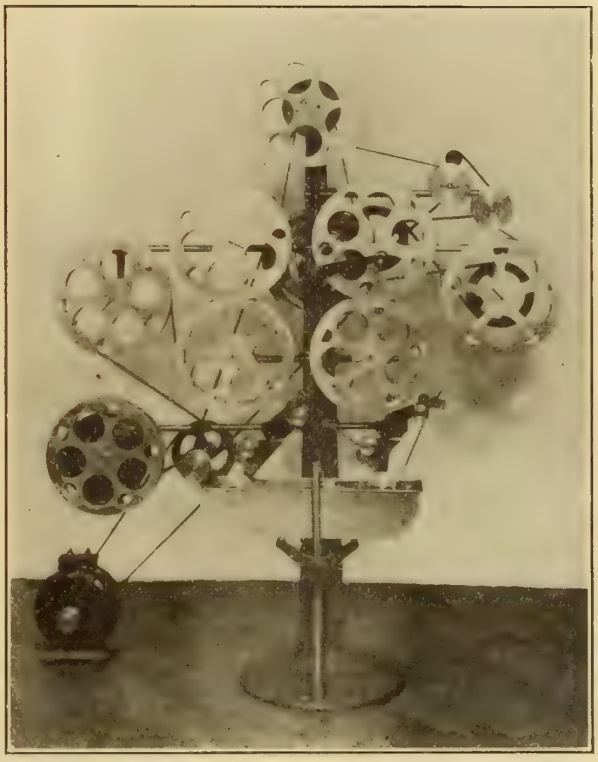
"The Wayside Shrine" is set with some of the most beautiful bits of natural scenery ever introduced in a motion picture play. While the story has a tinge of sadness, these blendings of natural pictures with the pretty touches of love and pathos make it really a work of art.

The Vitagraph studio is looked upon with some degree of suspicion by its employees since "Moses" has been in the course of development. The performance of Aaron's rod, which turned into a real snake and devoured the serpents of Pharoah's court magicians who duplicated the "trick," made the boys anxious. It was no small test of nerve and courage for the actors to stand still in sandaled feet before the big black reptiles especially engaged for the act. It was noticed that one or two of the "court attendants" surreptitiously moved their feet, while others made a move to give the leading snake a sly kick. When his snakeship was tenderly picked up after the performance, one of the directors silently stole down the studio stairs to get a drink of "Perrier"

Waterproofed Films

like all others will soil, but unlike all others they can be cleaned with

Soap and Water



This machine does it in 10 minutes

ALL EXCHANGES NEED ONE

National Waterproof Film Co.

4200-4202 W. Adams Street

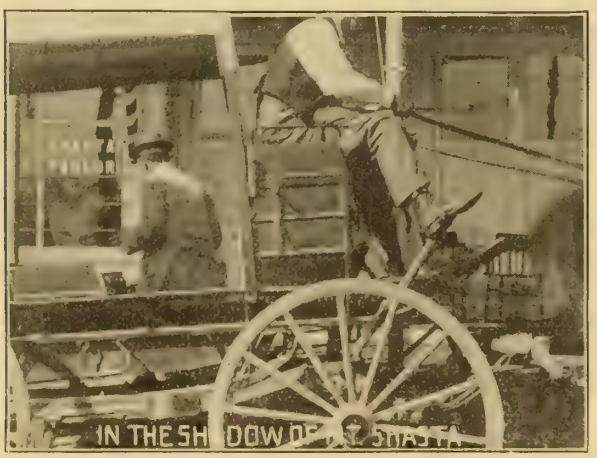
CHICAGO, ILL.

water. Those who were not in it cannot realize what it means to perform the marvelous feat of drowning the Egyptians in the Red Sea, as pictured in the fourth reel of "Moses." A dozen ways were tried to do it—mechanical, scenic and otherwise—until it was decided nothing but a real sea of water would suffice and get it across to the audience. It is not pleasant to be called upon in the middle of January to take a cold bath in the deep "Red Sea," and yet it was tried time and again before it was successfully accomplished. After the first trial it was difficult to find a corporal's guard around the studio who had not deserted or were not suffering from "cold feet" and incipient chills. It taxed the full capacity of the Vitagraph hospital staff to get their army into shape to again plunge into the mysteries of the deep and take the chances of a double exposure. When the desired result was finally accomplished and the Egyptians were all drowned, they held a heated "confab" around the stove over the possibilities and limitations of moving picture effects.

* * *

The Italian company of actors which the Vitagraph Company added to their staff last Fall are seen to advantage in the "Soul of Venice," a story of a Venetian poet's love in the sixteenth century, incidentally displaying some remarkably pretty vision effects in the graceful posing and dancing of a famous danseuse who was especially engaged for this picture.

SCENES FROM SELIG DRAMAS.



MOTION PICTURE PIANO MUSIC

This is a book of descriptive music, regular sheet music size, and arranged for both hands. Specially selected, arranged and composed by one of the best descriptive Pianists in the U. S., who for the past twenty years has been Musical Director in all lines of Theatrical Productions. This work is the result of actual experience, and is now being used in hundreds of M. P. Theatres. Contains music, for all probable scenes, actions, characters, etc., and its suggestions are entirely practical. Increases the value of YOUR SHOW 100%. Descriptive circular sent free to anyone upon request. This book sent promptly upon receipt of price. $1.00 Remit either by P. O. or Express Order, Draft or Check to

GREGG A. FRELINGER

1009 Ferry Street Lafayette, Ind.

TRADE MARK

Thanhouser Company

NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

Announce to the independent exchanges they will begin the regular weekly releases of their INCOMPARABLE American Films in a few weeks.

Address all communications to

THANHOUSER COMPANY

New Rochelle, N. Y.

Don't Buy Yourself Poor

MAKE YOUR OWN

Non-Inflammable Cement

I will sell this valuable Formula upon receipt of only $2.00

The ingredients of which can be purchased anywhere at a very reasonable price. Can be used on both kinds of Film

Positively Strongest Film Cement Formula on Earth

Send 12c. for sample bottle and be convinced

JOHN H. HEINZ

Gem Theatre Baltimore, Md.

Independent Film Service

PIEDMONT FILM EXCHANGE

GOLDSBORO, N. C.

Write us today for our Special Offer

No Old Association Films Used in Our Service Whatsoever, but Exclusive Independent Films of the Real Good Kind. . . .

Song Slides Free to Customers

Films, Machines, Songs Slides Constantly on Hand For Sale

WRITE US TODAY

Independent Films

FOR SALE

We offer for sale about 500 Reels of old Independent and Association films in good condition; every reel has been renovated and cleaned in our own plant, putting same in fine condition. We have concluded to handle no films in the future for rental purposes that are more than six to seven months after release. Write for list to the largest Independent Film Exchange in this territory.

Wagner Film Company
208 North 4th Street :: St. Louis, Mo.

DISCOVERED AT LAST

Atlas Film Cement

For Non-Inflamable or Ordinary Film

NO MORE THICK, ROUGH or WEAK PATCHES

PRICE, 25 CENTS PER BOTTLE
Sent Postpaid on Receipt of Price

Special prices in case lots to Exchanges

Manufactured by the

ATLAS SUPPLY COMPANY
Manayunk, Philadelphia, Pa.

HERE IS THE "FORERUNNER" of THE FIGHT
JEFFRIES-JOHNSON FIGHT PICTURES
Mr. Exhibitor, take advantage of this feature, colored slide views of Jeffries, Johnson, their trainers, the promoters, etc. Mr. Exchange Man, are you exhibiting a fight film? If yes, then you need a set of these slides to show before or between reels. Sets of 11 Slides, $3.50; 18 Slides, $5.50; 18 Slide Sets rented, 3 days, $2.00; week, $4.
THE FEATURE SYNDICATE - Box 82, Sandusky, Ohio

SONG SLIDES

JUST ILLUSTRATED
I've Just Got Time To Say Good Bye
Daddy's Doll
Could You Learn To Love Me
Dreams That I Dream Of You
My Irish Prairie Queen
We make Lantern Slides of anything and everything for any and every purpose
Send for our special prices on Announcement Slides
NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO., 143 North 8th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SONG SLIDES

SOUNDOGRAPH.

A New and Compact Device for Producing Realistic Sound Effects in Conjunction with the Picture.

Mr. Charles E. Williams, who has operated one of the moving picture theaters of Pittsburg, got so discouraged with poor results and of constantly purchasing new devices, that he invented a scheme by which he could safeguard his effects and have them kept in their proper place and in order, and he then decided to lock his devices in a case and operate them from the outside by means of levers, handles, pushbuttons, etc., this primitive arrangement giving birth to the Excela Soundograph, which is now offered to the exhibitors in its perfected and developed state by the Excela Soundograph Company, Keenan Building, Pittsburg, Pa.

The case in itself is a fine piece of well polished furniture, matching very nicely the piano in the moving picture theater. In the limited space at our command it is impossible to enumerate all the sound effects to be obtained, as they are almost unlimited, when it is considered the many combinations that can be produced, but we will say that Mr. Williams has perfected his machine to obtain sound effects heretofore unknown in many moving picture theaters.

A few of the many effects obtained by the Excela Soundograph are the following: One or more horses in a walk, trot, or gallop, over paved streets, on a bridge, or on soft ground, at the will of the operator; locomotive and train; thunder storm; steamboat; hoisting engine; wash of the surf; rain; running water; falling water; automobile; fire apparatus in action; strike of a clock; ringing of telephone bell or door bell; sleigh bells; ambulance call; patrol and trolley gong, etc.; the crash of breaking glass or dishes; the falling of timber and heavy articles; strong wind blowing; the fire of arms from a single shot to a fusillade of an army; rumbling of a heavy wagon on cobblestones; air brake and many other effects.

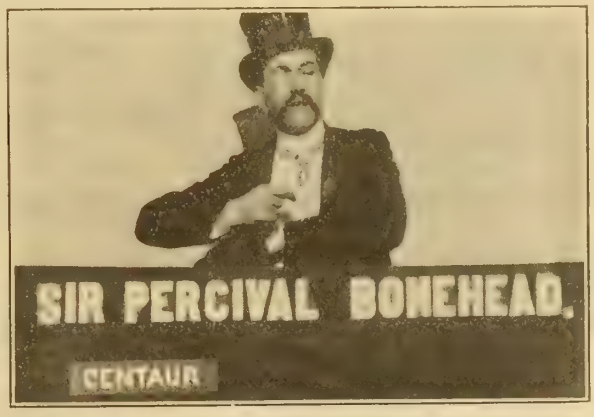
Mr. Williams' invention offers another advantage, namely, that the exhibitor does not need to depend on an expert to produce the sound effects, as anybody with ordinary intelligence can produce perfect effects with the Soundograph.

The Soundograph is at its best behind the curtain, but it can be operated from the front with equal effectiveness, if for any reason the exhibitor prefers to have it there. It being so compact and really pleasing in appearance, there is no reason why it should not be located in the orchestra pit near the piano.

The sound effects put life and realism in the picture and draw trade, provided they are given in the proper manner and at the proper time.

NEW INDEPENDENT MANUFACTURER.

The Thanhauser Company, of New Rochelle, N. Y., who have erected a large studio in that town, and have been busily at work for some time, will shortly begin to make regular release of high quality independent film. Mr. Thanhauser's dramatic experience should be a profitable asset in his new venture.



The two latest productions of the Centaur Film Company are "The Ordeal" and "Bonehead" and are immensely popular. This company has been showing marked improvement with every picture. In "The Ordeal" they have depicted a story of very dramatic excellence, reaching a point where the audience waits with bated breath for the outcome. In "Bonehead" they have created a thoroughly clean comedy full of amusing incidents, very much on the line of the play, "The New York Idea," introduced by Minnie Madden Fisk at the Lyric Theater last season.

BIOGRAPH FILMS

TRADE MARK TRADE MARK

RELEASED JANUARY 31, 1910

The Cloister's Touch

A BIOGRAPH STORY OF RELIGION'S SOLACE

In the olden days the common man was his feudal lord's slave, and had no redress to the many outrages imposed. The Duke in this subject forcibly takes the beautiful wife of a peasant to court where he makes a lady of her. She grieves for her child and the Duke, who really loves her, takes her back to her home, only to find her husband and child gone, he having accepted the refuge of the monks, taking the child with him. The poor wife becomes ill with her longing for her child and the surcease comes with death. The Duke realizing he has caused it all, determines to spend the rest of his life in penance. With this in view he enters the monastery, where he is brought face to face with the outraged husband. The husband is at first inclined to leap at the Duke's throat, but under the shadow of the cross he breathes those words of Christian charity, "Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgove those who trespass against us."

APPROXIMATE LENGTH, 993 FEET.

RELEASED FEBRUARY 3, 1910

The Woman from Mellon's

A STORY OF LOVE'S STRATAGEM

In this Biograph comedy is shown that love will always find a way, and the method adopted here is most unique. A young stock broker is in love with a financier's daughter, and being a prosperous and energetic young fellow, father gives consent. However, the youth is hard hit by the panic, and the father repells him. He gets a position with a detective agency, the chief being a friend. Going to the girl to tell her of his new position, he is surprised by papa, who, thinking they are planning an elopement, writes to the Detective Bureau to send a woman to guard his daughter against eloping. The young fellow persuades the chief to let him cover the job. Dressed as a woman he makes a stunning appearance and gets the good graces of the father who gives him valuable stock tips which enable him to recoup his fortune. Again prosperous, he elopes with the girl and none too soon, for papa is suggesting the same thing.

APPROXIMATE LENGTH, 988 FEET.

A Full Description of these Subjects will be Found on Another Page

Release days of Biograph Subjects—MONDAY and THURSDAY

Get on Our Mail List and Keep Posted. Write for Our Descriptive Circulars

BIOGRAPH COMPANY

Licensee of the Motion Picture Patents Co.

11 EAST 14th STREET :: NEW YORK

GEORGE KLEINE, Selling Agent for Chicago (52 State St., Chicago, Ill.).

FILMS HOWARD MOVING PICTURE CO. FILMS

Repair Work a Specialty. Agents for Motiograph, Power's and Edison Machines. Supplies and Sundries.

564 Washington Street, - - Boston Mass.

Established 1894. (Opposite Adams House). Incorporated 1908.

Feature Films For Sale

200 Reels of high class films at slaughter prices.

SAXE FILM EXCHANGE

1416 Broadway - New York

Expert Operator or Manager

At liberty after January 29th. Best of references. Sober and reliable. Responsible parties write quick. Address

Lock Box 591 New Kensington, Pa.

SLIDES of Highest Quality

LATEST SONG SETS

The Spot That My Heart Calls Home.
The Flower of Singapore.
Kitty Grey.
The Wreck of the Good Ship Love.
In The City Where Nobody Cares.
I Rather Say Hello Than Say Good Bye.
I Love My Steady. But I'm Crazy About My Once In Awhile.
Candy.
I Have Got Something In My Eye.
Kitty.
Chasing The Eagle.
If I Thought You Wouldn't Tell.
Anywhere.
I've Got Rings On My Fingers And Bells On My Toes.
Amina.

High class slides made and colored to order from prints and negatives

Scott & Van Altena

59 Pearl St., New York City

NEW SLIDES

For the Following Songs—JUST OUT

Her Name is Mary Donohue
Busy Little Cupid
When the Daisies Bloom.
Shaky Eyes.
Mandy How Do You Do.
Margarita.
Love Me Dreamy Eyes.
Nora Malone.
By the Light of the Silvery Moon.
There's Nothing Else in Life Like Love, Love, Love.
Take Me Back to Sunshine Land.
Mary you're a Big Girl Now.
My Dream of Long Ago.
When I Fell in Love With You.
Rosenbaum.
When You've Won the Only Girl You Love.
Just a Girl Like You.
In the Harbor of Sunshine and Love.
You'll Come Back.
Put On Your Old Grey Bonnet.
Heinz.

DeWITT C. WHEELER

120 W. 31st St., N. Y. City

Canadian Exhibitors

Looking for a first-class film service, write the Crystal Palace Film Exchange for particulars. We handle both Licensed and Independent films and can give you a right up-to-date service. We own and operate the most successful Moving Picture Theaters in Canada.

Located at

141 Yonge Street, Toronto.
331 St. Lawrence Blvd., Mont.
27 King Street East, Hamilton.

Agents for Power's and Edison Machines.

Crystal Palace Film Exchange

141 Yonge Street. Toronto, Can.

BIOGRAPH COMPANY.

THE CLOISTER'S TOUCH.—In the olden days when the common man was his feudal lord's slave, many were the outrages perpetrated upon them with no redress save that which came from the hand of Providence, and tardy though the reckoning seemed, it was, nevertheless, inevitable. This subject shows a peasant family comprising the father, mother and little boy child. They are happy in their own sphere until one day several courtiers of a hunting party stopped at the humble home for refreshments. The men are particularly struck with the beauty of the young wife, and as their Duke is in the depths of boredom they suggest carrying her off to court. However, they think it best to first consult the Duke, who in the extreme of ennui, is most agreeable to the plans. Hence, the poor wife is torn from her husband and child and taken to court to be made a lady by the Duke. Here she has all her heart could wish for, as the Duke has fallen deeply in love with her. Still the one thing she longs for is her child. The Duke finally consents that she may go and get it. Back to her old home she is taken, only to find it deserted, her husband having, meanwhile, accepted the refuge offered by the monks and become a postulant at the monastery, taking the boy with him. From the fruitless journey she returns despairing, and through grief, her reason is shattered, so the Duke has presented other children, hoping that her mind may be restored, but she is not appeased, and her grief finds surcease in death. The Duke is plunged in the deepest despair at the outcome of what he now acknowledges an outrage, and would have atoned with his own life, but that the cross handle of the dagger with which he was about to perform the dispatch suggests another course, and determining upon a life of penance he goes and offers himself to the monks. Here in the same monastery where all are equal he also becomes a postulant and he comes face to face with the outraged husband. There is a start and a slight inclination to rush at each other, but under the shadow of the cross they breathe those words of Christian charity "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them who trespass against us." And as they pass into the chapel to vespers the sound of "Amen" reverberates.

THE WOMAN FROM MELLON'S.—Love will always find a way, and though conditions may seem desperate and obstacles unsurmountable, still Master Cupid and Dame Fate will conspire to bring together two hearts if they, in turn, have the audacious daring to hearken to their suggestions, for their slogan is "Faint heart ne'er won fair lady." The plan evolved in this Biograph story is most unique. Harry Townsend, a young stock broker, is in love with the pretty daughter of James Petersby, a Wall street magnate, and as Harry is a very promising young fellow, he gives his consent to the match. Harry, however, is hard hit by the panic, and loses practically all. This changes the color of things and the young lover is forbidden the wealthy man's house. Despairing, he goes to look for employment, and in answer to the "ad" of a detective agency, he finds the chief an old friend of his, hence he gets the job. He then goes to see his sweetheart to inform her of his success, but the father catches him and puts him out, suspecting they are planning to elope. Petersby then writes a letter to the Mellon Detective Agency to send to his house a reliable strong woman as guard and companion for his daughter whom he suspects is bent on eloping. This happens to be the agency with which Harry has connected and he prevails upon the chief to be allowed the assignment. He then procures the wardrobe and shaving off his moustache appears at the Petersby mansion the most attractive looking damsel you would meet in a day's journey. Now Mary is rebellious and the fact of being watched is extremely repugnant, so she avows that no woman shall watch over her, but she cannot help herself for she cannot stir without having the lady from Mellon's at her side. That she hasn't recognized her is due to the fact that she has never looked at her, her aversion being so intense. Finally she bursts into tears of anger and then Harry discloses his identity. They, however, carry on the little farce, and the father becomes quite smitten with the fair stranger. Besides flirting with him he gives out valuable stock tips, which Harry makes good use of and recoups his fortune. Thus far, everything goes well, but the old gent is getting serious and suggests that they elope. "Good Heavens!" so Harry exclaims to Mary. "Hurry up! If you don't elope with me, your father will." So away they go, just as papa enters ready to fly with the fair charmer. Learning of their departure, he follows and traces them to Harry's rooms where he is prevented from entering while the marriage ceremony of his daughter and her lover is performed. There is nothing left but to make the best of it, which he does, realizing what a fool he has made of himself, and this is the only means of relieving his own embarrassment.

ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.

THE WRONG MAN.—Mrs. Simpkins, a pretty young matron, is on her way home from a shopping tour late one afternoon when she is accosted by a gallant dude, who endeavors to attract her attention. After some endeavor to pass the masher, Mrs. Simpkins gives him a violent shove into a snowbank and hurries on. Not feazed by this, the masher brushes himself and hurries after her.

When she arrives home she finds the maid washing the front windows and calling her from her work, hurries into the house with her. They lock the doors, but the persistent masher climbs in through the window. Mrs. Simpkins and the maid, panic stricken, run out of the house and seeing the plumber coming toward them, beckon for him to hurry. They tell him about the impudent intruder and he volunteers to put him out and leads the way into the house.

The masher, however, hears them coming and hides in a closet. The plumber, followed by Mrs. Simpkins and the frightened maid, looks around but the masher is not in sight. He volunteers to stay around, however, to protect the ladies should the annoying fellow return. They leave the room and the plumber helps himself to a cigar and waits.

A moment later in comes Mr. Simpkins, a traveling man, who has just returned from an extensive trip. The plumber mistakes the little man for the masher and finally, after many attempts to get him out of the house, throws him out of the window into a snowbank. This part of the film is a scream.

Mr. Simpkins tries new tactics. He sees two expressmen unloading his trunk and bribing them to help him, he gets into the trunk and is carried inside. But when the trunk lid begins to rise, the plumber who is watching it, jumps on it, slams down the lid and rolls it down the back steps.

Mr. Simpkins, now in a rage, borrows the expressman's overcoat and hat and enters the house again. He is about to be thrown out of the window again when Mrs. Simpkins enters and recognizes her husband. The masher, concealed in the closet, now tries to make his escape. But the husky plumber overpowers him and he is thrown out of the window into the snow. Mrs. Simpkins and her little hubby are immediately reconciled, while the plumber, after offering profuse apologies, chucks the maid under the chin, and exits.

A VOICE FROM THE FIREPLACE.—The film deals with a tender and delicate topic that cannot be misinterpreted, which, however, is so skilfully and fascinatingly interpreted that one loses sight of the rather warm motif and is carried along by the art of the players.

Paul Burget and Julian Frouchard have been life long friends, but the marriage of the latter has somewhat separated them. Julian, however, insists on his friend making their home his own, as it were, and Paul of course is frequently in to tea with them. Bertha, Julian's wife, is an attractive woman, while Paul is an exceedingly handsome young man and it is not long before Bertha and Paul are the warmest friends, and neither of them quite sure that they are not more to each other.

They are put to test one evening when, after dinner, all three gather around the card table for a quiet game. The man servant brings in a message for Paul, a request that Paul meet a certain business man with whom he has dealings immediately. Paul at first insists on leaving with his friend, but Julian asks him to remain with his wife to keep her company and that he will be back in a short time.

Paul and Bertha left alone endeavor to talk and amuse themselves but it is a hard task. They seem drawn to each other by an unseen power. Bertha endeavors to read, but the book drops listlessly from her hands. Paul crosses to her and seats himself on the arm of the chair. The woman suddenly turns to the fireplace and asks him to place a log on the fire. Paul does so, then turns about the room. Bertha suggests a game of cards, but as they argue over what was trumps, Paul's hand steals over Bertha's, then both arise again electrified. Paul turns away resolved to go, but as he dons his overcoat she tells him "No!"

A short time later Bertha again attempts to read and Paul seats himself on the arm of the chair. A moment later Bertha's arm steals about his neck, and he, no longer able to resist the temptation, clasps her in his arms and is about to press a kiss to her lips when a loud noise makes them both spring up. A burning log has rolled from the fireplace and out on the rug. Paul springs across the room like a madman and is just placing the log back on the fire when Julian enters. The falling log had saved them!

A moment later Paul takes his hat and coat and bids them good-night and Bertha falls sobbing thankfully in her husband's arms.

SENSATIONAL LOGGING.—The Cumberland Mountains, which form the line dividing Kentucky and Virginia, are studded with rich timber, which, up to the time of the building of the great dam on Russell's Fork, was impossible to obtain because of the impassable conditions of the mountain roads. Some enterprising lumbermen knew of this condition, went down into the country and looked it over. A creek, dry in Summer, but a raging torrent in Winter, winds its way down from the mountains, emptying into the "Big Sandy" at Elkhorn, Kentucky. Some one suggested damming the creek and reserving the water, then piling in logs above the dam. When sufficient water and logs had accumulated the dam would be blown up and the logs and water released. This dam has been in operation for several years and is now making millions for the brainy men who devised it. Up in the Cumberlands the virgin forests are falling before the axes of the sturdy Kentuckians and Virginians, while lumber camps, as thick as mushrooms, dot the forests.

The Essanay film shows in an interesting way, lumbering processes from the felling of the giant trees, hauling and dumping of the logs above the dam and the blowing or "splashing" of the dam, which releases the many thousands of logs on their mad race down to Elkhorn.

Beginning with the felling of the trees, we see the logs snaked by the inevitable Kentucky mule to the little wooden railed railway, loaded on flat cars by powerful derricks and started on their trip down the mountain side. The little dummy engine puffs and snorts around dangerous curves, while the rocking cars, laden with immense logs, joggle along behind.

Pulling up at the embankment a half mile or so above the dam they are rolled down into the creek to wait until the reservoir is full.

The dam is so constructed as to permit the opening of gates or locks and releasing the logs without seriously damaging the concrete abutments. It is 200 feet long, 40 feet high and has four gates of heavy timber, the cracks of which are stopped with cinders and clay until water tight. A heavy brace holds the gates closed while the water fills the reservoir.

Looking from the dam up creek the spectacle is amazing. Hundreds of thousands of logs as far as eye can see! Each log worth about $40! Figure it up, Mr. Exhibitor, and you will realize what a tremendous profit there must be in this great industry.

The morning that our camera men made the picture of the "splashing" of the dam there were nearly 50,000 logs ready for release. As preparations for the blowing up of the dam were being made the logs lay apparently sleeping. Two men were fixing the dynamite caps at each of the gate braces. Some one up on the hill bawled an order, the two workmen hurriedly finished their work and withdrew, then from a signal to the men with the battery, stationed up on the hill, there was a deafening explosion, the gates slowly lifted and the mass of water and logs swept majestically through. Down the creek a quarter of a mile another camera man waited for the flood of logs and water. The water, at first, was hardly visible, as the great mass of logs rolled by and went thundering down the creek.

The picture closes with other views of the dam with the torrent of logs and water sweeping through.

EDISON MFG. CO.

A JAPANESE PEACH BOY.—The story begins with the finding of a wonderful peach which comes floating down a small stream and is brought to shore by a little Japanese woman, who takes it to her home. It there transpires that she and her husband are still mourning the loss of a baby, and the wonderful peach when it is cut brings healing to their sorrow, for as the father's hands separate the two parts of the luscious fruit, between them miraculously appears the figure of a tiny baby. It is a real Japanese baby (which no one could by any chance mistake for a doll) and the parents' joy is very great. We next see the boy grown to eight years of age and the object of the loving affection of his parents.

On their way home from the same little river, down which he came floating in the peach, they are forced to pass a cavern inhabited by Japanese ogres, monsters of most fearful mien, half-human and half animal. The young mother and the boy are attacked by the ogres, and the boy draws his tiny sword and vigorously defends her; but even though he cuts off the tail of the lion they are overpowered, and the monsters are carrying him away to their cave, when the mother sees a pile of stones and uses them with such good effect that the monsters are driven off and she and the boy make their escape. But he has lost his little sword in the fight, and when we see him in a later scene at the ripe age of eighteen, he is announcing his determination of going back to the cavern, conquering the ogres and recovering the weapon. His father and mother suggest that he will shake so with fear that he will be unable to carry out his purpose, but, becoming convinced of his son's bravery, the father loans him his own "honorable sword." On the way to the cavern the boy meets three friends (at least they seem to be such), each of which, on being promised a part of the food from the boy's basket, agrees to fight for him. The three friends are the ape, the pheasant and the dog.

But when they reach the gateway before the cavern's mouth the first two desert him, and only the dog remains, as always, the faithful one. With his master, he bursts through the gate and they descend into the cavern. Then we are shown a scene of exceptional beauty, for the cavern is a wonderful place, in spite of its uncouth inhabitants. Its floor is littered with the spoils of many robberies, and among them the boy sees his little lost sword. But now the monsters appear, their leader a sort of wild man of remarkable agility (the part is played by a wonderful Japanese acrobat). He attacks our small hero and a typical Japanese duel

Buy the Best Machine First

The price of an Edison Kinetoscope is simply the price of the best motion picture machine. The price of a cheap machine is its own price plus the price of an Edison Kinetoscope, which you are certain to have to buy later.

A cheap machine costs more to operate, requires more repairs, constantly burning up your profits, and wears out quickly.

EDISON KINETOSCOPE

gives the clearest, steadiest pictures, keeps the same crowd coming night after night and builds you up a substantial, profitable business.

Why throw away a big proportion of your profits on repairs? Why not have an Edison and get all the profit there is in it?

Our book, about the Edison Kinetoscope, gives full particulars, and will be sent you to-day if you'll ask for it—and also a copy of the Edison Kinetogram.

EDISON FILMS

Releases of February 1 and 4

RELEASE OF FEBRUARY 1.

A JAPANESE PEACH BOY
(WITH MLLE. PILAR-MORIN.)

A pretty Japanese fable, prepared by the world's greatest pantomimist, Mlle. Morin, and in which she enacts two characters. A film abounding in ogres, gnomes and monsters of fairy tale fame, dancing Geisha girls and wonderful transformation effects. A film that will appeal to the children as well as all lovers of mystic lore. Superbly photographed. You can't afford to miss this film.

No. 6582 Code, VESCUNTUR Approx. Length, 940 feet

RELEASES OF FEBRUARY 4.

HIS JUST DESERTS

A strong dramatic film, whose scenes are enacted in a real Southern iron foundry. Chagrined at being repulsed by a fellow workman's wife, an iron worker revenges himself upon the man and is punished by a fearful death from the molten iron. Intensely realistic.

No. 6583 Code, VESEVINUS Approx. Length, 365 feet

THE SURPRISE PARTY

Comedy. How two express packages went to the wrong address, because a pair of jokers changed the wagons that held them, and the laughable results that followed. A most amusing story well acted.

No. 6584 Code, VESEVUS Approx. Length 365 feet

THE BAD MAN FROM RILEY'S GULCH

Comedy of the uproarious type. The "bad man" after getting Dutch courage from a bottle, starts to clean up the town. He does for a while but is finally tamed by a woman. The laughter starts when the "bad man" gets his first drink and ends when the film does.

No. 6585 Code, VESGUEAR Approx. Length, 265 feet

Releases of February 8 and 11

RELEASE OF FEBRUARY 8.

THE LIVINGSTON CASE (Detective Story)

No. 6586 Code, VESICABUNT Approx. Length, 995 feet

RELEASES OF FEBRUARY 11.

AN EQUINE HERO (Dramatic)
(Introducing Don Fulano, the Greatest Living Educated Horse)

No. 6587 Code, VESICAIRES Approx. Length, 725 feet

A QUEEN OF THE BURLESQUE (Comedy)

No. 6588 Code, VESTIARES Approx. Length, 260 feet

ORDER DISPLAY POSTERS OF THESE FILMS FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR THE A. B. C. COMPANY, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

EDISON MANUFACTURING CO.

MAIN OFFICE and FACTORY: 72 LAKESIDE AVE., ORANGE, N. J.

New York Office: 10 Fifth Avenue. Chicago Office: 90 Wabash Ave.

KINETOSCOPE JOBBERS

Geo. Breck, 70 Turk St., San Francisco.
Howard Moving Picture Co., 564 Washington St., Boston.
Yale Film Exch. Co., 622 Main St., Kansas City.
P. L. Waters, 41 E. 21st St., New York City.
Lake Shore Film & Supply Co., 314 Superior Ave., N. E., Cleveland.
Chas. A. Calehuff, 4th & Green Sts., Philadelphia.

Office for United Kingdom: Edison Works, Victoria Road, Willesden, N. W., England.

Dealers in All Principal Cities

O. T. Crawford's Film Service

ACKNOWLEDGED

"BETTER THAN THE BEST"

Let us convince you that we can give you just the service you require. Better write to-day.

O. T. CRAWFORD FILM EXCHANGE CO.

1401 Locust Street
ST. LOUIS, MO.

319 Fourth Avenue
LOUISVILLE, KY.

CHEAP

Steel Frame Theatre Chairs

ABSOLUTELY Non-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small theatres and Moving Picture shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also Seating for Out of-Door Use.

Address Dept. W,

STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich.

New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue

Boston Office: 224 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

THE MASTERMARK OF PICTUREDOM

Something ABSOLUTELY NEW and Instructive

Release date Jan. 31st

SHOOTING AN OIL WELL

Length, 715 Ft.

A graphic illustration of America's greatest industries executed in detail, in other words "THE SELIC WAY"

TWO ON ONE REEL

OUR GERMAN COUSIN

A Corker A Peach A Jim Dandy

Length, 285 Feet

SELIG TRADE S MARK SELIG

WHO WOULDN'T GO IN TO POLITICS—IF HE COULD BECOME MAYOR?

POLITICS! POLITICS!! POLITICS!!!

One of those campaign spasmodics with matrimonial trimmings—served up in the good old "SELIC WAY"

Length, 1000 Feet Release Date February 3rd Code Word, "Poli"

SELIC POLYSCOPE COMPANY Inc. - - - 45-47-49 Randolph Street, Chicago, U. S. A.

THE MASTERMARK OF PICTUREDOM

ensues. Of course, virtue and courage are triumphant, and when the wild man lies slain his fellow monsters creep back into their holes in the rocks. Meanwhile, the dog, ever on the alert, discovers a wonderful box, to which he calls his little master's attention. When it is opened the youth starts back at the sight of a huge snake, but when he bravely takes it in his hand it transforms before our eyes into a magic wand and the box is filled with gold and jewels. With such success our hero returns to his parents. Their joy at his safe homecoming is turned to wonder when, producing the magic wand, he waves it and transforms their humble cottage into a glittering palace hung with Japanese lanterns through the door of which is seen a lake with swans upon its surface, while dancing Geisha girls appear in mystic figures of the Japanese dance and suddenly disappear into thin air. This transformation scene is beautiful beyond description.

THE SURPRISE PARTY.—A surprise party is always an enjoyable affair, particularly in a small town where everyone knows everyone else. The one pictured by the Edison Company took the form of a donation party at the minister's. Refreshments were ordered from the city and a jolly time planned. Notice was received of the arrival of the box of refreshments at the station, and Uncle Bill was sent after it. When he arrived at the station he met an old crony who was there for a box that had been shipped to the local theater. After the boxes were loaded on the wagons, the old men went for a drink, and two of the village boys, noticing that the two wagons were exactly alike, conceived the idea of changing the horses. This was done, and when Uncle Bill and his chum returned they each drove off with the wrong wagon. The mistake was not discovered until the box was opened at the minister's, and then, horrors!—instead of containing good things to eat it was full of animals.

THE BAD MAN FROM RILEY'S GULCH.—This picture shows the typical bad man of the Western mining and cattle regions getting ready for his bullying of the community by imbibing courage from a bottle, or several bottles. Sallying forth to the supply store of the town, he is not long in getting into an argument and bluffing everyone from the proprietor to a formidable looking man. Filled with the spirit of bravado he next visits the hotel of the place, and we see him there engaged in a wordy dispute with some men who are playing cards. One of the occupants of the room annoys him by singing. The bad man pushes him around to the annoyance of the others in the room, who remonstrate against the disturbance. This starts a row, at the conclusion of which the proprietor's little wife, who has heard the rumpus, enters the room with her sewing materials and advances upon the foe. Snapping her shears in his face, she pours forth a volley of language which completely flabbergasts the astounded bully.

KALEM MFG CO.

THE STEP-MOTHER.—Scene I.—Mildred Secretly Meets Robert Millet, the Bank Robber. At the opening of the picture we see one of those beautiful woodland views so common in Florida. Along the path comes Robert Millet. This is the trysting place. He glances about for Mildred, then seats himself on a moss-covered limb, some tropical hurricane has torn from the massive oak above his head. He toys with his cane in nervous impatience. Through the woods comes Mildred, a little cautiously, as if afraid of being seen. She holds out her hand shyly. "So you didn't really expect me to come, did you?" Millet greets her effusively and attempts to kiss her, but she repulses him in frightened, girlish timidity. He turns away. Alarmed for fear she has hurt him, she goes to him and holds out her hand. He takes it. From his pocket he draws a ring. At sight of the brilliant, sparkling diamonds she utters a cry of delight. He offers it to her. But she refuses it, telling him her father would not allow her to accept. Millet, smiling indulgently, fastens the ring on a ribbon and insinuatingly tells her how easy it will be to wear it around her neck, securely hidden from curious eyes, but always there, a gentle reminder of his love for her. Mildred is unable to resist his pleading. After placing the ring around her neck, Millet takes her in his arms and kisses her passionately.

Secene II.—Millet Disregards the Warning to Flee.

Scene III.—Mildred Learns of Her Father's Second Marriage.

Scene IV.—A Disheartening Home-coming.

Scene V.—The New Mother Regarded as an Intruder.

Scene VI.—The Step-mother Learns of the Proposed Elopement.

Scene VII.—Mildred Fancies the Whole Family Is Against Her.

Scene VIII.—The Step-mother Saves Mildred from an Act of Folly.

Scene IX.—Mildred Learns Millet's True Character.

Scene X.—The Step-mother Wins Mildred's Love.

THE LITTLE OLD MEN OF THE WOODS.—A dramatization of one of Grimm's Fairy Stories.

Scene I.—Death of the Queen Snow-White Left Motherless. When little Snow-White was a baby only a few weeks old, her mother, the beautiful Queen Fond Heart, died. But before she died she summoned the King and made him promise to watch over and protect their beautiful little baby daughter, for it was at a period when Wicked Witches and Giants as well as Good Fairies existed. The King placed Snow-White in her dying mother's arms for one last fond kiss before she drifted into the sleep that knows no awakening.

Scene II.—Fifteen Years Later—The Wicked Stepmother Is Jealous of Snow-White's Great Beauty.

Scene III.—

"Mirror, mirror on the wall,
Who is the fairest, fair of all?"

The Mirror, which had always acknowledged the Queen as the most beautiful in the land, now answered:

"O, Lady Queen, tho' fair ye be,
Snow-White is fairer far, to see."

Scene IV.—The Wicked Queen Orders Snow-White's Death.

Scene V.—The Merciful Slave.

Scene VI.—Lost.

Scene VII.—The Little Hut in the Woods.

Scene VIII.—The Dwarfs Befriend Snow-White.

Scene IX.—The Queen Discovers that Snow-White Still Lives.

Scene X.—

"With four little dwarfs, outside the wall, Dwells Snow-White, the fairest fair of all."

Scene XII.—The Queen Determines to Kill Snow-White Herself.

Scene XIII.—The Poisoned Apple.

Scene XIV.—The Queen Satisfied.

Scene XV.—The Arrival of Prince Raven Locks.

Scene XVI.—Snow-White Lives.

Scene XVII.—The Wicked Queen Unmasked.

LUBIN MFG. CO.

BILL'S BOOTS.—Bill's boots are taken by a couple of mischievous youngsters who see in the combination of boots and a snow bank a chance for some fun. They bury the boots in the snow and an old lady promptly decides that they belong to some victim of the blizzard. She calls for help and there is much ado until the deception is discovered. A lively little short length of comedy.

TOO MUCH PROTECTION.—Wilkins' family goes to Florida for the Winter. Wilkins is delighted at the departure of his mother-in-law but joy is turned to alarm when a newspaper headline recalls him to the fact that there is an epidemic of burglaries of the boldest description. He has his house wired by the Burglar Proofing Company and they do the work so effectively that when Wilkins is locked out he cannot himself get in again. But a burglar has entered the door before the draught blew it shut and he is as much distressed to find that he cannot make his exit. At last he saws his way through a window and Wilkins enters. The householder is so delighted at being in again at last that he lets the burglar carry off his plunder and adds some cigars and a bottle of whiskey, asking the intruder to rip out the new fangled devices which protect too completely.

SENTIMENTAL SAM.—Sam drops into the home of a newly married couple to borrow some little things that might be disposed of advantageously. The pretty little wife is preparing to commit suicide after the first quarrel of the married life. Sentimental Sam hunts up the husband and finds him with a revolver in his hand ready to shoot himself that his wife may be free. Despite the gun Sam holds him up and takes him down to where the wife is sitting. An exchange of the farewell notes effects a reconciliation so engrossing that they do not realize that Sam is plying his trade.

PATHE FRERES.

AN AERIAL ACROBAT.—Most wonderful indeed are the feats of this performer in the air. On two or three occasions we hold our breath in terror for her life, but she smilingly goes on doing the most daring things, never seeming to realize that she is twenty or thirty feet away from terra firma and that the slightest miscalculation on her part would mean a horrible death. Graceful and dainty, she goes through her performance and though enjoyable the spectator breathes a sigh of relief as she slides down the rope and is safe on Mother Earth once more.

COUNT LEO TOLSTOI.—It is almost like meeting the renowned Russian author to see this film, we get such a splendid view of him as he leaves his fine estate, find ourselves within touch of him almost, and near enough to watch his every motion as he bids his secretary good bye before getting on the train. The view of the surrounding country and the peasant folk who each and every one get a kind look from the author, are also most interesting.

A RUSSIAN HEROINE.—The first picture shows the downtrodden Russian farmers laying down their tithes in the shape of wheat, corn, etc., at the feet of the overbearing Russian officers, who look on them with contempt and hustle and shove them like cattle. When the Government authorities have gathered together the offerings of the poor farmers they take their leave and the latter sitting down together woefully bemoan their fate. Finally one of their number, Tchetchevik by name, decides to make the perilous trip to Poland to seek help. He starts out, but has not gone very far before he sees in the distance mounted officers on his track. Seeing a farmer and his daughters happening to be gathering in their hay by the wayside, he appeals to them in his distress and one of the girls, Sonia by name, helps him into the wagon holding the hay and completely covers him, so when the soldiers arrive there is no trace of him, and as the farmers tell them they have seen nothing of the fugitive, the men ride on. After hearing the old man's story, Sonia decides to guide him on his hazardous journey, so bidding her father and sister good-bye she starts out for Poland with the fugitive. The latter disguises himself as a blind musician, and the girl's beauty and winning ways permit them to get through the different camps of Russian soldiers they meet on the way. When they reach Poland they are warmly greeted and the girl is sent back to Tchetchevik's people with a message from the Duke of Podolia telling them that they may depend on him and his people for help. The brave girl starts back on her dangerous journey, but unfortunately some of the enemy meeting her on the way and recognizing her as a daughter of Ukrania order her to be shot down. The order is immediately carried out and the poor girl falls to the ground. Thinking her dead, the cruel brigands leave her. Regaining consciousness after some time, she manages to get to her feet, and dragging herself along until she reaches home she hands the note to her father and then drops exhausted, for her mission now accomplished Sonia gives up her life.

ACROBATIC EXERCISES BY THE COLIBRIS DWARFS.—This film shows cunning dwarfs and wee ponies hitched to tiny carriages performing in a miniature circus in a way that brings forth exclamations of approval and wonder from the spectator. First we see the juggler and then the tiny acrobats, who do wonders. Then Miss Dora and her companion, who look for all the world as if they had just stepped out of one of Gulliver's tales. The films are beautifully colored and very interesting because so novel.

THE UNLUCKY FISHERMAN.—Simpkins and Todd had always been the best of friends until there was a question of going fishing together. Simpkins having found an unusually good place to cast his line, resented Todd's sitting on the bench beside him, but Todd refuses to move and Simpkins disgusted goes forth to look for another place. As soon as he is comfortably seated Todd comes along and annoys him again with his persistent fishing. The next place Simpkins tries he is annoyed by bathers. Finally finding a secluded spot, he settles himself for an afternoon sport. Just as he gets a bite he notices that Todd is also fishing beside him and has also got a nibble. They both reel in their lines simultaneously and find that they have both caught the same fish. He is a beauty, and neither fisherman wants to lose him. They get into quite an altercation and finally appeal to a policeman to settle their dispute. This worthy decides the matter by cutting off the head and the tail, which he presents to Todd and Simpkins, while he bears off the best part, much to the disgust of the disgruntled disciples of Isaac Walton.

MOTHERLESS.—In the days of Louis XV. of France there lived one Diana de Vandrey, to whom was born a little daughter totally blind. Diana's father-in-law, the proud Count de Vandrey, insisted that his daughter should get rid of the afflicted child, and it was by his order that the little blind baby was placed on the church steps, where it was rescued by a poor family, who brought it up as their own and as the real sister of their daughter Henriette. After the death of these good people the two girls were left orphans, and Henriette, the elder of the two, was the real mother to the little blind girl who depended upon her for everything. But the sisters, becoming separated by an unfortunate accident, the younger one falls into the hands of an old hag named Mother Frochard, who believed she could raise money by having the pretty blind girl beg on the street. The sufferings of the poor child while under the old hag's roof are indescribable; one must see the picture to get an idea of what she endured when compelled to stand for hours on the street and smilingly beg from every passerby. The faithful Henriette, who had never ceased her search for her little sister, finally finds her in the old witch's hovel, and through a chance acquaintance who happens to be related to the blind girl's own father, the sisters meet Diana, Countess de Vandrey, who has never had a moment's happiness since she deserted her little blind baby so many years ago. Through the means of a tiny locket that the blind girl had always worn and which Henriette had wrested from old Mother Frochard, who had stolen it when she held the girl prisoner, the Countess discovers that the blind girl that fate has brought in her path is none other than the wee babe she so cruelly deserted. Her happiness knows no bounds now that she can make up to the child for all she suffered during these sad years of separation. Henriette is also received by the happy Countess as her own, and the last pictures show the joy of the two orphans and the just punishment of the wicked old Mother Frochard.

THE LEATHER INDUSTRY.—First scene shows the interior of the abattoir where the carcass is being skinned. Next we see them weighing the hides, after which they are dipped in a bath of lime. From there they are washed and afterwards spread on a "horse" and scraped with heavy wooden scrapers, which removes the hair. Smoothers take them now and after spreading them over another "horse" go over them with a sort of draw-knife, removing all uneven places. The hides are then washed again until they are as clean and soft as a piece of chamois. Now they are tanned by bury-

PATHÉ FRÈRES

Will Release on Wednesday, February 9

IN ANCIENT GREECE

Here's a picture that has 'em all skinned! As graceful and as interesting a dance as you ever saw.

Maude Allen

is creating a furore about Greek dancing, and this film, showing Mesdemoiselles Napierkowska and Mary in a classic Greek Ballet by Sacha Dezac, will put more coin in your till than any other one film. The coloring is so well done, the flesh tints so natural that it's hard to believe that the dancers are only pictures on a screen.

In Ancient Greece

Length, 410 Feet Coloring, $9.50

Released, February 9

Go to it!
Insist upon it at your Exchange

and for Other Releases see Bulletin dated January 24th

PATHÉ FRÈRES

NEW YORK 41 West 25th Street
CHICAGO 35 Randolph Street
NEW ORLEANS 813 Union Street

Pacific Coast Agency—Turner & Dahnken, 136 Eddy Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Get Your Posters from the A. B. C. Co., of Clevland, Ohio

Renew Your Films

EXCHANGES!

Get your money out of your old films by using our process

WE REMOVE DIRT AND SCRATCHES

Send your old film to us that you think is out of commission and we will make it as good as new.

WE

can do anything but put in new sprocket holes.

OLD RELIABLE FILM RENOVATING CO.
134 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
J. S. SPEER.

Write for References from 60 Exchanges

Exhibitors, Notice!

Do you want to sell your theatre? Do you want to buy a theatre? We buy and sell moving-picture theatres. List your houses with us for QUICK SALE.

OKLAHOMA and TEXAS Exhibitors Take Notice!

We can lease your theatre and run it on a percentage basis, and make you more money than you are now making.

Let Us Prove It to You

We can handle your new ideas, inventions and patented articles to good advantage.

Write Us Now

LYRIC AMUSEMENT COMPANY
HOYT G. MORROW, Gen. Mgr.
224 Baltimore Bldg., Oklahoma City, Okla.

Electrical Dictionary

A Hand-Book Containing Definitions of Electrical Terms

Useful to Everyone Interested in Electrical Science

Sent Postpaid on receipt of 25 cents

FREDERIC BECQUE
P. O. Box 1306 New York City

PITTSBURG McKENNA NEW YORK

Did you get one of our NEW CATALOGS?

Prepared especially for the man who wants information concerning

Brass Railings, Picture Easels, Grilles, Etc.

WRITE NOW TO

McKENNA BROS. BRASS CO.

1st Ave. and Ross Street PITTSBURG — "It's the Front that Attracts the Business" — 238 Broadway NEW YORK

ing the hides in a pit and spreading tan bark under, through and over them. After a year they are taken out and cleaned and dried. The hides, now tanned, are pressed to give them flexibility. We see a splendid sample of the finished product in the last scene.

CAMILLE.—Marguerite Gautier, a poor but beautiful country girl, who, a few years before she became the rage in Paris, did not know how to write her own name, first met Armand Duval at the theater. This is the opening scene of this wonderfully beautiful and interesting film d'art. Marguerite in her box, beautiful as a dream, and Armand standing looking at her transfixed with admiration. After obtaining an introduction to his divinity, Armand becomes a constant visitor at her home. One night, at a little dinner given by Marguerite to her friend Prudence Duvernoy, a well-known milliner, and at which were present her devoted admirer, Armand and one or two other congenial spirits, Marguerite was taken with a desperate spell of coughing. Symptoms of the dread disease she had inherited from her beautiful mother had already made their appearance. Her faithful maids, rushing to the aid of their mistress, carried her to a couch in a nearby room, where Armand follows and imprints a kiss on the girl's hand, receiving as a reward a smile and one of her favorite flowers, a camelia. This was the first sign that Marguerite, the much-sought-after beauty, gave that she was beginning to care for the poorest, but handsomest, of her many lovers. Up to the time of Marguerite's meeting with Armand, the rich and influential Duke de Linieres had been her devoted admirer. She had met the duke at a health resort, where the latter had come with his daughter, who suffered from lung trouble as did Marguerite. The duke's daughter died just before Marguerite's arrival, and when he met the latter in the corridor of the hotel, she reminded him so forcibly of his child, that he took a great fancy to her, and hated to have her out of his sight. Although Armand knew of this friendship between the rich nobleman and the girl, he did not despair of supplanting the former in Marguerite's affections. He succeeded in this, and at Marguerite's own suggestion, for she had now become very much attached to Armand, they left Paris for the country, where we see them rowing on the river or strolling hand-in-hand, happy as two children. Marguerite describes these days in her diary, which Armand permitted Dumas to read, as the happiest days of her life. But, like all happy days, they were of short duration. One afternoon, the greater part of which Armand and Marguerite had spent together on the river, we see the girl jumping out of the boat which her lover takes further up to moor. As she walks slowly along she is stopped by one of her maids who hands her a letter, which she opens with fear at her heart and almost swoons away when she reads a message from Armand's father, begging her to discontinue her friendship with his son, not only for the boy's sake but for that of his sister who is soon to marry. The maid tells Marguerite that the gentleman is awaiting her at the house, and pushing the maid aside she hurries along to get the dreaded ordeal over. The old man is at first inclined to be a little imperious with the girl, but seeing that she truly loves his son and is willing to give him up if it is for his own good and his father wishes it, he becomes less severe and even takes Marguerite's hand as he bids her good-bye and expresses his gratitude for her unselfishness. Marguerite sets out for Paris without letting Armand know of her intention, but sends him a letter telling him that all is over between them and that he must not try to see her again, but return to his family, where he will soon learn to forget an unfortunate called Marguerite Gautier. When Armand discovers that Marguerite has flown he becomes like a madman and hurries to Paris, determined to have an interview with her and try to induce her to change her mind. He cannot find her at her house, which is closed, for Marguerite has taken up her residence with an old friend, Olympe by name, and when Armand hears this he secures an invitation to the home of this friend where a ball is to be given to some kindred spirits. On entering the drawing room the first one Armand sees is Marguerite who is gaily dancing with one of the handsomest men in the room and whom Armand recognizes as a wealthy young nobleman, who had always been a great admirer of Marguerite, but for whom she always professed a great dislike. Although Armand tries in every way to attract Marguerite's attention, for he is confident that she is conscious of his presence, she never looks in his direction or gives any sign that she knows he is in the room. Mad with jealousy and disappointment Armand, when the guests are leaving, endeavors to get a few words alone with the girl, but she repulses him and he unable to restrain his passion calls back the guests and denounces the terrified woman in their presence.

All this excitement added to the sorrow she had experienced on being compelled to part with Armand had been too much for the already doomed Marguerite. Shortly after this scene she takes to her bed and many and many a weary day and night she passes, as all her gay friends have little time for her now that she is ill and unable to take part in their round of pleasure. The one thought that keeps her up in these days of suffering is that Armand, now that she is about to die, will come to see her and forgive her before she passes out of this life forever. As we see the emaciated form of teh once bright and beautiful butterfly stretched out on her bed of pain, we start with horror on viewing the change that has come over the beautiful woman we saw but a short while ago seated surrounded by admirers in her box at the theater. Nanine, her faithful maid, enters just at this juncture and from her expression her mistress knows she is the bearer of joyful news. And so it is. Armand has finally arrived. On hearing the news Marguerite leaps from her bed and throwing her gown about her is in a moment clasped tightly in the arms of the only man she ever loved. But the joy had been too much for the poor, weakened frame. A terrible fit of coughing comes on and Marguerite Gautier, barely twenty-one years of age, but who has seen so much of life in this short time, passes away in the arms of one, who, had fate only brought him in her path a little sooner, might have made of her a different woman.

SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.

THE DEVIL, THE SERVANT AND THE MAN.—How often we find in the facing of stern realization the epitome of mental suffering, and the moral anguish resulting from the conviction of one's own heart through the sub-conscious mind in a dream—such have 'ere now caused great battles to be won or lost—the success or failure of commercial enterprises—and in the case of "The Devil, the Servant and the Man" the duty he is in honor bound to respect is vivid and convincing.

We find the man first in his home, surrounded by a devoted wife and the many luxuries to make a home pleasant, to all of which he shows an indifference and persists in joining his clientele at the club. Upon his arrival at the club a visit to the matinee of "The Devil" is suggested and accepted

We next see them emerging from the theater with two chorus girls. They repair to a nearby palm garden, enjoying the dreamy music with mint julips and frappe trimmings. They are interrupted by the arrival of a message for the young husband. Upon opening it, he shows, his pleasure plainly, for it is from Edna, his favored amorita, asking him to witness with her a performance of "The Servant in the House" that evening. Suggesting to his companions that his departure would equalize the gender of the party and leave them undisturbed by the fifth person, he takes his departure and hurriedly enters his home, and at once dons his evening dress and prepares, as he assures his wife, to spend the evening with the boys at the club. Remonstrations on the part of the young wife are unavailing. As he is leaving the home, his attention is directed to a note written by the wife and left on the table, saying:

"If you persist in drinking and going out at night, do not blame your wife if she does the same. Alice."

The reading of the note has but little effect upon the husband, who does not believe her capable of such actions. He at once repairs to the home of Edna and accompanies her to the performance mentioned, after which they retire to a fashionable cafe. Some time elapses before he takes his adieu and returns to his home, slightly ruffled in his equilibrium. He sinks before the grate in an easy chair and is soon in dreamland. His vision shows him the devil standing at his shoulder, asking the question: "Where have you been?" He tells him. He is then asked where his wife is, and he points to the bedroom, saying: "She is there, asleep." He is told she is not. He then remembers the note. In his sub-conscious mind he is desperate. The devil says: "Take this gun and kill her." He rushes to her room and finds it empty. He is ordered by the devil to go with him and he would show him more. They pass quickly down the street and he is shown his wife in the embrace of a strange man from the bay window in a fashionable home. The husband draws back to shoot, when the devil says: "No, I will show you more."

We next find them entering the notorious French mask ball. He shows the young husband his wife in the arms of a young prince. Quivering with rage, he pulls the mask and shoots her dead. The devil then takes him back to his home and leaves him in the same chair he found him. Soon he awakens and remembers what he had seen in his dream. His mind quickly reverts to the note left by his wife. He hastens to her room and finds it empty. Crazed with remorse, he places the revolver to his temple and is about to fire when the hand of "The Servant in the House" stays his arm and asks him: "What are you going to do?" "Kill myself," he replies, and relates the story, saying his wife is dead. He is assured she is not, and is at once led to the table behind the screen where the young wife had fallen asleep in her lonely wait for his return. He falls on his knees, pleads forgiveness and promises to lead a better life.

POLITICS.—Silas Brown, editor of the Locusville Herald, is desirous that the Democratic nominee for Mayor be defeated. To that end he publishes the following article in his paper:

LOCUSVILLE HERALD.

"WILL YOU VOTE FOR THIS MAN FOR MAYOR?

"Colonel Wheat, the Democratic Nominee for Mayor, Said to Be a Former Notorious Horse Thief.

"We are informed that the honorable gentleman now running for Mayor on the Democratic ticket, at one time was connected with the disappearance of certain valuable horse flesh during his sojourn in the Southwest."

Well, one can easily realize the results of such an imputation on the irate nerves of an old Southern gentleman. Colonel Wheat, the Town Marshal, and other friends, determined to fight the Confederate War over again, for vengeance is theirs. Fuming and fussing, the Colonel and his friends repair to the editor's office. A heated argument ensues, but no blood is wasted, though the Democratic party leave swearing eternal recriminations and vengeance.

Now let it be known that Colonel Wheat's daughter, Minnie, and the editor's son, Bert Brown, are very much in love with each other. Thus follows a complication of difficulties better seen by eye than told by pen.

Nevertheless, as our story runs along, we find even the wives of the Colonel and editor quarreling over the results of the publishing of such a defamatory and libelous article. Then, later on, and at night, young Bert and still younger Minnie, both bemoaning the untimely ending of their young love (for parents of both have absolutely refused an alliance), enter simultaneously the village postoffice. For what, you ask? We will tell you. Youth is ever blessed with folly, and sometimes that folly runs to the extreme. So it is with our juvenile pair. Both have determined to leave their homes for good and for all time. As they are about to post their letters, each written to the other, and each telling the other of his or her intention, they meet face to face, and finally determine to be married in spite of their parents' disapproval.

Now, as we follow on, we see them entering the village parson's home, and he, knowing all that has transpired, and deeming it quite a joke on both families, and at the same time a means of reconciliation, pronounces the words that make Bert and Minnie man and wife.

Then we reach the psychological moment. The parson telephones both families of what has transpired. Pandemonium is let loose. Regardless of appearances and in deshabille, mothers and fathers of Bert and Minnie arrive at the parsonage. Upon their entrance everything is confusion, for father berates son on the one side, while father berates daughter on the other, but eventually, between the combined efforts and pleadings of the minister and the newly married couple, the two old political enemies forget their troubles of the early sixties and clasp hands, much to the satisfaction of both families.

SHOOTING AN OIL WELL.—Oil is one of the great factors of the commercial universe and the American oil fields stand to-day paramount in the production of this valuable asset.

Hills, valleys, plains and great scenic embellishment can be built by the artisans for moving pictures, but neither paint nor lumber can produce the effect of the actual shooting of an oil well by means of the deadly explosive, nitroglycerine.

One of the great fields with a prospective gusher was located and preparations made to produce what we claim to be one of the greatest problem and nature films ever placed upon the market. Beginning with a clear view of the derrick that is all a-hum with busy workmen, each wearing a hopeful and triumphant look as the heavy steel bit plunges down and down until over sixteen hundred feet is registered to its credit. Then oil sand is reached and all is wild excitement as this is always a sign of nearing a vein or pocket of gas. The drill is quickly hoisted, the casings drawn and preparations made to shoot the well. The shooter's wagon is soon on the ground and eighty quarts of nitroglycerine are carefully placed in the cartridge, which on being lowered to the bottom of the great hole, and a portion of the machinery hurriedly removed from possible destruction, an electric attachment turns loose the demon of destruction and the effect is wonderful, sending oil, sand and rock a hundred feet or more, enveloping all in flames, closely followed by the deadly black fumes and smoke, making altogether an educational film of great magnitude and one that will rank well with any problem picture upon the market.

VITAGRAPH COMPANY.

THE LIFE OF MOSES. Part III.—Scene 1—The previous installment of this series ended with the appearance of Moses at the court of Pharaoh, pleading for the deliverance of the Children of Israel from their bondage. Pharaoh having refused, Moses prays to the Lord for advice, and is commanded to work a miracle before the Egyptian monarch to convince him that it is the Lord, the God of the Israelites, who demands the deliverance of His people.

Scene 2. -Moses and Aaron appear before Pharaoh again. Aaron casts his rod upon the ground and it becomes a serpent. Pharaoh is amazed, but he still refuses to free the Children of Israel.

Scene 3—Pharaoh's continued refusal brings upon Egypt the ten plagues. Moses finds Pharaoh near the river's edge and again asks that his people be allowed to go free. When Pharaoh denies again, Aaron smites the water of the river with his rod and the waters are turned into blood.

Scene 4—Again Moses appears before Pharaoh and again Pharaoh refuses his request. As God had commanded, Moses stretches his hand toward heaven and immediately a great storm of hail and lightning, such as they had never seen, descends on Egypt, killing man and beast and striking terror to the heart of Pharaoh.

Scene 5—Pharaoh's heart was again hardened and he still refuses to free the Hebrew children. Again

Curtainyline

For three years has given satisfaction to the most exacting Exhibitors—they will use nothing else on their curtain

Brings Out the True Photographic Outlines. Fireproofs Your Curtain
Try a $3.00 Carton and Note the Wonderful Improvement in Your Pictures

A $3.00 carton is sufficient for any ordinary cnrtain. All exchanges carry it in stock

Curtainyline Curtain & Producing Co. 22 Fifth Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

THE MIRROR SCREEN

Makes your pictures brighter, more beautiful and more captivating. Pictures almost stereoscopic—there is nothing like it. Don't let the other fellow get ahead of you. Order one and be convinced.

Write to-day for Terms and Prices

Motion Picture Screen Co.

SHELBYVILLE INDIANA

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS

The Big Ticket. Any Printing. Any Colors.

5,000	- - - -	$1.25	20,000	- - - -	$4.60	50,000	- - - -	$7 50
10,000	- - - -	2.50	25,000	- - - -	5.50	100,000	- - - -	10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

INDEPENDENT

We rent new Films. Handle all the leading Makes, both AMERICAN AND FOREIGN; beautiful Posters; exclusive Feature Service. Write for prices.

CINCINNATI FILM EXCHANGE, 214-16 West 5th Street, CINCINNATI, O.

KEEP YOUR EYE ON US

AMERICAN FILM BROKERS—German Savings Bank Building
147-157 4th Avenue, New York City

300 sets second-hand Song Slides from $1.50 up. Films like new very cheap. Announcement Slides, Machines and Accessories of all kinds. Write for lists.

Perfect Weld Non-Inflam Cement

Send me $1.00 and I will send you recipe for making a Perfect Weld Non-Inflam Cement. A recipe for a curtain coating that will increase brilliancy of picture 33⅓ per cent. and two other valuable recipes. Do it now.

WILL CARLETON
Gem Theatre, Grundy Centre, Iowa

MR. MANAGER:

Don't you think that a new firm with a brand new stock of song slides made by the best makers, can give you a better song slide service than you have been getting? A week's supply of brand new illustrated song slides, shipped at one time for one week's service, 50c. per week. We have a number of perfect sets of slides of the great Cherry Mine Disaster which we will sell for $6.00 a set, with printed lectures. Great business getters. (To get you on our mailing list we will sell you for 35c. in stamps the swellest announcement slides that you ever saw, entitled

"GOOD NIGHT"

LINCOLN TRANSPARENCY EXCHANGE
16th Floor, Masonic Temple - - Chicago, Ill.

Moses stretches his hand toward heaven, and a thick darkness, a darkness that might be felt, covered the land for three days, so that no one was able to rise from his place.

Scene 6—The last and most terrible plague visited on Egypt for Pharaoh's continued refusal is the death of all the Egyptian first born. The Feast of the Passover is instituted at this time. Moses directing all the Hebrew people to observe the Feast by killing and preparing a lamb.

Scene 7—Moses commands the Children of Israel to sprinkle the door posts on both sides and on top with the blood of the lamb and on every house where they are to eat the Feast of the Passover, and to prepare the Feast.

Scene 8—The Feast of the Passover is observed, according to the instructions of Moses, by every Jewish family in Egypt, the Feast consisting of roast lamb with unleavened bread and herbs.

Scene 9—The same night that the Feast of the Passover is being observed by the Israelites, the Angel of Death passes over the land of Egypt in the last plague, the death of the first born.

Scene 10—The Angel of Death enters every Egyptian home where there is no blood on the doorposts, and the first born of every Egyptian family is slain, from the first born in Pharaoh's household to the first born of the captive in the dungeons.

Scene 11—The Angel of Death, however, passes by every Jewish home, as God had promised to Moses that where He saw the blood on the doorposts He would pass them over and the plague should not be upon them.

Scene 12—In Pharaoh's palace Pharaoh and his court are feasting when the Angel of Death enters and Pharaoh's own first born is slain. Pharaoh is overcome with grief at this terrible visitation and sends for Moses and Aaron immediately.

Scene 13—The death of his first born softens the heart of Pharaoh and when Moses and Aaron now appear before him he commands them to take the Children of Israel and to depart out of the land of Egypt.

Scene 14—Moses and Aaron give the command to the Hebrew people, who immediately gather together their possessions and prepare to leave the land of their bondage with reverent and thankful hearts.

Scene 15—With Moses and Aaron as leaders, the Israelites begin their exodus from Egypt, the land of the Pharaohs, where they had been slaves for so many years.

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER

Miror Vitae Products," Projectors, Cameras, Film-Making Machinery, Films, Slides, Stereopticons, Specialties, Lens Grinding, etc. Special condensors, carbons and lugs.

109 East 12th Street, New York

Films I have a system of keeping away from Repeaters. No reels older than one year. This sounds bad but not half as bad as it is to hand you gunc three years old.

I am open and frank and tell you what you get for your money—Try me for a week anyhow. You can't lose.

PURDY'S FILM EXCHANGE
300 EAST 23d STREET, Cor. 2nd Ave., NEW YORK CITY

Improved 100%

That is what my customers say of my service. I start good and get better every day. That is why I hold them. No matter what inducement another Film Exchange offers them, they stick. "There is a Reason" My price for service, supplies and machine parts is the lowest in the country, and my goods are the very best, Will send you name and address of any of my customers and let you verify every statement. Largest supply house in Pennsylvania. All makes of machines, new and second-hand. Special bargain. A brand new Powers No. 5, used only four weeks, mechanism No. 4185, for sale.

UNION FILM EXCHANGE

"THE SQUARE DEALER"
(Name given by my customers)

HARRISBURG, PA.

KALEM FILMS

Issue of February 2

"THE STEPMOTHER"

LENGTH 980 FEET

"The Stepmother" produced by the famous KALEM STOCK COMPANY, in the romantic and beautiful scenery of the St. John's River, Florida, is one of the most appealing films ever turned out. It tells the story of how a tender hearted stepmother was rejected by her husband's children, and how she finally won their love.

Issue of February 4

The Little Old Men of the Woods

LENGTH 945 FEET

This is a dramatization of Grimm's popular fairy story, "Snow White," and will surely prove one of the biggest novelties of the year. The four little old dwarfs who played the leading parts, are all the real thing and were secured at great expense for this picture.

The A. B. C. POSTERS for the above headliners are unusually attractive, and may be had from your exchange or from the A. B. C. Company of Cleveland, direct.

KALEM CO., Inc.
Eastman Kodak Building
235-237-239 WEST 23rd STREET
NEW YORK CITY

LUBIN FILMS

RELEASED MONDAY, JANUARY 31, 1910.

Too Much Protection

Not police protection, but protection against thieves. Wilkins has his house treated by the Burglar-Proofing Company with the result that he is locked out and a burglar is locked in. Wilkins is so grateful when the burglar lets him into his own home that he gives him the plunder and whiskey and cigars to boot. A funny treatment of a novel idea. LENGTH, 600 FEET.

Bill's Boots

Bill's boots are not funny of themselves, but when a couple of kids bury them in a snowbank and a hysterical woman thinks they belong to a man overcome by the cold, things happen fast and furious until the lively climax. A hearty laugh in small compass. LENGTH, 245 FEET.

RELEASED THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1910.

It Might Have Been

Old letters suggest to the lonesome bachelor the possibility of reviving memories of the past. He hunts up his lost loves but his experiences lead him to the belief that what is is far better than what might have been. Unique in theme and splendidly acted the subject is certain to score heavily. LENGTH, 590 FEET.

Sentimental Sam

Sentimental Sam is a second story worker with a heart and when he finds two loving hearts ready to stop beating because of the first quarrel of their married life, he checks the incipient suicides and then cleans up the apartment under the very noses of the engrossed couple. A rattling little farce in which a capital idea is made better by good acting. LENGTH, 300 FEET.

Send for catalogue of our 1910 machine

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY 926-928 MARKET STREET PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Independent Films.

THE ACTOPHONE COMPANY.

THE CLOWN'S BIG MOMENT. The story in brief hinges on the jealousy of a husband, who living in uncomfortable circumstances with his wife and child thinks that his wife is deceiving him. She had received a letter from her sister, whose husband is a convict, in which the sister implores her to come to her that night and not tell her husband. The convict has escaped from prison and instructs his wife to have clothes and money ready for him, as he will be at home at midnight. The jealous husband's wife follows these instructions with the result that her husband demands a separation. They part. The wife goes to her sister's home and the convict arrives. He is about to get away with the money and some clothes when the police catch him just as he is leaving his house.

A week elapses and the child of the separated couple is stricken down with a raging fever and is given up by the doctor. He tells the wife that if the father wishes to see his child alive he must come at once. The wife explains the situation to the doctor and throwing aside her pride, goes to seek her husband.

The husband is living alone in an apartment and we see him about to leave to keep an appointment with a famous clown who is playing an engagement at the Savoy Theater. He leaves his rooms and just misses his wife, who arrives and learns from a letter and the husband's valet where the husband has gone. She goes to the stage door of the Savoy Theater and waits for her husband. While she is there in the characteristic alleyway leading to the stage door of the theater, she is insulted by an intoxicated clubman who has just escorted a show girl to the theater. The husband comes along the alley, sees that a woman is in trouble and knocks the clubman down. He then learns from his wife of his child's illness.

They return to their home and find the child raving and crying out for the famous clown whom she had seen at a matinee a week before. The doctor tells the parents that they must get the clown to come to the child as it is the one chance of saving the little girl's life. The wife and her sister go to the dressing room of the clown and implore him to come, which he does with the result that the fever of the child is broken, and happy explanations follow which show to the husband his groundless suspicions and the family become reunited.

GREAT NORTHERN.

MYSTERY OF THE LAMA CONVENT; or, Dr. Nicola in Tibet.—Dr. Nicola, a man of great determination, who knows no obstacle in his desire to intrude into the secrets of nature, has made up his mind to discover, and to make known to the world, what is hidden behind the old walls of the Lama Monastery. These mysterious old buildings are known all over China, and are situated in the interior of Tibet. They are in the possession of monks and priests, who are very careful not to allow anyone, particularly foreigners, to gain knowledge of their secrets. Dr. Nicola possesses the wonderful Chinese cane, which has the power of procuring him admission into the religious temples of China, and he engages a young man named Bruce to accompany him as his servant. On their arrival at the convent, the doors are opened to Dr. Nicola, when he shows the Chinese cane, and he is made cognizant of all the secrets of the place. They show him how to be master over life and death, and explain to him their ability to call back to life a dead person. With great ceremony, Dr. Nicola is just about to be initiated into the highest order of the convent, when an old Chinaman steps forward and denounces Dr. Nicola. He pulls off the disguise of Dr. Nicola, who realizes that he is found out and must expect a terrible revenge and punishment. The doctor and his servant are taken to prison, where they plan to escape. A monk comes to bring them food and is overpowered. Bruce is hurried into the monk's clothes, and followed by Dr. Nicola he leaves the cell. In passing a monk on guard, Bruce drops a coin, and the former stooping to pick it up, is floored by Dr. Nicola and his servant, tied and gagged. Disguised in the clothes of the monks, they escape, and just after they have left the gates of the convent a great number of monks appear in hot pursuit. But Dr. Nicola and Bruce have already gained sufficient time to escape, and to obtain a valuable case of very precious data and curios, one of the objects of Dr. Nicola's adventure.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

HERO AND LEANDER (Ambrosio).—This subject is taken from the ancient love legend of Hero and Leander. Hero, the Priestess of Venus, spurns the attentions and affections of the Archon of Sacrifices, for which slight he has vowed vengeance. During the Olympic Festival a youth named Leander arrives from Sestos (Asia), and is crowned with a wreath of laurel by Hero. The Archon, suspecting that a love bond exists between the two, follows Leander, who, that night, goes to the abode of Hero. The Archon waits for the lovers to caress and then reveals to the Priests the faults of Hero, who, according to her religion, is debarred from earthly love. The sweethearts are separated, Leander exiled and Hero punished. While Hero is lying on the rocks, longing for Leander, he is swimming to her from the opposite shore. This they continue to do night after night until the Archon becomes cognizant of the fact. One night, while Leander is at sea, swimming eagerly toward his beloved, the Archon stealthily comes upon Hero, extinguishing her torch, which leaves them in total darkness. Without any light to lead him, Leander perishes on the rocks, still keeping in death his solemn vow.

THE FEMALE BANDIT (Bison).—The Governor, with his wife and small daughter, are seated on the porch of a ranch, when a Mexican who works on the place comes along. The little girl bids him bring her horse, which he does, and for which she rewards him by patting his face. He joins a number of cowboys to play cards, words ensue, and he stabs a youth. He is taken before the Governor, who declares he should be hanged. His little one enters, pleads for his life, and finally the Mexican is set free. His family are suffering great poverty, the Mexican himself sick. The Governor's daughter brings them food, which they almost devour. The Mexican's wife, driven to desperation, disguises as a man and holds up a stage-coach. The victims tell of the outrage and the Governor orders that the highway man be followed. The woman, realizing she is pursued, ties her ill gotten gains to the saddle and sends the horse off, while she resumes her woman's dress. The cowboys see the riderless horse and follow it. The Mexican is greatly distressed to see the horse return without his wife and removes the handkerchief with its contents from the saddle. The cowboys find him looking at the money, and without ceremony he is again taken before the Governor, who this time says he must be hanged. While the boys were before the Governor's house, one dropped a match, which creates a fire. The Mexican's wife, returning home and hearing how badly things have turned out, starts off to explain. She reaches the Governor's house in time to hear that the child is still in the burning house, and heroically she enters and saves her. The woman then tells the truth of the matter to the Governor, who, in gratitude for his child's safety, forgives the Mexican and his wife and welcomes him back again.

BY HIS OWN HAND (Bison).—If the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," were more generally practiced, much disaster in the world would be saved, which is admirably demonstrated in this Bison production. Belle, a daughter of the West, is engaged to her sweetheart, Bob. The cowboys cheer Belle when they learn of her happiness, with the exception of Black Bill, who refuses Bob's outstretched hand. As Belle is about to enter the ranch, Black Bill confronts her. When he offers violence, she lashes him. The father sees her act, and hearing its foundation, orders Black Bill from the ranch. Belle is left alone at the ranch while Bob and her father ride off. Black Bill follows after, and by taking them unawares, gets possession of their guns, at the points of which he leads them to a wooded spot and binds each to a tree. By a cunning device he so arranges their guns that upon the slightest move of their hands they would explode them. Leaving them in this precarious position, Black Bill returns to the ranch and informs Belle by note that to save them she must meet him. This she does, and is led before the captives; but Black Bill turns a deaf ear to all her pleadings, continuing to abuse her, and finally takes her away. Shortly following this, Bob, by much maneuvering, succeeds in freeing himself and the girl's father and they ride off post-haste to save the girl. They eventually overtake Black Bill and have him at their mercy. While Bob takes care of Belle, the father turns the tables on Black Bill, leaving him to his fate, bound to a tree with a gun cleverly arranged to discharge at his slightest move.

PANTOGRAPH.

HIS DAUGHTER'S LEGACY.—This is a story of a young man lost in the woods and after wandering aimlessly around finally comes to a log cabin situated in a clearing. He knocks at the door, which is opened by a beautiful girl and he explains his predicament; her father in the meantime appears upon the scene and hears his story, invites him to accept their hospitality for the night. From the instant of meeting the young lady his admiration is plainly shown. The following morning the young hunter asks the father to allow him to stay a few days, that he will pay well for his board. The father being a back woodsman and having little of this world's goods consents. After breakfast the father takes his gun from the wall and invites the young man to accompany him, but he declines, preferring to remain near the cabin. The father kisses the girl and departs with gun over his shoulder.

After the girl finishes her housework the young hunter invites her to take a walk. As they walk through the woods he describes city life, and compares a beautiful home in the city with servants, automobiles, etc., to the lowly log cabin in the woods. He proposes to the girl, she refuses, but is finally won and consents to elope with him.

Five years later we see the beautiful drawing room with the young hunter and his wife. He has tired of his log cabin wife; she has not been received by either his parents or society; he finally decides to write her a letter stating that he is tired of her and that he is going abroad, but will provide for her. He leaves the note lying on the table. Shortly after his wife returns. Upon finding the note and reading it she decides she will leave his home forever.

We next see her exhausted and cold, a young infant in her arms, knocking at the door of her father's log cabin. Her father opens the door and she totters in and begs her father's forgiveness. He refuses, she falls on her knees and begs, finally he forgives her.

Ten years later we see the father old and gray. The daughter has died and the babe she carried has grown to be a girl.

The husband, after traveling the world over, decides that he prefers the log cabin wife to the stains of society and starts out to find her; he goes to the cabin and knocks at the door, which is opened by the child who does not know her father. The old grandfather comes to the door, recognizes in the man the young hunter who accepted his hospitality and did him such an injury. He makes a move to grasp his gun when a vision appears in the form of his daughter, who stands with uplifted hands between the old gentleman and the young man. The child then turns to her grandfather and begs forgiveness for her father. The grandfather takes the hand of his son-in-law and places it in the hand of his daughter, saying, "I forgive you, take your child and be good to her for her mother's sake."

A. G. WHYTE.

JUSTICE.—Richard Bradley, to revenge himself, steals some money from the desk of the father of the girl he loves and places it in his rival's coat. He is seen by another girl whom he has rejected. She frustrates the scheme and the right party gets jailed.

Wurlitzer

55 YEARS LEADERS IN MUSIC

BETTER MUSIC AT SMALLER COST

FOR ALL MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

Have you investigated the Wurlitzer PianOrchestra?

The leading Nickelodeons are putting in this marvelous Automatic Orchestra. It furnishes better music than a regular orchestra of 5 to 25 pieces, is always "on the job," and cuts out the enormous expense of musicians. The money saved pays rent.

Easy terms, less than paid to musicians. We supply the U. S. Gov't. with musical instruments. Write for big 96-page catalog & testimonial booklet showing Wurlitzer PianOrchestras in leading Nickelodeons.

The RUDOLPH WURLITZER Co

World's Largest Mfrs. Automatic Mus. Insts.

NEW YORK CINCINNATI CHICAGO

25-27 W. 32d 117-121 E. 4th 266-268 Wabash

Immediate Shipment

WE CARRY OPERA CHAIRS IN STOCK

If you want a GOOD CHAIR, at a LOW PRICE, we have it. Inquiries answered same day as received.

Ask for Catalog No. 305

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

THE WEEK'S PROGRAM OF LICENSED FILMS.

Monday, January 31.

Biograph—The Cloister's Touch (Dr.).....993 ft.
Lubin—Bill's Boots (Com.).....245 ft.
Pathe—Coffee Culture (Indus.).....508 ft.
Pathe—Dick's a Winner (Com.).....453 ft.
Selig—Shooting an Oil Well (Indus.).....715 ft.

Tuesday, February 1.

Gaumont—The Golden Lily (Dr.).....702 ft.
Gaumont—Ascending the Jura Mountains (Sc.).253 ft.
Edison—The Japanese Peach Boy (Fairy S.)..940 ft.
Vitagraph—Caught in His Own Trap (Com.).503 ft.
Vitagraph—The Skeleton (Com.).....440 ft.

Wednesday, February 2.

Urban—Sheltered in the Woods (Dr.).....806 ft.
Urban—The Might of the Waters (Sc.).....167 ft.
Pathe—The Postmistress (Dr.).....918 ft.
Kalem—The Step-mother (Dr.).....980 ft.
Essanay—The Wrong Man (Com.).....554 ft.
Essanay—A Voice from the Fireplace (Dr.)..486 ft.

Thursday, February 3.

Biograph—The Woman from Mellon's (Dr.)..988 ft.
Lubin—Sentimental Sam (Com.).....300 ft.
Lubin—It Might Have Been (Com.).....585 ft.
Selig—Politics (Dr.).....1000 ft.

Friday, February 4.

Pathe—Roller Skating in Australia (Sc.)....266 ft.
Pathe—The Model Drama (Dr.).....718 ft.
Kalem—The Little Old Men of the Woods (Fairy Story).....945 ft.
Edison—His Just Deserts (Dr.).....350 ft.
Edison—The Surprise Party (Com.).....330 ft.
Edison—The Bad Man from Riley's Gulch (C.).315 ft.

Saturday, February 5.

Vitagraph—Twelfth Night (Dr.).....970 ft.
Essanay—Sensational Logging (Sc.).....1000 ft.
Pathe—A Critical Situation (Com.).....623 ft.
Pathe—Adam II.—Miscellaneous (Edu.).....354 ft.
Gaumont—Civil War (Dr.).....940 ft.

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a space saver, life saver and money saver. Shipped built up. It is the only sanitary theatre chair. Used by Keith, Proctor and Poli. It folds up automatically and is revolving, making the theatre all aisles. It is a friend to the public.

Send for our circular A. Write today.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO.
CANAL DOVER, OHIO

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2.

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

"TITLE POSTERS"

Are THE Thing for Advertising

MOVING PICTURES

They cost 5c each or by mail 6c. The full service of one poster for every licensed subject released for a month costs only $7.50 including prepaid delivery charges.

Free Sample for the Asking

TITLE POSTER CO.
231-233 Bowery, New York

A Poster for Every Picture

Films For Sale 50 new reels of perfect film, extra good condition, to close out, at $18 50
Second hand Edison machines for sale at a bargain. Parts to fit all machines in stock
MAYER SILVERMAN, 322 Fulton Bldg., Pittsburg; Pa.

INDEPENDENT FILMS

THE ACTOPHONE COMPANY.

Jan. 12—Robert Macaire; or, The Two Vagabonds.

LUX FILMS.

Jan. 26—He Would Be an Acrobat.....488
Jan. 26—Uncle Learns to Hypnotize.....498
Feb. 2—Hamlet 950
Feb. 9—Pirate's Fiancee.....698
Feb. 9—The Consequence of a Nod.....311

FILM IMPORT AND TRADING CO.

Jan. 27—Bear Hunting (R. & R.).....
Jan. 27—Disguised Bridegroom (R. & R.).....
Jan. 29—A Young Girl's Sacrifice (Aquila).....

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.

Jan. 22—Anarchists on Board (Dr.).....
Jan. 29—The Mystery of the Lama Convent (Dr.)
Feb. 5—A Woman's Destiny (Dr.).....740
Feb. 5—The Foxy Soldiers (Com.).....235

"IMP."

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES COMPANY OF AMERICA.

Jan. 10—Right of Love.....975
Jan. 17—The Tide of Fortune.....975
Jan. 24—Never Again (Com.).....615
Jan. 24—A Rose of the Philippines (Dr.).....985

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

Jan. 18—A Cowboy's Reward (Dr.).....
Jan. 21—Romany Rob's Revenge (Dr.).....
Jan. 25—A Romance of the Prairie (Bison)....950
Jan. 28—His Imaginary Crime (Bison).....950
Feb. 1—By His Own Hand (Dr.).....
Feb. 4—The Female Bandit (Dr.).....

ITALA.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Jan. 12—Episode of Napoleon's War with Spain.800
Jan. 22—There Are Some Ghosts.....400
Jan. 22—The Tempting Collar.....600
Jan. 29—The Timid One.....550
Jan. 29—A Good Winning.....430
Feb. 5—Love and Treason.....1000

AMBROSIO.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Jan. 15—The Son of the Wilderness.....925
Jan. 19—Pauli 700
Jan. 19—Italian Artillery.....300
Jan. 26—The Last Keepsake.....600
Jan. 26—A Choice Policeman.....400
Feb. 2—Hero and Leander.....850

PANTOGRAPH CORPORATION.

Jan. 29—A Tale of Colonial Days.....900
Feb. 6—His Daughter's Legacy.....980

Song Slides

RENTED

25c.

A Set Per Week

Your week's supply in one consignment every week. All sets guaranteed original and complete from title to chorus.

Our Service Strengthens Your Programme

Chicago Song Slide Exchange
Ninth Floor, Masonic Temple
CHICAGO - - - ILLINOIS

Classified Advertising.

Classified advertising, no display, three cents per word, cash with order. Postage stamps accepted for small amounts.

MERCHANDISE.

FOR SALE—Brand new Model B Gas Outfit, with burner; $18 complete. M. E. HOVELL, 10 East 15th St.

FOR SALE—Power's No. 5 Cameragraph, practically new, with stereopticon lenses; 144 Reedsboro opera chairs, splendid condition. Quick sale. HARGREAVES, Bryan St., Rochester, N. Y.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—Party with capital who owns a number of moving picture theaters, who is desirous of going into the film rental business. Can secure half-interest in a well-paying and established New York exchange for $3,000. Only those who mean business need answer. E. B., care Moving Picture World.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

OPERATOR At liberty Feb. 5th. Seven years' experience with Edison and Power's machines. Expert repair man and electrician. Wife excellent picture pianist. Locate anywhere. Joint position or single. A HUSTLER, care Moving Picture World.

SITUATION WANTED by managing operator; 6 years' experience. Address WOLENS, care of Moving Picture World.

Feb. 7—Justice in the Far North.....950

AT LIBERTY.—Licensed operator and wife A-1 pianist. Both experienced and best references. G. L. PALMER, Box 307, Sidney, N. Y.

OPERATOR with new Power's No. 5 wants work; free trial; salary moderate. "POWERS," care Moving Picture World.

For Sale Cheap

130 Opera Chairs in good condition. 1 Power's Machine No. 5 Model. 1 Disolving Stereopticon 2 Power's Rheostats. Traps, Slides, Fans. Ticket Chopper, Electric Sign. Ticket Office front and all furnishings to equip first-c'ass picture show.

T. P. TONKIN
Theatorium Auburn, N. Y.

No. 35

35 Cents

Postage Paid

Send for catalog of Announcement and Ad slides

The Neosho Slide Company
100 S. Wood St., Neosho, Mo.

LICENSED FILMS.

BIOGRAPH COMPANY.

		Feet
Jan.	3—The Rocky Road (Dr.)	990
Jan.	6—The Dancing Girl of Butte (Dr.)	984
Jan.	10—Her Terrible Ordeal (Dr.)	952
Jan.	13—All on Account of the Milk (Dr.)	980
Jan.	17—On the Reef (Dr.)	988
Jan.	20—The Call (Dr.)	989
Jan.	24—The Honor of His Family (Dr.)	988
Jan.	27—The Last Deal (Dr.)	991
Jan.	31—The Cloister's Touch (Dr.)	993
Feb.	3—The Woman from Mellon's (Dr.)	988

EDISON MFG. CO.

Jan.	21—The Luck of Roaring Camp (Dr.)	490
Jan.	25—A Woman's Strategy (Dr.)	975
Jan.	28—A Georgia Possum Hunt (Des.)	140
Jan.	28—The Skipper's Yarn (Dr.)	850
Feb.	1—The Japanese Peach Boy (Fairy Story)	940
Feb.	4—His Just Deserts (Dr.)	350
Feb.	4—The Surprise Party (Com.)	330
Feb.	4—The Bad Man from Riley's Gulch (Com.)	315
Feb.	8—The Livingston Case (Dr.)	995
Feb.	11—An Equine Hero (Edu.)	725
Feb.	11—A Queen of the Burlesque (Com.)	260
Feb.	15—The President's Special (Dr.)	950
Feb.	18—The Miniature	725
Feb.	18—A Trip to Mars (Scenic)	265

ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.

Jan.	12—Electric Insoles (Com.)	502
Jan.	12—The Old Maid and the Burglar (Com.)	498
Jan.	15—Review of U. S. Troops, Fort Leavenworth (Scenic)	1000
Jan.	19—Won by a Holdup (Com.)	629
Jan.	19—Flower Parade at Pasadena, Cal.	292
Jan.	22—The Confession (Dr.)	960
Jan.	26—The Modern Messenger Boy (Com.)	945
Jan.	29—An Outlaw's Sacrifice (Dr.)	996
Feb.	2—The Wrong Man (Com.)	554
Feb.	2—A Voice from the Fireplace (Dr.)	486
Feb.	5—Sensational Logging (Scenic)	1000

GAUMONT.

(George Kleine.)

Jan.	18—Fatal Fascination (Dr.)	580
Jan.	18—Getting Square with the Inventor (C.)	393
Jan.	22—Swallowed by the Deep (Dr.)	977
Jan.	25—The Price of Patriotism (Dr.)	574
Jan.	25—Sea Side Adventures at Home (Com.)	371
Jan.	29—The Great Divide (Dr.)	741
Jan.	29—Wild Waves at St. Jean de Lux (Scenic)	243
Feb.	1—The Golden Lily (Dr.)	702
Feb.	1—Ascending the Jura Mountains (Sc.)	253
Feb.	5—Civil War (Dr.)	940

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

(George Kleine.)

Jan.	12—True to His Oath (Dr.)	672
Jan.	12—Home of the Gypsies (Scenic)	321
Jan.	19—The Coast Guard (Dr.)	747
Jan.	19—Riva, Austria, and the Lake of Garda (Scenic)	204
Jan.	26—Tommy in Dreamland (Com.)	491
Jan.	26—The Lass Who Loved a Sailor (Dr.)	417
Feb.	2—Sheltered in the Woods (Dr.)	806
Feb.	2—The Might of the Waters (Sc.)	167

KALEM CO.

Jan.	7—The Deacon's Daughter (Dr.)	950
Jan.	14—The Romance of a Trained Nurse (Dr.)
Jan.	21—The Magic Flower (Fairy Tale)
Jan.	28—The Man Who Lost (Dr.)	930
Feb.	2—The Step-mother (Dr.)	980
Feb.	4—The Little Old Men of the Woods (Fairy Story)	945

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Jan.	13—He Joined the Frat (Com.)	300
Jan.	17—He Got Rid of the Moths (Com.)	540
Jan.	17—A Slippery Day (Com.)	320
Jan.	20—The Usurper (Dr.)	905
Jan.	24—Cupid, D.D.S. (Com.)	356
Jan.	24—Adoring an Ad. (Dr.)	515
Jan.	27—Marble Quarrying in Tennessee (Industrial)	441
Jan.	27—The Flirto-Maniac (Com.)	420
Jan.	31—Bill's Boots (Com.)	245
Jan.	31—Too Much Protection (Com.)	600
Feb.	3—Sentimental Sam (Com.)	300
Feb.	3—It Might Have Been (Com.)	585

PATHE FRERES.

Jan.	31—Coffee Culture (Indus.)	508
Jan.	31—Dick's a Winner (Com.)	453
Feb.	2—The Postmistress (Dr.)	918
Feb.	4—Roller Skating in Australia (Sc.)	266
Feb.	4—The Model Drama (Dr.)	718
Feb.	5—A Critical Situation (Com.)	623
Feb.	5—Adam II.—Miscellaneous (Edu.)	354
Feb.	7—The Bandit (Dr.)	394
Feb.	7—The Two Raffles (Com.)	594
Feb.	9—Cora, the Contraband's Daughter (Dr.)	567
Feb.	9—In Ancient Greece (Ballet)	410
Feb.	11—The Troubadour (Com.)	561
Feb.	11—Before and After (Com.)	430
Feb.	12—The Jockey (Dr.)	840
Feb.	12—The Foot Juggler (Acrobatic)	157

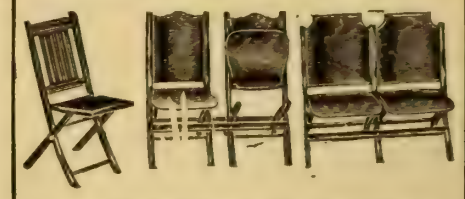
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.

Jan.	20—The Courtship of Miles Standish (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	24—The Ranch King's Daughter (Dr.)	700
Jan.	24—An Afternoon Off (Com.)	300
Jan.	27—The Devil, the Servant and the Man
Jan.	31—Shooting an Oil Well (Industrial)	715
Jan.	31—Our German Cousin (Com.)	285
Feb.	3—Politics (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	10—In the Shadow of Mt. Shasta (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	7—In the Serpent's Power (Dr.)	1000

VITAGRAPH COMPANY.

Jan.	1—Cupid and the Motor Boat (Dr.)	940
Jan.	4—The Life of Moses (Biblical)	868
Jan.	8—Richelieu, or the Conspiracy (Dr.)	992
Jan.	11—Call Boy's Vengeance (Com.)	320
Jan.	11—The Old Maid's Valentine (Com.)
Jan.	15—A Sister's Sacrifice (Dr.)	970
Jan.	18—The Toymaker's Secret (Dr.)	969
Jan.	22—A Pair of Schemers (Com.)	743
Jan.	22—Five Minutes to Twelve (Com.)	162
Jan.	25—The Life of Moses, Part 3 (Dr.)	976
Jan.	29—The Girl and the Judge (Dr.)	980
Feb.	1—Caught in His Own Trap (Com.)	503
Fez.	1—The Skeleton (Com.)	440
Feb.	5—Twelfth Night (Dr.)	970

Folding and Assembly Chairs



Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use

Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue

PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.

NORTH MANCHESTER, - - - INDIANA

WANTED—Party with capital, who owns a number of moving picture theaters, who is desirous of going into the film renting business. Can secure half interest in a well paying and established New York exchange for $3,000. Only those who mean business need answer. E. B., care Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE—Brand new Model B Gas Outfit, with burner, $18.00 complete. M. E. HOVELL, 10 East 15th St.

FOR SALE.—Moving picture and vaudeville theater; good location; seating four hundred. City of seventy thousand. Reason for selling, other business. Address, J. G., Moving Picture World.

As the Operator Looks at it

As the Operator Looks at It

Just notice how easy this operator takes it. He doesn't have to work over a dangerous juice consuming rheostat at furnace heat anymore since the was installed.

Fort Wayne Compensarc

He can control the machine perfectly now with one hand--gets a clearer, whiter, steadier light and can adjust it to any of the three intensities without even the faintest flicker.

When we sold this machine we guaranteed it would absolutely

Cut 2-3 from the Monthly Lighting Bill

That sounded almost too good to be true, but they put one in on our 30 day free trial plan.

Did the machine "make good?" Well, the first month it reduced the bill from $22.70 to $9.24 and they operated more hours and got better light than ever before.

We can do just as well for you regardless of what voltage you are using and if you will send for our little free booklet, we'll explain how we do it.

Remember you are paying the Lighting Company 66 2-3 per cent more than you need to every day you wait.

Fort Wayne Electric Works

1402 Broadway

Fort Wayne, Indiana

Open Twenty Four Hours Every Day—Write, Call, Wire or Phone Any Hour, Day or Night

ELECTRIC THEATRE SUPPLY CO., Inc. The Home of Good Film Service
The Birthplace of Original Ideas

We handle everything needed by Moving Picture Exhibitors 44 N. Tenth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

We have every subject issued by the Licensed Manufacturers

MOTIOGRAPH, PATHE FRERES, POWER'S, EDISON and LUBIN MACHINES and PARTS ALWAYS ON HAND

Write for our new proposition:—Supplying two customers in the same town each with twelve reels a week, keeping each one's supply away from the other, and no repeaters to either.

·Essanay Films·

Trade Mark Trade Mark

The Wrong Man

RELEASE OF WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 2

THE WRONG MAN

This brisk little comedy is one the best of our recent comedy releases. No film story concerning a case of mistaken identity ever developed more laughable situations than those our comedy producer has introduced into this story. A detailed description will be found in other columns. The length of the film is approximately 554 feet.

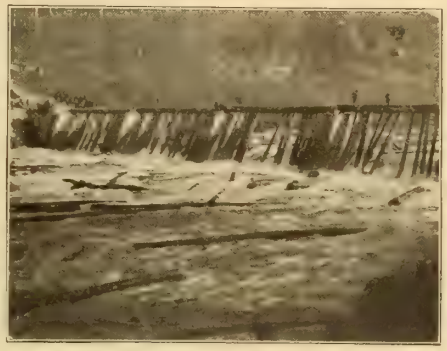
A VOICE FROM THE FIREPLACE

A litt'e drama founded on the short story of Guy de Maupassant, "The Log." One of the prettiest of our one scene dramatic subjects. Length, approximately, 486 feet.

RELEASE OF SATURDAY FEBRUARY 5

SENSATIONAL LOGGING A Feature Film

Never since "Wonders of Nature," have we issued a more beautiful scenic subject than "Sensational Logging." The last scenes are startlingly spectacular, when a monster dam 200 feet long and forty-five feet high is exploded, releasing 50 000 logs on a mad race to the sawmills. The picture was made in the lumbering regions in the most beautiful of the Appalachians, the Cumberland Mountains of Kentucky and Virginia. Don't miss it! The length is approximately 1,000 feet.



Sensational Logging

Write for "The Essanay Guide," our new Bulletin. The prettiest ever! Twelve pages in two colors, profusely illustrated. It's worth seeing.

Esssanay posters are made by the Essanay Film Mfg. Co., exclusively. In four colors and very attractive. An ornament for your lobby.

Essanay Film M'f'g., Co.

FACTORY and STUDIOS 1333 ARGYLE ST. - OFFICE 435 NORTH CLARK ST.
CHICAGO and LONDON, 5 NEW COMPTON ST. W.C.

LUX FILMS

Mr. R. Prieur begs to announce that owing to the large increase in orders for Lux Films he has secured large and more conveniently located offices at

No. 10 E. 15th Street

(Bet. 5th Ave. and Broadway)

Release Wednesday, February 2d

HAMLET

950 FEET

R. PRIEUR

10 E. 15th Street Telephone Call: STUYVESANT 3124 NEW YORK

American Made

INDEPENDENT FILMS

The Talk of the World

NEXT WEEK

JUSTICE

Released Thursday, February 3rd

February 9th

"The Mountaineer"

A Tale of Kentucky

February 16th

BONEHEAD 3rd

COMEDY

1 MADISON SQUARE A. G. WHYTE SOLE AGENT

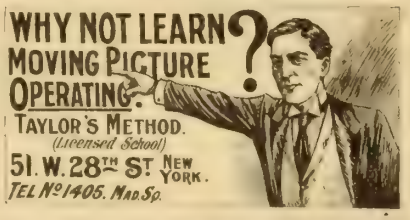
SPECIAL NOTICE

On and after February 9th my release day will be on Wednesday.

A. G. WHYTE, 1 Madison Sq., N. Y.



CLASS meets every morning and afternoon with F. H. Richardson of Chicago as chief instructor. Evening classes meet every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Complete course $15.00. We positively guarantee you a $15.00 position. We are selling agents for the American Moving Picture Machine, and have a second hand Edison Machine in A-1 condition at one half of original cost.

F. C. TAYLOR, 51 West 28th Street, NEW YORK CITY

INTERNATIONAL FILM COMPANY 110 WEST 34th STREET NEW YORK

NOTE OUR SPECIALTY
A1 Films at 2 cents per foot

Dealers in Films, Moving Picture Machines, Carbons, Tickets, Song Slides, Announcement Slides and everything pertaining to the Moving Picture business.

Want to Buy 1000 Reels Independent Film

GREAT NORTHERN

QUALITY FILMS

One Quality Only—THE BEST

Awarded First Prize: Gold Medal and Prize of Honor at the Cinematograph Exhibition at Hamburg, 1908.

Licensee under the Biograph Patents. All purchasers and users of our films will be protected from litigation.

NEXT RELEASE JANUARY, 29th

The Mystery of the Lama Convent

Or Dr. Nicola in Tibet

Magnificent Feature Production. The Season's Biggest Hit

NOTICE! The subjects a "Woman's Destiny" and the "Foxy Soldiers" will be released February 5th, instead of January 29th as advertised.

TO EXHIBITORS: Send in your name and address, and we will place you on our mailing list, and furnish you with a synopsis of our latest productions. Popular films never fail to draw the crowds. Therefore insist that your exchange supply you with the Popular Great Northern Films. Lithographs and handsome poster-synopsis can be had by applying at your exchange.

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

Member N. I. M. P. A.

7 East 14th Street - - New York

FILMS FOR RENT

NEW FILMS—HIGH CLASS SERVICE

The Pioneer House, With 8 Years Experience And $250,000.00 Back Of It

Write To-day For Terms

EUGENE CLINE

57 and 59 Dearborn Street, Chicago

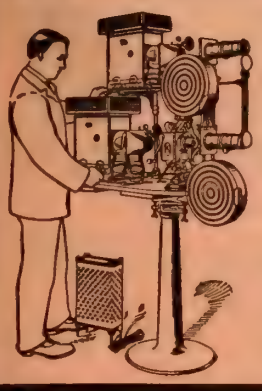
Vol. 6., No. 6. February 12, 1910 Price, 10 Cents

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

ALL THE FILM AND SONG SLIDE NEWS

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE EXHIBITOR

Published Weekly by THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING CO., 125 E. 23d ST., NEW YORK



The Motiograph Motion Picture Machine is A Wonder

AND WILL INCREASE YOUR BUSINESS

It projects Flickerless, Steady and Wonderfully Brilliant pictures, has Patented 1½ minute Rewind from main crank, revolving Magazines, Automatic Fireproof shutter, etc., not found in other Machines.—WILL WEAR TWICE AS LONG.

C. H. D. of Keokuk, Iowa, writes: Motiograph Making a Big Hit and Business increased wonderfully.

F. L. F. of Chicago, Ill., writes: "Used every day for seven months, and not one penny for repairs."

F. J. K. of Kansas City, writes: "Operating Motiograph nearly two years. Have operated all makes, but none to compare with Motiograph.—PRICES, $150.00 AND UP

The Enterprise Calcium Gas Outfit is the only satisfactory substitute for electric light Write for Catalog to-day

Western Representatives { S. Lubin Geo. Melies FILM

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564-572 West Randolph Street, Chicago

Calcium Gas Outfit

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

143 North 8th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Best and Newest Independent American and Foreign Films

SUPPLIES——18 REELS PER WEEK——SUPPLIES

PROMPT AND RELIABLE SERVICE

Members N. I. M. P. Alliance

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

THE PERFECTED

Power's Cameragraph No. 6

Was the Big Hit of the Convention of the F. S. A.

Deliveries Begin February 15th, 1910. Get Your Order in Now

Manufactured by

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115-117 Nassau Street, New York

BISON FILMS

TRADE MARK

Regular Release Days—Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday, Saturday

FOUR REELS A WEEK—Tuesday, a "Bison"—Wednesday, Ambrosio—Friday, a "Bison"—Saturday, Itala

"THE TRIUMPH OF THE SEASON"

"Young Deer's Gratitude"

RELEASED FEBRUARY 11th, 1910

The "Crowning Feature" of this week's productions is "Young Deer's Gratitude," without a doubt the greatest subject ever produced of life on the plains, showing the true life of the "cowboy" and "Indion" and we can again assure you that this subject is the "one big success" of the season.

Tuesday, Feb. 8th—A "BISON"

"TEN OF SPADES" or
"A WESTERN RAFFLE"

Code—Ingrate

Friday, Feb. 11th—A "BISON"

"YOUNG DEER'S GRATITUDE"

Code—In

Wednesday Feb. 9th—"AMBROSIO"

"THE LONGING FOR COAL"
"THE STRONGEST"

Code—Insist

Saturday Feb. 12th—"ITALA"

"FOOLSHEAD RECEIVES"

"FOOLSHEAD PREACHES TEMPERANCE"

Code—IT

Two more of those famous "Itala" subjects on one reel.

Nothing but ludicrous and "comedy situations" interspersed throughout the picture.

LITHOGRAPHS AND POSTERS FREE

Exhibitors:—We furnish as usual all exchanges handling these productions with one sheet four colored lithographs, also posters containing synopsis, absolutely free with each reel. Demand same from your exchange as they will positively increase your box office receipts.
Brief description of all subjects will be found on another page.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

Manufacturers of "Bison" Life Motion Pictures

429 SIXTH AVENUE, Cor. 26th Street - NEW YORK CITY

Phone 6690-1 Madison Sq. Cable Address: Nosib

EXCHANGES!

To help you convince licensed exhibitors that you can give them independent films which will delight their very souls, we will send your reels several days ahead of release dates. Exchanges who have tried this are delighted with the scheme. The Paramount Film Co. of New York writes as follows: "In the last three days we took on six new customers (formerly using association goods) and we must give full credit for this to IMP films. As an instance: Our man went to see a Bridgeport exhibitor (association service), who pooh-poohed the idea of changing Biograph, his god! Our representative induced him to put on your film, 'The Awakening of Bess.' When the film started off he gasped and when it was over he confessed he didn't think anybody but Biograph could do it. Now he is our customer and a rooter for IMP films. Is it any wonder we are anxious for two IMPS a week? The sooner the better." Try this plan yourself and see how beautifully it boosts your business, Mr. Exchange Man. Tell us to send the reels ahead of release dates and we'll do the rest!

EXHIBITORS

Our IMP release for Monday, February 14th, is another double-header, two-thirds of the reel being a powerful drama and the other third a boisterous comedy. The first part is entitled

"The Blind Man's Tact"

(650 FEET)

and the principal characters are a blind man, his daughter and a burglar. If the exciting situations don't keep your audience sitting on the front edge of the seats, we miss a long guess. The rest of the reel is devoted to a comedy called

"Brown's Gouty Foot"

(300 FEET)

and not a foot of the whole three hundred is gouty. When the mischievous urchin in the park decides to make things unpleasant for Brown's gouty foot, you'll fairly wince in sympathy with Brown.

EVERYBODY

We are paying the highest market price for SCENARIOS, IDEAS AND HINTS for moving pictures. You don't have to be a playwright. Just jot down your idea as briefly as possible (scene for scene) and mail it to us. If it has any merit at all we'll grab it and pay you well. Remember we soon begin to release TWO REELS A WEEK instead of one and we are ready to buy a big bunch of manuscripts right away.

Independent Moving Pictures Company of America,
111 E. 14th St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres.

Our Monday, February 7th, release is "Justice in the Far North." Get it!

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER

Miror Vitae Products," Projectors, Cameras, Film-Making Machinery, Films, Slides, Stereopticons, Specialties, Lens Grinding, etc. Special condensors, carbons and lugs.

109 East 12th Street, New York

EVERTON—Hypnotist

The hypnotist who hypnotized his jail keeper while being held for manslaughter.
Notice to Managers: Played New York to standing room. The real box office attraction.

For Time and Terms Address
F. W. SALTZSIEDER, 952 8th Avenue, New York

BEAT IT
IF YOU CAN

Our new rate of 25c.

A Set Per Week

Your week's supply in one shipment every week

ALL OF THE VERY LATEST SONG HITS

Chicago Song Slide Exchange
Ninth Floor, Masonic Temple
CHICAGO - - - ILLINOIS

Films I have a system of keeping away from Repeaters No reels older than one year. This sounds bad but not half as bad as it is to hand you gunc three years old.

I am open and frank and tell you what you get for your money—Try me for a week anyhow. You can't lose

PURDY'S FILM EXCHANGE
300 EAST 23d STREET, Cor. 2nd Ave., NEW YORK CITY

Classified Advertising.

Classified advertising, no display, three cents per word, cash with order. Postage stamps accepted for small amounts.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—Male or female singer, female preferred; only those apply who have voice of quality and volume; right price paid to right persons; satisfactory reference required; reputation must accompany the singer; no flirts tolerated. Address, SCHMIDT BROS., Mgrs. Theatorium, New Castle, Ind.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

TENOR SINGER wants position at once; will sure make good. Salary reasonable. References from former managers. Address ROBERT P. FOURNIER, 56 Oak Street, Providence, R. I.

SINGER of ability wants position. Four years illustrated song experience. Thoroughly proficient. Baritone voice with a range of two octaves. Wishes to connect with first-class house and thoroughly reliable people. (Don't send telegrams collect.) Address THOMAS F. GIBLIN, 245 Manton Ave., Providence, R. I.

A GOOD M. P. OPERATOR with 9 years' experience wants position. Familiar with all makes of machines; does own repairing. J. FRANCIS MOCKLIN, Dock St., Royalton, Pa.

POSITION WANTED—M. P. operator or manager, city or out of town, 8 years' experience. Address at once S. W., care Moving Picture World.

AT LIBERTY Moving picture and vaudeville pianist. Only reliable managers reply; state salary. Address MUSICIAN, care Logue Bros., Williamsport, Pa.

MERCHANDISE.

FOR SALE—1,000 ft. reels film released to Jan. 1, $5 and $10 per reel; Edison, Lubin, Power's machines, $40 to $60; new, $100; Model B gas outfit, $25; 3,000 ft. Pathe hand colored Passion Play, $100; double dissolving stereopticon, new, $40. For Rent 6,000 ft. film, $10; 9,000 ft., $12, one shipment. H. DAVIS, Watertown, Wis.

FOR SALE—Brand new Model B Gas Outfit, with burner; $18 complete. M. E. HOVELL, 10 East 15th St.

FOR SALE—Power's No. 5 Cameragraph, practically new, with stereopticon lenses; 144 Reedsboro opera chairs, splendid condition. Quick sale.

ECLAIR FILMS

FIRST RELEASE, FEBRUARY 7th, 1910
and Regularly Each Monday Following

The Child and the Dancing Jack

Dramatic. Approximate Length, 480 Feet

Shows the affectionate interest of a wealthy boy towards a poor one. A sympathetic film story is wound round a mutual plaything in form of a toy-clown, "PUNCH."

Mr. Giddy's Revenge

Comedy. Approximate Length, 400 Feet

A thoughtless pedestrian meets with some comical mishaps, through his carlessness.

SECOND RELEASE FEBRUARY 14, 1910

The Serum

Antidote

Shows a noted scientist in his laboratory with his assistant, working out an antidote for the serpent's venom, but being called to his office is obliged to leave his wife alone with his assistant, who loses no time in trying to take advantage of the opportunity, the same having a very tragic end.

A Bootblack's Daily Labor in Algiers

Comedy

This film portrays very naturally the care free life of the little "CIRI" who runs here and there stealing and earning what he can in a most innocent way.

Eclair Film Company

31 East 27th Street - - New York City

"Everything New" "A Service of Merit"

Equitable Motion Picture Co.

OF OMAHA, NEBRASKA

Just what the WESTERN exhibitor has long looked for—A FILM SERVICE—that satisfies "the appetite" of his patrons.

Every reel in our stock is a brand NEW ISSUE, from the best of American and European manufacturers, and insures a Service that embraces Every essential Quality, which means Success to the exhibitor.

Get in touch with us, and state your requirements.

Equitable Motion Picture Co.
1318 Farnum Street :: Omaha, Nebraska

INDEPENDENT

We rent new Films. Handle all the leading Makes, both AMERICAN AND FOREIGN; beautiful Posters; exclusive Feature Service. Write for prices.

CINCINNATI FILM EXCHANGE, 214-16 West 5th Street, CINCINNATI, O.

KEEP YOUR ON US

AMERICAN FILM BROKERS—German Savings Bank Building
147-157 4th Avenue, New York City

300 sets second-hand Song Slides from $1.50 up. Films like new very cheap. Announcement Slides, Machines and Accessories of all kinds. Write for lists.

INTERNATIONAL FILM COMPANY

110 WEST 34th STREET NEW YORK

NOTE OUR SPECIALTY
A1 Films at 2 cents per foot

Dealers in Films, Moving Picture Machines, Carbons, Tickets, Song Slides, Announcement Slides and everything pertaining to the Moving Picture business.

Want to Buy 1000 Reels Independent Film

Theatre For Sale

GREAT OPPORTUNITY.

ESTABLISHED, POPULAR AND PAYING THEATER IN MANUFACTURING OHIO CITY. Seating capacity 415. Two Edison machines, exhaust fan and six other fans. New scenery, everything in first class shape. Electric light signs and a pretty front. 15,000 inhabitants and only one other vaudeville show in the city. Will sacrifice for $2,500 cash if sold within three weeks, as other business in the State of Washington compels me to leave for the West. Address for further particulars, O. MASON, care of Moving Picture World.

To keep your wife satisfied you must make love to her even after you are married.
To keep your customers satisfied you let them hear the best songs published and see the best song slides made.
We furnish you with the best song slide service to be had for the small cost of 50 cents a set per week.
We have a large number of beautiful announcement slides.
We also have short travel lectures.
Get the new slides before your neighbor gets them.
Write at once for our lists.

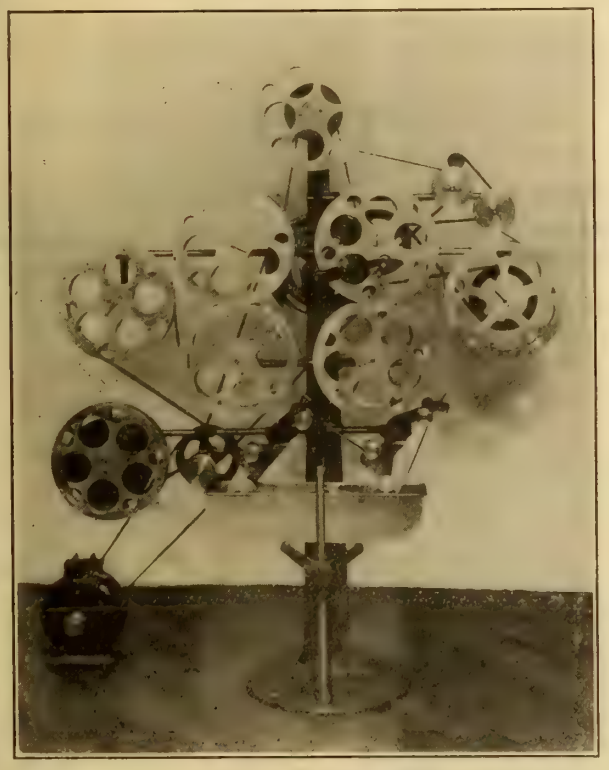
LINCOLN TRANSPARENCY EXCHANGE
16th Floor, Masonic Temple - - Chicago, Ill.

TRADE MARK
WATERPROOF

Waterproofed Films

like all others will soil, but unlike all others they can be cleaned with

Soap and Water



This machine does it in 10 minutes

ALL EXCHANGES NEED ONE

National Waterproof Film Co.

4200-4202 W. Adams Street
CHICAGO, ILL.

The Excela Soundograph

The only complete and up-to-date effect-producing machine ever invented is now complete and ready for the exhibitors. Everybody pronounces it a wonder. Almost any sound or effect imaginable is easily and realistically produced by simply turning a crank, pulling a handle or pushing a button. The effects are all mounted in a handsome cabinet structure, 25 x 40 inches square and 42 inches high, with means exterior for the operation of each effect separately, or they can be operated in combinations. The Soundograph can be located either in the orchestra, pit or back of the screen as the exhibitor prefers. No expert operator is required, any one person is all that is needed to operate the Soundograph and produce perfect sound effects. A boy or some other employee of the theatre learns quickly to work the effects, thus relieving the exhibitor of the services of an expensive operator. It will put life and realism in your pictures and delight your audiences. It holds their interest and attention to the end of the reel and assures you of big box office receipts every day.

Let us ship you a Soundograph now

PRICE, $150.00

EXCELA SOUNDOGRAPH CO.

PITTSBURG, PA.
Office 1101 Empire Building

Curtainyline

For three years has given satisfaction to the most exacting Exhibitors—they will use nothing else on their curtain

Brings Out the True Photographic Outlines. Fireproofs Your Curtain
Try a $3.00 Carton and Note the Wonderful Improvement in Your Pictures

A $3.00 carton is sufficient for any ordinary cnrtain. All exchanges carry it in stock

Curtainyline Curtain & Producing Co. 22 Fifth Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

The Magnetic Film Service Company

INCORPORATED

Successor to

Lubin Film Service Company

123 Shillito Place, Cincinnati

The Best Service
Thoroughly Inspected Films
Prompt and Careful Shipments
Write for Information and Catalog

Don't Buy Yourself Poor

MAKE YOUR OWN

Non-Inflammable Cement

I will sell this valuable Formula upon receipt of only $2.00

The ingredients of which can be purchased anywhere at a very reasonable price. Can be used on both kinds of Film

Positively Strongest Film Cement Formula on Earth

Send 12c. for sample bottle and be convinced

JOHN H. HEINZ

Gem Theatre Baltimore, Md.

THE TALK OF THE WORLD

NESTOR FILMS

The Mountaineer

S.P.Q.R.

Released February 9th

A Daughter's Devotion

Bonehead 3rd

RELEASED FEBRUARY 16th

1 MADISON AVENUE A. G. WHYTE NEW YORK CITY

LUX FILMS

RELEASED WED.

Pirate's Fiancee

Length 698 Feet

This is a highly interesting subject, admirably acted, and of a character to become exceedingly popular. Don't miss this excellent film.

FEBRUARY 9th

The Consequence of a Nod

Length 311 Feet

A laughing scream all the way through. A comedy of this kind is always appreciated.

For full description of these subjects see another page in this issue.

THE WORLD'S BEST—BAR NONE

Write for Weekly List of Descriptions of our Films

R. PRIEUR

10 E. 15th Street Telephone Call: STUYVESANT 3124 NEW YORK

Independent Film Service

PIEDMONT FILM EXCHANGE
GOLDSBORO, N. C.

Write us today for our Special Offer

No Old Association Films Used in Our Service Whatsoever, but Exclusive Independent Films of the Real Good Kind. . . .

Song Slides Free to Customers

Films, Machines, Songs Slides Constantly on Hand For Sale

WRITE US TODAY

A Drawing Card for Moving Picture Theatres

Louise M. Marion

IN

Illustrated poems, now booking in Moving Picture Houses in and out of town, also for professional entertainment.

Miss Marion is presenting several beautiful poems written by Fred Emmerson Brooks, which she has illustrated with special permission from the author. This work never fails to make a hit on every occasion.

Operator, Vaudeville Sketch and music furnished when desired. Highest testimonials Terms reasonable.

LOUISE M. MARION
321 West 23rd Street New York City

PARIS FLOOD

RELEASED WEEK OF FEBRUARY 14th

A. G. WHYTE

1 Madison Avenue New York City

VITAGRAPH FILMS

THE FILMS OF "QUALITY"

Tuesday, February 8

THE PASSING SHADOW

An Intense Dramatic Picture, marked by careful and splendid acting. It holds the interest to the last foot of film. Approximate length, 996 feet.

Saturday, February 12

PART IV.—"LIFE OF MOSES" SERIES

THE VICTORY OF ISRAEL

This magnificent production, the fourth in a magnificent series, will be found more spectacular than any of its predecessors. The remarkable favor with which "The Life of Moses" series is being received marks it as the greatest motion picture event since the Passion Play. Approximate length, 955 feet.

THREE REELS PER WEEK—Tuesdays, Fridays, Saturdays

In response to numerous requests from exhibitors everywhere, the regular Vitagraph releases will be increased to THREE REELS PER WEEK, commencing the WEEK OF FEBRUARY 14, the new release days being TUESDAYS, FRIDAYS and SATURDAYS.

The Concluding Reels of THE LIFE OF MOSES, PART V., "The Promised Land," will be issued February 19. Exhibitors will thus have the opportunity of showing all five reels before the end of Lent. Make your arrangements now with your exchange.

USE VITAGRAPH POSTERS. ORDER FROM YOUR EXCHANGE.

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

NEW YORK, 116 Nassau St.
CHICAGO, 109 Randolph St.
LONDON, 25 Cecil Court
PARIS, 15, Rue Sainte-Cecile

SELIG — THE MASTERMARK OF PICTUREDOM

In the Serpent's Power

Release Date February 7th
Length 1000 Feet
Code Word: "Pents"

Another big one—fragrant with the aroma of sunny Italy. As life-like and natural as though you were breathing the pure air from the Bay of Genoa. Just the thing for action, and a great story—how can it be otherwise—since it's the "SELIG KIND."

TRADE S MARK

In the Shadow of Old Mt. Shasta

"A Gem of the Golden West."

Release Date February 10th
Length 1000 Feet
Code Word: "Shasta."

An absorbing story, teeming with the effervescence of loyal man and womanhood. A great big picture handled in the usual

"SELIG" WAY.

SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY Inc. - - - 45-47-49 Randolph Street, Chicago, U. S. A.

SELIG — THE MASTERMARK OF PICTUREDOM

Lincoln's Birthday, Feb. 12 Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22

SPECIAL LECTURETTES

LIFE OF LINCOLN
Set complete, 12 slides, colored, with lecture, $4.00

LIFE OF WASHINGTON
Set complete, 12 slides, colored, with lecture, $4.00

SINGLE PORTRAITS, COLORED, 50c EACH

SLIDES MADE to YOUR ORDER
From 50c to $1.50, depending on copy

We Carry a Complete Stock of
ANNOUNCEMENTS, SERPENTINES, FLAGS, Etc

TICKETS, the "ANSEL" MAKE
10,000, $1.00; 20,000, $1.75; 50,000, $4.00

BRAYTON MANUFACTURING CO. 122 Randolph Street CHICAGO

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY - 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

EDITORS: J. P. CHALMERS, THOMAS BEDDING, F. R. P. S.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rica and the Philippine Islands.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3⅜ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.

TIME DISCOUNTS: 5% two or more insertions, 10% three months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

G. P. VON HARLEMAN, Western Representative, 913-915 Schiller Building, Chicago, Ill. - Telephone, Central 3763

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 6 FEBRUARY 12, 1910 No. 6

Summary of the Week.

Page.

Local Competitors....201
Orthochromatic Moving Pictures....202
Exhibiting as a Fine Art....202
F. H. Richardson Replies to Critics....203
French Film on the American Market....203
"Man-About-Town" on the Convention....204
"Lux Graphicus" Grapples With a Reformer....205
Advertising Slides for Film Subjects....206
What Is Plagiarism?....206
What Is an American Subject?....207
F. S. A. Convention in New York....207-213
Independent Service and Independent Quality....220
Laemmle Case Postponed....217
Independent Alliance Meeting....213

Local Competition.

Last week we printed an article in which we examined some of the aspects of probable quantitative competition amongst the manufacturers of films. This kind of competition is one which leaves us in a less certain state of mental assurance than the competition of quality. Competition of quality can only lead to the best results by the operation of the law of the survival of the fittest. The best will win out. Competition in quantity, however, unless it is very carefully regulated, may lead to a destructive result rather than to a constructive result. In other words, it may destroy rather than build up. In this article, however, we are not dealing with the manufacturing end of matters.

There is a kind of competition which seriously affects the exhibiting end of which we were made aware only last week and certainly not for the first time. Meeting a very intelligent exhibitor, whose theater we have visited, we inquired how matters were progressing with him. His theater, we may say, is situated in a comparatively new part of the City of New York. He informed us that in the past few months he had been subjected to very severe competition indeed. Until then his was the only theater in the district, but now there are three others within a short distance of him. The practical result of this is that a fair amount of business showing a good profit to one theater is split up amongst four competitors The original man has the mortification of seeing the territory that he discovered annexed by interlopers.

Competition, it is commonly said, is the soul of business. But too much of it may mean the destruction of the business. It is this form of competition that we desire to discourage. Our exhibiting friend, when he opened his theater, was entitled, as a licensed exhibitor, to certain protection promised him last year by more or less official utterances from the office of the Patents Company. The company, it would appear, is not carrying out this line of its policy. The result is that theaters are rapidly increasing in districts where already there are a sufficient number of them. So that complaints are rife by licensed exhibitors that they are not having the protection they expected.

We were amongst those who supported the policy which limited or restricted the number of theaters in certain localities. After all, the moving picture business is not illimitable any more than any other business. It stands in need of official restriction of the kind promised. If that kind of restriction and protection is not forthcoming, then competition must be allowed to work out its own salvation.

What is the effect of unrestricted competition? Simply this: A battle of the money-bags. A man who opens a moving picture theater and makes a success of it, and then is attacked on many sides in the territory he has discovered, has only got one means of defense, and that is a long purse. He must either freeze out, squeeze out, or be frozen out himself. It is nothing more nor less than a money fight.

From the point of view of pure political economy this is a perfectly legitimate way of competing. But what a ruinous way! It means that only men having command of very great amount of capital indeed, can survive; therefore it makes the entry of the small capitalist into the business a very hazardous thing, indeed. Throughout the country, in our opinion, there are by no means too many theaters for the population. But there are too many theaters clustering together in crowded cities. It will be a good thing, we think, if either the Patents Company would limit the number of theaters, or the exhibitors themselves would unite for the purpose of effecting the same object, or that local theaters or local authorities should act in the matter and have some option on the number of theaters in different localities. If something of this sort is done, it will help to settle the business on broad, definite lines. Then we should hear less and less of men breaking into the moving picture field and losing their money and getting out with feelings of disgust and despair. The public wants the moving picture and is wanting it more, but if you are going to surfeit the public in any given locality you are going to degrade, cheat and vulgarize the entertainment, with the inevitable result that it will tire the public and so the business will fall down.. In this connection, "Enough is as good as a feast." What we want to see is not too much moving picture, but just moving picture enough—just enough to go around, to make it profitable for those engaged in the business and always acceptable to the public.

Orthochromatic Moving Pictures.

A great number of moving pictures made and projected on the screen to-day are fundamentally false. Public taste, we know, favors black and white pictures. Then the tinted picture has a vogue; so has the hand-colored picture. The photographically accurate picture is, however, rarely produced. Perhaps the Gaumont pictures more nearly approach correctness in the photographic sense, because they strike one as having accuracy of tone rendering. By accuracy of tone rendering we mean orthochromatism; and by orthochromatism, we mean correct translation of the luminosity values of the original subject, whatever they may be.

This may seem a somewhat formidable indictment to make against the moving picture, but anybody who gives the matter a moment's serious thought, will see that it is not an unjust one. In recent years the stationary photograph has very largely become orthochromatic, because people are realizing that, while photography cannot lie in the ordinary meaning of the term, that is to say, the camera shows that which is in front of it the moment of exposure, yet essentially it may easily be made to falsify the tones or the lights and shades, or, as we may prefer it, the liminosity values of the subject. For example: An ordinary photograph of a fair-haired lady in a blue dress with golden ornaments is commonly rendered in the print as showing the hair dark and the dress light. In other words, the relative lights and darks of the original are misrepresented in the print.

Roughly speaking, it is the mission of orthochromatic photography to correct this, and to represent in the printing the relative depths, if we may so call them, of the lights and shades. For example: Yellow would be somewhat light, and blue, of course, would be dark; red, too, of its proper depth or tones, and so on throughout the whole range of tones and half-tones of a picture.

Now, if any reader of this article will examine the majority of moving pictures from the point of view that we are attempting to make clear, he will realize what a tremendous amount of falsification exists. Nature is not merely black and white; it has an infinite range of colors and shading of colors. So in the picture on the screen there should be a monochromatic representation of the values of those colors. In other words, the scale of tones or tints or shades in the picture should correspond with the depths of the scale of tones, tints or shades in the original. We trust we have made this simple explanation perfectly clear.

Now, in order that your moving picture should be orthochromatic, it is necessary that the film should be especially sensitized, so as to render it proportionately sensitive to all the rays of the spectrum, or, in other words, to all the shades and tones in nature. If that be done, then the positive made from the negative will register the scale, and, so in the picture on the screen, we shall see accurate tone renderings. It is, therefore, in behalf of accuracy of tone rendering, or, rather, orthochromatism, that we are making this suggestion in this article. Generally speaking, the makers give little or no attention to this point, but we believe it is worth their while to do so, having regard to the fact that a large number of the public is looking at the moving picture from artistic and technical standpoints. This question of orthochromatism is a question of pure technique, however, and one which intelligent film makers can easily master. In the making of the picture a screen is necessary which lengthens the exposure. This interposes a difficulty, as, of course, all moving pictures are more or less instantaneous, and therefore it is a risky matter to prolong the exposure. Nevertheless, as instantaneous orthochromatic photographs of the stationary kind are made, there seems no insuperable reason why they should not be made with a moving picture camera. We commend this little refinement of practice to those most interested. The universal production of orthochromatic moving pictures is, we feel, only a matter of time. Once they are seen and appreciated by the public they will always be demanded, we have no doubt.

Those of our readers who desire to go deeply into the scientific aspects of moving pictures should consult a book entitled "The Photography of Colored Subjects," by C. E. Kenneth Mees, obtainable at Tennant & Ward, 122 East 25th street, New York City. Price, 50 cents; postage, 5 cents.

Exhibiting as a Fine Art.

If there is one thing more than another that makes us grateful for having been the guest of the exchange men at the convention in the Hotel Imperial, it is that it gave us the opportunity of becoming personally acquainted with the ideal exhibitor. We do not go the length of saying that we have seen the ideal theater which this man conducts away back in a little city of 7,000 inhabitants situated in the coal mining region of Pennsylvania. Readers of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD know by this time that our ideal moving picture theater is yet to materialize and that it will be located on New York City's "Great White Way." We ventured this suggestion to the gentleman from Pennsylvania and pointed out that his abilities deserved a wider scope, and it is not improbable that he will undertake it, provided that a suitable location can be found.

Mr. S. L. Rothapfel came to New York City as the guest of the Pittsburg Calcium Light and Film Company. He came to see if he could get any suggestions from the convention or any ideas from his visits to the New York theaters that would help him to improve his exhibition in his home town. He says that he did not get a single idea what to do to improve, but that suggestions what not to do were presented to him at every turn.

In recent issues of the WORLD the question has been discussed as to whether a town of 4,500 inhabitants can support two good moving picture shows. We begged the question to bring forth some expressions of opinion from our readers and our answer is now that one show is sufficient for a town of that size. In the town in which Mr. Rothapfel is located the last census gives the borough population as 4,279. Adjacent hamlets brings the available drawing population up to 7,000 and out of this 7,000 Mr. Rothapfel gets 1,000 into his theater every day of the week. Some of them travel miles. Of course he is making money, but not in the proportion that others would do when given the opportunity to hog things—for Mr.

S. L. ROTHAPFEL.

Rothapfel's theater is the fittest survival of three. He puts money into his show and gives his patrons their money's worth.

But why he does it and how he does it, his opinions of mixed vaudeville and how a moving picture show should be run will be told in a series of articles from his own pen written exclusively for MOVING PICTURE WORLD readers. So with this brief introduction we present to our readers Mr. S. L. Rothapfel, of Forest City, Pa., who will talk to his brother exhibitors in his own way through our columns.

F. H. Richardson Replies to Critic.

In the issue of January 29 the writer was criticised concerning an article of his relating to rheostatic resistance. Repeatedly, in my books and in my articles I have stated that I had no idea that I "knew it all" or that it is impossible that I can make a mistake. Since the criticism has been made I have made some experiments with a voltmeter which would seem to indicate that the gentleman making the same is at least in part right, BUT if his contention be true then some very interesting questions are opened up. In the first place, the writer has many times seen open arc lamps operating on a straight series system with fifty lamps in a circuit. This means an initial pressure, at the first lamp, of something like 2,500 volts. These lamps gave fairly steady light, too. The resistance in ohms is equal to the voltage divided by the number of amperes flowing. Now if we are getting thirty amperes from a 110-volt line, through a rheostat, this would indicate a resistance of not quite four ohms. Will the gentleman inform me by what rule he is able to figure a drop of sixty volts through four ohms resistance? Again: admitting that there is a drop of forty-five or fifty volts across the arc, if the rest of the pressure is "absorbed" in the rheostat is it not true that we would have absolutely no electrical pressure beyond the arc? And if we have no pressure we have nothing at all, have we? But, I think I hear him say, volts merely represent difference in potential between the two lines of a circuit. Granted: but having absorbed all that, what have you left? Why not cut off the negative wire altogether, since it carries nothing? Please do not dodge the issue! In his article the gentleman asserts that the entire voltage is absolutely absorbed and done away with in passing the rheostat and the arc! If this be true, does it not follow as the day follows the night that he has absolutely nothing at all on the negative wire? Mind you, we may have voltage without current, but we absolutely cannot have current without voltage. Yet, for all his contention that the entire electromotive force is absorbed, I will bet dollars to hard-boiled eggs that if he grounds himself and attempts to pick up the raw negative wire he will drop it in a mighty large sized hurry.

In this I am simply following his own argument to its logical conclusion. If the gentleman can explain why there is both pressure and current in the negative wire beyond the arc I will shut up tighter than a clam. But according to all my teaching you cannot use every grain of a pound of sugar and still have some of that particular pound of sugar left.

But taking the problem from another point of view: he says the arc will not burn under more than 45 volts pressure. Rather he says burning it at more than that is not practical. All right; as is well known, we sometimes hitch the rheostat in on the negative wire. Now surely he will not attempt to deny the fact that the arc is then burning under 110 volts pressure, since the rheostat cannot possibly "absorb" or "dissipate" anything at all until the current it is to absorb or dissipate has reached it! Moreover, it is a well-known fact that it makes no practical difference in the light obtained which wire the rheostat is cut in on. Now, Mr. H. M. C., I am not asserting that you are wrong, but I have set forth some things the explanation of which it seems to me is up to you, provided I am to go away back and squat. I will say to you that I am by no means convinced that I was altogether right in the article in question and by that same token I am by no means sure you are right.

FRENCH FILMS ON THE AMERICAN MARKET.

[From The Kinematograph and Lantern Weekly.]

The state of affairs in the United States is always the subject of much discussion, but there is no more uncertainty as to the decisions made by the various European firms as most suitable to their respective interests. That these decisions would lead to individual action and not result in a "combine" has been foreseen in these pages, but our anticipations were not prompted by any direct statement from the interested parties. Now the position taken by each firm is officially known. The "Lion" films are sold together with the "Lux" films by Mr. Prieur, already well known on the American market. The Eclair Company should prove equal to the task of selling their own films in America, where they have won general appreciation. Mr. Vandal, the commercial manager of the Eclair Company, is very silent as to the issue of the "inspection tour" he has made in the United States, and the story of "frightened manufacturers" which appeared in a contemporary, not well disposed towards European visitors, has been honored with no reply, and the few comments in the papers published on this side have not shaken the decision now announced by Mr. Vandal, in a letter addressed by him to a contemporary. We cannot do better than reprint this letter, kindly communicated by Mr. Vandal:

The Eclair Policy.

"I have read with great interest your article devoted to the kinematograph industry in the United States. You do not ignore the fact that the journey in search of information I had undertaken with my colleagues and friends, MM. Ambrosio and Sciamengo, has been an occasion for certain American papers of showing a bad temper, the reasons of which would be easy to trace. Moreover, I do not intend to depart from the reserve we have imposed upon ourselves. I simply wish to confirm the news of the creation of a branch office of the Societe 'Eclair' at New York, and to let you know that we participate in the Alliance of the Independents, a group which has been formed for opposing the pretensions of the Motion Picture Patents Company.

"Our silence has received a bad interpretation, but I deem it preferable (and maybe you will share this opinion) to show by acts to the Independents of United States the confidence we have in them, and to prove to them they can count upon us, rather than abandoning ourselves to useless utterances. . . ."

The address of the New York branch office of the Eclair Company is 31 East Twenty-seventh street, New York. The manager in charge is Mr. Hoffmann, who was on the staff of the company in the Paris office for quite a while; his experience of the company's affairs is a sure guarantee of success, and his knowledge of the language should prove useful.

Well, did you attend the convention at the Imperial Hotel in New York? You didn't? Then you are not in the business. I do not mean the F. S. A.—I mean the convention. You do not understand! Well, let me explain. The Film Service Association and the Independent Association held their conventions in New York last week and both were held at the same hotel, and the sessions were simultaneous. By that I mean that while the F. S. A. was in session in one part of the hotel the Independents held forth in another part of the same building, and strange as it may seem there were no clashes between the factions. Funny, isn't it? It's the truth, nevertheless. I loitered about the entrances and corridors all the time there was anything doing and I saw nothing like a scrap. It seems to me that this animated business has something about it that makes "all the world akin." When I say this, I speak of general appearances, and who can project them better than the film exchange owner, with the possible exception of the manufacturer?

* * *

I was told the other night that the owners of the hotel where the conventions were held have solemnly declared that if they ever tire of the hotel business their next venture will be animated photography. "Everyone in the business is a Prince," I heard someone say in the hotel office. At certain hours it looked very much in the nature of a clean sweep for the picture men.

* * *

Unfortunately I did not gain admission to the convention of either the Licensed or the Independent people, but I kept my ear close to the cracks and feel competent to give judgment on the plays. Throwing aside all partiality, I must say that the F. S. A. convention was the most successful of the two because there was the least friction in it. To be frank, it was the greatest love-feast I have witnessed among moving picture people. Serious problems were presented, but they were so skillfully and adroitly handled that even in the arguments the debators seemed to relish the situation with the greatest satisfaction. My summary of the F. S. A. gathering would be this: First, Well, how do you do? Shake, old fellow. What will you have? Second: I have been requested to announce that the hospitality of a party of gentlemen who do not wish to be named is at the disposal of this convention. (Great applause and rapid-fire exchange of questions as to when and where it comes off.) Third: Let us decide upon the next place of meeting. Fourth: Gillinghamville. Hurrah!

* * *

The Independents were more serious in their convention so much so that at times the regular guests of the hotel asked each other, "What is going on in there—a 'votes for women' agitation?"

But, to cap the climax, the Licensed people stole one of the star performers in the Independent convention. While the F. S. A. was in session a committee was appointed to locate and seize "Billy" Swanson, of Chicago, one of the shining lights in the Independent ranks. Swanson was located and escorted (?) to the F. S. A. chamber. As he entered, the Licensed men sang something that sounded like "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow." It was a great compliment to the Windy City man and he plainly showed that he fully appreciated the situation. It was a striking illustration of goodfellowship and an equally emphatic declaration that the animosity reflected by current advertisements is not harbored by the promoters.

* * *

I have been connected with the motion picture interests in one way or another for many years, but I am convinced from my convention observations that my experience has not brought me in touch with all the possibilities of it, nor do I know all that is going on. For instance, a representative of one of the manufacturers made an address to the F. S. A. convention in which he said: "The success of the moving picture business, as compared with Independents and Patents Company licensees, does not depend upon the validity of patents, but upon the quality of pictures." I have turned this over and over again in my mind since the adjournment of the convention, and the more I think over it the greater my admiration for the speaker becomes. It seems to me that the declaration makes a plain, clean-cut issue—the preservation of a standard, which means the welfare of manufacturer, film renter and exhibitor.

* * *

If some of the funny men who make the cartoons and write the articles for the funny papers were on the job last week the moving picture people will figure prominently in the coming issues. There were some awfully funny mix-ups as to sleeping quarters. If a delegate found part of his bed occupied he was told to jump in and make himself at home, and he invariably did so. Everything "went" and no questions were asked until morning, when several were overheard asking, "How did you get in here?"

* * *

Many serious questions were listed for discussion at the F. S. A. convention, but when I asked a number of the delegates as to the outcome of the debates I was told to forget it. I was very much interested in the non-inflammable film topic and a delegate told me that the only inflammable thing he saw or heard of was the cigar he was smoking. His lips, apparently, were (white) sealed.

* * *

Notes: Herbert Miles, of New York, displayed another new suit of clothes. He is certainly the Beau Brummel of the film renters. Mr. F. J. Howard, the Boston wizard of rental circuits, urged the following up of the white slave traffic by the manufacturers in search of original and novel scenarios. Lewis M. Swaab was on deck with an industrial idea. He said pictures showing the making of Philadelphia scrapple would score a hit. "Johnny" Rock, the manager of the Vitagraph office in Chicago, was mistaken more than once for his genial "pop." There certainly is a striking resemblance. The retention of A. J. Gillingham, of Detroit, as president of the F. S. A., met with general approval. "Pop" Rock, of the Vitagraph Company, left the speechmaking to his gifted partner, J. Stuart Blackton, and came in strong at the wind-up by tendering the delegates and friends a wine supper. "Pop" Lubin was in evidence with his broad smile and his able lieutenant, Mr. Singhi. The beaming countenance of Victor Smith helped illuminate the corridors of the hotel. Among those who received the most cordial greeting was Mrs. Herbert Miles, the "daughter of the F. S. A." Mrs. Miles had been seriously ill and she received hearty congratulations upon her recovery. Percy L. Waters has been added to the executive committee of the F. S. A. O, you Percy! A better selection could not be made. "Bill" Steiner remains on the committee, so there you have it: Percy and Bill. Can you beat that for a team of monologists? Herbert Miles continues as secretary of the association, and he makes a good secretary. The F. S. A. has no harder or more consistent worker than Mr. Miles.

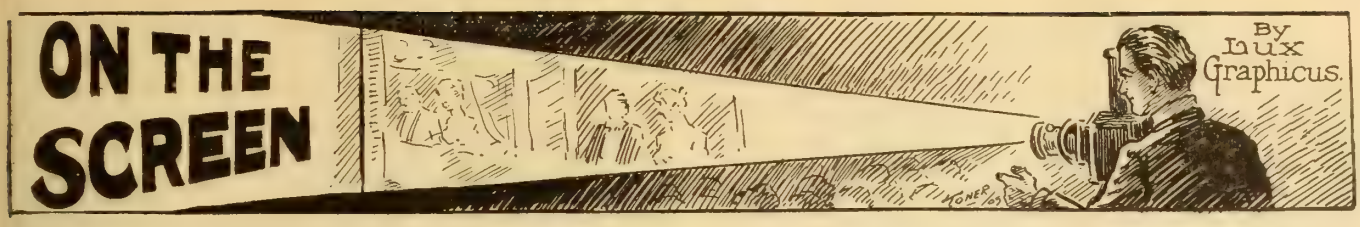
* * *

The next convention of the F. S .A. is to be held in Detroit, Mich., in July next. It is understood that the location was selected in order to induce a full attendance of members, the location being geographically suitable to both the Western and Eastern members, as well as equally convenient for the members in the South and Southwest. Brother Gillingham has promised that Detroit will do her best to make a creditable display of hospitality as compared with that shown the members in Chicago, Buffalo, Pittsburg and New York. I have a notion that President Gillingham will make good.

ONLY SACRED CONCERTS AND PERFORMANCES OF EDUCATIONAL CHARACTER LAWFUL, SAYS THE APPELLATE DIVISION IN THE ALHAMBRA THEATER CASE.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court handed down on February 4, a decision declaring illegal all Sunday performances in theaters, except sacred concerts and performances of an educational character.

The decision affirms the legality of the ordinance passed by the Board of Aldermen under which the city sued the Alhambra Theater for violation of the ordinance.



Charles Dickens, that great humoristic writer, reformed many abuses in his books. In England, the land of his birth, his powerful pen was instrumental in abolishing the scandal of public executions. Comparatively speaking, it is only yesterday since men were hanged in public in that city of London. Dickens, in a series of letters to "The Times" newspaper, was instrumental in persuading the authorities to have executions conducted in private. In his books he always satirized public abuses, oppression of the poor, interferences with the liberty of the individual and flapdoodle philanthropy. By flapdoodle philanthropy I mean the puritanical action which animates well meaning but misguided persons who interfere with the natural and legitimate doings of their neighbors.

Dickens unmercifully flagellated hypocrisy. Who does not remember his Chadband, his Perksniff, his Stiggins? Three types of the most consummate and consumed hypocrites ever presented in the pages of fiction. These people usually wear black coats in real life, and, to-day, are rife in our midst, trying in the name of religion and morality to abrogate the freedom of their fellow men, while they themselves, in the examples of their own lives, are showing how false and hollow are their teachings.

Then there was Alderman Cute—a masterpiece of character personation by Dickens. Alderman Cute appears in one of Dickens' Christmas stories: if I mistake not it is "The Chimes." The Alderman is a self-satisfied, oleaginous critter who arrogated to himself the mission of improving the conduct of his fellow men and women. He is also a Magistrate and therefore a dispenser of law and justice. His method of dispensing law and justice, of doing unto others as he would be done by was to Put Things Down. Alderman Cute's formula for improving anything of which he did not approve was to Put It Down. The erring small boy must be Put Down. The institution or line of conduct which did not meet with the Alderman's approval was to be Put Down. Society could only be improved by being Put Down. The world in fact could only be made better by being Put Down. The one universal Cute formula for making things better than they are was to Put Them Down.

* * *

The Aldeman seems to have stepped out of the pages of Dickens' books and to have taken unto himself the present-day corporeality of Representative Mellen, of Worcester, Mass. Representative Mellen, of Worcester, it would appear, is the reincarnation of Alderman Cute. Mellen seems to have made up his mind to Put Down the moving picture. He has introduced a bill into the Massachusetts Legislature for appointing a commission of five members, three of whom shall be members of the Governor's Council and the other two expert physicians, who are to investigate the moving picture business in the State of Massachusetts, and report to the Legislature with such remedies as may seem proper.

* * *

Mellen, it seems, is determined to Put Down the moving picture. He says that the pictures are controlled by trusts, that the entertainments are given often in unsanitary houses, that they are responsible for the abnormal growth of crime among young people, that they cause a laxity among women and girls, that they are harmful to the eyes, that they affect the health of women, having influence upon the unborn! So Mellen is going to Put Down the moving picture in the State of Massachusetts.

* * *

There is a Cute-like oiliness, a Pecksniff-cum-Chadband-cum-Stiggins-like fatheadedness about the Mellen utterances which I am sure, had Charles Dickens lived, would have given him opportunity for immortalizing Mellen as a fitting companion for the quartette of fiction; creatures whose names stand for all that is narrow-minded, uncharitable, unchristian-like and unvirile. It is not necessary, of course, at this late date to traverse the Mellen allegation with regard to the unsanitary houses, the evil influences upon woman, girl and child, which he says that the pictures have, or the harm he alleges them to do to the eyes. These things have been done in The Moving Picture World so often that it is mere waste of good printer's ink to contradict the foul libel.

But I would like to ask Representative Mellen a few questions. If he cares to answer them they shall be printed in this paper. Poison is sometimes sold by druggists, and people poison themselves. Would Mellen abolish the sale of poison? Erratic, unchristian nonsense is often talked in the churches. Would Mellen close up all the churches? Sometimes, too, an ordinary theater puts up a play of somewhat doubtful morality. Would Mellen shut up all the theaters in the State of Massachusetts? Political treason, false economy, national and international prejudice often find vent at public meetings—let us say in Boston. Would Mellen deny his fellow citizens the right of public meeting, or would he open a commission of five men, two of whom shall be expert physicians, to investigate all these abuses, with the view of inducing the Legislature to take such measure as it may seem proper. Mellen, my boy, I would be glad to have your reply.

* * *

It is to be hoped that the moving picture men of Worcester will keep an eye on Mellen. It is to be hoped, too, that the picture men of Boston will turn a weary optic upon the said Mellen. It is to be hoped, also, that the commission, if appointed, and it gets to work, will be given the opportunity of poking their noses into other people's business. It is to be hoped, also, that the noses of same commission will be pulled. Then, perhaps, the commission will report its findings to the Legislature.

* * *

The only novel part of the Mellen utterances is that the pictures affect the health of women, having influence upon the unborn. Mellen may be right; I cannot contradict him; but, probably, those men of science who have given the subject of the determination of sex and of the external influence on what I will call the germination of the human species, will have something to say to Mellen. Only a few months ago I read a very long paper by a professor whose name I cannot at the moment recall, dealing with the influence upon sex during the obstetrical period or nine months of gestation. The professor's paper was a very interesting one, full of plausible theories and picturesque speculations. but it all amounted to this, that he could not codify the effect of external influence on the mother of the child, and that nobody could. It was all pure guesswork, or, as I would put it, pure agnosticism, that is, he did not know, and did not believe that anybody else knew, how external influence or environments affect the health of an unborn.

* * *

Mellen, therefore, is talking sheer rubbish. This is not a subject that should be dealt with very deeply in The Moving Picture World. The allegation is that a picture on the screen may have an unbeneficial effect upon unborn posterity. Why should it? And if it does, does not a stationary picture in the Metropolitan Art Museum, in New York City, have the same effect, or a piece of sculpture, or a print in a shop window, or an ugly man, or building, or any other crude object? Where are you going to draw the line? Upon which things would the gentle Mellen say the mother to be must not look, for fear her health may be affected and her unborn child be influenced? Answer these questions, Brother Mellen.

* * *

What, I hope, will be done, is that the moving picture men of Worcester will read these paragraphs that I am writing; that the moving picture men of Boston will do the same; that they will send Brother Mellen copies of what "Lux Graphicus" is saying this week; that they will also be sent to the members of the State Legislature. A year ago the moving picture industry was being persecuted by all sorts of ignorant faddists, in the pulpit, the press and other public places. That sort of thing seems to have stopped. To Representative Mellen belongs the melancholy distinction of reviving that time of persecution which we all hoped had stopped forever. Of course, Mellen may be instigated by theatrical influence. I will pass up the suggestion that he has some axe to grind. I read that he is a man of vigor. He certainly is not a man of any breadth of mind. Perhaps, however, when he reads this article he may desire to recant, repent and reform. I hope so.

ADVERTISING SLIDES.

The film manufacturers generally send out bulletins and announcements of their coming film issues to the exhibitors. It keeps that class pretty well posted on what is coming in the picture world, and they look forward with pleasure to the appearance of feature films—but does that get the business? The people who patronize the houses know little or nothing of these matters, and most of them come to the shows without the least idea of what they are going to see. Some stop to look at the posters or bulletins on the outside. The people who contribute the nickels and dimes are the ones who keep up this great business, and are the ones who should be informed of what is in store for patrons of the great dumb show. How are they to know that Rex Beach, Richard Harding Davis, Fra Elbertus, and a dozen others known to the literary and stage world, are to be a part and parcel of this popular amusement? Every house has a lantern for making slide announcements. Most of the announcements are crude ink affairs, but have their value. Why not the producing companies prepare lantern slides of their announcements, and loan them to the exhibitors, or sell at a small price? Such an announcement thrown upon a screen in a crowded house is read by all. It bears weight. Later, when you can get the date for it and announce its appearance, it means business, and a big business.

Under the present conditions most exhibitors are under the necessity of taking just what the exchanges send them, and taking it just when they send it. Competition is forcing many to keep certain pictures supplied on certain days, but the day is coming when every exhibitor who cares at all for his business will know what pictures he is going to have, what day he is going to have them, and will have advance advertising matter for them.

Under the present conditions it is certainly a good thing for some film manufacturers that the exhibitor has to take what the exchange sends, for if they had their choice, there are some pictures that would wait a long time to be chosen.

BEN L. MORRIS.

THREE-PIECE SPROCKET A FILM DESTROYER.

A new sprocket wheel, consisting of three pieces—a barrel and two metal bands containing the teeth and which are clamped or fastened over the ends of this barrel with set-screws—is being presented to the exhibitors in very alluring colors. The claim for this device is that it is so much cheaper than the old reliable one-piece now in use, on account of the exhibitor's ability to replace the teeth or bands for only 50 cents when they are worn, instead of $3.00, as with the regular sprockets.

On account of the nature of the construction and the excessive pull on the teeth by the film continually passing over them, it is next to impossible to long keep these bands or teeth in perfect alignment, and when they no longer mesh into film properly on both sides, the result is evident—one side is being badly forced: "A damaged film." Mr. Exhibitor, if you have been so unwise as to listen to and credit the very doubtful points of this sprocket, or if you have even gone so far as to buy one or more, get rid of them at once. I dare say your exchange would gladly replace these film destroyers for the old reliable, "free gratis," rather than stand the loss to their films.

F. T. BOLNE.

WHAT IS PLAGIARISM?

By F. H. Richardson.

In a recent issue of an exchange was a paragraph, "The Prostitution of Our Popular Songs," in which appeared the following part of a sentence, "and the wholesale plagiarism that is practiced by music score writers from the famous old ballads of one or two generations ago—"

The main body of the article in question was excellent, but in so far as the above is concerned the writer desires to ask a very pointed question, viz.: Has a song score writer the right and privilege of tying up an air that he may evolve, even though it be an entirely original creation, indefinitely? Is it plagiarism to use the air of a song which has run its course and been to all intents and purposes forgotten? That reprehensible plagiarism is practised almost daily no one will deny. But this, which it seems to me to be the only real plagiarism of song scores, is the stealing of the air, or parts of it, which is the product of the brain of another composer and is being actually used. Take, for instance, the old song, "Are You There, Moriarity?" which was exceedingly popular along about 1884. It is forgotten by all but the older folks and, except for a very few large music houses which make a sort of side specialty of dealing in old songs, the music absolutely cannot be had. Very few even of us older ones can recall more than perhaps a few words of the song or more than a vague, more or less twisted version of the air.

Now suppose someone should appropriate that air (and it was a splendid tune, too) to other words and use it, could he rightly be accused of plagiarism? I think not. Possibly it might be well to give credit, but even though this be not done, the writer claims the user would be strictly within his rights and would be violating no right set of ethics. If this be not so then are we to lose some of the splendid airs of long ago? There is a distinct objection, from the publisher's point of view, to crediting the score of a new song to some writer who probably is dead and gone, or at least is forgotten. Perhaps I am wrong in my views, but you will have to show me.

WHAT IS AN AMERICAN SUBJECT?

By W. C. S.

In The Moving Picture World of January 22 you ask, "What is an American subject?" Supposing you were blindfolded and suddenly set down in a park in Italy, don't you suppose that after you had watched the people for a few moments that you would know that you were not looking at an American subject? There is a foreign atmosphere around foreign pictures that can never be eliminated and I take exception to some of the American subjects as not doing justice to America.

Take as an example the recent picture, "Tale of the Backwoods," in which every character is represented as a dirty, bewhiskered sloven. Our customers take but little interest in such pictures, nor is the representation true to life in fact, for razors and soap are still in style, even here in the West. Nor is a love scene between a burly, hairy, unkempt mountaineer and a woman slovenly in appearance at all interesting. Now what I would call a truly American picture (and I have watched our audiences carefully) is one of still more recent issue, "All on Account of the Milk." Although dressed in overalls and aprons, the actors were clean, interesting, and performed their several parts with fidelity to the details. Our audience would stop as they retired and say (not one, but dozens), "That was just great." And simple life stories like this, without exaggerated situations and represented by clean, good looking actors, is what our people want and mean by an "American subject."

DEFENDS MOVING PICTURE SHOWS.

Miss Jean Poirier Thinks They Provide Cheap, Healthful Amusement—Rewards Children by Taking Them to Moving Picture Exhibitions.

[From the Duluth "Evening Herald."]

That the nickel theaters, when properly conducted, are not the curse of the twentieth century, is the opinion of Miss Jean Poirier, State Factory Inspector.

Nearly everybody engaged in humane work and also the work of enforcing the compulsory education law these days, lays the blame for non-attendance to the influence exercised over the children by the nickel theaters, and it is this that Miss Poirier takes exception to. They claim that children steal the money to attend and work other schemes to procure the necessary funds. In addition, it is claimed that the subjects used for the canvas dramas are in no way elevating and that a bad influence is cast over the children.

Miss Poirier says that she thinks the cheap shows, where they are managed rightly, fulfill a long felt want—cheap amusements. When she desires to reward a child for being good and wishes to encourage him in his goodness, she takes him to the show at a moving picture house. She says that she has never found much at these shows to prove that they are not a healthful recreation for the young mind. While they do sometimes suggest things that might influence older people, these facts are so indistinct that the child does not notice them.

Miss Poirier admits that there may be managers who are not careful in the matter of the pictures used, but says that it has been her experience that they are as instructive as they are interesting. Some of the pictures are made for no other purpose than to make people laugh. Others present pathetic stories that show another side of life. Many pictures show how different articles are made, and military scenes are popular.

"No, I will not say that picture shows are the cause of some of our boys and girls straying off the straight and narrow path," she said.

The F. S. A. Convention in New York—A Personal Impression.

By Thomas Bedding, F.R.P.S.

I want to give the reader a personal impression of the F. S. A. Convention held in New York City last week. There is a special reason why I should take this method of covering the meeting. In the first place, the convention was my initial experience of a gathering of American film men, and I was therefore naturally curious to see how the affair was managed in America—having had considerable experience in another country of various kinds of conventions. America, it may be said, is the home of the convention. Business men here seem "to convent," if I may use the phrase, on any and every provocation. They get together, and getting together is an American habit. On the other side of the Atlantic, also, conventions, congresses and the like are frequently held. I have been present at many of them; indeed, at the present time I still retain my membership of more than one. So the reader will see I have some opportunity of instituting a comparison between the old world style and the new world style. The old world style of holding a convention is very formal, very undemonstrative, and, if the truth must be told, somewhat dull and languid. The new world style is hustling, bustling, strenuous, hearty and thorough. I like the new world style of conventions better than the old.

Rather more than a year ago there was a great Catholic celebration in New York City, attended by, amongst others, Cardinal Logue, the primate of Ireland. In the course of his speech, Cardinal Logue said that he had come to America to learn of a new way of dying. And that was by being killed by kindness. However, his Eminence managed to escape this interesting form of death So did I on Saturday and Sunday, January 29th and 30th last. But I had to work hard in order to be successful because the members of the F. S. A., their guests and friends and others whom I met there for the first time, seemed to have united in an endeavor to kill me right off the reel. This is not a joke. But it is a fact. And when at a very early hour on Sunday morning I escaped from the friendly clutches of Mr. William Steiner and some other shining lights of the film world, it was with a feeling of thankfulness that the very good time I had had left me sound and unscathed and quite fit to go about my religious duties later in the day. So that my personal impression of my first film convention is that, not only did the members have a thoroughly good time in true American fashion, but they make it their business to insist that the visitor or the stranger shall also have a good time, if even they go the length of nearly killing him.

But what of the more serious and less personal impression made upon me by last week's meeting? It seemed to me that the entire film world of the United States was represented, and well represented, in the Imperial Hotel during the convention. Almost everybody who is anybody was there—men whose names are familiar to the readers of The Moving Picture World, either in the manufacturing or renting interests or those connected with the exhibiting end of matters. Equally so both sides or factions, if I may so term them, Associated and Independent, were represented. It was by an interesting coincidence that while the F. S. A. was holding its convention and dinner, the Independents were also meeting in the same hotel. Both sides seemed also to mix, and, notwithstanding their difference of policy, to be on very good terms one with another. Whether this foreshadows the fusion of all interests one of these days, it is perhaps not for me to say, but, as an outsider and a sympathetic observer of the position, it surely seems well within the bounds of possibility that the differences which at present divide the trade can be reconciled. This, again, is a purely personal opinion—the opinion of one who is neither trust nor anti-trust, but holds his present position simply because he is interested in the moving picture, in popularizing it and promoting its success as a delightful form of entertainment and an interesting manifestation of science.

American men, unlike those of my own country in convention gatherings, are singularly communicative. It was a delight for me to feel throughout the evening, before, during and after the dinner, that without exception everybody to whom I spoke was friendly, communicative and reciprocative. Never once was I turned down. In older countries one hesitates to address a stranger without the formality of an introduction. In New York, and no doubt in other parts of the country, introductions seem to be needless survivals of the dark ages. Film men, though the business is so young, have developed a kind of free masonry, first of all one with another, and then with all others who show an intelligent interest in the growth of the business. My last Saturday evening's experiences, if summarized, would amount to a long series of interesting talks with film men gathered there from all over the country. One moment I was talking to a friend from Ogden, Utah, and learning the state of affairs there. A few minutes later I would meet with a communicative brother from far-off Butte, Mont. A little later, having expressed to another member some interest in Carnival life at New Orleans, a member from that city was giving me many interesting details about the manner in which carnival is carried out in this wonderfully varied land.

It seemed, therefore, that throughout the whole of the Saturday afternoon and early evening the F. S. A. constituted itself a kind of exchange where all the elements of the business were gathered together for the purpose of freely commingling ideas. I was not present at any of the formal meetings of the Association. Probably not a very great amount of real business was done at them. In all likelihood the chiefest results of the gathering will be attained by the attrition of mind upon mind in an unofficial way, through the many talks, conferences and conversations that took place during the two or three days of the convention. It is this feature of an American convention, the delightful informality, the willingness to give information and the good-fellowship that seems to prevail there, that gratifies one who, like myself, had to live for many years in a colder atmosphere and go about the business of life in a somewhat reserved fashion. The absolute freedom of the convention was an agreeable surprise to me.

I should say, from what I saw at the Fifth Semi-Annual Convention of the Film Service Association, that it will be succeeded by very many others. It was said, this time last year, that the F. S. A. was practically reduced to the innocuous condition of a social gathering. Social it certainly is; hospitable, moreover. Yet it has a very important and valuable business side. It has constituted itself the unofficial parliament of the film world—a sort of Senate and House of Representatives—the F. S. A. itself being the Senate, the House of Representatives being the Independents and the other interests in the business which gather together at the same time that the F. S. A. did. My deliberate impression, therefore, of the F. S. A. is this, that outside of its purely

F. S. A. BANQUET

In Broadway Banquet Hall of Hotel Imperial, New York.

(Views of Banquet Hall from both ends.)

social function it fills a vitally important place in the moving picture field to-day. Its continuance is absolutely essential for the good of the business. Having regard to all the circumstances of the case; having regard, moreover, to its comparative immaturity, the F. S. A is of an enormous value to the film world, for the gathering and dissemination of ideas promoting the interests of its members, the interests of the manufacturers and the interests of exhibitors. In other words, to quote an old saying, if there was no F. S. A. in existence at the present time, it would be necessary to invent one.

Another feature of the convention struck me as worthy of notice, that is the exhibiton side. Upstairs in rooms of the Imperial Hotel I saw exhibitions of Pathe pictures and apparatus; Vitagraph pictures, film cabinets; the Soundograph; film washing machinery and other things of interest to the exhibitor. Here, in an exhibition of apparatus and other things incidental to the film business, we have the germ of a valuable idea which is worth amplifying. It might be possible at further gatherings to have the whole of the trade represented by their chief products. All the film makers, all the machine makers, all the accessory makers, lantern slides, screen, etc.; in fact, everything necessary to the conduct of an up-to-date moving picture theater. All members of the F. S. A and exhibitors from all over the country would make a point of attending the meeting.

I must not omit a personal impression of the F. S. A. dinner, the first festivity of the kind I have attended during my short residence in the city. I'm a bit of an anchorite, and not given much to the social delights of the world, but I was curious to know how an American public dinner was conducted. Here, again, perhaps, the reader will let me indulge in a brief comparison between the old world style and the new. In the old world your public dinner or banquet is a somewhat solemn affair compared with the American festivity. This reminds me of a short story—not about a parrot and a dog—but about a young man who went to his first public dinner in London. Half way through the meal he turned to a fat old knight seated next to him and remarked, "This is a good dinner, Sir George." The old man did not reply for some time, but after a time he grunted and growled out, "Young man, I have come here to eat my dinner and not to TALK about it." I do not mean to say by this that public dinners in the old world are all eating and drinking, with no outflow of animal spirit, but by comparison with the dinners held in this country they are more formal, colder and less boisterous. Over there you hold yourself in, as it were. Here, apparently, you can let yourself go without reserve, and your neighbor shows no surprise at your evident determination to have a good time. And that is all the difference between the old and the new world way of doing things. Over there, repression, reserve. Here, freedom, unreserve, real and unrestrained good fellowship.

About the business or political things which were mentioned at the dinner I am not going to say anything. I don't think a man ought to be bound by his after-dinner utterances, even when he talks business. In the old world, very serious business utterances are made at public dinners. Perhaps that is why they are so formal and, comparatively speaking, so cold. Here, it seems to me, the predominant characteristic of the dinner is pure enjoyment. As I went to the F. S. A. dinner to enjoy myself, I frankly took very little notice of the serious things that were said. I liked the dinner and it liked me. I liked the artists who played and sang to me, and I thought Ali Rajah, a mysterious-looking Indian gentleman, was also a clever one. I thought Mr. Lubin one of the most popular, if not the most popular man in the room, and I thought Mr. Gillingham an excellent and genial president. I thought Robert Leiber told the best story and was by far the happiest looking man in the room, as he also seemed to be one of the heaviest weights.

It was a graceful act, too, in my opinion, for the president at the dinner to give William H. Swanson the opportunity of talking to his former associates. Swanson appears to be extremely popular, and from what I hear there is a strong wish to have him "in the fold" again. Into the rights and the wrongs of this, it is not my business to enter. I merely record the impression made on my mind that there is a nice feeling in existence towards Mr. Swanson. But, then, American people and American film people are, as I have found out, exceedingly good-natured and exceedingly generous, and with very short memories. One of the most charming impressions which an Englishman receives in this country is the readiness of the American man to forget and forgive, to give the "under dog" a chance. Aside of the case of Mr. Swanson, there were many evidences before me at the F. S. A. Convention that, taken altogether, the members are a very good and generous crowd and always willing to give the other fellow a chance.

If I were to go on saying all the nice things I feel about last Saturday's gathering, I should fill up too much of this present number. But there is one important impression that I must put on record. It is commonly said in my hearing that the people in the film business are not of "much class." "It is a pity there are so many indifferent personalities," to put it mildly, "engaged in the business." It is about time that we heard the last of this kind of nonsense. Last Saturday's gathering at the Imperial Hotel was one in which any man might be proud to take part. I certainly was. The F. S. A. includes a fine set of men amongst its members. Last Saturday's dinner must, in my opinion, be written down as a very great success in virtue of the high standard, personal and otherwise, of the men who were present. In other words, a man may feel quite as much pride in belonging to the film business as to any other business. According to my observation, he will meet many fine, clean-cut, honorable, straightforward men in the field, with whom it is a pleasure to do business.

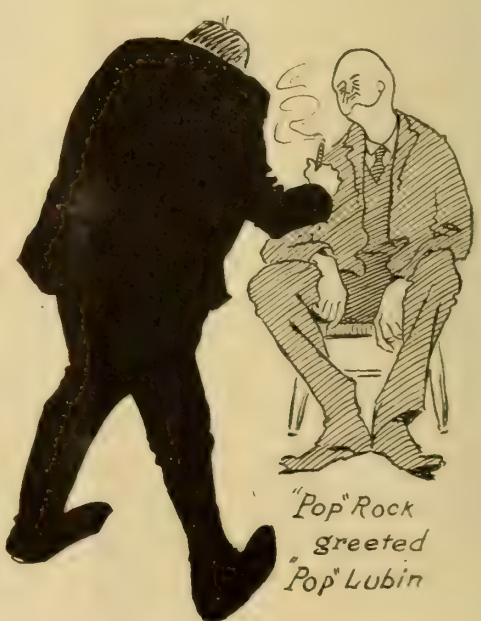
There were a number of ladies present at last Saturday's dinner. If I said what I thought about the F. S. A. Convention ladies, I might be accused of hyperbole, so I will content myself by remarking that if there are any handsomer, more vivacious, more delightful ladies than the F. S. A. Convention ladies, I should like to know where they are.

Many readers of The Moving Picture World are, we know, interested in the latest pictorial and technical developments of stationary photography. These are illustrated both in articles and by pictures in the American Annual of Photography for 1910, published by Tennant & Ward, of 122 East 25th street, New York City. The editor, John A. Tennant, has produced a beautiful and interesting book, which also contains, besides the articles and the pictures, formulæ for development, fixing, printing, and much useful miscellaneous information. Price, 75 cents, paper cover; $1.00, bound.

Roy Norton's first contribution to Edison films will be announced at an early date. It will portray life in the great Western country with which his name is attached. Those who are familiar with Mr. Norton's characterizations may expect in their pictorial form a reproduction of the quaintness with which he invests them.

The Brayton Manufacturing Company, animated with a true patriotic sentiment and knowing that all Americans feel it their duty to honor the memory of our great men, has prepared with much care two fine sets of slides illustrating the lives of George Washington and of Abraham Lincoln. The theaters showing these slides on February 12 and 22 will draw big houses.

SKETCHED AT THE F. S. A. CONVENTION.



(By Our Staff Artist Hugh F. Hoffman.)

F. S. A. Convention.

The Film Service Association held its Fifth Semi-annual Convention at the Imperial Hotel, New York City, on January 28, 29 and 30. The first session was called to order on Friday afternoon, the 28th of January, and the roll-call showed 37 delegates present and five represented by proxy. Several applicants subsequently admitted to membership brought the total number of delegates present to 40. In accordance with the following list:

The exchanges represented by delegates or by proxy were:
Actograph Company, New York—Edw. Harrington.
Buffalo Film Exchange, Buffalo, N. Y.—J. A. Schuchert.
Greater New York Film Exchange—Louis Rosenbluh and E. T. Fox.
Electric Theater Supply Co., Philadelphia—H. Schwalbe and J. A. McCaffrey.
Alfred Weiss Film Exchange, New York City—Alfred Weiss.
Imperial Film Exchange, New York City—Wm. Steiner.
Imperial Film Exchange, Troy, N. Y.—Lee Langdon.
Imperial Film Exchange, Washington, D. C.—Tom Moore.
Miles, Bros., Inc., New York—Joseph R. Miles and H. T. Edwards.
Miles Bros., Inc., Baltimore—J. C. Weidman.
Miles Bros., Inc., Boston—Joseph Mack.
Miles Bros., Inc., San Francisco—Herbert L. Miles.
Pittsburg Calcium Light and Film Co., Pittsburg, Pa.—J. B. Clark and R. A. Rowland.
Pittsburg Calicium Light and Film Co., Wilkesbarre, Pa.—Mr. Shirley.
Pittsburg Calcium Light and Film Co., Rochester, N. Y.—E. M. Saun.
Pittsburg Calcium Light and Film Co., Des Moines, Ia.—J. B. Clark and R. A. Rowland.
Pittsburg Calcium Light and Film Co., Cincinnati, Ohio—J. B. Clark and R. A. Rowland.
Tally's Film Exchange, Los Angeles, Cal.—(Proxy).
Novelty Moving Picture Co., San Francisco, Cal.—(Proxy).
Turner & Dahnken, San Francisco, Cal.—(Proxy).
Swaab Film Service, Philadelphia, Pa.—L. M. Swaab.
Pearce & Scheck, Baltimore, Md.—Messrs. Pearce and Scheck.
Kinetograph Co., New York City—P. L. Waters.
Howard Moving Picture Co., Boston, Mass.—Frank J. Howard.
Duquesne Film Exchange, Pittsburg, Pa.—Mr. Warner.
National-Vaudette, Detroit, Mich.—Phil Gleichman.
National-Vaudette, Grand Rapids, Mich.—A. J. Gilligham.
Lubin Film Service, Philadelphia, Pa.—Robert Etris.
Kleine Optical Co., New York City—J. E. Willis.
Kleine Optical Co., Boston, Mass.—J. E. Willis.
Kleine Optical Co., Chicago, Ill.—J. E. Willis.
People's Film Exchange, New York City—D. B. Bernstein.
Twin City Calcium, Minneapolis, Minn.—C. E. VanDuzen.
Progressive Film Exchange, Ogden, Utah—W. W. Hodkins.
C. A. Calehuff, Philadelphia, Pa.—Chas. A. Calehuff.
Theater Film Supply, Birmingham, Ala.—A. R. Boone.
Western Film Exchange, Joplin, Mo.—J. R. Freuler.
Western Film Exchange, Milwaukee, Wis.—J. R. Freuler.
Western Film Exchange, St. Louis, Mo.—J. R. Freuler.
Vitagraph Co., New York City—Wm. T. Rock.
Lake Shore Film Exchange, Cleveland, O.—E. Mandelbaum.
Imported Film and Supply Co., New Orleans, La.—J. E. Pearce.
Ohio Film Exchange, Toledo, O.—J. W. Melchior.
United Film Exchange, Cleveland, O.—Edward Kohl.
Yale Film Renting Co., Kansas City, Mo.—A. D. Flinton.
Spokane Film Exchange, Spokane, Wash.—Frank T. Bailey.
Montana Film Exchange, Butte, Mont.—Frank T. Bailey.

In all, 47 exchanges were represented out of a possible 79, and it is expected that the full quota will attend the next meeting, which will be held at a more central point.

The Executive Committee's report recommending nine subjects to be taken up for discussion in the regular order was accepted and filed. The committee's report regarding the return of films was to the effect that they had finally secured from the manufacturers a concession of 20 per cent. rebate from the lengths of films returnable.

A resolution was handed in to the effect that inasmuch as a great quantity of film older than seven months is needed for handling the business throughout the country, the manufacturers be requested to discontinue the return of film during the months of May, June, July and August.

On the matter of credit to exhibitors it was the expressed opinion of the members of the Film Service Association that clear rules on the subject should be laid down and the support of the Patents Company invited in order to prevent members from disobeying them. Suggestions were made, first, to make C. O. D. methods universal; secondly, to limit credit to any exhibitor to a week; thirdly, that exchanges should not serve exhibitors already in debt to other exchanges. These matters having been thoroughly discussed, were finally left to a committee of three to formally regulate and secure the support of the Patents Company for their enforcement.

At the evening meeting a long discussion took place on the probabilities of the exchanges being ousted from their present quarters and exchanges having further trouble on account of the erroneous ideas entertained by the public authorities in regard to the supposed danger in handling moving picture films. Many members seemed to think that most of the public misconception of this subject was due to ignorance and erroneous ideas with regard to such an accident as that of the Columbia Film Exchange in Pittsburg.

J. B. Clark, of the Pittsburg Calcium Light and Film Company, spoke at considerable length on this subject. He pointed out that the Columbia accident was most exaggerated in the newspapers and that the damage caused, instead of being anything like $200,000, was very much less. He had seen an accepted bid for putting the building in complete repair for the sum of a little over $6,000. Tests by authorities that were made to demonstrate the explosive properties of celluloid were admitted by experts to be farcical and absurd.

The meeting passed a resolution calling upon the Executive Committee to devise ways and means of overcoming unjust regulations in various cities of the country whose authorities are endeavoring to restrict the working of film exchanges.

Independent Competition.

Mr. Howard, of Boston, called for an opinion of each member as to the opposition existing from Independent exchanges in the city in which a licensed exchange was located. The opinion of the meeting was that the Independent movement was comparatively unimportant and that the only business of an Independent exchange was practically that business which a licensed exchange could not handle on account of there being too many exhibitors in a certain neighborhood.

The N. I. Film.

Durability of non-inflammable film stock was largely discussed. Mr. Smith, of the Vitagraph Company, gave a technical explanation of the difficulties presented. He also stated that manufacturers had recently received a quantity of new N. I. film stock from the Eastman Company; thorough tests were made of it and it had proved to be satisfactory. It was Mr. Smith's opinion that if all future shipments from the Eastman Company were up to this quality, the exchange will have no further cause for complaint.

(The King of Entertainers.)

The meeting on January 29th was called to order at 4 o'clock. The first matter discussed was the scene of the next convention. Atlantic City and Detroit having been proposed, Detroit, after several votes, was finally selected for a date some time in next July. Mr. Pearce, of New Orleans, suggested that city for the meeting of January, 1911, and pointed out the beauties of his city as well as its facilities as a meeting place.

A nominating committee consisting of Messrs. Mandlebaum (Cleveland), Schwable (Philadelphia), Weiss (New York), Mack (Boston) and Willis (New York), retired and brought in the recommendation that the present official staff be retained for another year. P. L. Waters was substituted for William Fox on the Executive Committee. The list of officers therefore stands as follows:

A. J. Gilligham, President.
William Steiner, Vice-President.
Herbert Miles, Secretary.
Robert Lieber, Treasurer.

P. L. Waters, Richard A. Rowland and Frank J. Howard, Executive Committee.

It was resolved that the machine manufacturers be asked to enter into an agreement amongst themselves to exact a sales agreement from all dealers. The agreement binds the dealers to enforce regular prices or lose their discounts. The machine manufacturers expressed their willingness to enter into such an agreement.

Mr. Pelzer, of the Edison Company, stated that the Edison Manufacturing Company had already prepared a sales agreement of this nature, the effect of which agreement would be to prevent price-cutting and prohibit the purchase of parts for the Edison machine of other manufacture. It was formally resolved, after a report of the Executive Committee following a conference with the machine manufacturers, that the exchanges confine themselves to those manufacturers only who will agree to execute a sales agreement to prevent price-cutting.

The Banquet.

The banquet was held in the Broadway Banquet Room of the Imperial Hotel in the evening. Covers were made for about 100 members and guests. Besides the members of the film exchanges, there were present the following:

Among the guests who sat down to the banquet were: Mr. J. Stuart Blackton, of the Vitagraph Company of America; Carl J. Goldenberg (Pathe Freres), Mr. and Mrs. J. B Clark and Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Rowland (Pittsburg Calcium Light and Film Co.), Mr. Horace G. Plympton, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Pelzer (Edison Mfg. Co.), Mr. and Mrs. Lubin, Mr. and Mrs. Singhi (Lubin Mfg. Co.), Messrs. Baxter, Morton, Coles, Sutherland and Atwater (Nicholas Power Co.), Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Miles, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Miles and Mr. H. T. Edwards (Miles Bros.), Mr. and Mrs. Eberhard Schneider, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Rock, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Smith, Mrs. A. E. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Rock and Mr. J. Burton (Vitagraph Company), Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Swaab (Philadelphia), Mr. E. Mandelbaum and Miss Mandelbaum (Cleveland), Dr. B. A. Baer (Philadelphia), Mr. M. H. Kuhn (Rochesteer), Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Willis (Kleine Optical Co.), Mr. E. M. Saunders (Rochester), Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Steiner and Mr. Levine (Imperial Film Exchange), Messrs. W. A. Daniels and B. W. Beadell (Waterproof Film Co.), Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hallberg, Mr. Wm. Wright (Kalem Co.), Mr. Alex. T. Moore, Mr. F. J. Dolber, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Freuler, Mr. and Mrs. John Fitzpatrick, Mr. Robert Etris and Mr. C. R. Baird, together with the exchange delegates previously mentioned and others whose names we were unable to obtain.

The press was represented by Mr. Frank Winch and Mr. Brandt, of the "Billboard"; Mr. Frank Woods, of the "Dramatic Mirror"; Messrs. Jas. L. Hoff and J. Hoffman, of the "Film Index"; Mr. Ellis Cohen, of the "Morning Telegraph," and Messrs. J. P. Chalmers, Thos. Bedding, F.R.P.S., A. MacArthur and H. F. Hoffman, of the "Moving Picture World."

A very excellent program of music was gone through. The Schneider Publishing Company had their two latest hits sung by Thomas Penfold; the York Music Company had Mr. Rogers sing his latest successes. Manager Ganes, of the Manhattan Theater, supplied complimentary vaudeville turns from his theater, including the mysterious Ali Rajah. The Jerome H. Remick Company had their latest hits sung by Albert Newhoff. Violin solos were also included, and throughout the evening the orchestra played a very entertaining selection of music.

The toastmaster was A. G. Gilligham, the president of the Film Service Association, and he proved himself an excellent man in the position. One of the most successful speeches of the evening was that of J. Stuart Blackton, of the Vitagraph Company, in which, alluding to the allegation of trust methods against the associated manufacturers, he pointed out that the picture business was a case of the survival of the fittest, regardless of patent matters. Amongst others who spoke during the banquet were Mrs. Miles, Herbert Miles, W. T. Rock, Robert Leiber, J. P. Chalmers, Philips of the Edison Company, J. Stuart Blackton, Thos. Bedding, Mr. Pearce, Fred Singhi, J. L. Hoff, and finally W. H. Swanson.

The banquet was a very sumptuous affair, served up in the well-known style of the Imperial Hotel and thoroughly enjoyed by all present, including the several ladies.

Length of Reels.

The meeting was called to order on Sunday at 3 P. M. Objections to reels over 900 feet. This is one of the greatest evils of the exchange business, for the following reasons: Firstly, a full 1,000 feet of N. I. film will not go on even a 10⅜-inch reel and go in the magazine. This necessitates the cutting out of a portion of the film, which is an absolute loss to the exchange. Secondly, where the film is too long, the first 50 and the last 50 feet are ruined in about one week by friction on account of the size of the reel.

The discussion on this matter was long and heated and a number of the members said that they would cut off their standing orders from those manufacturers who insisted upon sending out 1,000-foot subjects. The friction caused the loss of either the title of the film or the climax, and the exchanges had now many reels on hand which are minus the climax. It was remarked that some manufacturers were so eager to get the price of the thousand feet that if they did occasionally issue a subject that measured 850 or 875 feet, they would tack on to the end some little comedy of 125 feet or so. Several of the members said that where this had been done they had cut off the comedy filler, which was now dead stock on their shelves.

Another great objection made by all members was to the manufacturers giving their reels similar titles or putting out two reels on different days of the same title, one a continuation of the other. This drives away the patronage of people who have seen the first reel, and won't go to see the second, thinking that it is the same reel. It was finally resolved that the members favor those manufacturers whose release lengths more nearly conformed to a total of 900 feet.

Waterproof Films.

Waterproof films were discussed, and Mr. Daniels, of the Waterproofing Company, was invited to address the meeting. He said, in part:

There is no department of the film industry needing more radical changes than the handling of the films. Here is a business where the buyer fixes the price, not according to the intrinsic merit of the goods, but according to their age. Not according to the actual condition of the goods, but according to what he imagines the condition to be. The law of supply and demand regulates prices in most lines of trade, but it has no place in the exchange business.

What of this supply and demand? Well, in about one thousand cities and towns in the United States there are more than 6,000 licensed theaters. On an average, the manufacturers of films do not issue more than 100 copies of any subject, so that only 100 places can show it as a first run. This leaves 900 other locations where the subject will be as novel and valuable for a second run (provided). And still there are 800 cities and towns where it would have the same value as in the first and second hundred places (provided), and so on until the subject had gone the entire circle (provided).

Provided what? Why, that the film was in as good condition for one run as the other. That no effort is made to have it so, is one of the drawbacks in the business. Industrial evolution always works through economies, and, if I were to prophesy, I should say that unless you gentlemen get together and introduce more science into the care and distribution of films so as to get the full value out of them, you are not reaping the full value of your investment.

Waterproofing is not the panacea for all film troubles, but it will help you to keep a film clean and rainless. There is positively nothing in waterproofing which will make a film hard and brittle, nor will it increase the inflammability of N. I. film. This has been determined through experiments by the Eastman Kodak Company, the Edison Manufacturing Company and others. Waterproofing is primarily to put a film in condition so that it can be easily washed with soap and water; but it does more—because of its polished finish it makes a clearer picture on the screen. It is a scientific fact that light penetrates a shiny surface more readily than it does a dull one.

Notwithstanding the general use of beeswax by operators, the emulsion of an ordinary film is constantly rubbing off at the gate, and unless the springs are frequently scraped and cleaned the film has a tendency to stick and pull. A waterproofed film removes this trouble and thus makes a steadier picture.

It has been said that it takes longer to splice a waterproofed film; but with a sharp knife the waterproofing can be scraped away and spliced as quickly as any. Even if it took twice as long, it would be time well spent, for a well-made waterproofed splice will last enough longer to offset any extra time used in making it.

We have never claimed that our coating would add strength to a film, but we do claim it will not lessen the strength, and, as a matter of fact, it does add something.

We make a strong claim that waterproofing will keep a film soft and pliable much longer than ordinary, the reason being that manufacturers fill the emulsion with glycerine or some other slow dryer to keep it soft and flexible. When this evaporates you have a brittle film. Waterproofing tends to retard this evaporation.

We have never claimed that a waterproofed film could not be scratched, but we do claim that it is more difficult to scratch it, and if it is scratched the scratches can be kept free from dust and dirt by washing with soap and water. We have always contended that a clean, rainless film is worth more than a scratched and dirty one, regardless of its age, and if you do not get more for it, it is your own fault.

To help you care for films which are waterproofed we have built a washing machine which will wash, dry and polish a reel in from eight to ten minutes. We will either rent or sell them.

One manufacturing company, as you know, is using our process. Machinery is also building under similar arrangements for another company; but you must not jump to the conclusion that, because of these two, all other manufacturers will follow suit. It may depend somewhat upon how you gentlemen like waterproof films, and this will depend altogether upon how you take care of them. Besides this, the process adds something to the cost of manufacture, and it may be that there are some whose desire for your welfare and the general good will not extend so far. Be this as it may, I am sure you will accord the pioneers your unqualified approbation and support.

In conclusion, I want to ask you not to blame waterproofing for everything which happens to your films. Remember, things have always happened, and that such things as misadjusted projecting machines and careless operators always will happen. When they do happen, the blame will naturally be pushed on to anything which is handy and new; but waterproofing will survive all injustice which may be heaped upon it. Waterproofing has come to stay, and the time is not far distant when the public will demand rainless exhibitions, and waterproofing is a logical step to this end.

Mr. Lieber, of Indianapolis, recommended the members to give careful consideration and every encouragement to movements of this kind whose ultimate success would be for the betterment of the business.

It was resolved that all new applicants be admitted on the payment of dues at the rate of $25.00 per annum, dating from the semi-annual meeting preceding the date of application, and that all licensed exchanges be invited to join the Association.

Freight and Express Rates.

An important subject taken up was the matter of securing better freight and express rates. A committee was appointed to confer with transportation companies and the express managers. It was pointed out that should the express companies agree to give a better rate on the return of films than at present, and secure their return without delay, the express company would derive a greater revenue, through the ability of the exchange to more quickly utilize the returned films.

All exchange men were recommended to become members of their local Boards of Trade, Chambers of Commerce and other local bodies, that would identify them with the business men of their community.

A committee on traffic and transportation rates was appointed, consisting of Messrs. Freuler and Lieber, of the West, and Waters and Clark, of the East, to report any results obtained.

Mr. Leiber stated that one of the most objectionable features of the relationship between the express companies and the exchanges is that the exchanges are credited by the express agents as being prone to take advantage of every opportunity they can find to put in claims for damages. This has been so bad in some cities as to warrant the express agents turning away the business of certain exchanges.

It was resolved that thanks be extended to the secretary for his labor in behalf of the exchange for the past six months.

Many other matters pertaining to the conduct of business were discussed. As they had direct bearing on the business interests of all F. S. A. members, we urge upon those who were not present the importance of attending these meetings. It is not enough to be represented by proxy. The loss of time and inconvenience is well repaid by taking part in the discussions of matters that have direct bearing on the welfare of the business and we trust to meet a full turnout of the membership at next session.

N. I. M. P. Alliance Meeting.

Curiously enough, while the F. S. A. delegates were in session in one part of the Hotel Imperial, the Executive Committee of the National Independent Moving Picture Alliance and the Independent manufacturers were holding a series of meetings in another room on the same floor. These meetings were held behind closed doors, but we were informed that it was the most important yet held by the Alliance and that a considerable amount of business was transacted. In the corridors of the hotel and around the tables in the thirst parlor the Independent people received considerable banter from their competitors and former associates, but it was taken in good part and handed back with interest. The Alliance meetings generally lasted far into the night and ended with a jollification which showed that they were in anything but low spirits. At one of these after-meetings two licensed manufacturers appeared and paid tribute to the cordial feeling they entertained to some of their former business associates who were now, through force of circumstances, on the other side of the fence. They told many interesting reminiscences of their own early experiences while fighting patent suits and quoted expenses enough to frighten any Independent manufacturer present. But no one seemed to be discouraged and the general impression prevailed that the N. I. M. P. A. would be the saving of the Independent cause.

At the close of the Independent sessions, Alliance Secretary Wm. H. Swanson handed out the following report for publication:

The executive committee of the Alliance was called to order at 6 P. M., January 29. Messrs. J. J. Murdock, I. C. Oes, A. Kessel, J. W. Morgan and Wm. H. Swanson being present, together with the manufacturers who were called in for a joint conference.

Upon proof being submitted to the committee that a number of manufacturers were selling to non-members, a fine of $100 was imposed on the Imp, Bison, Centaur and Phoenix Companies.

Closer agreements were arrived at and non-members of the Alliance will not be allowed to enjoy any of its privileges. This caused the entry of six new members, viz.: The Buckeye Film and Projection Company, of Dayton, Ohio; The American Film Exchange, Pittsburg, Pa.; the Southern Film Exchange, Cincinnati, Ohio; The Standard Film Exchange, Cleveland, Ohio; the Precision Film Exchange, Chicago, Ill., and the Hudson Film Exchange, New York City.

The secretary was instructed to notify all members, both manufacturing and exchange, that every rule of the Alliance would be enforced with absolute certainty.

It was shown to the committee that the Chicago Film Exchange had exhibited the Imp pictures "Never Again" and "A Rose of the Philippines," on Sunday, January 23, a day previous to the release day. The committee imposed a fine of $100 for this offense.

Evidence was submitted that the Peerless Film Exchange, of Kansas City, had released the Bison film, "The Female Bandit," on January 31, instead of February 1. Further investigation was ordered, and if the charges are proved the Peerless will be fined a similar amount to the Chicago Film Exchange.

A resolution was adopted that each manufacturer and importer is to deposit in the hands of the treasurer $100 to cover penalties for violations of the rules and by-laws, and should any fine be levied against this $100, the same is to be paid within 24 hours, and until the deposit is replenished, the manufacturer or importer will stand suspended until it is paid.

A grievance committee of three was appointed, one new member to be added and one old one dropped each month. The chairman will be considered the senior member, and on withdrawing he will appoint his successor. This committee will investigate complaints against manufacturers and importers.

It was found that the manufacturers had had business relations with unaffiliated exchanges and they (the manufacturers) were notified that a further infraction of the rules would involve them in a fine of $500.

A committee was appointed to investigate a certain concern in Philadelphia which was reported to be buying films, ostensibly for export, but renting it to film exchanges.

A uniform price of ten cents a foot was adopted by the manufacturers, the American manufacturers agreeing to include fifty posters of each reel. The exchanges have agreed to place standing orders subject to cancellation on two weeks' notice for American goods and three weeks for imported film.

The release days were changed as follows:

Monday—Imp, 1; Eclair, 1; International P. & P. Co., 4; Theo. Brinkmier, 1.

Tuesday—Bison, 1; Powers, 1; Thanhouser, 1.

Wednesday—Ambrosio, 1; Actophone, 1; Columbia, 1.

Thursday—Centaur, 1; Imp, 1; Exclusive, 1.

Friday—Bison, 1; Pantograph, 1.

Saturday—Great Northern, 1; Itala, 1; Phoenix, 1.

The meeting was harmonious, but the enthusiasm was somewhat dampened by the resignation of J. J. Murdock as president. Mr. Murdock still remains in the Alliance as a member. Business reasons and delicate health were responsible for Mr. Murdock's actions, which prompted some two hours of speech-making by the assembled committeemen and manufacturers in expressing their regret at the loss of so able a leader, who was responsible for the success of the International Projecting and Producing Company, and in a large degree for the good work of the Alliance. The executive committee made an appropriation for the purchase of a loving cup to be presented to the retiring president. Mr. Murdock's successor has not yet been decided upon.

Mr. Murdock made a very touching reply to the kind words, and was evidently very much affected.

THE EXHIBITS.

If the deliberations of the film renters tended to the better regulation of the business, the exhibitions of apparatus also showed the march of improvement.

Pathe's Exhibit.

Conspicuously located at the head of the main stairway was the exhibit of Pathe Freres. A large room was used to demonstrate the Pathe colored films and the Pathe professional projecting machine. This outfit was greatly admired by the exchange men on account of the noiseless and steady running of the machine.

Powers Cameragraph No. 6.

Passing along to the next room the Powers Cameragraph No. 6 was demonstrated by a corps of experts. The various current saving devices handled by the Powers Company were also fully explained to prospective buyers.

The Mirror Screen.

Samples of the Mirror Screen were sent by the Mirror Screen Company, Shelbyville, Ind., and were on view in the Pathe Freres and also Powers exhibiting rooms, and the increased brightness of the part of the picture where the mirror screen was used was a subject of much discussion. The general opinion expressed was that the mirror screen was a very good thing, but, like all good things, it came high in price. This can be readily understood when we realize the expense of obtaining, in the first instance, a large and perfect sheet of plate glass; this has then to be very carefully etched on one side and silvered on the other. The picture is projected on the etched surface, and the theory is that the silvered surface behind reflects and intensifies the brightness of the image.

Fireproof Film Cabinets.

The O. M. Edwards Company, of Syracuse, had an exhibition of their fireproof film cabinets. The excellent workmanship in this article was greatly admired and many orders were taken. We are informed that the O. M. Edwards Company will place on the market a small fireproof cabinet with a place for five reels and air moistener. The outfit is especially designed for the exhibitor.

The Motiograph.

The manufacturers of the Motiograph did not have any exhibit at the convention, but were represented by Mr. A. C. Roebuck, of the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, and Mr. J. H. Hallberg, the New York agent for the Motiograph.

The Soundograph.

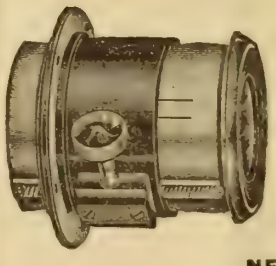
If everybody did not see the Soundograph they at least could not fail to have heard it. This is a cabinet about 4 feet square in which is contained apparatus for producing all the sounds that are needed to accompany the moving picture. Each sound is operated by a separate handle or pull and with a little training we believe that anyone can produce on the Soundograph the most realistic and well timed effects. Mr. Gieghan, who demonstrated the apparatus, was well pleased with the interest it created and booked several orders.

Waterproofing Films.

One of the most interesting exhibits of all was a device for washing film that had been waterproofed. It did not take the exchange men long to realize that this new method of renovation was just the thing they needed to enable them to get all the money possible out of the rentals. The process of waterproofing is also a preventative of scratches; it so hardens the film that a scrubbing brush, soap and water may be used to remove the oil and dirt which is picked up in the projecting machine. The waterproofing machine which the company had on exhibition was very much admired by all the exchange men and many orders were placed with the manufacturers for duplicate machines.

The Edengraph.

It is now quite some time since any reference to this machines was made in the pages of The Moving Picture World. But the manufacturers have not been idle and the Edengraph projecting machine, as exhibited at the convention, was generally admired as a model of ingenuity, compactness and practicability. The Edengraph is unlike any other machine. With the magazines removed, the head stands less than a foot high and 6 inches in width. The gear wheels have the nicety of watch movement and the star wheel and rapidly moving parts are all encased in an oil cup in which they revolve secure from dust and grit and safe from the meddlesome operator. Mr. Frank Cannock, the inventor of the Edengraph machine, was kept busy in explaining its good points and booking orders.



We make the best lenses in the world for projecting motion pictures and lantern slides. Can you spend a little money more wisely and profitable than by ordering a set of lenses which will

IT'S ALL IN THE LENS

IMPROVE YOUR PICTURES?

NEW PRICES

M. P. Projection Lenses any size with our improved jacket with spiral adjustment	$15.00
No. 1 Stereopticon Lenses	15.00
No. 2 Stereopticon Lenses	20.00

All dealers sell them on approval.

WRITE FOR OUR NEW CIRCULAR

When ordering state the size of your screen and the length of the picture wanted. Give the distance from the lens to the screen. Remit the price of the lens or furnish references.

GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN OPTICAL COMPANY
808 Clinton Ave., So. Rochester, N. Y.

"The Cloister's Touch" (Biograph).—A picture of feudal times, representing a handsome young wife torn from her husband for the amusement of a duke who was in the depths of boredom. The outraged husband seeks-a monastery. The woman longs for her child until she goes insane and dies. The duke, realinzin the outrage he has committed, attempts to commit suicide, but the cross on the dagger suggests another course, and he enters the same monastery as the outraged husband. They meet, and are about to fly at each other, but are prevented by the sanctity of the place. Here is enough dramatic opportunity for half a dozen good pictures, almost; yet they are all crowded into one, and a mighty interesting succession of scenes it makes, too. The audience will not applaud. The picture is too serious; but they enjoy it none the less, and manifest their appreciation plainly enough. The actors have taken full advantage of the opportunity presented them and that, with the excellent photography, combine to make a satisfactory picture.

"Bill's Boots" (Lubin).—A short, snappy comedy graphically illustrating the disturbance which may be caused by a pair of boots suitably manipulated by a pair of lively youngsters. Buried in a snow bank they suggest the possibility of a calamity to some unfortunate individual during the blizzard. Upon digging out the boots the deception is discovered, and the sympathetic old lady's fears are allayed.

"Coffee Culture" (Pathe).—A companion to the tea film issued some weeks ago. It represents clearly the different processes in the production of coffee from planting the tree to the steaming cup. It is an industrial subject of importance since it affords many thousands of people an opportunity to know about coffee production who probably never understood it before. Iformation of this character is well worth while, particularly when it gives an accurate view of the production of one of the common every day necessities. It is a notable addition to the lengthening list of excellent Pathe industrial subjects.

"Dick's a Winner" (Pathe).—A snappy comedy well acted and well staged, with all the photographic excellence which accompanies a Pathe subject.

"Shooting an Oil Well" (Selig).—Of the many exciting occupations followed by different individuals perhaps none is more exciting than shooting oil well, and Selig has portrayed such an operation with sufficient clearness to afford an excellent idea of how it is done. Even in the pictures there is a dash of excitement which is very thrilling and causes the spectators to catch their breaths. The picture is very cleverly produced and is sufficiently interesting to make those who see it want more. Such thrillers in commonplace industrial pictures are not common, and when one is produced it attracts much favorable attention. When the huge nitro-glycerine cartridge is exploded and a mass of sand, rock, oil, flame and smoke come pouring from the ground, rising high in the air the danger of a well shooter's occupation is better understood than it ever was before. It is an industrial subject alike instructive and startling.

"Mystery of the Lama Convent" (Great Northern).—An intresting picture representing life and sscenery about the Lama Monastery Tibet. A scientific gentleman, armed with a magic cane, secures entrance accompanied by his servant. They are shown many secrets, including the restoration of the dead to life, but are discovered and denounced. They manage to make their escape, though pursued by many monks, and succeed in carrying away valuable data and interesting curios.

"A Georgia 'Possum Hunt" (Edison).—Whether or not the President is as fond of 'possum as he is supposed to be, he has given a vogue to 'possum which has made it popular. The reproduction of a 'possum hunt from the calling of the darkies on through all its stages, with the interested white people following, is so naturally done in this picture that it seems almost as though it were taking place in the theater. The whole scene is reproduced, even to the dislodgment of the 'possum, his rescue from the dogs and the darkies dancing while 'possum and taters are cooking. To Northern eyes it all looks strange, yet it is only the reproduction of a scene which is common enough in the South. The Edison Company have done well to bring to the North a characteristic scene in the life to the southward.

"The Skipper's Yarn" (Edison).—A melodramatic story with a sailor as hero, though it might have been told of any other quite as well. The love story is a rather depressing narrative, though some parts of it are told with such graphic power that they hold the interest at intense pitch. The ending represents the punishment of a guilty man, but it does not restore to the old skipper his lost love. There is a strong drama in this, so strong that it seems almost too realistic. The acting and photography are alike good, and the picture holds the interest of the audience.

"The Man Who Lost" (Kalem).—A picture embodying the reveries of a bachelor who sees the romance of his own young days reproduced after he has bestowed his blessing upon a pair of young lovers. It is a story full of tenderness, and is attractive chiefly because of the things it suggests. Very many men will see in it some allusion to their own lives, even though the romance of their younger days may have been consummated. Such pictures always bring to mind memories of the past which may, and frequently do, moisten the eyes and cause that peculiar choking sensation in the throat. But the tenderness they invoke and the pleasant memories they induce are alike beneficial and make the picture more attractive than it would be otherwise.

"The Leather Industry" (Pathe).—A beautiful picture illustrating the leather industry from the production of the cattle to the finished goods, whatever they may be. An educational film of value, which will do much to increase the knowledge of the leather industry and will convey some impression of its importance. The list of industrial pictures has received a worthy addition in this film.

"The Scarecrow" (Pathe).—A comedy which has a laugh in every scene. The Pathe comedians have done well in this comedy and have created a picture which will amuse any audience.

"His Imaginary Crime" (Bison).—This picture shows clearly that it is extremely poor policy to run when one has accidentally injured someone, or something else has occurred which may make flight suspicious, and the young fellow complicates matters by continuous flight, which is worse. But a girl ultimately saves him from himself, and the flight ends in a wedding shortly afterward.

"An Outlaw's Sacrifice" (Essanay).—Yes, even outlaws will sometimes make sacrifices. Perhaps, indeed, they make quite as many as anyone; only their so-called or supposed bad qualities so far overshadow whatever good ones they may possess, the good is nearly always almost entirely hidden. In this instance, however, the outlaw dramatically makes a heroic sacrifice which saves the young woman he loves and her parents from ruin, but places him in the sheriff's charge. The pathetic figure of the weeping girl as she sinks on the sheriff's steps after turning over her sweetheart will long remain in the memory. The picture is intensely dramatic and will appeal to a large number of people.

"The Great Divide" (Gaumont).—A pathetic love story excellently told, as all the Gaumont stories are told. But there is much sorrow in it because of the death of the girl and the long years of loneliness of the faithful lover. For one brief moment he is happy, however, when he sees the vision of his long lost love seated in the stern of his boat, and then he falls dead. One wonders, sometimes, if these films are not altogether too much like the experiences of real life. They frquently reproduce incidents which can almost be duplicated in the life of the one who sees it, or that of some friend. This resemblance adds wonderfully to the strength and attractiveness of the picture and is a powerful influence in determining the impression which such a film creates.

"Wild Waves at St. Jean-de-Lux" (Gaumont).—A reproduction of waves dashing over the rocks on the shores of a French province which has the true atmosphere and spirit of the ocean in it. The waves break over the stones in a wild tumult of strength and motion, hurling the whitened water and the spray high in the air. The operator caught the spirit of the scene and the picture looks like the ocean. Sometimes these pictures, purporting to be waves and broken water, are but reproductions of cotton wool, smooth and without life or expression. In this instance the water swirls and dashes, rushing in fierce, unrestrained onslaughts upon the rocks, and after being dashed into foam, going sullenly back to join the waters of the great deep from which they came. It is a beautiful, a majestic picture, and holds the audience silently through its length, to be followed by vigorous applause at the close.

"Cousin Lou for Mine" (Pathe).—A comedy which will please many patrons of any theater. It makes much sport and leaves the audience in good humor.

"The Strong Man" (Pathe).—A farce which has numerous elements of amusement connected. The acting and photography are both good, adding materially to the attractiveness of the picture. The humor in some instances is a bit broad, but it amuses and therefore fulfils its mission.

"The Girl and the Judge" (Vitagraph).—A strongly dramatic picture, worked out with the energy and fervor characteristic of the Vitagraph players. A love story is no novelty, even though it is always new, but the fatal discharge of a pistol by the heat generated by the lens of a microscope is a novelty, and is used to good advantage. The dramatic scenes attending the conviction and sentence of an innocent man for murder, with the repentance of the judge and his explanation of how the pistol was discharged are all so dramatic that one can scarcely distinguish between them. The girl chooses the judge, assuming that the love which prompted the judge's action must be deep. This ending is different from established precedent, and really makes a strong climax. One is ready to see the girl walk away with the released prisoner, and when she goes away with the judge it really gives a slight wrench to one's feelings. Unconsciously, almost, one begins speculating upon whether this course was right, paying tribute in this way to the strength of the film and the fidelity of the acting.

"The Last Deal" (Boigraph).—A gambling story which presents a moral so palpable that it requires no explanation to make it plain. The novelty lies in having the husband come in contact with his brother-in-law, who is winning money to help him make restitution. The young man is saved, but his punishment includes the loss of his position. The moral influence of this picture should be strong. Gambling is well understood to be a dangerous vice, no matter in what form it may be indulged, but perhaps few realize the actual status until it is shown to them in some such hideous form as this. Whether the Biograph people sought to preach a sermon against gambling or not is uncertain, but that they have done so, and very effectively, will be admitted by practically everyone who sees this picture. Dramatically and photographically it is quite as good as the best.

"Marble Quarrying in Tennessee" (Lubin).—A picture of exceptional attractiveness. Even though it is an industrial subject, the educational feature seems subordinated to the pictorial. It is an adequate illustraion of the processes followed in the quarrying of marble in the great marble section of Tennessee. Some of the pictures are worthy the brush of a master artist. When an industrial subject of this character is adequately handled it becomes more important than it would otherwise. Lubin has given in this a picture of merit and one which satisfactorily illustrates an interesting subject.

"The Devil, the Servant and the Man" (Selig).—In some ways this picture is a distinct departure for the Selig Company. It will surely set people to talking, not alone because of the absorbing story it tells, but because of the masterly way the story is worked out. Some of the combinations appeal to one as strongly dramatic, and there is a thread of mystery running through it which adds materially to its attractiveness. Managers will make no mistake in offering this film to their patrons, and its exhibition will add to the reputation of any theater.

"The Flirto-Maniac" (Lubin).—That's merely a name for a man who has a sentimental brainstorm. In this instance the man escapes from a sanitarium and goes about making love to every woman he sees. But even a man with a mania of this sort could not stand the bevy of old maids that finally pursued him, and after a lively chase he sought refuge again in the asylum. As may be supposed, many extremely comical situations are developed and the film presents one continuous laugh from beginning to end.

"A Voice from the Fireplace" (Essanay).—Here is a picture which will make many people think very hard. It deals with a delicate topic, representing an attachment between a husband's friend and his wife which all but resulted disastrously. These attachments are often unconsciously formed, and before they are realized the injury has been done. Apparently, as in this instance, they are beyond the control of those who form them, yet each party may understand fully their unpleasant consequences. A falling log saved this couple, but many will testify that no unseen hand has stayed them in a career which meant dishonor, at least, if no worse, to one or two.

"The Lass Who Loves a Sailor" (Urban).—A pretty love story, clearly photographed and cleverly acted. Some of the scenery is picturesque and adds materially to the enjoyment of the picture. It is, perhaps, a somewhat light story, yet, like all love stories, possesses a good deal of interest for the average person. There is no question about the pictorial quality of an Urban film. It has all the features which make it interesting from the mechanical standpoint.

"A Japanese Peach Boy" (Edison).—A beautiful fairy story showing numerous scenes of wondrous beauty and many strange tranformations, each more marvelous than the previous one and each another chapter in the adventures of the baby who was discovered in a peach. It is, perhaps, one of the most attractive pictures of this sort ever produced. It would be difficult to conceive anything more beautiful than the interior of the cavern, nor would it be possible to produce anything more attractive than the final transformation scene, where the humble cottage is changed into a beautiful palace. The contest between the boy and the ogre is thrilling, and when virtue triumphs, as it always does, the audience is ready to applaud. The details of this picture are so beautiful and so truly representative of what a fairy story is supposed to be that it will captivate old and young alike.

"Ascending the Jura Mountains" (Gaumont).—A scenic picture which adds materially to the collection put out by this house. The operator did his work well, creating the impression that it is mountain scenery one is looking at. So many times the operator is at fault in that the mountains appear dwarfed and insignificant. Here the grandeur of the scenery is faithfully represented and the interpretation seems quite satisfactory. The printer has done his work well and the picture will add to the producer's reputation.

"Caught in His Own Trap" (Vitagraph).—A comedy based upon a father's success in catching two lovers spooning by watching them in a mirror. They turn the tables and catch him kissing the maid, using the same mirror with which he caught them. There is much genuine humor in this picture, and the details are carefully worked out so it does not seem in the least improbable. The effect is eminently pleasing.

"The Skeleton" (Vitagraph).—A good deal of disturbance is created about the house and the skeleton is responsible for it all. The way this skeleton keeps things going is a caution. Perhaps, however, he may be forgiven for it all because he is funny about it. And the Vitagraph players have put a vigorous snap and dash into the production of the piece which adds materially to its attractiveness.

"The Postmistress" (Pathe).—A strong picture telling the story of a poor widow who acted as postmistress. Her child was sick and unfortunately the doctor was one of those cold hearted individuals, who insisted upon his pay before he would do anything to relieve the sufferer. In desperation she takes some of the government's money. No difficulty would have resulted only the inspector arrived that day to examine her accounts. The rest of it, how the widow was saved from disgrace and how everything was made straight is very dramatic, and at the same time interesting. It makes altogether a picture which will linger long in the memory. The ending is so good that it leaves a favorable impression and in some instances the audience applauds vigorously. The photography is clear and the acting strong and well maintained. It would be difficult to improve upon it.

"Sheltered in the Woods" (Urban).—A good story, well acted and adequately illustrated. It is one of those stories that seems to please an audience, and in this instance is made even more interesting by the beautiful photographic quality of the picture. The technical excellence of the Urban films appeals to the artistic sense and represents a distinct advance over those presented some months ago. The mechanical work seems to be fast approaching perfection.

"The Might of the Waters" (Urban).—A picture which gives an impression of the power of water, portraying it so vividly that there can be no misunderstanding of the intention of the producer. The operator appreciated his opportunity and the way he took advantage of it stamps him as a master in his art. To be able to so graphically reproduce a subject of this character is, perhaps, as great an achievement in motion picture making as it is possible for one to make. This picture will win the applause of an audience anywhere.

"The Step-Mother" (Kalem).—A somewhat melodramatic story upon a familiar theme, with the girl infatuated with a bank robber, though she did not know his true character. The stepmother comes into the home and the girl conceives a dislike to her. Then follow a series of mishaps and misunderstandings, which are ultimately happily adjusted. The girl learns the true character of her sweetheart, and the stepmother wins her love, making a pleasing ending to a somewhat disagreeable beginning. The film is well acted and the photography shows considerable improvement, as compared with previous issues from the same house. The steady improvement of the Kalem pictures, both dramatically and photographically, is adding materially to the popularity of the Kalem pictures.

"The Wrong Man" (Essanay).—To be unceremoniously dumped out of the window of one's own house into a snow bank would not please most men, and when Mr. Simpkins returns and is pitched out by a husky plumber because he is mistaken for a masher who followed Mrs. Simpkins into the house he may be pardoned if his temper is somewhat ruffled. However, after various strategic schemes, Mr. Simpkins manages to stay in his own house and the masher, hidden in a closet, is caught when attempting to escape and gets a good ducking in a snow bank. The picture is funny and keeps an audience roaring all through its length.

"Hamlet" (Lux).—To adequately represent Shakespeare's greatest drama in a motion picture is a difficult task, and though in this instance the producer has done well, one must say that it is a great pity he hasn't done a bit better. Improvement in the interpretation would, perhaps, make amends, at least in some degree, for the deficiencies in photography. There are too many weak spots in the film, detracting from its mechanical beauty, though one must say that the improvement in photographic quality of this firm's work is marked. One wishes, however, that they might have gone a little further in this direction and have make the picture clearer and better through its entire length. The staging is perhaps adequate. Staging in Shakespeare's time was not the elaborate operation it is now, and what appear to be meager settings often represent fidelity to the original. The acting has weak points, yet is, perhaps, a reasonably satisfactory reproduction of the play as it is likely to be understood by a majority of readers. Pictures that urge actors and producers forward by the necessity of producing something out of the ordinary unquestionably exert a beneficial influence and assist materially in both dramatic and photographic development.

"By His Own Hand" (Bison).—A Western melodrama in which love and jealousy play important parts. The novelty is in the binding of the captives, which is done in such a way that a slight move would explode pistols and kill them. One scarcely likes these pictures of stealing and abusing unprotected young women, even though the ravisher afterward receives his deserts. In the opinion of the writer, Western pictures would be improved with this feature eliminated and the interest of the stories told would not suffer. The old-time bloody films have long since practically disappeared. It is time for the carrying away of women to travel the same road. A good story can be told without it and the peace of mind of the audience would be measureably enhanced.

"Hero and Leander" (Ambrosio).—A reproduction of the old Greek fable of the love of Hero, a priestess of Venus, debarred from earthly love by her vows, and Leander, a handsome youth from Asia. The picture follows the story closely, illustrating its main points, even to Leander swimming to meet Hero, and the extinguishment of her torch, which leads to Leander's death on the rocks. It is a pretty piece of work and in the main is satisfactorily done.

UNIFORMS AND CAPS.

We have noticed with pleasure that well conducted moving picture theaters realize the necessity of having clean and attentive attendants and are fast adopting the uniform. It is not only a direct compliment to the public to place these courteous ushers in uniform, but also of a great help to spectators seeking information. We know that ladies in general have always a kind smile for blue uniforms and brass buttons and that persons more or less inclined not to behave themselves correctly have more fear of uniformed attendants than of men in their street clothes. If the value of a uniform had not been fully recognized the great corporations, railroads, street cars, theaters, office buildings, etc., would not uniform their employees.

LAEMMLE CASE POSTPONED.

On Friday, February 4, in the United States Circuit Court in New York City, Richard Dyer, representing the Motion Picture Patents Company, applied for a continuance in their injunction suit against Carl Laemmle and the Independent Moving Pictures Company. Laemmle, by his counsel—Emerson Newell, of New York, and Edwin Maher, of Chicago—earnestly demanded a trial; but Judge Hand finally granted a continuance to the Motion Picture combination for three weeks in order to give them an opportunity to prepare a defense to the claim of Mr. Laemmle that the Motion Picture Patents Company are violating the Sherman Anti-Trust Act. A large number of Independent manufacturers were present in court and gave Mr. Laemmle their warmest greetings and assurances of their moral support in his fight for freedom of trade in the moving picture business.

INCREASE THE BEAUTY OF THE PICTURES.

(By our Chicago Representative.)

As I was fortunate enough to see "The Cloister's Touch" of the Biograph at two different places and that during the same evening I had a good chance to determine how a picture could be either enhanced or spoiled by the exhibitor.

At the Casino the picture appeared very dull. The pianist had lost for the time, her strenuous ways of playing the piano; she contented herself with a monotonous tune without the least expression. It was the same piano, the same drum and the same bass drum in pathetic scenes—when Elsa tries to recognize her boy in some children presented to her; when Elsa dies, and, in the festival scene, when the Duke and his court drink wine and make merry. The accompaniment of a drum and of a bass drum was not the appropriate music for the religious scenes in the monastery. The music was so much out of place that some men and women in the audience did not understand the seriousness of the picture and laughed at the monks kneeling and praying. You cannot blame a few uncultured spectators, who were guided by music more appropriate for a comedy scene than for the religious and dramatic scenes of the picture.

The second place was the Orpheum, where they have recently installed sound effects and are improving them day by day. "The Cloister's Touch" was quite a different picture. The orchestra gave us a lively and passionate selection during the first scene of Elsa with her little boy, then with her husband; same with the festival scene at the palace. When the screen showed us the pathetic scenes, the music was soft and sad, very impressive, touching the hearts of the audience. The Orpheum so improved the sound effects that during the different scenes in the monastery, the music was rendered by a real organ, pealing out appropriate sweet notes. It is needless to say that, at the Orpheum, no one laughed at the devotion of the monks.

If the Orpheum increased the beauty of the picture fifty per cent., the Casino made it vulgar, and while the Casino must have some cheap vaudeville acts to draw the crowd, the Orpheum shows only pictures and is always crowded. Please note the difference that the Orpheum is always crowded at 10 cents, while the Casino must have vaudeville to crowd their 5-cent house. This shows plainly that the lovers of good pictures do not care for silly vaudeville and do not object to paying 10 cents. The Casino does not seem to know any better. When they had on the screen "The Luck of Roaring Camp," the piano, drum and bass drum started a lively, not to say a deafening tune, with no respect to the picture, not even when we see the poor widow dead on her bed, with her little boy crying and the kind-hearted men taking a collection for the child. During such a pathetic scene on the screen, the musicians might have abandoned their rag-time playing.

Mr. Gaumont, of Gaumont & Co., Paris, is at present in New York City on business connected with his firm. New American and Canadian branches of the Gaumont Company will be shortly opened.

The Afga Book of photographic formula issued by the Berlin Aniline Works of 215 Water street, New York City, should be in the hands of all readers of the Moving Picture World, who are recommended to apply for a copy at the address given, sending ten cents to pay wrapping and postage. The Afga Book contains 160 pages of formula for the manipulation of standard plates, papers and film and therefore should be valuable as a source of reference to all those en-

Pottsville, Pa.—The Columbia Theatorium, which has been closed for improvements to comply with the new Pennsylvania law, has now been granted permission to reopen by the State Inspector and the Town Council as the safest place in Schuylkill County. Manager Speros will have a grand reopening in a few days. He is also manager of the Lion Theater, the popular moving picture house of the town.

Manager George D. Spragg, of the New Olympic Theater, at Bellaire, Ohio, has invented a device for a film reel that is a big advantage over the ones now in use. It does away with the steel clip on the hub of the reel, which every operator calls every name in the dictionary of "cuss" words. The end of the film is simply dropped on the reel hub and the machine started. It takes up and holds the film with no slips and does not break the ends of the picture off. The reel is also a self-clamping one, requiring no nut or bolt to fasten it to the machine, so that there is never any danger of the operator forgetting to fasten it and having the reel jump off when the machine is in operation.

CHICAGO (continued).—I am sorry to have to be severe on the Chicago exhibitor, but I deem it my duty as a warning to the country exhibitors, who are so easily tempted to follow the ways of the big cities. It would be a disaster if the exhibitors of small towns should fall into the ways of Chicago, where many inviting theaters show pictures in the most careless manner, give their attention to vaudeville, employ poor operators and musicians, and in many cases drop motion pictures to make their houses exclusive 5c. vaudeville places. No 5c. house can give refined vaudeville to make the investment a paying one, consequently the acts must be of very inferior quality.

As my investigations have so far been confined to the downtown district, I hope to find, in other sections of the city, some places deserving a word of praise, and I will be only too happy to give it.

The Mills Wonderland deserves special mention on account of its penny arcade, which should not be overlooked by prospective builders of new motion picture theaters. The building being rather wide and deep, the owners divided the ground floor into two halls—the front hall for the penny arcade—the rear part for the theater proper. The penny arcade is not free to the loafers of the street, but as a foyer for the theater. You must pay your admission before you can enter the penny arcade. This arrangement offers many advantages for both the managers and the visitors.

If the theater is crowded, you are not compelled to wait in a cold lobby; you can enter the warm penny arcade and drop a few pennies in the slot machines, while waiting your turn to enter the theater. The manager profits, because if his front lobby is not crowded with a waiting crowd, the visitors are not scared away with the fear of having to wait too long.

With the present craze for cheap vaudeville, the above arrangement is a good combination to please every one. If Jones goes to the show merely to see the vaudeville, he can remain in the theater during the acts, visit the arcade and drop a few coins in the machines while the pictures are on the screen and waiting for the next vaudeville act. On the other hand, if Smith is a lover of motion pictures, he can amuse himself with the slot machines while the vaudeville is on the stage.

Another advantage not to be overlooked is that a penny arcade is a good rendezvous. In buildings not large enough to afford a penny arcade, I would suggest a few vending slot machines in the lobby. The Chicago theaters allow peddlers to sell candy to the audience. These men, wishing to make believe that they are offering you a great bargain, pack a few pieces of chocolate in much paper and in cardboard boxes of about 3 x 5 inches. The result is that the floors are covered with a litter of dirty paper. As on account of the small sizes of vending machines the candies are wrapped in a thin piece of paper, the floors would not look so dirty if peddlers were kept out of the building and replaced by slot vending machines.

In a theater that I do not wish to name, I found the manager standing at the door, both hands deep in his pockets and a cigar stump in his mouth. Rather disrespectful to the patrons bringing in the nickels.

It seems that both the Motion Picture Patents Company and the Alliance are not enforcing the rules and that the detectives are doing very little for their good wages. I found a theater showing the same day a film of the Great Northern Film Company and two pictures of the Essanay Company. The same practice existed in Philadelphia; the detectives of the M. P. P. Co. made no reports, but a warning in this paper corrected the abuse. Let us hope that the licensed houses of Chicago will also take the warning and discontinue a practice which can cost them their license.

If at The Boston, on Madison street, the music is appropriate for the vaudeville, the musicians pay no attention to the pictures. While one was hammering on the piano as hard as he could, others were beating drums, cymbals, bass drum, etc., while Selig's picture, "A New Cure for Divorce," was on the screen. Such an infernal din was entirely out of place when the husband discovers his wife in the arms of her lover and chases the lover, or when the wife is jealous at the sight of her husband dining with another woman. What is the use of our manufacturers spending so much money on their productions if the effect is to be spoiled by a careless pianist or by exhibitors who do not want to pay the price for good musicians?

In a place on State street, they had no music with the pictures, but I must admit that if the show was gloomy, it was even better than to have music entirely inappropriate.

In a previous letter I praised the admirable film service of Indianapolis, Ind., and I would like to see such a service in Chicago, as the other evening you could see "The Honor of the Family" in three different places within a short distance, while the next day you could see it nowhere in the neighborhood.

I will not be surprised to see a theater on Adams street adopt vaudeville altogether, as the pictures, although of good licensed stock, are shown in the worst possible manner. The operator seems to be constantly in trouble with his light and the pictures fairly dance in the frame. To this add a pianist who for the last two weeks has been hammering the same tunes over and over again, no matter if a comic or a melodrama is on the screen—too much of a self-playing piano.

The exhibitor must be the most irrational creature on the face of this earth or the American public must be much degraded. As I have faith in the public, I blame the exhibitor, yet, as I wish to be fair to everyone and accuse no one without listening to their side of the question, I will ask a few questions of Mr. Exhibitor.

How is it that you change pictures every day and change your vaudeville only twice a week?

If, as you claim, the public does not want any repeaters, are you not giving them repeaters when on Tuesday and Wednesday you show the same vaudeville acts of Monday?

Do you mean to say that the public is so degraded as to refuse to see a second day the Biograph production, "To Save Her Soul," yet is never tired of seeing again and again the silly and cheap dialogue between two colored minstrels?

Some of you will give the same answer I received from an exhibitor, viz.: "We show three reels of pictures per day for 5c., we do not charge for vaudeville; we throw it in." This answer is as silly as the cheap vaudeville acts shown in the place of the man who thought he had to call me down. The above answer is a proof that the vaudeville shown today in moving picture places is so inferior that it cannot even command an admission of 5c. and that no one would visit a motion picture theater if it was not for the attraction of the pictures.

If the exhibitor had any comman sense, if he had business ability about him, he would see that he is wasting at least $75 per week in vaudeville with no results. If the exhibitor had any knowledge of the show busines,s he would apply the money of the vaudeville on a better film service and better musical talent. With better pictures on the screen and with a pianist able to compose his music to follow the pictures, he exhibitor would have a good show.

The exhibitor should not waste his time to find ways to beat his competitors, to give long programs, to give vaudeville, etc., but he should put his whole mind on the pictures and how to show them. If many and many theaters went to the wall, it is not that moving pictures have seen their best days. No. We have standing living monuments, to show that well shown pictures are still in great demand. Mr. Lyman Howe does not need to engage cheap vaudeville acts; he is not afraid to pay the rent of the New York Hippodrome, because he knows that where he shows his pictures he draws the crowds. The success of Mr. Lyman Howe and of the other men following his methods, is due to the fact that he gives life to the pictures by employing an experienced operator, not an amateur, by giving the appropriate music and the proper sound effects.

The average operator pays no attention to the pictures; he turns the machine as he pleases; if he feels good, he turns the crank as on a speed contest when he should slack down for a pathetic scene. If he is tired, he will be slow, even if the picture is an excited chase. Same with the pianist; he will play a lively waltz at a pathetic scene and a funeral march at the time of a chase. He cannot see the difference. He is not paid to use his brains.

The cheap vaudeville has one advantage over moving pictures, that the acts are rehearsed and each act has its own music, consequently, as the pianist has to play the notes written for the said act, he does not allow his imagination to play any old thing. The vaudeville then appears more natural and in many cases is a soothing balm to the infernal music given with the pictures.

The trouble with the exhibitor is that he does not know how to figure. He wants everything as cheap as possible—cheap rent, cheap film service, cheap vaudeville, cheap singers, cheap operators, cheap musicians, cheap ushers, etc.—

everything at a bargain. Mr. Lyman Howe does not want anything cheap; he wants the best of everything, he pays the highest wages and he pays, for one night, a rent which amounts to more than a year's rent of some of the cheap places. Mr. Lyman Howe makes money while the bargain hunters starve for months, waiting for the sheriff to come to close them up.

The public loves motion pictures, and much money can be made by the exhibitor if he will show good pictures and show them in the proper manner. Evidently, if for the sake of showing cheap and silly vaudeville, he gives a poor film show of some old rainstorm pictures, he will soon disgust the public.

If the Chicago moving picture theaters are not keeping pace with the great improvements of to-day, I must say that both renters and manufacturers show a far more progressive spirit, The plant of The Selig Polyscope Company, which had the reputation of being the largest and best equipped of the country, is going to be greatly enlarged, as Mr. Wm N. Selig believes in remaining on top. As soon as the weather moderates, the corner of Western avenue and Irving Park Boulevard will be a beehive of busy masons and carpenters for the erection of the new buildings.

The Essanay folks also do not believe in letting the Eastern manufacturers steal a march on Chicago; they are now located in their new factory on Argyle avenue, and they are preparing plans for new additions. The plant is well located at a short distance from a main branch of the elevated railroad. Their last hit, "The Modern Messenger Boy," is a roaring success, and if the exhibitors had given the proper music and sound effects to the clever pantomime of the messenger boy, the spectators would have rolled under the seats.

The Chicago exchanges are keeping pace with the times The American Film Service have moved to 77 South Clark street, where they occupy elegant quarters on the bank floor.

The Unique Film and Construction Company are moving to more spacious quarters at 81 South Clark street, where I will be pleased to visit them as soon as they are installed

Market street, Philadelphia, can show us the finest collection of motion picture theaters, but their exchanges cannot touch Chicago.

If the Chicago exhibitors, in crowding in cheap vaudeville and cutting off motion pictures, give us the impression that the industry is on the decline, I am much pleased to show that said exhibitors are on the wrong track, otherwise the renters and manufacturers would not spend such large sums to improve and increase their facilities.

I must give credit to the Chicago moving picture theaters for the fight they are waging against the big hats. Illustrated and plain motto slides are constantly thrown on the screen, to remind the ladies of the little fellow sitting behind them. One slide reads: "First row reserved for bald heads," followed by another slide: "Last row reserved for ladies with big hats"; then illustrated slides with the words: "Just to remind the ladies," or, "How would you like to sit behind such a hat?" etc. The war is not fruitless, as the great majority of the ladies remove their hats, although we still find a few selfish women who refuse to remove their headgear.

J. M. B.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—A "World" correspondent attended the banquet given by the Film Exchange to the managers of the moving picture shows of this city, on the 19th ult., at the Gibson. The affair was one of the most elaborate given here for some time, and was attended by fifty persons out of sixty-four invited. The main topic of discussion was the tax proposed in the Ohio Legislature against picture shows. This proposed law provides that there shall be a license payable to the State, and a license payable to the county, in addition to the regular city licenses. The State license is to be $100 and the county license to be $50. The present city license is $150. The city license was formerly $300, but owing to the Association it was reduced to its present figure. A committee was selected to protest against the enactment of such legislation and will attend the session of the State Representatives at Columbus. The regular meetings of the Association are held every Wednesday.

About the only city in the world not having a theater and having a population of 100,000 people, is the city of Covington. across the Ohio River from Cincinnati. J. J. Ryan, the well-known theatrical man of this city, proposes to build a play-house in this city and will devote it to vaudeville.

Heuck's Opera House, for over thirty years a regular theater devoted to melodrama, will on February 19th be converted into a vaudeville and moving picture house.

EDISON NOTES.

"A Trip to Mars" is a short film. The ascent of the professor of chemistry to the planet Mars is not accomplished in a dignified manner, neither is the reception accorded him by the strange creatures who inhabit the planet; and when blown off a Martian's hand into space and landed in his laboratory again, old Mother Earth seemed to resent his return and proceeds to make things interesting for him. There are some good effects in this trick picture. "A Trip to Mars" will be released February 18.

"The Miniature," released February 18, is built around an incident in the life of Andrew Jackson, just before his elevation to the presidency—the famous duel which he fought with Charles Dickinson to avenge an insult offered to Mrs. Jackson. The scenes are Southern, the costumes correct and the acting without a flaw. The duel scene is especially strong, the acting at no time bordering on the melodramatic, but being marked by a dignified reserve. Wm. J. Sorelle, who interprets the character of "Old Hickory," shows a good conception of the part, and in makeup so closely resembles the photograph of the original that were the plot unannounced no difficulty would be experienced in identifying the character depicted. Those who have been wont to criticise Andrew Jackson for the roughness of manner with which he is credited on the pages of history will depart, after seeing the gentleness with which Mr. Sorelle invests the character in the scene wherein he rejoins his wife after the duel, with an entirely changed opinion of the doughty hero of New Orleans.

"A Victim of Bridge," written by E. W. Townsend, is claimed to represent a greater expanse of costuming and scenery than any similar film ever produced, and will be released February 22. It tells a story of life within the sacred precincts of New York's exclusive "Four Hundred," about which Mr. Townsend is qualified to write.

ESSANAY NOTES.

The Essanay's release this week, "The Price of Fame," is founded on an anecdote told about a musical composer who is now living. The composer, who sought to destroy the manuscript of an opera he had been unable to dispose of, is saved by his wife, who rescues the opera from the fire into which it had been thrown and later helps her husband to sell it. The Essanay's story is founded on this incident.

The Essanay's "Aviation at Los Angeles" picture shows close-up views of Paulham, Curtiss, Hamilton, Beachey and other aviators at their machines and in flight. Paulham is seen returning from his 45-mile distance race and is also shown racing with Curtiss for the quick start and speed records. He is also seen taking up Lieut. Beck, of the United States Army, when this latter sought to test the practicability of bomb throwing from an aeroplane during war times. The film will be released February 16.

The Essanay Company will release two more Western pictures the last two weeks in February, "The Cowboy and the Squaw" and "The Mexican's Faith."

"The Hand of Uncle Sam," a patriotic picture, will be released by the Essanay Company at an early date. The film, it is said, contains some scenic surprises.

SELIG NOTES.

It is reported that a new scenic artist was recently added to the Selig plant and his first assignment was to paint the Bay of Genoa for the picture "In the Serpent's Power." The superintendent was anxious to know how he had done his work, and on making the inquiry of the producer if he had finished it, received the reply: "Yes."

"Did he do it well?"

"He did; indeed, it was so vivid that five people left the studio overcome with sea sickness." Nothing like having things true to nature.

Recently a little girl was engaged for a special subject at the plant. When she failed to report one day, inquiries were made as to the reason. In some way the news was spread that there was smallpox in her home and the whole factory was agog, fearing they had been exposed. The next morning, to everyone's surprise, in walks the kid. The office boy goes through the window, the engaging manager crawls under the desk and even the dog, fearing trouble, hiked for the tall and uncut—only the janitor was left in sight. So the youngster said: "We've got a little boy at our home, but ma says it ain't catching if you're careful, and sent me back to work." Her salary was raised.

PATHE FRERES NOTES.

Pathe Freres will release on Friday, February 25, "Ouchard, the Merchant," as a film d'art. This playlet was taken from an old folk-song of the Russians and is played by the new Pathe film d'art company in Moscow. The picture is very dramatic. The life of the Russian peasantry throbs and pulsates through every foot of film and the interest is gripping in its intensity. At the private advance exhibition of the film at the Pathe office the spectators actually held their breath with interest, and when the picture ended an audible sigh of regret that it was over arose from everyone.

Ouchard, the merchant, sees Marcha, a beautiful peasant girl, at a country fair, and by means of a few coins buys her from her drunken father. When the merchant and Marcha reach his rude but ornate hut he forces the girl to drink wine until stupefied, and then, feigning to caress, he cuts from her head the long, raven-black hair which lies across her shoulders in two great braids. The hair is much more valuable than the little it cost him to get it. It happens, however, that in Russia it is a disgrace for a young girl to go with a shorn head, and poor Marcha's anguish when she discovers her dilemma and is thrust out into the road, gives an opportunity for some magnificent acting which is duly appreciated and taken advantage of by the celebrated Russian actress who plays the part.

The perfect control and elaborate precautions which prevail in modern film plants was revealed in a fire which broke out in the factory of Pathe Freres on Wednesday, January 26. It did very little damage, the blaze being confined to the woodwork of one of the halls. The factory is equipped with fire extinguishers and automatic sprinklers and these worked so well that the fire department arrived after it was all over. The big automatic siren whistle gave the alarm and signalled the operatives to leave the building. In ten minutes the entire force was back at work. No stock of any sort was lost.

VITAGRAPH NOTES.

Excitement was caused the other day when the strike scene in "Capital versus Labor" was being enacted outside the Vitagraph Company's studios, in Flatbush. The mob of actors which filled the streets clamoring for admittance to the "factory" and crying out in threatening tones for recognition was so intense and real that someone in the neighborhood notified the police, who came mounted, afoot on a dead run, charging into the crowd with almost disastrous results, and it was a difficult matter to convince them that it was not an actual strike. It was only a natural mistake, however, which anyone might have made, seeing the hundreds of actors in such realistic "makeups" and action.

The announcement made by the Vitagraph Company of America that commencing with the week of February 14, three regular issues per week would be made, has met with instant response from exchanges and exhibitors. The high standard of excellence which the Vitagraph productions have attained make them welcome to motion picture patrons everywhere.

Words of praise from all parts of the country continue to arrive in the Vitagraph mail in reference to the Life of Moses series. There appears to be no question that the series is proving to be the greatest event of its kind in motion pictures since the Passion Play. Numerous exhibitors and showmen are already making arrangements to exhibit the five reels as a complete entertainment, booking it over regular routes of churches and halls. An excellent lecture to accompany the pictures has been prepared and is fursished to exhibitors.

THE PARIS FLOOD.

During the week of February 14, A. G. Whyte will put on the market a very remarkable picture. This will be a picture of Paris shown in panoramic form. Paris, the most beautiful city of the world, spread out in all its grandeur with its great palaces; "The Champs Elysee," "The Bois de Boulogne," "The Louvre," "The Moulin Rouge," and "The Cafe de la Paix," where they say that if you sit for one hour, you are bound to meet anybody whom you may know who may be in Paris. The panoramic view of the River Seine with its remarkable shipping. Then comes a story of the great flood that is now devastating this fairest of man's creations. It is the intention, on the receding of the waters, to have a further picture taken that will show the awful damage inflicted by the terrible flood. Mr. Whyte is to be congratulated on his enterprise in being the first to appreciate and make arrangements accordingly to have this wonderful sight cinematographed.

CORRESPONDENCE.

INDEPENDENT SERVICE AND INDEPENDENT QUALITY.

Pittsfield, Mass., January 22, 1910.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Gentlemen—Having been a subscriber to your valuable publication for many months I have been very much interested in reading the letters from exhibitors regarding the Patents Company and the Independent movement.

At one time I paid a license fee to the Patents Company for three theaters. I mention this to show that I think I was entitled to some consideration from the Patents Company. There are at the present time two picture houses in this city of 35,000 people. My competitor changed his service from nine reels per week to eighteen. I had to do the same in order to get first and second run pictures. Of course we began to show repeaters and very often both houses would show the same pictures the same day. I wrote the Patents Company asking them if they did not think this was one of the evils they had promised to regulate, especially as I had tried to have my competitor agree to nine reels per week. The film exchanges supplying us both had also advised him to change, but he did not care to.

The Patents Company answered my letters after a lapse of a couple of weeks saying that they did not care to interfere with exhibitors especially if the exhibitor was willing to pay a reasonable rental for his service. In other words the Patents Company refused to do anything to relieve a situation that was demoralizing the moving picture public in this city, as the people became disgusted at seeing repeaters at every show.

Seven weeks ago I changed to Independent service and never in my years of experience in the theatrical and moving picture business have I seen such a continuous run of beautiful and interesting pictures as I have shown during that time.

Result: My business has increased 40 per cent. and I am charging ten cents on Saturday nights, against my competitor's five cents, and am "packing them in."

My advice to exhibitors who wish to increase their receipts and decrease their worries, "Find a good Independent film exchange" and watch the results. The Association has never put out the unbroken line of good pictures that the Independents are renting to-day.

Trusting these lines may help some exhibitor who has been paying the $2 weekly and receiving no benefit from the same, I am,

Very truly yours,

A. H. SAWYER.

[The above is one of many letters of a similar tenor that have lately reached us and we are also having the same thing told us by word of mouth. It is our aim to suppress as far as possible comparisons between the work of rival film makers or factions of makers, but we cannot close our eyes to the fact that in very recent months the standard of quality of Independent made moving pictures has risen enormously and begins to challenge comparison with the best films made in this country. For any person, either in print or by word of mouth, to assert the contrary is a violation of veracity. There are just as good moving pictures made by some Independent as by some licensed manufacturers, looking upon the world's product broadly, and the sooner this very clear fact is recognized all round the better we think it will be for the general situation. This time last year the market was a limited one. Now competition has produced the inevitable result of opening up the market and supplying it with high-class quality pictures drawn from many sources.—Eds. M. P. W.]

GRATITUDE FROM THE HEART OF CARL LAEMMLE.

Editor Moving Picture World,
New York, N. Y.:

Dear Sir—My Montreal office was completely burned out this week, the loss being a little over $7,000 with no insurance. Luckily most of my best reels of film had been shipped out to various customers and were therefore saved from the ruin.

My object in writing you is to tell you of the nicest thing that has happened to me since I've been in the moving picture business, so you can pass it along to your readers. And here it is:

No sooner had it become known that my Montreal office was destroyed than the Kleine Optical Company and the Kinetograph Company immediately offered me full use of their Montreal offices until I could get things in shape again.

Mind you, these two companies and the Laemmle Film

Service have been scrapping for each other's business day after day, they being on the licensed side and I on the Independent, yet the minute real trouble bobs up they throw open their doors and say, "Come in, Laemmle, and make yourself at home."

That's what I call broad-minded, fair, square and "white." I have written to them personally, but I want everybody in the film business to know of this little incident. And I also want to express publicly a gratitude that comes right straight from the heart. Sincerely yours,

CARL LAEMMLE, President,
The Laemmle Film Service.

[We were sorry to learn of the burning of the Laemmle office in Montreal and are glad that the best reels were saved from the ruin. The offer of assistance by the Kleine Optical Company and the Kinetograph Company is a very pleasing incident, indeed, and we are happy to join with Mr. Laemmle in giving the utmost publicity to the existence of such nice feelings in the trade. As we point out elsewhere in this week's issue of the Moving Picture World, we observed that at the F. S. A. Convention there were many evidences shown of the existence of these nice feelings on both Associated and Independent sides.—Eds. M. P. W.]

WORKING THE LIMIT.

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 1, 1910.

Moving Picture World.

Gentlemen—I was much interested in a letter in your January 29th issue by "J. E. B.," in regard to the work the Moving Picture Patents Company has done, or, as he says, should have done and have not. And I cannot help but agree with Mr. J. E. B., although perhaps he has stated the case a little strong. I think the Patents Company has done some good, but, here comes the question: Has it been worth two dollars every week? My answer is: "Not to me."

Now, in regard to the question of a population of 4,500 being able to support two moving picture houses. This seems to me to be injudicious and almost beyond consideration. I have had experience in a city of over 20,000 population and would say that at the present time there are two moving picture houses and one combination moving picture and vaudeville house, and that one of these moving picture houses is going behind every day, it being only a matter of a few weeks before it closes. Now, in this city we advertise in the local papers and strive to hold the patronage by making the theater neat and attractive, and also by running new films averaging less than ten days old. Under these conditions, I can hardly see where a population of 4,500 can support two moving picture houses.

I can recall at least three places within 35 miles of here, where, with a population of about 10,000, two moving picture houses failed to prove a paying proposition. Now, I have no doubt in my mind; in fact, I know, that if the M. P. P. Co. were asked to-morrow to grant another license in our city, they would do it And this is the protection we pay two dollars a week for.

I would like to hear the ideas of other exhibitors on this subject through The Moving Picture World.

Wishing you success, I am, Yours respectfully,

M. N. J.

SOLDIERS ENTERTAINED.

Fort Sheridan, Ill., Feb. 2, 1910.

The Moving Picture World.

Dear Sirs—Last evening the two thousand soldiers stationed at Fort Sheridan, Ill., were pleasingly entertained with a choice selection of moving pictures. This program inaugurates a new era in amusement for the soldiers, which is both educational and entertaining. These entertainments will be continued at regular intervals, with programs selected by the H. Davis Reliable Film Exchange, of Watertown, Wis.

Yours truly,

GEORGE D. RICE,.

Chaplain 27th Infantry, in charge of soldier's entertainments.

Rockford, Ill., Jan. 31, 1910.

Editor Moving Picture World.

Dear Sir—Reading Mr. Bolnes' remarks on "Evils of the Film Renting Business," he forgot to state that another great cause of straining sprocket holes, and possibly the principal one, is the operator allowing his sprocket wheels to get out of alignment, necessarily straining one side of the film whenever the film is slashed through to make time on the last show. This generally is caused by the operator's ignorance of how to keep his sprocket in alignment, and occasionally by an operator who thinks he is steadying the film on the curtain by producing a slight tension, ignoring the fact that if he runs his machine fast he will strain the sprocket holes. If every operator paid attention to the tension springs by not keeping them too tight, and was careful to keep the sprocket wheels in alignment, and every exhibitor was forced to use a Lang rewinder, or one similar, independent of his machine, which should have a take-up; also if an 11-inch reel was enforced, the exchanges would be several thousand dollars ahead by the end of a year, and the exhibitor who cannot afford a high-priced service would have better films in good condition. It's rather a sad criticism to estimate that 50 per cent. of the operators are mechanically ignorant and 50 per cent. of the wise ones are careless. The way splices are made in films tells a silent story. Yours very truly,

W. CLARKE.

Western Multiscope Company,

203 Hooper Block, Salt Lake City, Utah, Jan. 26, 1910.

The Moving Picture World, New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen—We beg to announce our first release for on or about February 10 next. The reel will run about 1,000 feet, showing views of Salt Lake City; Saltair, where the great Jeffries-Johnson fight will take place; the arena where the contest will occur; the principals, and other interesting scenes and events.

We are aiming to establish a bi-weekly release, and will make definite announcement as to dates in the near future.

Your mention of these facts in your paper would be much appreciated. Very truly,

THE WESTERN MULTISCOPE COMPANY,
Briant S. Young, General Manager.

Arlington, Wash., Jan. 26, 1910.

The Moving Picture World.

Dear Editor—Permit me as a reader and a moving picture theater manager to ask for a small space in your journal in order to expose the United Travelogue Company, who present the "Cherry Mine Disaster," a series of 36 slides and a lot of hot-air advertisements, red letter posters and the like, leading patrons of your house to believe that you have something grand for them, and who, after seeing the slides, leave your house in disgust. I say to you, Mr. Moving Picture Manager, if you value the good-will of your patrons and want to sustain your reputation for a good moving picture house, leave the United Travelogue Company severely alone. It will take me a month to overcome the bad effect of their appearance in my house.

For the good of the moving picture business,

JOHN LAURETSEN,
Gem Theater, Arlington, Wash.

We PRODUCE Slides That PRODUCE Results

NOVELTY PUZZLETTES

"The Sensation of 1910"

NOVELTY ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES

"The Best on the Market"

PRODUCE your inquiry and we'll PRODUCE our catalogues describing Our Products. Let us show you

NOVELTY SLIDE COMPANY

221 East 53d Street 10 East 14th Street

NEW YORK CITY

MOTION PICTURE PIANO MUSIC

This is a book of descriptive music, regular sheet music size, and arranged for both hands. Specially selected, arranged and composed by one of the best descriptive Pianists in the U. S., who for the past twenty years has been Musical Director in all lines of Theatrical Productions. This work is the result of actual experience, and is now being used in hundreds of M. P. Theatres. Contains music, for all probable scenes, actions, characters, etc., and its suggestions are entirely practical. Increases the value of YOUR SHOW 100%. Descriptive circular sent free to anyone upon request. This book sent promptly upon receipt of price. $1.00 Remit either by P. O. or Express Order, Draft or Check to

GREGG A. FRELINGER

1009 Ferry Street Lafayette, Ind.

BIOGRAPH FILMS

TRADE MARK TRADE MARK

RELEASED FEBRUARY 7, 1910.

The Course of True Love

A STORY OF WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN.

That the course of true love ne'er ran smooth is so often evinced that it is exceptional indeed that love's pathway is strewn with roses devoid of thorns. Miss Florabel Thurston is betrothed to Ben Lawrence, a young artist. One day while at work in his studio, a poor little flower seller calls to sell her blossoms. She is cold and hungry, and Lawrence sits her down before the lunch spread for him, but which he has not touched. Friends calling, he pulls a screen around the poor girl that she might finish her lunch unnoticed. It happens that Miss Thurston also calls and, finding the flower girl, leaves abruptly without explanation, until she arrives home and writes breaking off the engagement. The flower girl, learning of the trouble she has innocently caused, hastens to right it. Explanations bring a reconciliation.

APPROXIMATE LENGTH, 987 FEET.

RELEASED FEBRUARY 10, 1910.

The Duke's Plan

A FRUITLESS ATTEMPT TO SEPARATE KINDRED SOULS.

One may as well attempt to alter the course of the moon as to effectually tear asunder two hearts that pulsate in unison. Fiametta, the daughter of the Duke, is loved by a young man, the scion of a noble but impoverished house. His suit is met with disfavor by the Duke, who plans to get rid of him in a manner that would not implicate him. To this end he has his trusted guards trump up a false conspiracy against himself, have the lover find it out, who in order to gain his, the Duke's, favor will run into a danger that will prove fatal. Fiametta, learning of the plan, puts herself in her lover's place, and is about to fall a victim, when her identity is revealed. The Duke, realizing the strength of her love for the young nobleman, yields consent.

APPROXIMATE LENGTH, 985 FEET.

A Full Description of these Subjects will be Found on Another Page

Release days of Biograph Subjects—MONDAY and THURSDAY

Get on Our Mail List and Keep Posted. Write for Our Descriptive Circulars

BIOGRAPH COMPANY

Licensee of the Motion Picture Patents Co.

11 EAST 14th STREET :: NEW YORK

GEORGE KLEINE, Selling Agent for Chicago (52 State St., Chicago, Ill.).

FILMS HOWARD MOVING PICTURE CO. FILMS

Repair Work a Specialty. Agents for Motiograph, Power's and Edison Machines. Supplies and Sundries.

564 Washington Street, - - Boston Mass.

Established 1894. (Opposite Adams House). Incorporated 1908.

Feature Films For Sale

200 Reels of high class films at slaughter prices.

SAXE FILM EXCHANGE

1416 Broadway - New York

MANAGER

with 8 years experience in film renting department, at present employed, desires change of position

Address, A. M. A., Moving Picture World

SLIDES of Highest Quality

LATEST SONG SETS

I Didn't Mean to Make You Cry.
Every Girl I Get the Other Fellow Steals.
Betsy Ross.
Kitty Gray.
The Flower of Singapore.
The Spot that My Heart Calls Home.
The Wreck of the Good Ship Love.
In The City Where Nobody Cares.
I Rather Say Hello Than Say Good Bye.
I Love My Steady But I'm Crazy About My Once In Awhile.
Candy
I Have Got Something In My Eye.
Kitty.
Chasing The Eagle.

High class slides made and colored to order from prints and negatives

Scott & Van Altena
59 Pearl St., New York City

NEW SLIDES

For the Following Songs—JUST OUT

The Girl Behind the Counter is the Girl For Me.
The Moonlight, the Rose and You.
Her Name is Mary Donohue
Busy Little Cupid
When the Daisies Bloom.
Shaky Eyes.
Mandy How Do You Do.
Margarita.
Love Me Dreamy Eyes.
Nora Malone.
By the Light of the Silvery Moon.
There's Nothing Else in Life Like Love, Love, Love.
Take Me Back to Sunshine Land.
Mary you're a Big Girl Now.
My Dream of Long Ago.
When I Fell in Love With You.
Rosenbaum.
When You've Won the Only Girl You Love.
Just a Girl Like You.
In the Harbor of Sunshine and Love.

DeWITT C. WHEELER

120 W. 31st St., N. Y. City

Canadian Exhibitors

Looking for a first-class film service, write the Crystal Palace Film Exchange for particulars. We handle both Licensed and Independent films and can give you a right up-to-date service. We own and operate the most successful Moving Picture Theaters in Canada.

Located at

141 Yonge Street, Toronto.
331 St. Lawrence Blvd., Mont.
27 King Street East, Hamilton.

Agents for Power's and Edison Machines.

Crystal Palace Film Exchange

141 Yonge Street. Toronto, Can.

Are You from Missouri?

Others give Promises We give Perfection Service

We RELEASE every week all of the following films: Imp, Itala, Actophone, Ambrosio, Bison (two reels), Eclair, Great Northern, Lux, Centaur, Pantograph and others, and we can prove it to your satisfaction. Our customers are satisfied. ARE YOU?

Get in Touch with the REAL People

PHILADELPHIA PROJECTION CO., = 44 N. 9th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Member N. I. M. P. A.

STORIES OF THE FILMS

BIOGRAPH COMPANY.

THE DUKE'S PLAN.—Love laughs at locksmiths, surmounts obstacles, derides opposition, braves dangers, and in fact dominates every material and spiritual force. One may as well attempt to alter the course of the moon as to effectually tear asunder two hearts that pulsate in unison. This Biograph subject shows to what extreme a sweetheart will go for the one she loves. It meant the yielding of her very life to save him, and such an act of daring should and will reap reward, for fate, although capricious, is just. Fiametta, the daughter of the Duke de Boisette, is sought by Raoul, a young nobleman. Raoul, being the scion of a noble but impoverished house, his suit met with disfavor by the Duke, who has other plans. The young people, however, deeply love each other, and cunning are the many stratagems they devise to met clandestinely. On one occasion, he meets a couple of peddlers, and bargains with them to attire himself as one of them and go to the palace in that guise. His disguise is penetrated by the Duke, who has him ejected. These subtle moves induce the Duke to scheme to get rid of Raoul. But he, being of noble birth, the Duke dare not do so blatantly, hence, he summons several of his loyal guards, and concocts a most unique plan. They are to arrange a false conspiracy against the Duke, and have one of the men reveal it accidentally to Raoul. Raoul will, of course, report it, anxious to gain the Duke's favor, and he will send Raoul to secure names and facts. They will discover in him a traitor at the meeting and dispose of him summarily. The scheme works. A soldier at the inn, pretending drunkenness, drops a letter calling for action to crush the Duke. Raoul finds it and hastens to the Duke with the intelligence, who sends him to the place designated in the letter. Fiametta has overheard enough to alarm her, so she determines to warn him of his danger. Realizing that she must not be recognized at the inn, she bargains with her page for a suit of his clothes. Disguised as a boy, she enters the tap-room and tries to persuade Raoul from his mission. He is adamant, for to shirk his duty would brand him a coward. Unable to shake his determination, she drops a sleeping potion in his drink, and taking his mask and cloak, goes to put herself in his place. She is, of course, mistaken for Raoul, and would have been despatched, had he not been revived by the landlord, and assuming the truth of the situation, rushes to her rescue, at the same time sending word to the Duke. When the Duke appreciates the extent of her love for Raoul, he hands her over to him with his paternal blessing.

THE COURSE OF TRUE LOVE.—That the course of true love ne'er ran smooth is so often evinced that it is exceptional, indeed, that love's pathway is strewn with roses devoid of thorns. Trifles light as air become heavy-weights of doubt, which are always intensified by tales of sympathizing friends in whom we confide. There is never a ruffle, but what we have pointed out to us parallels with their disastrous outcome. Of course we know that man's unfaithfulness is woman's greatest sorrow, and Mrs. Thurston suffered this, for her husband was much given to recklessness, and night after night she had waited his return from the club, the theater, or elsewhere, in an intoxicated condition, often finding evidences of his perfidy. Their daughter, Florabel, is betrothed to Ben Lawrence, a prosperous young artist, and the day for the wedding has been set. Lawrence is a good natured chap, well liked by his colleagues and a favorite in the circle in which he moved. A hard and ambitious worker, we find him in his studio, at a canvas, too engrossed to partake of the frugal lunch his valet has placed for him. While thus engaged, a little flower-girl enters to sell her flowers. He doesn't want any, but finding the poor girl faint and cold from hunger, he makes her sit and eat the lunch that was laid for him. She has hardly started eating when he hears the approach of someone, and to relieve her embarrassment, he draws a screen around her. It is a party of his artist friends, who have come to congratulate him on his engagement. Meanwhile, Lawrence's fiancee has started with some friends for the studio, arriving there just after the artists. Florabel espies the flower-girl seated behind the screen, and as he is working the portrait of a man, reasons that she is not a mere model. She leaves the studio abruptly, and telling her fears to her mother, has them impelled by her mother's own story of grief. Lawrence calls to learn why his sweetheart left the atelier so suddenly. In response he receives a curt note to the effect that "she cannot see him and trusts he will not call again." Quite beside himself as to the cause, it dawns upon him. Throwing her note upon the table, he proceeds to pack his belongings, intending to go away, when the flower-girl enters. She learns that she is the innocent cause of his trouble, and hastens to right the wrong. Meeting Florabel, she explains all and they hurry back to catch Lawrence just as he is leaving the place. They are reconciled, while the poor flower-girl looks on and thinks of what might have been, for she loved the kind-hearted artist.

EDISON MFG. CO.

HIS JUST DESERTS.—The scenes of this picture are laid among the workers in a Southern iron foundry, and the piece is full of what is called atmosphere, as well as action. The first scene shows a young moulder and his bride finishing breakfast, and his start for work. He has hardly gone when a fellow moulder, one of the men who prides himself on his powers of fascination, tries to get up a flirtation with the young wife. She closes the gate in his face, gently at first, and then with a decision which brings a laugh from his fellow workers, who appreciate the situation. This should have been enough to convince him that his attentions were not welcome, but, his conceit having been wounded, he follows the girl into the house and only leaves when she defends herself against his familiarity by following up the sound slap she gives his face with an unpleasant touch of a hot flatiron.

This, of course, results in bad feelings between him and the young husband, and after we have witnessed some of the processes of making the mould, pouring the molten metal, etc., in the foundry, we see the male flirt, apparently by accident, spill molten metal over the young husband as he crouches at work over a flask. The scene then shifts to the bedside of the injured man, with the young wife ministering to him. There is a knock at the door, and when she opens it the other man enters. He professes great sorrow for his past behavior and insists that the burning of his fellow workman was purely accidental. But he grows too warm in his endeavors to comfort the young wife, and when she resists him the injured husband gets up from the bed, and a fight between the two ensues, which is a striking bit of realism.

News of this reaches the ears of the other foundrymen through two of their number to whom the young wife has confided her trouble, and the men decide to throw the scoundrel out. In a spectacular scene before the great furnace of molten metal he is charged with misconduct and invited to go. When he refuses a struggle ensues, and in an attempt to strike another of the men he loses his balance and falls beneath the stream of molten metal which pours from the furnace. There is a flash of light and steam and the man is seen writhing on the ground in agony. He is lifted to his feet, but the torture makes him break from his supporters, and he falls at their feet dead, having received "His Just Deserts" through his own act.

THE SURPRISE PARTY.—A surprise party is always an enjoyable affair, particularly in a small town where everyone knows everyone else. The one pictured by the Edison Company took the form of a donation party at the minister's. Refreshments were ordered from the city and a jolly time planned. Notice was received of the arrival of the box of refreshments at the station, and Uncle Bill was sent after it. When he arrived at the station he met an old crony who was there for a box that had been shipped to the local theater. After the boxes were loaded on the wagons, the old men went for a drink, and two of the village boys, noticing that the two wagons were exactly alike, conceived the idea of changing the horses. This was done, and when Uncle Bill and his chum returned they each drove off with the wrong wagon. The mistake was not discovered until the box was opened at the minister's, and then, horrors!—instead of containing good things to eat it was full of animals. Meanwhile the boys at the theater were having a splendid time with the contents of the minister's box.

THE BAD MAN FROM RILEY'S GULCH.—This picture shows the typical bad man of the Western mining and cattle regions getting ready for his bullying of the community by imbibing courage from a bottle, or several bottles. Sallying forth to the supply store of the town, he is not long in getting into an argument and bluffing everyone from the proprietor to a formidable looking man. Filled with the spirit of bravado he next visits the hotel of the place, and we see him there engaged in a wordy dispute with some men who are playing cards. One of the occupants of the room annoys him by singing. The bad man pushes him around, to the annoyance of the others in the room, who remonstrate against the disturbance. This starts a row, at the conclusion of which the proprietor's little wife, who has heard the rumpus, enters the room with her sewing materials and advances upon the foe. Snapping her shears in his face, she pours forth a volley of language which completely flabbergasts the astounded bully. At the end of the picture we see him, like the proverbial barnyard fowl who has been whipped by the bantam rooster, with fallen crest, the butt of everyone's jests.

AN EQUINE HERO.—This picture deals with the heroism of the beautiful black saddle horse of Mrs. Wood, a wealthy New York lady. The horse is introduced in the story on a day when its fair owner is showing the animal to her visiting friends at her country home, at which time he displays some wonderfully clever tricks. The next morning, after the lady and her husband return from a horseback ride and while Don, the hero of the story, is being "rubbed down," a surly groom abuses him. He is caught in the act by Mr. Wood, who knocks him down and discharges him. In a spirit of revenge the groom that night sets fire to the barn. Don sees the barn in a blaze, releases himself from his box stall and saves his companions in the stable by releasing them also. After the horses are all out of the barn, he rings the farm bell calling the help to extinguish the fire.

A QUEEN OF THE BURLESQUE.—A cheap burlesque show is coming to the little village, and out of pure mischief the village billposter has posted one of the "queens" on the billboard next to the church. While the children are delighted with its beauty, the older members of the congregation are thrown into a panic, especially when the feminine half of the congregation discovers that the men folks seem to require considerable study of the poster before making their decision as to its demerits. One of the small bills of the play, depicting a typical burlesque girl, falls into the hands of a group of children the next morning. Through the desire of each one to get possession of it, they get into a squabble just outside the gate of a spinster of the town. She takes the picture away, after a lecture to the children on their depravity, and out of disappointment and anger they plan a terrible revenge. This same spinster is beloved by a deacon of the church, and the children's revenge turns out so successfully that the love affair is broken off. Just what the children accomplish with a pair of stockings they have stolen from the old maid's clothes line and stuffed into terrible shapelessness under the lee of her own fence, can better be told by the picture than in words. Enough to say that it provides a scene which, for uniqueness and extravagant humor, it would be difficult to surpass.

ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.

THE PRICE OF FAME. Enrico Vacinni, an obscure composer, is writing his masterpiece. He and his wife, Maria, occupy rooms in a tenement building in the Ghetto district of New York, and notwithstanding their poverty are happy in hopes for the future. Maria makes the living in sewing for Israel Eisenstein, a heartless sweatshop worker.

The kind of a start you make in the moving picture business determines whether or not you come home under the wire a winner.

THE EDISON KINETOSCOPE

is a moving picture machine you can depend upon to bring home the money every time, build you up a profitable patronage and not eat up your profits on repairs.

The Edison Kinetoscope gives clear, steady pictures and will outwear any other motion picture machine made. Start right.

Write to-day for booklet giving full particulars, and copy of the Edison Kinetogram.

EDISON FILMS

Releases of February 8 and 11

RELEASE OF FEBRUARY 8

THE LIVINGSTON CASE

A detective story, much on the order of the famous "Sherlock Holmes" creation, is depicted on this film. By a process of inference and deduction a famous detective follows the clues of an apparent murder and extracts an unwilling confession from a "suspect." Highly dramatic from the start, the plot is well sustained and works out to a startling climax. An extraordinary film.

No. 6586 Code, VESICABUNT App. Length, 995 feet

RELEASE OF FEBRUARY 11

AN EQUINE HERO

A clever film which serves to introduce Don Fulano, the world's greatest living educated horse. The tricks that he performs show that he possesses almost human intelligence. As a climax to the film he releases his stable-mates from their stalls in a burning barn (fired by a revengeful groom) and rings the fire bell. A film to interest and delight any audience.

No. 6587 Code, VESICAIRES App. Length, 725 feet

A QUEEN OF THE BURLESQUE

A unique comedy with a laugh all the way through. The advent of a burlesque show in a small town and the havoc created among the male elements of the population by the posters of the "burlesque queens" furnish the theme, which eventually leads to an incident involving a spinster's reputation. A hilariously funny film.

No. 6588 Code, VESTIARES App. Length, 260 feet

Releases of February 15 and 18

RELEASE OF FEBRUARY 15

THE PRESIDENT'S SPECIAL (Melodramatic)

No. 6589 Code, VESTIAIRO App. Length, 950 feet

RELEASES OF FEBRUARY 18

THE MINIATURE

No. 6590 Code, VESTIARIAN App. Length, 725 feet

A TRIP TO MARS

No. 6591 Code, VESTIBULAR App. Length, 265 feet

ORDER DISPLAY POSTERS OF THESE FILMS FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR THE A. B. C. COMPANY, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

EDISON MANUFACTURING CO.

MAIN OFFICE and FACTORY: 72 LAKESIDE AVE., ORANGE, N. J.

New York Office: 10 Fifth Avenue. Chicago Office: 90 Wabash Ave.

KINETOSCOPE JOBBERS

Geo. Breck, 70 Turk St., San Francisco.
Howard Moving Picture Co., 564 Washington St., Boston.
Yale Film Exch. Co., 622 Main St., Kansas City.
P. L. Waters, 41 E. 21st St., New York City.
Lake Shore Film & Supply Co., 314 Superior Ave., N. E., Cleveland.
Chas. A. Calehuff, 4th & Green Sts., Philadelphia.

Office for United Kingdom: Edison Works, Victoria Road, Willesden, N. W., England.

Dealers in All Principal Cities

O. T. Crawford's Film Service

ACKNOWLEDGED

"BETTER THAN THE BEST"

Let us convince you that we can give you just the service you require. Better write to-day.

O. T. CRAWFORD FILM EXCHANGE CO.

1401 Locust Street, ST. LOUIS, MO.
319 Fourth Avenue, LOUISVILLE, KY.

OPERA CHAIRS

That Stand the TEST

The hard usage accorded opera chairs makes the selection of a chair of PROVEN QUALITIES essential.

Our Opera Chairs are conceded to be the IDEAL seating, as they are comfortable, permanently noiseless and combined with a distinctive style and excellence that is unequalled.

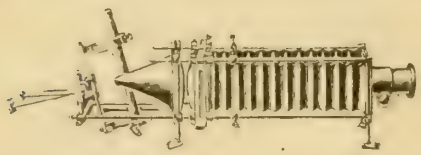
HIGHEST QUALITY LOWEST PRICES

Write for Catalogs

AMERICAN SEATING COMPANY

Dept. V.
215 Wabash Ave.
CHICAGO

NEW YORK
BOSTON
PHILADELPHIA



Stereopticons $10 50 000 Tickets $3.50; Automatic Arc Lamp 15c; Slide Mats 1c; Stereopticon Lenses 50c; Economizers $30; Slide Carriers 40c

FILMS RENTED, SOLD OR EXCHANGED

L. HETZ, 302 E. 23d Street New York

SPECIAL PRICES TO THE TRADE

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a space saver, life saver and money saver. Shipped built up. It is the only sanitary theatre chair. Used by Keith, Proctor and Poli. It folds up automatically and is revolving, making the theatre all aisles. It is a friend to the public.

Send for our circular A. Write today.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO.
CANAL DOVER, OHIO

Films For Sale 50 new reels of perfect film, extra good condition, to close out, at $18 50

Second hand Edison machines for sale at a bargain. Parts to fit all machines in stock

MAYER SILVERMAN, 322 Fulton Bldg., Pittsburg, Pa.

WANTED—100 Reels of Film: must be in good condition; also Motion Picture Machines, Gas Outfits, Slides, etc. Send list. State lowest prices. Address

MAX

526½ Washington Street, Portland, Ore.

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS

1402 Broadway

FORT WAYNE, INDIANA. 733

The famous opera is almost completed and Enrico's keen and sensitive temperament is strung to the highest tension so that, though he loves his wife dearly, he often flies into a rage over trivial misunderstandings. In one instance (the story opens here) the clatter of Maria's sewing machine so annoys him that he finally bustles machine, wife and all into the hallway.

Antone Giotti, an Italian youth, and his mother, occupy rooms next to those of Vicinni, and the other now appears on the scene. For a long time young Giotti has secretly worshipped Maria, but has never made any advances for fear of Enrico. However, when he sees Maria, apparently brutally treated by her husband, he confesses his love to Maria, but is laughingly repulsed.

The opera is at length finished and Enrico starts out to sell it. He calls on one musical director, but the great man will not give him an audience and he returns to his rooms in despair. In a fit of melancholy he is about to throw the manuscript into the fire when his wife restrains him and rescues the manuscript, but receives severe burns for her troubles. In an effort to bind up her hands with a piece of newspaper, Maria reads that the National Musical Society offers a prize of $10,000 for an opera, and resolves to enter her husband's in the contest. Enrico has left the rooms, and when Maria steals out, carrying the sacred manuscript, she forgets the pain in her burned hands, so hopefully expectant is she that Enrico's way to fame is assured.

It is after much pleading, however, that the busily occupied directors of the society deign to look over the manuscript, but when the pianist plays a few bars of the overture they are all thunderstruck and taking her name and address promise her that even should her husband's opera not win the Grand Prize, he shall be liberally rewarded.

When Maria arrives home again she meets Antoine Giotti in the hallway. The Italian youth, unable to restrain his emotions and passionate love, dashes into her room with her, and a moment later when Enrico returns he finds his wife in Giotti's arms. Enrico orders them both from the house. In vain Maria endeavors to clear herself, and after many fruitless attempts to effect a reconciliation, leaves the room.

Several days later Enrico is visited by the directors of the National Musical Society with the news that he has won the Grand Prize!

Two years later we see Enrico Vacinni, now a famous impresario, at a Smart Set reception. He is the lion of the hour and is presented with a gold baton. Time and again he has thought of Maria, but is unable to forgive her perfidy, and an hour later when he meets her as he is descending the steps of the Van Ness mansion, he refuses to recognize her as they meet, but when he turns from the auto to which he has conducted one of the lady guests, he excuses himself and starts running after Maria. She eludes him, however, and stealing to her room attempts to sew. Her hands, which have never quite healed of their burns, ache so that she is unable to work, and the last straw of hope is taken away when the unpaid-for machine is taken away by the agents of the company from whom she purchased it.

A day or two later Enrico receives a message from old Mrs. Giotti, stating that Antoine is dying and that he desires to see Enrico. The latter gloomily leaves to interview the dying lad and there learns from young Giotti that Maria was not to blame, that he alone was responsible.

The enraged Vacinni can hardly restrain from tearing the dying man to pieces, but finally forgives him and hurries out to again search for Maria, his heart and brain filled with remorse.

From Eisenstein, the Jew, he learns of Maria's whereabouts, and hurries to the dismal tenement room. The poor, faithful woman has given up all hope and laid herself down to die when Enrico bursts into the room, falls on his knees and begs her to forgive him. The little woman staggers to her feet, trembling.

"It ees too late, Senor," she says, shaking her head. But her head drops on her bosom and with a sob she stretches out her arms to Vacinni. With a glad cry the composer takes her to his heart, then waves his hand to the open door. The clouds are lifted at last.

WESTERN CHIVALRY.—Mr. Josh Banks, a ranchman, receives word that his niece, a pretty Chicago girl of eighteen, is on her way to make them a visit. The news immediately electrifies things down in the cowpunchers' bunkhouse, and all the boys begin sprucing up to be presented to the fair one.

She arrives, casts a withering glance at the big rawboned fellows waiting to meet her and sweeps off on her uncle's arm into the house, while the latter looks back and winks his eye at the boys. They are dumbfounded and like back to the bunkhouse completely crushed.

One of them passing the front porch in the afternoon finds her reading a book and hurries off to tell the other cowboys. They all slip around to make another try, but when they confront her she flounces up and slips into the house again. A moment later "the old man" with a grim look steps out and remarks pointedly that if certain of his "good for nawthin' cow-punchin' greasers don't fade into the background" he'll do something.

Finally the boys rebel and at the points of their guns force Banks to bring out the lady and introduce her to the bunch. She, seeing the joke, laughs heartily, but tells them she will yet get even with them.

None of them are aware that Jane is an expert horsewoman, and when they see her astride the "Red Devil," a mustang especially noted for his caloric temperament, all run toward her. But the mustang kicks up his heels and turning, swings into the road, the apparently helpless girl clinging to the saddle horn.

Pursuit follows, the little mustang fairly eating space and the cowboys fast losing ground. However, the foremost in the chase, after spurring his horse to its best efforts, draws upon the "Red Devil" and finally is running abreast. With no visible effort he leans across to the girl, and catching her about the waist, swings her into his own saddle. When they pull up and the frightened cowboys gather around she laughs at them scornfully, remounts the "Red Devil" and races them back to the ranch house.

But Jane has shown the boys what she can do and has tested cowboy courage. Then she tells them that thereafter she is going to be a "good fellow" and asks permission to be a full fledged member of their fraternity, which scheme, of course, is happily agreed to.

BITTER-SWEET.—We can easily presume that the domestic life of young Mr. and Mrs. Sweet has been somewhat strained. A storm has been brewing for some time and when her spouse comes in to dinner one evening, an hour later than the appointed time, Mrs. Sweet thinks she has sufficient cause to start an altercation. Sweet has brought with him certain peace offerings, a new hat and a bunch of carnations, but these he stows away until he has reconnoitered in the vicinity of the enemy, the dining room. The enemy is seated in a chair at the dining table glaring at the clock, each passing minute inspiring her to promise of more baleful inflictions on her belated husband.

"Good evening, dearie," says Sweet, as he enters. No answer. Mrs. Sweet, rising, storms at him, and when he seats himself at the table, Mrs. Sweet orders the bewildered maid to remove every vestige of food from the table.

"Well, I'll be—" breathes Jack under his breath. "I say, old girl, what's the row?" Again Mrs. Sweet flies at him and finally flounces out of the room.

Sweet follows her into the reception hall, where they have a good heart to heart talk. It finally ends when Mrs. Sweet announces seriously that she is going home to mother. Sweet, now provoked and quite beside himself at his wife's temper, opens the door and haughtily bows her out, but when she finds her husband is not joking, she stamps her foot, removes her coat and hat and tries another tack.

Of course she will go! But first they must have a division of the household goods. Jack agrees and pulling out a notebook and pencil orders her to begin setting apart the furniture. Mrs. Sweet selects this, Jack that. Mrs. Sweet wants the mantel clock, Jack selects the other bric-a-brac. From room to room they go, quarreling and wrangling over who shall have this and who shall have that, until they reach the bedroom.

Jack pulls from the closet a trunk and Mrs. Sweet opens it. Suddenly Jack looks up at the picture of their dead baby, a little cherub of three, then turns thoughtfully away and drops into a chair, thinking deeply. In the meantime his wife has opened the trunk and is laying out certain of the baby's clothes. From the trunk they remove tenderly the baby's playthings and as memory turns back to the bright happy days when baby was with them, tears dim their eyes. They forget their quarrel, the division of the household goods, everything!

Then the two slowly look up into each other's eyes. The notebook falls from Jack's hands, Mrs. Sweet bursts into sobs and stretches out her arms to her husband. Jack tenderly takes her to his heart as the picture closes.

GAUMONT.

(George Kleine.)

THE GOLDEN LILY.—An old fiddler, whose musical efforts are not appreciated by people passing him by the wayside, and who is at the point of starvation, takes refuge in the cathedral. Casting himself down before the shrine of the Blessed Virgin, he implores her succor. He plays his violin before her image that she may judge whether his talents are worthy of appreciation.

Miraculously she appears before him and gives him her benign benediction. The poor old man is completely overcome with awe and emotion, but Mary bids him to be of good cheer and to prove her recognition of his sincerity and devotion she presents him with a golden lily. Then she disappears from sight.

The old fiddler, in dire distress, takes the golden lily to a goldsmith's to sell it and thus obtain money to buy bread. The goldsmith and his wife become very suspicious as to how the old man came into possession of so valuable an article. They summon the guards who seize the old fiddler and take him and the goldsmith and his wife before the Cardinal. The case is presented to his Lordship who decides that the old man had stolen the lily, which is confiscated to the church. However, in order to give him a chance to prove his innocence, he is conducted before the Virgin's shrine, where he is instructed to play his violin again, so that the miracle may be repeated should the Divine Mary so elect. Then before the Cardinal, monks, friars, ladies and soldiers, the Blessed Virgin once more appears, blesses the assembled throng and once more presents the golden lily to the old fiddler with her divine benediction. There is now great rejoicing and the old fiddler is carried on the shoulders of the cheering crowds, as the hero of the miracle of the Golden Lily.

ASCENDING THE JURA MOUNTAINS.—This superb scenery is taken from the mountain railroad as the train ascends a very steep grade. The landscape effects are truly marvelous. Travelers from all parts of the world go to Switzerland to enjoy the scenery and no part of it is more beautiful than that of the Jura Mountains, between Martigny and Chamounix. The peaceful, fertile valleys, the verdant slopes up to the dark pine forests, the rugged, precipitous mountain sides, the rushing torrents of snow water from the dazzling white peaks above, showing clear against the azure sky, all are peculiar to Switzerland, the "Fairyland" of Europe. In no manner can this exquisitely varied landscape be better appreciated than by witnessing an exhibition of this grand film, "Ascending the Jura Mountains."

CIVIL WAR.—This stirring and patriotic military drama is descriptive of events which transpired in France about the time of the French Revolution. The Count de Fierlys, a staunch adherent of the King, leaves his family and castle to join his supporters at a place known as Tregenec's Menhir, where an ancient cross surmounts a cone-shaped monument.

There he divides among them the insignia or badges of the King and also some arms and ammunition.

One of these men, however, is a traitor, and goes to the revolutionary tribunal, where he betrays the Count de Fierlys, giving exact information as to his whereabouts and also reveals his plans. This committee promptly sends an officer to General Hoche, in command of the revolutionary army, with the following message:

"The Committee hereby orders General Hoche to arrest the Count de Fierlys immediately, as he is charged with rebellion, and all his goods are to be confiscated."

The young officer bearing this message is attacked and wounded by the Royalists, but manages to make good his escape and takes refuge at a castle, where he begs for hospitality and protection.

This castle happens to be that belonging to the Count de Fierlys. Lady Fierlys and her daughter, after some hesitation, decide to shelter the Republican officer, and cure him of his wounds. After his recovery, Lady de Fierlys finds it prudent to send him away as her daughter seems to have fallen in love with the young man.

He accordingly departs and rejoins the Republican army, just when Count de Fierlys has been arrested and sentenced to death. Count de Fierlys is turned over to the care of this young officer, who is ordered to hold him under arrest.

The young officer, after he has conducted the Count to the prison, secretly proposes to him a means whereby he can effect his escape.

Lady de Fierlys and her daughter, arriving at this time, add their entreaties to endeavor to persuade the husband and father to take flight.

The noble Count, however, is too high-minded and refuses, preferring to die rather than to place the officer on guard in a dangerous and dishonorable position.

The next day de Fierlys is led to the spot where he first assembled his Royalist supporters, is placed with his back to the monument, and facing a file of Republican soldiers, heroically meets his death, thus adding one more victim to the horrors of civil war.

SERVANT FROM THE COUNTRY.—In this picture story, Mary, the new maid, has just arrived from the country, as her appearance very plainly indicates.

Everything is done to make her feel thoroughly at home and Mary soon enters into possession of the premises.

Mr. Lawrence, the master of the house, wishing to treat his wife to a pleasant surprise, brings home a live lobster to be cooked for supper.

Mary does not feel kindly towards the enraged crustacean, which approaches her with menacing claws outspread. She accordingly pitches it out of the window.

This angers her employers, of course, but they decide to overlook the offense, as servants are scarce. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence, having a box at the theater, leave home after carefully instructing Mary to give a suit of clothes to the tailor to be pressed. They leave the money with her to pay for the work and tell her to be sure to get a receipt from the tailor when he calls. Soon a beggar knocks at the door. Mary mistakes him for the expected tailor, gives him the suit of clothes and takes his receipt. The beggar willingly takes advantage of the girl's mistake and goes on his way rejoicing, taking with him a very nice suit of clothes. Then the Lawrences come home, discover what Mary has done, discharge her and vow they will never again engage a "servant from the country."

SETTLED OUT OF COURT.—Statistics show that one out of every twelve married women in this country gets divorced, truly a painful record. The present film subject, however, shows that a tactful lawyer can sometimes patch up a case and bring back happiness to the home which without his intervention would have been broken up completely.

A beautiful young married lady goes to a prominent divorce lawyer, states her case and gets him to take it in hand. While she is telling her

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 16th

PATHÉ FRÈRES

Will Release the FILM D'ART

CARMEN

By Prosper Merimee Length, 900 Feet

This gem of French literature has been set to music by Bizet and the famous opera is familiar to everyone. The fascinating Spanish girl in the picture is ably supported by a remarkably clever company of Film D'Art Actors.

CARMEN

Will compel the interest of the entire community and will crowd every house where it is shown.

Insist Upon it at Your Exchange

PATHÉ FRÈRES

NEW YORK 41 West 25th Street
CHICAGO 35 Randolph Street
NEW ORLEANS 813 Union Street

Pacific Coast Agency—Turner & Dahnken, 136 Eddy Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Get Your Posters from the A. B. C. Co., of Clevland, Ohio

COMING! COMING! COMING!

THE PARIS FLOOD PICTURES—Watch for the Announcement

Renew Your Films

EXCHANGES!

Get your money out of your old films by using our process

WE REMOVE DIRT AND SCRATCHES

Send your old film to us that you think is out of commission and we will make it as good as new.

WE

can do anything but put in new sprocket holes.

OLD RELIABLE FILM RENOVATING CO.
134 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
J. S. SPEER.

Write for References from 60 Exchanges

WANTED—Pathe's Hand Colored Passion Play; also other Religious film subjects and Religious slides. Must be reasonable. Address

MAX
526½ Washington Street, Portland, Ore.

CHEAP

Steel Frame Theatre Chairs

ABSOLUTELY Non-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small theatres and Moving Picture shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs
Also Seating for Out of-Door Use.
Address Dept. W,
STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich.
New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue
Boson Office: 224 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

PITTSBURG McKENNA NEW YORK

Did you get one of our NEW CATALOGS?

Prepared especially for the man who wants information concerning

Brass Railings, Picture Easels, Grilles, Etc.

WRITE NOW TO

McKENNA BROS. BRASS CO.

1st Ave. and Ross Street PITTSBURG — "It's the Front that Attracts the Business" — 238 Broadway NEW YORK grievances, a ring at the telephone calls the lawyer to the wire, and, to his astonishment, he is requested by the young woman's husband to take care of his interests in a divorce case from the lady sitting at that time in the lawyer's office. An idea occurs to him. Ushering the lady into a room on the right of the office, the lawyer telephones the husband to come at once to his office. Then, on his arrival, he shows him into another room on the left. The lawyer lights a small stove in his office in such a manner that it gives off lots of smoke. Then he steps out of the office into the passage. Both husband and wife being attracted by the smell of smoke, rush into the lawyer's office and meet one another. Then explanations ensue and finally reconciliation. The lawyer steps back into the office and gives the couple his congratulations on having "settled" the case "out of court."

KALEM MFG. CO.

THE FEUD.—Scene I.—Bud Morris Visits His Sweetheart, Annabelle Sharp. It is Sunday afternoon. Out in the barnyard of the Morris home, Bud, the oldest son, is hitching up his horse and buggy preparatory to calling on his sweetheart, Annabelle Sharp, the daughter of their nearest neighbor. Col. Morris, the father, a typical Southerner of the old school, comes from the barn. He rallies Bud about his sweetheart, although it is evident he is pleased with Bud's choice. Over at the Sharp home, Major Sharp is enjoying a quiet Sunday afternoon smoke, his son Jed lying at his feet, when Bud arrives. Sharp calls his wife and Annabelle. Jed invites Bud to sit down while he is waiting for Annabelle. Out of the house come Annabelle and her mother. Annabelle is dressed for a ride. The old man teases her and gently pushes her towards Bud. As the two walk away it is evident that the match is as agreeable to the Sharp family as to the neighboring Morrises. Through the gate to where his horse is tied come Bud and Annabelle. As Bud is handing her into the buggy he takes her in his arms and kisses her.

Scene II.—Old Man Morris Quarrels with Sharp Over the Boundary.

Scene III.—The Feud Is Declared.

Scene IV.—Annabelle Ordered To Give Up Her Sweetheart.

Scene V.—The Gun Fight at the Boundary Line.

Scene VI.—Annabelle Renounces Bud.

Scene VII.—Love Survives the Feud.

Scene VIII.—Annabelle Saves Bud.

Scene IX.—The Lovers Plan to Stop the Quarrel.

Scene X.—The Feud Is Ended. Sharp catches sight of Morris through the window of the store and draws his gun. As Morris steps from the door he is greeted with a shot. He hastily draws his gun. But he is only able to get one shot when the pistol jams. He throws it to the ground and grasping his walking stick firmly in his hand rushes towards the Major. The Major has exhausted his pistol. As the two men are about to grapple Bud and Annabelle rush in between them. The two men at first pay no attention to the appeals but soon their frenzied anger begins to cool. Now Annabelle crosses over to the Colonel while Bud makes his appeal to the Major. The faces of the two old men soften. Slowly a hand is extended by each. As they meet, Bud takes Annabelle in his arms, for both see the return of those happy days when the ideal friendship of their two families was the boast of the entire neighborhood.

THE CONFEDERATE SPY.—A story of the Civil War.

Scene I.—John Ward's Bride—The Home Coming. It is the early Summer of 1857. Assembled along the path leading down from the broad verandas of the comfortable old Southern home to the river is a group of negroes. They are the plantation slaves waiting to welcome the new mistress. Happy, contented and well cared for, they are as joyous and noisy as a bunch of school children just dismissed. From the house comes an old negro waving a cane to silence the crowd. It is Uncle Daniel to whom all the administration of the estate is intrusted. Following him comes his young master, John Ward, and his bride. Each woolly head bends submissively as they pass. Now Uncle Daniel introduces the new mistress and a shout of welcome is given to an accompaniment of glistening teeth and rolling white eyes.

Scene II.—Three Years Later—John Ward Starts for the War.

Scene III.—The Guerrilla's Insult.

Scene IV.—The Guerrilla Takes Possession of the Ward House.

Scene V.—Uncle Daniel Defends His Mistress.

Scene VI.—Mrs. Ward's Refuge—A Cabin in the Forest.

Scene VII.—Lieut. Ward Starts on a Hazardous Undertaking.

Scene VIII.—Ward Secures the Plans.

Scene IX.—Uncle Daniel Rescues His Master.

Scene X.—The Spy's Substitute.

Scene XI.—Uncle Daniel Delivers the Plans and Brings Help in Time of Need. After many discouraging efforts Uncle Daniel makes his way through the swamps and deserted plantations and manages finally to stagger into the Confederate headquarters. He delivers the papers to the officer of the day. As the officer is examining them the general rides up. One look at them shows him here are the plans they have been hoping and praying for. Suspicious of a trap the general questions Uncle Daniel. Uncle Daniel tells of Ward lying wounded and destitute at the deserted cabin. The general orders a squad to take provisions and march to his aid. While they are forming Uncle Daniel falls to his knees in thankfulness that his master and mistress will soon be saved. Off he staggers, followed by the relief squad.

Back to the cabin Uncle Daniel hurries as fast as his feeble old limbs will carry him. He tells Ward help is coming. In march the relief squad. Ward's first words after saluting are of the plans. The officer tells him they were delivered safely by Uncle Daniel. Ward extends his hand to his faithful old slave. As Uncle Daniel takes it hesitatingly Charlotte lays her own across their joined hands. Brave old Uncle Daniel has been faithful to his trust. Not only has he protected his mistress but he has saved his master's life and honor. As Ward and his wife gaze on him affectionately he murmurs gently, "It was for massa sake and little missa."

PATHE FRERES.

COFFEE CULTURE.—These pictures were taken in the Sunda Islands in the Malay Archipelago and show successively the coffee plants and the natives gathering the berries. Next the overseer examines them as they are brought in and from him they pass into the factory where they go through various processes before being exposed to the sun to dry. Finally the sorting process is seen which is followed by a pretty picture of a dainty girl yawning over her book until stimulated by a cup of fragrant coffee.

DICK'S A WINNER.—Dick Tucker has gained first prize, and at the annual prize distribution his mother's face is wreathed in smiles. His aunt is no less proud when Dick shows her the book that has been presented to him, and, as a mark of appreciation, she gives him half a sovereign.

That half a sovereign just burns a hole in Dick's pocket, and he hastens to spend it as quickly as possible. A walking stick first captures his youthful fancy; then he stuffs himself with bonbons, and other delicacies. A purchase of cigarettes is the next step on Dick's part, and as he saunters along swinging his cane, and emitting clouds of smoke, he feels mightily pleased with himself. The sight of a swing, as he passes through a fair, is irresistible, however, and Dick seats himself in it, without relinquishing his cigarette. First attempts are usually somewhat feeble ones, and Dick's endeavor to be a man is no exception to the rule. A kindly policeman leads him back to the bosom of his family, where he is put to bed, and it is with an expression of comical irony that his father picks up his son's first prize and reads on the flyleaf: "First Prize for Industry and Good Conduct Awarded to Dick Tucker."

THE POSTMISTRESS.—The postoffice in a little country town. The postmistress, a widow, has barely enough income to keep the little house together and her curly headed child is ill. The poor woman is in great distress because she cannot leave her duties to go get the doctor and the child needs immediate medical care. Finally the mail carrier volunteers to go, but upon reaching the doctor's office he is given a note which says the doctor will not come until his former bill is settled.

In despair, the unhappy woman is driven to extremes and urged by the love of her only comfort—her child—she takes enough money from the postoffice funds to pay the stony hearted old physician. By dint of great economy, she thinks, she will pay it back when the child is well.

Cruel fate seems to be against her, however, for scarcely has she sent the money when a telegram arrives announcing the fact that the government postal inspector will arrive that day to audit her accounts. Shortly after the inspector arrives and the postmistress, lacking the courage to confess runs up to sit by her sick child, while the inspector seats himself before the open books to begin his figuring which is bound to end in the discovery of her theft.

Figure by figure, he checks over the accounts until at last he finds the discrepancy. He goes over them again and again, but the shortage is there and cannot be overlooked. At first he is indignant, but when he entered the office he heard the butcher claiming his due, the baker refusing to deliver bread, and now the sound of the little child's cough reaches him and it sets him thinking. Everything points to dire distress and so, with the knowledge that he was doing a good act, the kindly man makes up the difference from his own pocket. Imagine the joy of the postmistress when he departs, declaring that he has found no error in the accounts.

ROLLER SKATING IN AUSTRALIA.—Enthusiastic lovers of the latest craze will no doubt be charmed to witness the prowess of the Australians on the whizzing wheels. The hall in which the views of our film have been taken appears to be a very decent one, and some of the skaters possess no mean ability in the performance of clever evolutions, although, of course, none of them reaches the standard of the world's champion roller skater, who also appears on the floor. To those in the throes of first strenuous endeavors to master the secret of maintaining one's balance, the ease with which this gentleman carries out some astonishing long jumps and other feats must be somewhat annoying, but it's a capital performance to look at.

THE MODEL DRAMA. Gerald Serval, sculptor by profession, is in despair. He is engaged upon the figure of a female bather, and his work is at a standstill for lack of a fitting model. Only a few days remain before the last day of sending it in to the Academy, and the triumph the sculptor hoped to secure seems drifting from his reach.

A friend calls upon him and Gerald enlarges upon his difficulty. His friend has the card of two models named Frascola, father and daughter, in his pocket and Gerald, as a last resource, seeks them out. To his boundless delight he finds in Leah, the daughter, a young girl, graceful as a fawn, the perfect model for his work and the sitting commences.

As the indistinct outlines of the rough, unfinished statue take shape and form beneath the strong and supple fingers of the sculptor, so the first feeling of interest that the man feels in his model ripens into a warmer sentiment, half unconsciously returned by Leah.

The completion of the statue and the approach of the hour for parting is the signal for a full confession of love. Leah abandons her old father, a true type of the sturdy Italian, and is scarcely awakened from her dream of bliss by an angry scene between the two men.

Four months later, Gerald's work has been accepted as the triumph of the year at the Academy, and he and Leah receive the congratulations of their friends as they wander through the crowded rooms, hemmed in by a fashionable throng. Mingling in the crowd, too, is Frascola, and as he approaches the statue a feverish energy marks his movements. Suddenly, before the bystanders can arrest his hand, he has raised a mallet, struck the statue from its pedestal, and with heavy blows destroyed forever the work of the man who has blighted his life.

A CRITICAL SITUATION.—Charles is bidding his wife an affectionate good-bye preparatory to setting out for a short bicycle run. The moment his back is turned Percy calls, but the unexpected return of the husband obliges the lady to hide her visitor in the cupboard. Charles soon goes out again and the prisoner is released. Catching up a white stocking to wipe the perspiration from his brow, he stuffs it in his pocket and takes his departure for the nearest cafe to get a bracer. There he meets Charles and another friend. To this latter he recounts his adventure and both laugh heartily at the joke. However, Percy is not to get off scot free, for on his return home his wife finds the stocking and naturally gives him a piece of her mind. Percy thereupon sits down and writes a note to his friend, asking him to get him out of the scrape, and the friend shows the letter to Charles, who volunteers to do the trick for him. Charles accordingly calls upon Mrs. Percy with one bare leg and narrates a story about her husband having removed the stocking in the spirit of mischief. Mrs. Percy calls attention to the fact that his other stocking is black and Charles, picking up the white hosiery to examine it, is horrified to find that it belongs to his wife.

ADAM II.—This remarkable ape, extraordinarily human-like in its manners and ways, gives a splendid exhibition. When first seen Adam appears to be in a rather morose mood in a chair. The weather is so hot that at the suggestion of the professor Adam removes his coat and gratefully accepts a fan. The question of dinner is then discussed and Adam focusses his attention on the bill of fare with all the interest of an epicure. A bottle of wine is shared by the two friends, the ape seeing to it that he gets his.

After dinner a game of cards, followed by a pipe, with which we will leave him, although we have described only a few of his many accomplishments.

IN ANCIENT GREECE.—In all the arts the ancient Greeks excelled and their statuary, their music, their poetry, their dances, have remained to subsequent generations a standard to be followed and emulated. Terpsichore was the goddess of the dance, and if we read our mythology aright taught the poetry of motion to her devotees. To all but a few who have made a study of Hellenic dancing, such grace of action, such lithesomeness of body as was essential to the art when Grecian beauties tripped lightly and rythmically over the green sward, is impossible. Mesdemoiselles Napierkowska and Mary, however, are superb in an exquisitely graceful ballet by Sacha Dezac, entitled "In Ancient Greece." The dance is perfect and the quality of the film is such that it is difficult to believe that the dancers do not themselves appear in the flesh before the eyes of the spectators, instead of being a mere photographic reproduction of their swaying rythmic movements.

THE BANDIT.—In a little out-of-the-way town, a proclamation announces that a reward of 40,000 gold pieces is offered for the body of the famous brigand, Pastorello, who is secreted within the walls of the town. Their cupidity aroused by the promise of so large a reward, the inhabitants are soon on the alert, but the brigand passes unrecognized through their midst and takes refuge in the home of a widow.

Whilst lying on the bed she offers him, he suddenly hears beseeching words addressed by his hostess to a second person, and, carefully listening, learns that the widow is unable to pay her rent, which the agent has come to collect. After her unwelcome visitor's departure, the brigand consoles the weeping woman and gives her sufficient money to settle the debt, counselling her at the same time to obtain her receipt. The widow joyfully hurries out, promising to do as he bids her, but the landlord, unscrupulous and hard, takes the money and retains the receipt.

[illegible] at the end of the week's wages. Presently Gilbert, the nephew of his outlaw [illegible] comes to the cabin to settle out [illegible] upon the [illegible] and would [illegible] The [illegible] of [illegible] the receipt, and acquires the [illegible] of a portion of the wealth.

URBAN-ECLIPSE.
(George Kleine.)

COALS OF FIRE. A most beautiful spot in the [illegible] of the French border, is the scene in which the present story is enacted. Wild [illegible], as yet undepicted in a film [illegible] here to be and taken to an already fascinating subject.

A [illegible] peasant boy, whose mother is lying seriously ill in a poverty stricken cottage, goes out to endeavor to earn a few pennies by playing on his mandolin.

He succeeds in attracting a crowd of peasants and is chattering them when a rough fellow rides up on a mule and after speaking roughly to the poor boy, cuffs him cruelly. The peasants take no part except the muleteer and one of them, a good hearted farmer, takes him by the hand, hears about the poor, sick mother and accompanies the child to the bedside of his parent who, in the meantime, had passed away.

The peasant leads the child to his home where his sympathetic wife adopts the little boy.

The mule driver, who has not forgotten the rough handling he received from the peasants for mistreating the child, now brings a barrel of gunpowder, places it on the doorstep of the cottage where the boy is living with his foster parents and sets fire to a fuse to explode the powder and kill the entire family. However, the fuse is not long enough, so the gunpowder blows up prematurely, totally blinding the muleteer, but doing no harm to his intended victims. The wretched man staggers away in agony. The child, aroused by the explosion, follows him to the brink of a precipice, over which the muleteer would have fallen, but the boy seizes him just in time, leads him back to the cottage and by revealing his identity to him in the presence of his foster parents, heaps "Coals of Fire" upon his head.

VENETIAN ISLES.—Beautiful Venice! How familiar we all are with its mirror like canals, reflecting the bright blue sky and the brilliantly colored red and yellow buildings with gaudy awnings over the windows, picturesque balconies, masses of flowers growing in boxes and overhanging the silent waterways.

A film properly portraying the exquisite charms of this "fairy city" has long been looked for but until this present subject had been presented for the criticism of our experts, no really satisfactory motion picture of Venice had ever been made.

The graceful gondolas propelled by swarthy gondoliers standing in the stern and slowly driving them forward with a single oar, so smoothly and evenly that hardly a ripple disturbs the surface, lend life to the lovely scene, while on the landing places we see the picturesque women and children engaged in various pursuits, always happy and interesting.

The city of Venice is divided by its canals into countless "islands" or isolated blocks of buildings supported on piles and projecting over the water, and this fact has given rise to the pleasing title of this film, "Venetian Isles."

VITAGRAPH COMPANY.

CAUGHT IN HIS OWN TRAP.—A young girl is sought and courted by an ardent young lover of somewhat insignificant type who is very objectionable to her parents. They will have none of him, notwithstanding the earnest pleadings of their daughter in his behalf.

One evening the old father takes a position in the library adjoining the parlor, where the young lovers are courting, hoping to catch them making love and finding some excuse to forbid the young man from coming to the house. After several unsuccessful attempts, he hits upon an idea to trap them. He makes arrangements to have a large mirror placed in the hall wherein is reflected a full view of the parlor, which he can plainly see from the library.

The lovers, unconscious of this arrangement, are in their accustomed places billing and cooing. The father sees them in the mirror, rushes into the parlor, tells them how he saw them and tells the young man, "Begone." His sweetheart, in tears, protests, but her father is obdurate and the beau makes a hasty exit to escape the wrath of the old man.

Alone, the young girl does some thinking on her own account, and, going to the window, calls her lover back and helps him in through the window. This time they do their sparking while keeping an eye on the mirror. They detect the old man making love to the maid. He is just in the act of kissing her when the lovers suddenly make their appearance and threaten to tell his wife unless he consents to their marriage.

At this point his wife comes in and he is enlisted in self-defense, to consent and at the same time plead with his wife in their behalf. The father reluctantly gives them his blessing and the mother graciously consents. Thus the trap which [illegible] proved to the old gentleman's undoing.

THE SKELETON. A learned professor of anatomy [illegible] a surgical supply house is shown several [illegible] of the human frame and decides to [illegible] for class demonstration, a skeleton of [illegible] and articulations. On his way home with the skeleton carefully wrapped, he takes a [illegible] to rest and meditate in [illegible] the streets on his way home again, absentmindedly leaving the skeleton on the bench.

Some passers-by come along, espy the bundle and open it. They discover the skeleton and, after their surprise, they decide to have some fun.

The boys dress the skeleton in hat, coat and trousers and lay it on a bench. "Clarence the Cop" comes along, sees a chance to become a hero and drags the skeleton to the station house. The sergeant at the desk and other officers upon the arrival of "Clarence" go to assist him, and, when they discover that he has arrested a skeleton, show fire in terror. The skeleton falls to the floor, gets up takes off its clothes, folds them carefully, places them on a chair, performs some remarkable stunts, makes a haughty bow and, with dignified strides, takes its departure.

In fear and trembling all the bravest and "the finest" return to the station and try to recover their nerve and composure, beads of cold sweat on their brows and horror depicted on their faces.

TWELFTH NIGHT.—Viola and her twin brother Sebastian, while on a sea voyage, are shipwrecked. Viola is rescued and Sebastian is supposed to have been lost. Among the wreckage on the coast Sebastian's trunk is found by Viola. When she opens it and sees her brother's clothing, she decides to disguise herself as a boy. Learning that she is within the realm of the young Duke Orsino, she repairs to his castle, where she is employed as his page.

The Duke is apparently very much in love with Olivia, a rich Countess. Nothing daunted, Viola falls in love with the Duke, who adds to her discomfiture by sending her, as his page, with a message of love to Olivia. As soon as Olivia beholds the handsome young page, she falls in love with Viola, thinking that she is a boy. She presents the page with a jewel, and later, through her pompous steward, Malvolio, with a ring.

Sebastian, in search of his sister, meets Viola by chance at the house of Olivia and the two are once more united. Explanations follow, and Olivia finds it an easy matter to transfer her affections to Sebastian, who falls madly in love with Olivia.

Orsino finds Olivia in the embrace of Sebastian. Viola now appears before the Duke as herself—a sweet and attractive girl. She tells him of her impersonation of her brother and the page. Orsino is so struck by her beauty and cleverness that he declares his love for her and asks her to become his wife. Each one comes into his own. "All's well that ends well" and everybody is happy.

A delicate touch of comedy is introduced in this play in the scene where Maria forges an affectionate note to Malvolio, imitating Olivia's handwriting and leading the arrogant steward to believe the Countess in love with him. Malvolio is so puffed up and elated when he gets the note that he cannot contain himself, much to the amusement of Sir Toby, Maria and Sir Andrew, who are watching him and greatly enjoying the stroke.

THE PASSING SHADOW.—This picture gives us a strong illustration of the man of iron will and the unrelenting father whose pride will tolerate no contradiction. He is determined upon having his son marry a wealthy lady whom he has chosen for him. The son wishes to marry the girl of his choice, which he does against his father's wishes. He is cast off by his father, who will have nothing to do with him or his wife.

The son has a staunch friend and champion in his young sister, who assists him in his poverty and distress. She pleads with her father for her brother's recognition and reinstatement, but all to no avail.

On Christmas Eve we see the son, his wife and baby in their humble home with slight evidences of good cheer. He has a little money left and he decides to make his father a Christmas present. His wife is delighted.

He buys the present and decides to go to his father's home and leave it there under cover of night. Reaching the old home, he lifts the library window. He cannot resist entering the familiar room. He places on his father's desk the present with its attached card:

"For dear old father even if he doesn't care for me."

At this very moment his father, in another room, probably trying to square his conscience with his tyrannical nature and the rejection of his boy, hears a noise, seizes a revolver and cautiously approaches the library, in which, in the dim light, he sees a man. He raises his revolver and shoots. He pleases for the police and, when they arrive and examine the prostrate form of the supposed burglar, the father discovers that he has shot his own son. Surprise gives way to anguish and despair. An ambulance is called and his son is taken to the hospital.

The son is now convalescent, and the father calls at the hospital to see him. He implores his son's forgiveness, takes his little grandchild from its mother, who has just arrived on the scene, kisses it, puts his arm around his daughter-in-law, takes her to his bosom and promises to make amends for the suffering his rashness has caused them.

Independent Films.

INDEPENDENT M. P. CO.

THE BLIND MAN'S ACT.—Five days more! Only five more days, says the physician, and the man who has for so long a time been totally blind will be able to take off the bandage, and have the great, kind world to love him!

He is sitting at home, his pretty daughter reading to him, and he is contemplating the glories of the earth and what he will be able to gaze upon then. Soon she leaves him for a moment, and, overcome by curiosity, he dares to raise the bandage just a tiny, tiny little. He is amazed! He sees his hands in joy! He can see! But in this hour he remembers the admonishment of the doctor, not to remove the bandage for five days, and he replaces it.

It happens that about this time a burglar singles the house out for his attentions, and has just entered the parlor when he hears the sound of approaching footsteps and conceals himself. It is the blind man's daughter. She is not sure that she has heard somebody moving about, but enters the room tentatively, deciding herself that it is only her imagination. The robber man springs out, and at the point of a pistol she gives him all her valuables, begging him to go. But the blind father has heard some sounds and now enters the room. Here ensues a marvelous effort on the part of the girl to keep her father ignorant of the burglar's presence, and the latter gentleman gets much loot. Then he wants the safe opened. At the request of his daughter the blind man directs her at the combination, but now the key for the inner door is needed. The father turns to a drawer to get it, but instead of the key there is a flash, and the burglar drops his gun, wounded. The man before him had seen everything, and had awaited his opportunity.

BROWN'S GOUTY FOOT.—Brown takes his disabled member out to the park for an airing, and an urchin with an imagination and execution worthy of nobler aims, decides that Brown is resting too easily and proceeds to make things unpleasant for both Brown and his foot. A tribute to his success in this undertaking is the fact that when Brown gets home his wife does not recognize him. And that means a complete job.

JUSTICE IN THE FAR NORTH.—There is really nothing in her life worth living for; young, pretty, she is the wife of a vicious old gold prospector on the God-forsaken wastes of the frozen North; her life is one long session of suffering and drudgery, her existence with the prospector nothing but a series of abuses and unprovoked violences. In this first scene, in fact, he is looking at her the victuals which she has placed before him, and which do not please him. And this even though a friend, a young man, is in the cabin visiting.

When the latter leaves the cabin the visitor cannot help but tell her of his sympathy, and with no pretense at loving her, tells her that she can find relief if she will flee with him; it is not the proposition of a lover, but of a man. She feels that she needs the protection he offers and, after gathering up her belongings, they both set out over the bleak, desolate snows, dragging a sled after them. They come to the cabin of an Indian and prepare to rest for the night.

The runaway wife on stepping outside is astounded to behold the figure of her husband, dragging a sled after him, plodding along on the trail. Anxiously she waits, and is relieved to see him enter a deserted cabin close at hand. She makes a resolve. She knows that if he sees her first it means her death, and sneaking back into the cabin, she takes the gun from her companion, who is asleep in his bunk, the Indian sleeping on the floor to allow her the other bunk.

Straight to the deserted shack she goes climbing in through a window. Her Nemesis is on the floor; he draws, both fire; his hand is shattered; another exchange, he is hit again. She goes back to the cabin, but her companion sees her and she tearfully tells him all about it, the Indian listening.

Her husband, meanwhile yelling for help, arouses some men, who are soon listening to his accusation of his wife's friend. The woman, summoned, protests, but the accused insists on shouldering the blame and is marched off to be hanged. But before the noose is tightened the grim old Indian tells what he knows. The man is liberated, given a "running chance" for life, and the sturdy settlers of the Northland count the incident closed.

The wife, returning to the cabin, realizes that life is worthless to her, and is about to end it all when the husband enters. The sight of the pistol at her temple serves to awaken his better self, and the great light that is in all men's hearts, but burns only in some, flickers, brightens, then bursts into full flame.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

THE TEN OF SPADES: OR, A WESTERN RAFFLE. Jim Hayward steals a horse from the ranch of Franklin Edwards; upon discovery of the robbery an exciting chase by the cowboys follows. When they capture Hayward the boys are about to "string him up," but Bob Churchill, a wealthy cattle buyer, intercedes for him and saves his life. The boys, showing their disgust, let him go. Hayward, stepping forward to thank Churchill, takes a card, the ten of spades, from his pocket and tearing it in half gives half to Churchill, who bids him begone. As time has passed and the horse stealing has been forgotten, Lucille Hayward, daughter of Jim, is taking her daily ride on her favorite horse, when suddenly the horse becomes unmanageable and the situation appears to be very dangerous for Miss Hayward, but just at the critical moment Bob Churchill comes to her aid and stops the horse, whereupon they exchange cards and depart on their ways, but not until "Master Cupid" has fired his "darts of love." Again Jim Hayward is at his old tricks, this time attempting to rob the home of Bob Churchill, not knowing that he is the man who once saved his life and has since won the hand of his daughter. Upon being discovered in the act of entering the house, a fight takes place in which Churchill is felled to the ground. Jim and his "pals" bind and gag him, carry him to an outhouse where they proceed to search him in quest of money. While Hayward's "pals" are busy lighting a bomb so as to cause an explosion and cover up the crime, Jim finds the half of a card, the ten of spades, and at once recognizes Bob as the man who years before had saved his life. Without a second to lose, Jim rushes in and rescues Churchill. Lucille, coming from the house to learn the cause of the explosion, finds her father begging forgiveness of Bob Churchill. Jim seeing her takes her hand and places it in Bob's saying, "Take care of her, my boy," and passes into the sleep eternal.

YOUNG DEER'S GRATITUDE.—In this picture Young Deer proves to us that an Indian never forgets a kindness done unto him. While roaming the plains Young Deer comes to a cowboys' camp, begs for some food but is refused and ordered away from the camp by the cowboys. One of the cowgirls pities the poor Indian and gives him something to eat. Young Deer, to show his gratitude, takes off his necklace and gives it to her, which she places on her little four-year-old daughter. A few days later the cowgirl takes her little daughter for her first horseback ride. After riding some distance they stop at a stream to water the horse; the child seeing some wild flowers, begs her mother to gather some for her. While she is doing so two Indians, who have been lurking along the banks of the stream, steal the child and horse. Upon reaching their camp, Young Deer recognizes the necklace and vows to return the child to its mother, writing upon a piece of buckskin: "White squaw no bad heart—me bring papoose to-night—when high moon—Angel Gulch." Taking the horse which the Indians had stolen with the child, and tying the note to its leg, Young Deer drives him away, knowing that he will return to the cowboys' camp. Young Deer awaits until darkness has come upon the camp and all is quiet. He softly steals from his tepee to the one where the little child is hidden and is just about to flee with her when he is discovered by one of the Indians and a fierce encounter takes place. Young Deer, being the stronger of the two, succeeds in getting away, but by this time the entire camp has been awakened and a very exciting and thrilling chase follows, in which Young Deer has some very trying adventures, but finally restores the child safely in its mother's arms.

GREAT NORTHERN.

A WOMAN'S DESTINY.—This story tells us of young Mabel, a pretty but somewhat careless girl, whose one fault is that she is greatly in love with Bob, a ne'er-do-well with no particular ambition. He finds it easier to live on money obtained dishonestly than that earned by work. Mabel is employed as a waitress and considerable money passes through her hands. She assists her sweetheart in many ways, but he is hard to please. In order to satisfy his wants, he influences her to take a purse from the pocket of a friend. Her conscience, however, bothers her, and throwing the purse in front of Bob, she runs away in despair. The purse is afterwards found in his possession and he is arrested. Mabel, who cannot rid herself of her guilty conscience, finally attempts to end her life. A young doctor, out for a walk with his aged mother, notices her and realizing her condition and hearing of her misery, induces her to go home with them and give up her suicidal ideas. She stays with these good people for some time, and the old lady takes a liking to her to such an extent that Mabel is asked to stay as her companion. A little later the old lady is taken seriously ill, and cannot recover. On her death bed, she expresses the wish that her son marry Mabel, and this wish is duly respected. The young couple begin life very happily. Nothing disturbs their happiness for the next few years, when Mabel's happiness is suddenly rudely disturbed through Bob, who has been released from prison. He is determined to have his revenge, blaming Mabel for his long sentence which he has had to serve. The first thing he does is to locate her. In this he succeeds and in a brutal way requests her to leave her husband and go with him. She can only get rid of him by supplying him with money. Bob now sees that she is really afraid of him, and repeatedly asks her for money, which she gives him, he threatening that if she refuses, to disclose her past. Mabel is finally driven to desperation by his persistency and, taking a chair she knocks him senseless. Thinking that she has committed a crime, she runs away to a park and makes a second attempt on her life. Too late she is found by her husband, who cannot aid her. She has suffered for the sins of her past life.

KALEM FILMS

Issues of February 9 and 11, 1910

The Confederate Spy

A Story of the Civil War

LENGTH 960 FEET

THIS WILL BE OUR BIG WEEK

We shall release THE CONFEDERATE SPY on February 9 and THE FEUD on February 11, and they are the two biggest sensations of the year—two stories of intense passion, one detailing the horrors of war and the other the vindictiveness of family quarrels in certain sections of the South.

THE CONFEDERATE SPY is a story of guerilla warfare, of a daring deed brought to a successful issue, and of a loving wife protected from a deadly peril by a faithful old slave.

The Feud

LENGTH 925 FEET

For sustained and thrilling excitement this beats the limit. Every scene has a situation to make an audience quiver. Yet it comes to a happy ending through LOVE, the emotion that rules the world.

In these days of bad weather it takes grippy, intense pictures to draw the crowds. Here are two of the best ever made. Remember the dates and book them from your exchange.

Great posters for both these features made by the A.B.C. Co., of Cleveland, Ohio

KALEM CO., Inc.

Eastman Kodak Building

235-237-239 WEST 23rd STREET
NEW YORK CITY

LUBIN FILMS

RELEASED MONDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1910

The Samaritan's Courtship

A comedy in which the good Samaritan is rewarded with the hand of the woman he assisted when she found she had left her money at home and the train started in ten minutes, but as the card he gave her was a blank one instead of one containing his address it was a long hunt and provocative of many amusing complications. A rollicking little play cleverly acted in a series of charming exteriors and convincing interiors. LENGTH, 865 FEET.

RELEASED MONDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1910

Celestial Vengeance

A striking title for a striking tragi-comedy. A clubman whose story of bravery bores his fellows through frequent repetition, proves his courage by going to Chinatown and stealing a god from a household altar. It is returned to the owner, but unfortunately the package has been dropped and the head is broken from the idol, while a business card on which the address was written gives the Celestial a clue. He starts a hunt for his man and—well, the finish is too good to be given away in advance. You cannot afford to let this get past you. The really novel is what attracts, and this is novel. LENGTH, 840 FEET.

Send for catalogue of our 1910 machine

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY 926-928 MARKET STREET PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Watch for the Big Release of FEBRUARY 17th

ECLAIR.

THE SERUM ANTIDOTE.—The first scene shows Dr. Ball, a noted scientist, and his assistant, Fritz, experimenting in the scientist's laboratory. The Doctor is engaged in working out an antidote for the serpent's venom. The scientist leaves his laboratory, charging his assistant to continue the experiments during his absence.

The assistant immediately sets to work to conceive a plan by which he may be avenged upon his enemy. He knows that the Doctor's experiment has failed, he therefore steals into the laboratory by night, where, of course, he finds the rabbits which have been bitten by the cobra and then inoculated with the Doctor's new antidote, lying dead in their cages, the experiment has certainly failed. Then the assistant substitutes a live rabbit for a dead one which he puts in his pocket to take away, for if the Doctor in the morning finds that a rabbit is living, he will believe that it has been saved by his invention and will believe he has succeeded. He (the Doctor) will then announce his discovery to the world, and will be invited to give a demonstration of his wonderful antidote. He will, of course, fail in the demonstration and be disgraced before the whole world, and the assistant will have his revenge. However, just as the assistant is about to leave the laboratory, he passes too near the cage containing the deadly cobras, and one of them leaps up and bites him on the arm. The base man then rushes screaming from the laboratory, but before he reaches the street door, he falls fainting to the ground. He is discovered later in this condition by the Doctor, who takes pity on him, carries him back to his laboratory, and seeing one of the rabbits alive, thinks his experiment has succeeded, and joyfully prepares to administer the antidote to his late assistant in order to save his life. However, the assistant in the knowledge of the evil deception he has perpetrated, knows that he must die. He, therefore, in his last agony confesses everything, and implores forgiveness—and dies.

A BOOTBLACK'S DAILY LABOR IN ALGIERS.—With curiosity and idle interest we follow the well known little "Ciri" during one of the carefree days of his easy-going Algierian life. We find him first, early in the morning at the harbor watching the arrival of the ships, bustling here and there gleaning his meagre earnings as he can. We find him making his way among the narrow picturesque lanes of ancient Algiers, and at the various quaint old market places. We see him lounging in the afternoon about the public gardens, mingling with his kind, playing the customary games, ever upholding his own among his comrades; always gay and careless, quick to take advantage of any favorable opportunity which may present itself; we find in him a wonderful capacity for the enjoyment of whatever good fortune may befall him, and as wonderful an aptitude of making the best of all things. We follow him, at the close of the day, back to the wharves, where he makes his bed, falling to sleep as peaceful and undisturbed as are his waking hours.

A. G. WHYTE.

THE MOUNTAINEER: A Tale of Kentucky—Kentucky in all its picturesque beauty is probably one of the greatest law States of our republic, yet back in the heart of the mountains we find the primitive, simple folk, who know no law but that of right and justice. What they have, God has given them. What God has given them they lay down their lives to hold. Small wonder then that Lem Hardon swore to make Jack Thorne answer with his life for coming between Beth Stivers and himself. The mountain man invariably regards the valley man with suspicion and distrust, and Jack Thorne was a valley man, while he and Beth were mountain folk. God had intended this woman for him and he meant to hold his own. He had watched their many meetings with gathering wrath, but today Jack had dared kiss Beth. Lem took careful aim at his rival's head, when, all unconscious of the danger that threatened her sweetheart, Beth stepped between Jack and the gun. Perhaps it was better so, although undeserving he would challenge Jack, but Beta would have none of it, and sternly commanded Lem to depart.

With happy eyes, Beth stood watching her lover until he disappeared, when suddenly she beheld Lem making his way down the mountain side. Instantly she knew what it meant; it was useless to call him now, but with the blind hope that she might overtake him, she ran wildly down the mountain.

Lem had overtaken his rival and bound his feet to a tree, then tying his head to a boulder, he poised it in the air to dash over the precipice, when Beth reached them. Quick as a flash, she cut the rope with her knife. Lem, not having heard her approach, rushed up the mountain.

A year later Lem enters Jack's home to be revenged, but the sight that met his eyes no man could withstand and harbor murder in his heart—the happy, innocent face of a tiny babe. It was her baby. Jack Thorne had made her his wife, and he, Lem, had been wrong. God had lawfully given her to another. Lem fled to the rock where Beth and Jack had plighted their troth, and there, humble and repentant, asked forgiveness and guidance of his Maker.

LICENSED FILMS.

BIOGRAPH COMPANY.

		Feet
Jan.	3—The Rocky Road (Dr.)	990
Jan.	6—The Dancing Girl of Butte (Dr.)	984
Jan.	10—Her Terrible Ordeal (Dr.)	952
Jan.	13—All on Account of the Milk (Dr.)	989
Jan	17—On the Reef (Dr.)	988
Jan.	20—The Call (Dr.)	989
Jan.	24—The Honor of His Family (Dr.)	988
Jan.	27—The Last Deal (Dr.)	991
Jan.	31—The Cloister's Touch (Dr.)	993
Feb.	3—The Woman from Mellon's (Dr.)	988
Feb.	7—The Course of True Love (Dr.)	987
Feb.	10—The Duke's Plan (Dr.)	985

EDISON MFG. CO.

Jan.	21—The Luck of Roaring Camp (Dr.)	490
Jan.	25—A Woman's Strategy (Dr.)	975
Jan.	28—A Georgia Possum Hunt (Des.)	140
Jan.	28—The Skipper's Yarn (Dr.)	850
Feb.	1—The Japanese Peach Boy (Fairy Story)	940
Feb.	4—His Just Deserts (Dr.)	350
Feb.	4—The Surprise Party (Com.)	330
Feb.	4—The Bad Man from Riley's Gulch (Com.)	315
Feb.	8—The Livingston Case (Dr.)	995
Feb.	11—An Equine Hero (Edu.)	725
Feb.	11—A Queen of the Burlesque (Com.)	260
Feb.	15—The President's Special (Dr.)	950
Feb.	18—The Miniature	725
Feb.	18—A Trip to Mars (Scenic)	265

ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.

Jan.	12—Electric Insoles (Com.)	502
Jan.	12—The Old Maid and the Burglar (Com.)	498
Jan.	15—Review of U. S. Troops, Fort Leavenworth (Scenic)	1000
Jan.	12—Home of the Gypsies (Scenic)	321
Jan.	19—The Coast Guard (Dr.)	747
Jan.	19—Riva, Austria, and the Lake of Garda (Scenic)	204
Jan.	26—Tommy in Dreamland (Com.)	491
Jan.	26—The Lass Who Loved a Sailor (Dr.)	417
Feb.	2—Sheltered in the Woods (Dr.)	806
Feb.	2—The Might of the Waters (Sc.)	167
Feb.	9—The Price of Fame (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	12—Western Chivalry (Com.)	568
Feb.	12—Bitter-Sweet (Com.)	450

KALEM CO.

Jan.	7—The Deacon's Daughter (Dr.)	950
Jan.	14—The Romance of a Trained Nurse (Dr.)
Jan.	21—The Magic Flower (Fairy Tale)
Jan.	28—The Man Who Lost (Dr.)	930
Feb.	2—The Step-mother (Dr.)	980
Feb.	4—The Little Old Men of the Woods (Fairy Story)	945
Feb.	9—The Confederate Spy (Dr.)	960
Feb.	11—The Feud (Dr.)	925

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Jan.	13—He Joined the Frat (Com.)	300
Jan.	17—He Got Rid of the Moths (Com.)	540
Jan.	17—A Slippery Day (Com.)	320
Jan.	20—The Usurper (Dr.)	905
Jan.	24—Cupid, D.D.S. (Com.)	356
Jan.	24—Adoring an Ad. (Dr.)	515
Jan.	27—Marble Quarrying in Tennessee (Industrial)	441
Jan.	27—The Flirto-Maniac (Com.)	420
Jan.	31—Bill's Boots (Com.)	245
Jan.	31—Too Much Protection (Com.)	600
Feb.	3—Sentimental Sam (Com.)	300
Feb.	3—It Might Have Been (Com.)	585
Jan.	19—Won by a Holdup (Com.)	629
Jan.	19—Flower Parade at Pasadena, Cal.	292
Jan.	22—The Confession (Dr.)	960
Jan.	26—The Modern Messenger Boy (Com.)	945
Jan.	29—An Outlaw's Sacrifice (Dr.)	996
Feb.	2—The Wrong Man (Com.)	554
Feb.	2—A Voice from the Fireplace (Dr.)	486
Feb.	5—Sensational Logging (Scenic)	1000
Feb.	7—The Samaritan's Courtship (Com.)	865
Feb.	10—Celestial Vengeance (Dr.)	840

GAUMONT.

(George Kleine.)

Jan.	18—Fatal Fascination (Dr.)	580
Jan.	18—Getting Square with the Inventor (C.)	393
Jan.	22—Swallowed by the Deep (Dr.)	977
Jan.	25—The Price of Patriotism (Dr.)	574
Jan.	25—Sea Side Adventures at Home (Com.)	371
Jan.	29—The Great Divide (Dr.)	741
Jan.	29—Wild Waves at St. Jean de Lux (Scenic)	243
Feb.	1—The Golden Lily (Dr.)	702
Feb.	1—Ascending the Jura Mountains (Sc.)	253
Feb.	5—Civil War (Dr.)	940
Feb.	8—Servant from the Country (Com.)	508
Feb.	8—Settled Out of Court (Dr.)	413
Feb.	12—A Bag Race (Com.)	197
Feb.	12—The Gambler's Doom (Dr.)	806

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

(George Kleine.)

Jan.	12—True to His Oath (Dr.)	672
Feb.	9—Coals of Fire (Dr.)	672
Feb.	9—Venetian Isles (Sc.)	263

PATHE FRERES.

Jan.	31—Coffee Culture (Indus.)	568
Jan.	31—Dick's a Winner (Com.)	453
Feb.	2—The Postmistress (Dr.)	918
Feb.	4—Roller Skating in Australia (Sc.)	266
Feb.	4—The Model Drama (Dr.)	718
Feb.	5—A Critical Situation (Com.)	623
Feb.	5—Adam II.—Miscellaneous (Edu.)	354
Feb.	7—The Bandit (Dr.)	394
Feb.	7—The Two Raffles (Com.)	594
Feb.	9—Cora, the Contraband's Daughter (Dr.)	567
Feb.	9—In Ancient Greece (Ballet)	410
Feb.	11—The Troubadour (Com.)	561
Feb.	11—Before and After (Com.)	430
Feb.	12—The Jockey (Dr.)	840
Feb.	12—The Foot Juggler (Acrobatic)	157

SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.

Jan.	24—The Ranch King's Daughter (Dr.)	700
Jan.	24—An Afternoon Off (Com.)	300
Jan.	27—The Devil, the Servant and the Man
Jan.	31—Shooting an Oil Well (Industrial)	715
Jan.	31—Our German Cousin (Com.)	285
Feb.	3—Politics (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	10—In the Shadow of Mt. Shasta (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	7—In the Serpent's Power (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	14—The Roman (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	17—The Girls of the Range (Dr.)	1000

VITAGRAPH COMPANY.

Jan.	8—Richelieu, or the Conspiracy (Dr.)	992
Jan.	11—Call Boy's Vengeance (Com.)	320
Jan.	11—The Old Maid's Valentine (Com.)
Jan.	15—A Sister's Sacrifice (Dr.)	970
Jan.	18—The Toymaker's Secret (Dr.)	969
Jan.	22—A Pair of Schemers (Com.)	743
Jan.	22—Five Minutes to Twelve (Com.)	162
Jan.	25—The Life of Moses, Part 3 (Dr.)	970
Jan.	29—The Girl and the Judge (Dr.)	980
Feb.	1—Caught in His Own Trap (Com.)	503
Fez.	1—The Skeleton (Com.)	440
Feb.	5—Twelfth Night (Dr.)	970
Feb.	8—The Passing Shadow (Dr.)	996
Feb.	12—The Life of Moses, Part IV. (Dr.)	955

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF LICENSED FILMS.

Monday, February 7.

Biograph—The Course of True Love (Dr.)....987 ft.
Lubin—Celestial Vengeance (Dr.)....840 ft.
Pathe—The Bandit (Dr.)....394 ft.
Pathe—The Two Raffles (Com)....594 ft.
Selig—In the Serpent's Power (Dr.)....1000 ft.

Tuesday, February 8.

Vitagraph—The Passing Shadow (Dr.)....996 ft.
Gaumont—Servant From the Country (Com.)..508 ft.
Gaumont—Settled Out of Court (Dr.)....413 ft.
Edison—The Livingston Case (Dr.)....995 ft.

Wednesday, February 9.

Pathe—Cora, the Contraband's Daughter (Dr.)..567 ft.
Pathe—In Ancient Greece (Ballet)....410 ft.
Kalem—The Confederate Spy (Dr.)....960 ft.
Essanay—The Price of Fame (Dr.)....1000 ft.
Urban—Coals of Fire (Dr.)....672 ft.
Urban—Venetian Isles (Scenic)....263 ft.

Thursday, February 10.

Selig—In the Shadow of Mt. Shasta (Dr.)..1000 ft.
Lubin—Celestial Vengeance (Dr.)....840 ft.
Biograph—The Duke's Plan (Dr.)....985 ft.

Friday, February 11.

Edison—An Equine Hero (Educational)....725 ft.
Edison—A Queen of the Burlesque (Com.)...260 ft.
Pathe—The Troubadour (Com.)....561 ft.
Pathe—Before and After (Com.)....430 ft.
Kalem—The Feud (Dr.)....925 ft.

Saturday, February 12.

Pathe—The Jockey (Dr.)....840 ft.
Pathe—The Foot Juggler (Acrobatic)....157 ft.
Essanay—Western Chivalry (Com.)....568 ft.
Essanay—Bitter-Sweet (Com.)....450 ft.
Vitagraph—The Life of Moses (Part IV.) (Dr.)....955 ft.
Gaumont—A Bag Race (Com.)....197 ft.
Gaumont—The Gambler's Doom (Dr.)....806 ft.

Folding and Assembly Chairs

Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use

Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue

PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.

NORTH MANCHESTER, - - - INDIANA

·Essanay Films·

Trade Mark Trade Mark

The Price of Fame

RELEASE OF WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 9

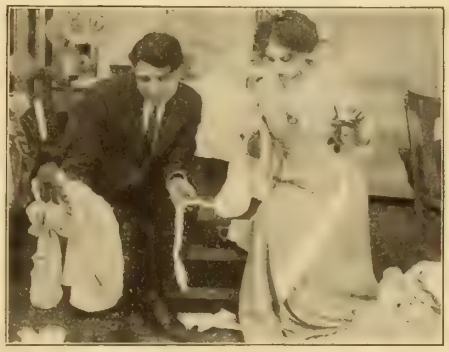
THE PRICE OF FAME

This big Essanay dramatic film is one of the best of recent releases. It is a chapter in the life of a great musical composer, who is still living. The main incidents are true. The length is approximately 1,000 feet.

RELEASE of SATURDAY, FEB. 12

BITTER-SWEET

A pretty little comedy of domestic life. Full of laughter and a few stray tears. The length is approximately 450.



Bitter-Sweet

WESTERN CHIVALRY

A clean cut Western comedy, "Made in the West." Immense! Released with "Bitter-Sweet." Length, approximately, 568 feet.

ORDER ESSANAY POSTERS! WRITE FOR "THE ESSANAY GUIDE"

Essanay Film M'f'g., Co.

FACTORY and STUDIOS 1333 ARGYLE ST. - OFFICE 435 NORTH CLARK ST.
CHICAGO and LONDON, 5 NEW COMPTON ST. W.C.

The Truth About Current Savers

J. H. HALLBERG

ALMOST THREE YEARS AGO when you had to pay two-thirds more for electric current to operate your moving picture lamp with the hot, wasteful and tronblesome rheostat, I got busy inventing the

HALLBERG ECONOMIZER

TO SAVE YOU MONEY

JUST TWO YEARS AGO this month, my first ad. appeared in the MOVING PICTURE journals advertising that I had the "HALLBERG" Automatic Electric Economizer for delivery, and I made the statement that I would give you 50 Amperes at the arc with only 15 Ampere line fuses on 220 volt circuit and 25 Ampere fuses on 110 volts. Some people tried to discredit my statement, and there was considerable controversy in the press, which you will remember.

TO-DAY

EVERYBODY KNOWS that I was right, and all manufacturers of any account have copied, as near as possible, without infringing, the "HALLBERG" Economizer, but I still claim to save more current than any of my competitors, and I positively give 20 to 30 per cent better light, and that is what you are after.

I BUILD

the Economizer for Direct Current as well as Alternating, and will make an allowance in trade for your old current saver.

HERE IS A PROOF

Archbald, Pa., Oct. 31, 1909.

Mr. J. H. HALLBERG.

DEAR SIR:—Since installing the "HALLBERG" Automatic Electric Economizer, the illumination is 100 per cent brighter on the screen. Last evening an exhibitor from a neighboring town visited our theatre, and almost the first question was "where do you get all the light?" He is using an economy coil of another make but confessed that we are getting far better results with your machine. I regard the purchase of your Economizer as the very best investment we have made, as our patrons continually comment upon the brightness of our pictures compared with those shown in other places. Yours very truly,

LYRIC AMUSEMENT CO.,
Richard F. Foote, Mgr.

DON'T FAIL

to inquire about my Flickerless moving picture machines and other important Specialties.

Write for Free Booklet No. W—16

J. H. HALLBERG

28 Greenwich Ave. New York

SCENERY FREE

... For Moving ... Picture Theatres

For FULL INFORMATION, HOW TO GET FREE SCENERY—a complete set front TORMENTOS, FANCY DRAPERY and one or two LEG DROPS, according to depth of your stage, and Back Drop representing a GARDEN SCENE, with BRICK WALL, showing spaces for ADVERTISEMENTS of LOCAL STORES near your PICTURE THEATRE. Write at once. COPY THE FOLLOWING FORM and mail it to us.

	Feet	Feet
Inside Measurements of your Picture Frame,	.....	x.....
Size of your Picture Sheet,	.....	x.....
Distance from Picture Frame to Back Wall	.....	x.....
Distance from Side Wall to Side Wall, Back of Frame,	.....	x.....
Height from Stage Floor to Ceiling,	.....	x.....

TURNER COMPANY

Scenic and Theatric Studio

552 7th Avenue New York

M. P. MEN.—You have to put on Vaudeville Acts or lose money

ELECTRA

Pink

Label

·TRADE MARK·

CARBONS

Superior to all other Carbons on the market

WHY experiment with other Carbons, when the HIGHEST GRADE ELECTRA CARBONS can be had at reasonable prices from the

SOLE IMPORTER

HUGO REISINGER

11 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

MAKE A NOTE OF IT

No matter how particular or cranky your patronage may be

Our Premier Film Service

Will Fill the Bill

The Licensed Mfgrs. skill is shown in every subject—they differ from the ordinary Independent subjects in many respects and by installing our PREMIER SERVICE—you are guaranteed of a better and healthier business.

The Pittsburg Calcium Light & Film Company

Pittsburg, Pa. Des Moines, Ia. Rochester, N. Y.
Wilkes Barre, Pa. Cincinnati, Ohio.
Omaha, Neb.

?

YOU USE DEVELOPER OF COURSE—

HOW ABOUT

"AGFA"--METOL
"AGFA"--HYDROKINONE
"AGFA"--PYRO
"AGFA"--PARAMIDOPHENOL

Also Most Complete Line of Aniline Dyes For Film Coloring—Ask About It

BERLIN ANILINE WORKS

213-215 Water Street :: New York

INDEPENDENT FILMS

LUX FILMS.

Jan. 26—He Would Be an Acrobat.....488
Jan. 26—Uncle Learns to Hypnotize.....498
Feb. 2—Hamlet 950
Feb. 9—Pirate's Fiancee.....698
Feb. 9—The Consequence of a Nod.....311

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.

Jan. 22—Anarchists on Board (Dr.).....
Jan. 29—The Mystery of the Lama Convent (Dr.)
Feb. 5—A Woman's Destiny (Dr.).....740
Feb. 5—The Foxy Soldiers (Com.).....235
Feb. 12—Never Again (Dr.).....715
Feb. 12—Worried to Death (Com.).....280

"IMP."
INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES COMPANY OF AMERICA.

Jan. 10—Right of Love.....975
Jan. 17—The Tide of Fortune.....975
Jan. 24—Never Again (Com.).....615
Jan. 24—A Rose of the Philippines (Dr.).....985
Jan. 31—A Coquette's Suitors (Com.).....650
Jan. 31—Sports in the Snow (Sc.).....950
Feb. 7—Justice in the Far North (Dr.).....950
Feb. 14—The Blind Man's Tact (Dr.).....650
Feb. 14—Brown's Gouty Foot (Com.).....300

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

Jan. 18—A Cowboy's Reward (Dr.).....
Jan. 21—Romany Rob's Revenge (Dr.).....
Jan. 25—A Romance of the Prairie (Bison).....950
Jan. 28—His Imaginary Crime (Bison).....950
Feb. 1—By His Own Hand (Dr.).....
Feb. 4—The Female Bandit (Dr.).....
Feb. 11—Young Deer's Gratitude (Dr.).....
Feb. 8—Ten of Spades (Dr.).....

ITALA.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Jan. 12—Episode of Napoleon's War with Spain.800
Jan. 22—There Are Some Ghosts.....400
Jan. 22—The Tempting Collar.....600
Jan. 29—The Timid One.....550
Jan. 29—A Good Winning.....430
Feb. 5—Love and Treason.....1000
Feb. 12—Foolshead Receives (Com.).....
Feb. 12—Foolshead Preaches Temperance (Com.)

AMBROSIO.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Jan. 15—The Son of the Wilderness.....925
Jan. 19—Pauli 700
Jan. 19—Italian Artillery.....300
Jan. 26—The Last Keepsake.....600
Jan. 26—A Choice Policeman.....400
Feb. 2—Hero and Leander.....850
Feb. 9—The Longing for Goal (Dr.).....
Feb. 9—The Strongest (Dr.).....

ECLAIR COMPANY.

Feb. 7—The Child with the Dancing Jack (C.).480
Feb. 7—Mr. Giddy's Revenge (Com.).....400
Feb. 14—A Bootblack's Daily Labor in Algiers (Sc.).....
Feb. 14—The Serum (Dr.).....

INDEPENDENT FILMS.

The following films have been released by The Empire Film Company, 150 East 14th St., corner Third Ave., New York.

Jan. 26—Artist's Inspiration (Actophone).....980
Jan. 26—Last Keepsake (Ambrosio).....575
Jan. 26—Choice Policeman (Ambrosio).....455
Jan. 26—Athlete of a New Kind.....268
Jan. 26—Angler and the Cyclist.....385
Jan. 26—Walkaway's New Boots.....365
Jan. 26—Lyvenemupp's Elixir.....295
Jan. 27—Uncle Learns to Hypnotize (Lux).....498
Jan. 27—He Would Be an Acrobat (Lux).....488
Jan. 27—Ordeal of Bonehead (Centaur).....1011
Jan. 28—His Imaginary Crime (Bison).....991
Jan. 28—The Wonderful Pearl.....780
Jan. 29—The Mystery of Lama Convent (G.N.).1000
Jan. 29—The Timid One (Itala).....658
Jan. 29—A Good Winning (Itala).....326
Jan. 29—Tale of Colonial Days (Pantograph).....895
Jan. 31—A Coquette's Suitors (Imp).....650
Jan. 31—Sports in the Snow (Imp).....300
Feb. 1—The Female Bandit (Bison).....1000
Feb. 2—Hero and Leander (Ambrosio).....820
Feb. 2—Clown's Big Moment (Actophone).....1000
Feb. 3—Hamlet, Prince of Denmark (Lux).....950
Feb. 3—Justice (Centaur) 960
Feb. 4—Strike Instigator (Cines).....600
Feb. 4—Winter Days in Sweden (Hepworth).....310
Feb. 4—By His Own Hand (Bison).....1000

CALEHUFF

A Member of the
FILM SERVICE ASSOCIATION

Headquarters for only the best of latest FILMS and SONG SLIDES. No junk.
MACHINES, SUPPLIES, Etc.

LATEST SONG SLIDES
$5.00 per set

N. E. Cor. 4th & Green Streets,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

"TITLE POSTERS"

Are THE Thing for Advertising

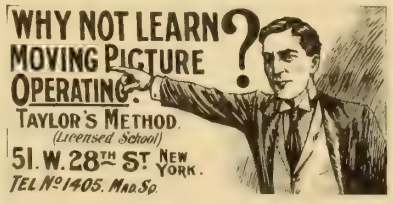
MOVING PICTURES

They cost 5c each or by mail 6c. The full service of one poster for every licensed subject released for a month costs only $7.50 including prepaid delivery charges.

Free Sample for the Asking

TITLE POSTER CO.
231-233 Bowery, New York

A Poster for Every Picture



Class meets every morning and afternoon with F. H. Richardson of Chicago, as chief instructor. Evening classes meet every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Complete course $15. We positively guarantee you a $15 positionn We are selling agents for the American Moving Picture machine, and have a second hand Edison machine in A No 1 condition, at one half of the original cost.

F. C. TAYLOR

51 West 28th Street, New York, N. Y.

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2.

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

EXHIBITORS! ATTENTION!

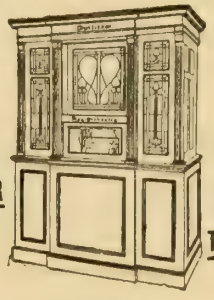
Do you wish an Exclusive Independent Film Service, free from Repeaters, Rain-Storms and Junk films? If so, write us to-day, and get full particulars of our Moderate price, Guaranteed Anti-Rain Storm, strictly INDEPENDENT, film service. Remember, we guarantee strictly Independent films, not old Association Junk, as we have regular releases with all leading American, and best of Foreign film manufacturers. We give a better service than is promised. Write to-day.

THE BUCKEYE FILM & PROJECTING CO. (Inc.)

309-311 Arcade Building, Dayton, Ohio

Wurlitzer
55 YEARS LEADERS IN MUSIC

BETTER MUSIC AT SMALLER COST



FOR ALL MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

Have you investigated the Wurlitzer PianOrchestra?

The leading Nickelodeons are putting in this marvelous Automatic Orchestra. It furnishes better music than a regular orchestra of 5 to 25 pieces, is always "on the job," and cuts out the enormous expense of musicians. The money saved pays rent.

Easy terms, less than paid to musicians. We supply the U. S. Gov't. with musical Instruments. Write for big 96-page catalog & testimonial booklet showing Wurlitzer PianOrchestras in leading Nickelodeons.

The RUDOLPH WURLITZER Co
World's Largest Mfrs. Automatic Mus. Insts.
NEW YORK CINCINNATI CHICAGO
25-27 W. 32d 117-121 E. 4th 266-268 Wabash

WANTED TO BUY—Pathe Freres Passion Play. Must be in A-1 condition and cheap. Address THE HIGHLANDS COMPANY, T. D. Smith, Mgr., Warrensburg, Mo.

Open Twenty-Four Hours Every Day—Write, Call, Wire or Phone Any Hour, Day or Night

ELECTRIC THEATRE SUPPLY CO., Inc.
The Home of Good Film Service
The Birthplace of Original Ideas

We Handle Everything Needed by Moving Picture Exhibitors
44 N. Tenth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
We have every subject issued by the Licensed Manufacturers

MOTIOGRAPH, PATHE FRERES, POWER'S, EDISON and LUBIN MACHINES, HALLBERG ECONOMIZERS and PARTS ALWAYS ON HAND

Write for our new proposition:—Supplying two customers in the same town each with twelve reels a week, keeping each one's supply away from the other, and no repeaters to either

Mamma Ten Percent is Dying, Boys!

Poor Old Mamma Ten Percent is on her last legs. So many exhibitors have turned Independent that she is broken hearted. She worked beautifully until I told her secret, and then she began to give way at the knees. Exhibitors everywhere are setting up such an everlasting howl against paying a ten percent penalty for the doubtful privilege of switching their business from one to another licensed exchange, that the exchange folks are fighting each other. Some want to drop the penalty. Others don't. But I have it from an honest source that within thirty days, or less. Old Mamma Ten Percent will kick the bucket, fly the coop, cash in, croak, shuffle off, breathe her last, turn up her toes and die. Old Doctor Laemmle gave her an overdose of exposure. If there's anything else I can do to help the exhibitor get a square deal, let me know. Meanwhile I'm still doing business at the old stand with all the new Independent films. Shed a crocodile tear for poor old Maw Ten Percent and drop me a note.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

THE LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE

Headquarters

196-198 Lake Street : : Chicago

Minneapolis, Portland, Omaha, Salt Lake City, Evansville

(Canadian Office in Montreal)

The biggest and best film renter in the world

UNIFORMS

If You Want to Improve the Appearance of Your Theatre

Uniform Your Attendants

IT PAYS

Send for Catalogue of the Latest Uniforms and Caps for Moving Picture Theatres

S. VORNOST

109 Randolph Street

Suite 913-915 Chicago, Ill.

CAPS

LECTURES on Suitable Subjects in Moving Pictures are a pleasing and attractive feature and always appreciated by your patrons. The peer and pioneer of lectures or "picture readings" with moving pictures is acknowledged to be

W. STEPHEN BUSH

Pleased to correspond with exhibitors

44 North 10th Street - - - Philadelphia, Pa.

THE MIRROR SCREEN

Makes your pictures brighter, more beautiful and more captivating. Pictures almost stereoscopic—there is nothing like it. Don't let the other fellow get ahead of you. Order one and be convinced.

Write to-day for Terms and Prices

Motion Picture Screen Co.

SHELBYVILLE INDIANA

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS

The Big Ticket. Any Printing. Any Colors.

5,000 - - - - $1.25	20,000 - - - - $4.60	50,000 - - - - $7.50
10,000 - - - - 2.50	25,000 - - - - 5.50	100,000 - - - - 10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

GREAT NORTHERN
QUALITY FILMS

Next Release, February 5th

A Woman's Destiny

Strong Dramatic Production

LENGTH, 740 FEET

The Foxy Soldiers

Or, How Schmitt Got to the Masquerade

COMEDY LENGTH, 245 FEET

Releases for February 12th

Never Dispair

Or, From Misery to Happiness

Dramatic Feature Subject

LENGTH APPROX. 715 FEET

Worried to Death

COMEDY LENGHT APPRPX. 280 FEET

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO. 7 E. 14th STREET NEW YORK

FILM EXCHANGES!
Read the Cold Truth

With the new film manufacturers springing up continually, can you afford to buy the entire output? (NO.) For each new print you buy weekly you must increase your rentals at least One Hundred Dollars; then you are working eighteen hours out of the twenty-four trying to earn enough money to pay for your films. YOUR BUSINESS increases, but your profits stand still.

Who gets the profits on the additional increase of business? THE MANUFACTURER.

Poor renter the burden of the work is on you, if the film you buy is poor they kick with you. If the business drops off in the summer the exhibitors want cheaper service. Who suffers? THE FILM RENTER.

One morning you come down and find a couple hundred dollars decrease in your rentals; but films you must continue to buy. For the hard work and long hours you all put in you should earn larger profits.

HERE IS HOW YOU CAN DO IT: EXCHANGE THE REELS THAT HAVE BEEN OVER YOUR CIRCUIT AND THAT ARE NOW LYING IDLE ON YOUR SHELVES FOR REELS THAT YOU DID NOT BUY AND THAT YOU CAN SEND OVER YOUR CIRCUIT. WE WILL EXCHANGE FOR YOU WEEKLY ANY NUMBER OF REELS YOU WISH.

All reels are put in perfect shape and a fair and equal exchange guaranteed. Special attention given to the exchanging of films of the same age. You can always exchange the same reels over again if you wish. All exchanging of film done strictly confidentially. Dealing with all leading exchanges. This is your opportunity to save several hundred dollars weekly.

Films only in good physical condition exchanged. No junk wanted.

Write at once sending names of manufacturers' films you are now buying and we will send you names of films we will exchange for those you have on hand.

Exchange Film Trading Co.
10 East Fifteenth Street = = = New York

FILMS FOR RENT

NEW FILMS—HIGH CLASS SERVICE

The Pioneer House, With 8 Years Experience
And $250,000.00 Back Of It

Write To-day For Terms

EUGENE CLINE

57 and 59 Dearborn Street, Chicago

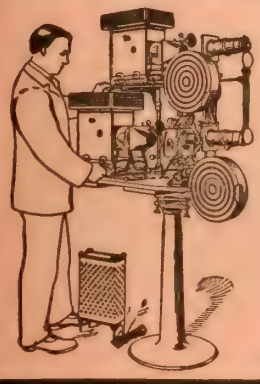
Vol. 6., No. 7. February 19, 1910 Price, 10 Cents

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

WHICH IS INCORPORATING THE EXHIBITOR

ALL THE FILM AND SONG SLIDE NEWS

Published Weekly by THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING CO., 125 E. 23d ST., NEW YORK



The Motiograph Motion Picture Machine is A Wonder

AND WILL INCREASE YOUR BUSINESS

It projects Flickerless, Steady and Wonderfully Brilliant pictures, has Patented 1½ minute Rewind from main crank, revolving Magazines, Automatic Fireproof shutter, etc., not found in other Machines.—WILL WEAR TWICE AS LONG.

C. H. D. of Keokuk, Iowa, writes: Motiograph Making a Big Hit and Business increased wonderfully.

F. L. F. of Chicago, Ill., writes: "Used every day for seven months, and not one penny for repairs."

F. J. K. of Kansas City, writes: "Operating Motiograph nearly two years. Have operated all makes, but none to compare with Motiograph.—PRICES, $150.00 AND UP

The Enterprise Calcium Gas Outfit is the only satisfactory substitute for electric light Write for Catalog to-day

Western Representatives { S. Lubin Geo. Melies FILM

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564-572 West Randolph Street, Chicago

Calcium Gas Outfit

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

143 North 8th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Best and Newest Independent American and Foreign Films

SUPPLIES——18 REELS PER WEEK——SUPPLIES

PROMPT AND RELIABLE SERVICE

Members N. I. M. P. Alliance

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

Power's Cameragraph No. 5

Power's Cameragraph No. 6

Guaranteed for 1 Year

"Power's" means Perfect in Moving Pictures

Power's Inductor for alternating current

Power's "Bill Splitter" for direct current

Power's Tool Kit

Send for Catalog G

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115-117 Nassau St., New York

BISON FILMS

TRADE MARK

Regular Release Days—Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday, Saturday

FOUR REELS A WEEK—Tuesday, a "Bison"—Wednesday, Ambrosio—Friday, a "Bison"—Saturday, Itala

"AGAIN WE SCORE A SUCCESS"

THE FOUR GREATEST RELEASES OF THE YEAR

Tuesday, Feb. 15th—A "BISON"

"COVERNMENT RATIONS"

Code—"Steal"

A picture of life on an Indian reservation, showing the most realistic battle between the Indians and white man ever produced.

Wednesday Feb. 16th—"AMBROSIO"

"THE SILENT PIANO"

"I HAVE LOST MY LATCH KEY"

Code—"Silent"

"The Silent Piano," a story telling how love conquers duty,—followed by "I Have Lost My Latch Key," a ludicrous farce from beginning to end.

Friday, Feb. 18th—A "BISON"

"DOOLEY'S HOLIDAY"

"THE IMPOSTOR"

Code—"Sting"

Another "Bison" double header—Dooley's Holiday," a side splitting comedy, and "The Impostor," a great melodramatic picture ending with a pretty romance.

Saturday Feb. 19th—"ITALA"

"LOUISE STROZZI"

Code—"Strong"

A story of love, devotion and rascality, blended closely. Showing the treachery of a faithless friend and the true wife, who would rather die than be false.

LITHOGRAPHS AND POSTERS FREE

Exhibitors:—We furnish as usual all exchanges handling these productions with one sheet four colored lithographs, also posters containing synopsis' absolutely free with each reel Demand same from your exchange as they will positively increase your box office receipts.
Brief description of all subjects will be found on another page.

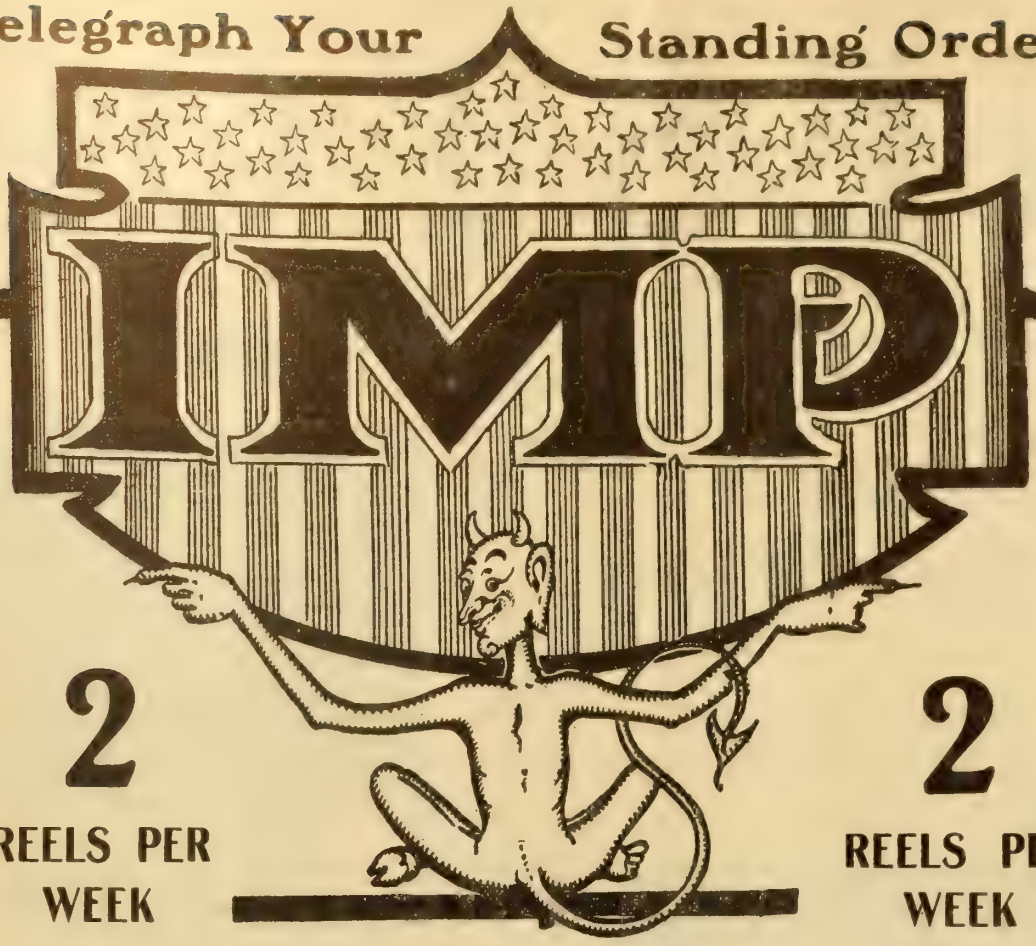
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

Manufacturers of "Bison" Life Motion Pictures

429 SIXTH AVENUE, Cor. 26th Street - NEW YORK CITY

Phone 6690-1 Madison Sq. Cable Address: Nosib

Telegraph Your Standing Orders



2 REELS PER WEEK

2 REELS PER WEEK

Thank Heavens! We're Ready To Release Two Imp Reels A Week!

In spite of frantic letters and telegrams from exhibitors and exchanges, we've been holding off on this double release plan until we were dead sure we could maintain our high standard of quality. And now we're dead sure of it. Our new studio is working gloriously, every member of the staff is enthused to the highest pitch and we think you'll be just as daffy as we are over our next releases. Monday and Thursday will be our release dates, and we start like this:—

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 21st

"Jane and the Stranger"

About 900 ft. of love, elopement, treachery, excitement, happy ending, great acting and plueperfect photography. This film is in keeping with the grand triumphant march of progress of the "Imp". Ask for it. Demand it. Get it. Then feature it!

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 24th

"The Death of Minnehaha"

A sequel to our "Hiawatha," but a story complete in itself, whether you've had "Hiawatha" or not. In "The Death of Minnehaha" we show the winter scenes from Longfellow's poem, and the whole thing is beautiful, exquisitely beautiful. Ask your exchange!

EXCHANGES!—In order to insure early arrival, place your standing order for our second weekly release by wire at once.

EXHIBITORS!—Be sure to feature our Feb. 7th release "Justice in the Far North". It will give your competitor a pain in the purse!

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP AMERICA

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP AMERICA

Independent Moving Pictures Company of America,
111 E. 14th St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres.

NESTOR FILMS

A Daughter's Devotion

550 FEET

A beautiful little drama. The acting is great, and photographically it is without a flaw.

The Old Maid and Bonehead

450 FEET

Our Bonehead series have proved to be the funniest thing in pictures ever made, and this is the best yet.

Released on one reel, Wednesday, February 16th. Large four color lithos with this release, free of charge, and they are made from actual scenes.

OUR NEXT RELEASE, FEBRUARY 23d LENGTH 990 FEET

IN ARIZONA!

A magnificent story, superbly acted, real bronco's ridden by real cowboys, and photographically perfect. About one half of this picture will be beautifully tinted, not by any secret method of our own, nor to cover up defects in photography, which is often done, but to heighten the effect of night scenes, and because it belongs.

NESTOR FILMS

ARE SOLD BY

A. G. WHYTE

1 MADISON AVENUE NEW YORK

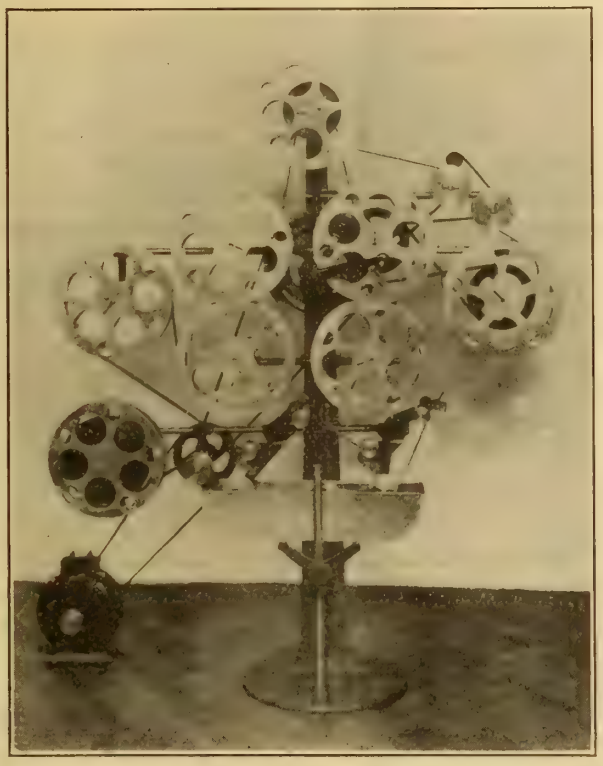
TRADE MARK
WATERPROOF

Waterproofed Films

like all others will soil, but unlike all others they can be cleaned with

Soap and Water



This machine does it in 10 minutes

ALL EXCHANGES NEED ONE

National Waterproof Film Co.

4200-4202 W. Adams Street
CHICAGO, ILL.

The Excela Soundograph

The only complete and up-to-date effect-producing machine ever invented is now complete and ready for the exhibitors. Everybody pronounces it a wonder. Almost any sound or effect imaginable is easily and realistically produced by simply turning a crank, pulling a handle or pushing a button. The effects are all mounted in a handsome cabinet structure, 25 x 40 inches square and 42 inches high, with means exterior for the operation of each effect separately, or they can be operated in combinations. The Soundograph can be located either in the orchestra, pit or back of the screen as the exhibitor prefers. No expert operator is required, any one person is all that is needed to operate the Soundograph and produce perfect sound effects. A boy or some other employee of the theatre learns quickly to work the effects, thus relieving the exhibitor of the services of an expensive operator. It will put life and realism in your pictures and delight your audiences. It holds their interest and attention to the end of the reel and assures you of big box office receipts every day.

Let us ship you a Soundograph now

PRICE, $150.00

EXCELA SOUNDOGRAPH CO.

PITTSBURG, PA.
Office 1101 Empire Building

ECLAIR FILMS

FIRST RELEASE, FEBRUARY 7th, 1910
and Regularly Each Monday Following

The Serum
Antidote

Shows a noted scientist in his laboratory with his assistant, working out an antidote for the serpent's venom, but being called to his office is obliged to leave his wife alone with his assistant, who loses no time in trying to take advantage of the opportunity, the same having a very tragic end.

A Bootblack's Daily Labor in Algiers
Comedy

This film portrays very naturally the care-free life of the little "CIRI" who runs here and there stealing and earning what he can in a most innocent way.

Duty and Conscience

A pathetic story of a great struggle against poverty and conditions, yielding to temptation, and a moral issue, which vindicates the universal law of love.

Face to Face

This is a film of highest dramatic interest; a heartrending story of the Vendean War, enacted by the well-known M. Volbert.

ECLAIR FILM COMPANY
31 East 27th Street - - New York City

SONG SLIDES

JUST ILLUSTRATED

L I D E — L I D E

I've Just Got Time To Say Good Bye
Daddy's Doll
Could You Learn To Love Me
Dreams That I Dream Of You
My Irish Prairie Queen

We make Lantern Slides of anything and everything for any and every purpose

Send for our special prices on Announcement Slides

NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO., 143 North 8th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SONG SLIDES

FLOODED!

Not Paris, but Ourselves, with Orders Since we Inaugurated that Rate of

25c. a set per WEEK

Hundreds now getting their slide service independent of their film. Get in line and write for our immense slide list to-day.

Your weekly supply shipped in one consignment every week, which saves you express charges.

Chicago Song Slide Exchange
NINTH FLOOR
MASONIC TEMPLE :: CHICAGO, ILL.

HEY THERE! Mr. Picture Man, Listen:

To introduce them we will sell you 4, just think, 4, beautiful announcement slides for $1, plus 10c. postage. Or, if you are doubtful and an unbeliever, send 25c. for one, because we know you will come again. You get the best here. Send for list. Do it now for, unless our system is out of order, WE can satisfy you.

Tell the other fellow about this. DON'T keep a good thing to yourself.

NIAGARA SLIDE COMPANY, Lockport, N. Y.

Original Slide Makers from SLIDEVILLE.

NOVELTY PUZZLETTES

WEEKLY RELEASE OF NEW SUBJECTS NOW READY

"Cities of the United States"
"States of the United States"
"Popular Flowers"
"Girl's Names"
"Letters of the Alphabet"

Try a Set Ask Your Exchange or we'll Rent You a Set Direct

NOVELTY SLIDE COMPANY
221 East 53d Street 10 East 14th Street
NEW YORK CITY

Paramount Film Company

INDEPENDENT FILM RENTERS OF QUALITY

Moving Picture Machines and Everything Pertaining to the Business

OFFICES

New York	Bridgeport, Conn.
61 WEST 14th STREET	1188 MAIN STREET
Near 6th Ave.—Phone, 2442 Chelsea	Near Depot—Phone, 1663, Ring ½

MOTION PICTURE PIANO MUSIC

This is a book of descriptive music, regular sheet music size, and arranged for both hands. Specially selected, arranged and composed by one of the best descriptive Pianists in the U. S., who for the past twenty years has been Musical Director in all lines of Theatrical Productions. This work is the result of actual experience, and is now being used in hundreds of M. P. Theatres. Contains music, for all probable scenes, actions, characters, etc., and its suggestions are entirely practical. Increases the value of YOUR SHOW 100%. Descriptive circular sent free to any one upon request. This book sent promptly upon receipt of price. $1.00. Remit either by P. O. or Express Order, Draft or Check to

GREGG A. FRELINGER
1009 Ferry Street Lafayette, Ind.

The Magnetic Film Service Company
INCORPORATED

Successor to

Lubin Film Service Company
123 Shillito Place, Cincinnati

The Best Service
Thoroughly Inspected Films
Prompt and Careful Shipments

Write for Information and Catalog

LUX FILMS

RELEASED WED.

THE MAN WHO COULD NOT SIT DOWN

This is the story of an unlucky gentleman against whom nature seems to have pitted herself in a ruthless manner. At an early hour he sallies forth to the park, where, with his morning paper, he settles down for a quiet read. His first tormentor takes the form of a painter who politely informs him that the seat is to be painted. The gentleman takes a seat elsewhere. His neighbors, who are enjoying a meal, soon make their position known, and the worthy gentleman is forced to flee before the odor of onions. The day's adventures come to a climax when he rests on the basin of an ornamental fountain and falls into the water. At last he finds relief by lying on the floor at home. LENGTH, 468 FEET

FEBRUARY 16th

HER DOLLY'S REVENGE

A discontented little girl scolds her dolly and goes to bed sulkily. During the night we see her dolly walk calmly into her bedroom, and taking the scissors out of a work-basket, stabs her little owner to death. When next we see poor dolly she is before the judge and sentenced to death. The little girl awakes to find that, to her great joy, her dolly is quite well and does not appear to be suffering from any consciousness of such unladylike schemes.
LENGTH, 324 FEET

For full description of these subjects see another page in this issue.

THE WORLD'S BEST—BAR NONE

Write for Weekly List of Descriptions of our Films

R. PRIEUR

10 E. 15th Street Telephone Call: STUYVESANT 3124 NEW YORK

Have you seen "Hamlet," a Lux classic reel of great power and beauty. Large posters for Hamlet sent to any exhibitor on receipt of 5 cents for postage.

Independent Film Service

PIEDMONT FILM EXCHANGE

GOLDSBORO, N. C.

We rent exclusively Independent Films at the right price. Write us today for quotations. We ship near, far and wide.

We buy and sell good Independent Films, Machines, Song Slides and Supplies of all kinds.

If you want to rent, sell or buy, communicate with us

A Drawing Card for Moving Picture Theatres

Louise M. Marion

IN

Illustrated poems, now booking in Moving Picture Houses in and out of town, also for professional entertainment.

Miss Marion is presenting several beautiful poems written by Fred Emmerson Brooks, which she has illustrated with special permission from the author. This work never fails to make a hit on every occasion.

Operator, Vaudeville Sketch and music furnished when desired. Highest testimonials Terms reasonable.

LOUISE M. MARION
321 West 23rd Street New York City

THE FIRST PARIS FLOOD SLIDES

No Advertising Stunt its equal. It will pack your house, for Everyone will want to see the Flood that cost PARIS $200,000,000.00. These photographs especially taken for us during the Flood. 12 Colored Slides, Title and short Lecture Reading $6.00 :: :: :: ::

GENRE TRANSPARENCY COMPANY 507 NORTH CLARK STREET CHICAGO, ILL.

THE REASON WHY

VITAGRAPH

"LIFE PORTRAYALS"

ARE NOW THREE REELS PER WEEK

Every Tuesday—Friday—Saturday

BECAUSE

The public demands them of the exhibitors; the exhibitors demand them of the Exchanges, and what the public and exhibitors demand the exchanges and

THE MANUFACTURER MUST SUPPLY.

The Law of Supply and Demand Governs

IT IS INEXORABLE, INEVITABLE, IMMUTABLE, OMNIPOTENT.

VITAGRAPH FILMS are so strong, so powerful, so gripping, so elaborate, so entertaining, so beautiful, so popular that no picture program is satisfactory without them.

YOU MUST HAVE VITAGRAPH FILMS

Vitagraph Dramas stir and thrill the heart.
Vitagraph Comedies convulse and delight the senses.
Vitagraph Spectacular Scenes attract and fascinate the eye.
Vitagraph Religious Films inspire and captivate the soul.
Vitagraph Historical Subjects educate and entertain the mind.

VITAGRAPH FILMS CHARM BY THEIR TRUTH TO NATURE.

They hold up the mirror to life as it is and has been. They are produced regardless of expense. They represent "the last word" in film production.

EVERY VITAGRAPH FILM is a work of pictorial and dramatic art. There are no failures, no weak ones. ALL ARE DEPENDABLE and can always be relied upon to head the bill. The past three months have been the greatest in the Company's history in the regular production of masterly picture successes and have established the reputation of VITAGRAPH FILMS on a firm and solid foundation. For this reason none of them hereafter will be specially distinguished by such terms as "Films of Quality," "High Art Films" or "Films de Luxe."

ALL ARE EQUALLY GOOD—ALL ARE FEATURE FILMS, and will be known as "VITAGRAPH LIFE PORTRAYALS."

THREE REELS PER WEEKS — YOU DARE NOT MISS ONE OF THEM.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 15.

THE WAYSIDE SHRINE

A SCENIC AND DRAMATIC TRIUMPH. This love story of strong heart interest is depicted amidst American scenes that challenge the finest in Europe. Approximate length, 930 feet.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 18.

MURIEL'S STRATAGEM

RICH IN COMEDY, STRONG IN LOVE. A picture that wins by its charming qualities. Laughter tempered by dramatic interest. Approximate length, 655 feet.

TRIP THROUGH NORTH OF ENGLAND

SCENIC FILM OF MARVELOUS INTEREST. This is the first of a series of travel films now in preparation by the Vitagraph Company. Approximate length, 320 feet.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 19.

Fifth and Final Reel of "LIFE OF MOSES"

THE PROMISED LAND

LAST AND GREATEST OF ALL in this magnificent series of Biblical Pictures, beyond question the peer of "The Passion Play" in drawing power. Approximate length, 990 feet.

Special arrangements may be made for the entire "MOSES" series for traveling or regular exhibitions. Ask your exchange or write us. USE VITAGRAPH POSTERS. ORDER FROM YOUR EXCHANGE.

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

NEW YORK, 116 Nassau St.
CHICAGO, 109 Randolph St.
LONDON, 25 Cecil Court
PARIS, 15, Rue Sainte-Cecile

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY - 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

EDITORS: J. P. CHALMERS, THOMAS BEDDING, F. R. P. S.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rica and the Philippine Islands.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3⅜ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.

TIME DISCOUNTS: 5% two or more insertions, 10% three months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

G. P. VON HARLEMAN, Western Representative, 913-915 Schiller Building, Chicago, Ill. - Telephone, Central 3763

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 7 FEBRUARY 19, 1910 No. 6

Summary of the Week.

Black and White Pictures....245
The Sunday Question....246
Clashing of Subjects....246
Programs for Children....246
Pictures Supersede Puppet Shows....247
Usefulness of Moving Pictures....247
The Motion Picture Story a New Literary Form....248
"Lux Graphicus" Commends the Travelogue....249
"Man-About-Town" Keeps His Eyes on the Shows....250
Small Town Locations....251
The Woman and the Gorilla....251
A Bugaboo....252
Methods of Toning Lantern Slides....253
The Picture Business in Canada....254
Operators' Column....255
About Motion Picture Actors and Actresses....256
Los Angeles Attracts Three Producing Companies....256
Charles Urban Gives His Whole Time to Kinemacolor..262

Black and White Pictures.

DO THE PUBLIC PREFER THEM?

In reference to the article which we printed last week on the subject of orthochromatic moving pictures, several of our friends who are actually engaged in the making and development of the pictures have, in some sort, joined issue with us. They say that the public is at present not educated up either to the perception or the appreciation of moving pictures in which the tone values correctly rendered. In other words, from the purely pictorial standpoint, the public does not know a good picture when it sees it.

Maybe there is some truth as there is certainly a great deal of force in all this. The public is slow to accept innovations, especially innovations in the artistic direction. For example: Wagner's music-dramas. When these were first presented to the New York public 20 or 30 years ago they were jeered at. People did not understand Wagner's music or the dramas around which he wrote the music. They seemed to them to have no melody, tunefulness or any of the other characteristics of what was once considered good operatic music. But, now, mark the change! Wagner's music—even inscrutable as it was once regarded by operagoers—is now accepted as a matter of course. Wagner is looked upon as a great musical tone poet. He, too, is being succeeded by such composers as Dr. Richard Strauss, whose "Elecktra," produced the other day, is a theme of much discussion in musical circles just now on account of its unconventionality and disresemblance to all previous forms of musical expression.

So it seems, after all, slow though it may be to accept artistic innovations, the public comes to them sooner or later if they are rational, scientific and based upon fixed definite principles. It is upon this basis that the orthochromatic moving picture rests. We will concede that the public is not quite ripe for appreciating moving pictures with correct tone values. But that time will surely come.

And it will come, oddly enough, because of the public's present preference, that has been pointed out to us by our friends in the manufacturing end of matters—a preference for the black and white picture—the black and white picture, let us say, of the Biograph kind. This type of picture is deservedly popular, because it gives a fine, rich deposit in the shadows and clear, delicate lights. It has, one might call it, the engraving-like quality which we all appreciate. All the same, however, the human eye is not accustomed to monochrome. Nature, itself, as we have pointed out before, is polychromatic and not monochromatic, that is to say, it is composed of many colors or luminosities or depths or shades. Any convenient term can be chosen for expressing our meaning. And sure enough as the education of the public in moving pictures progresses it will demand that its pictures on the screen shall not be monochromatic, but shall correspond to nature. The result would be that the black and white picture will be relegated to comparative obscurity. Already the change is apparent and is in progress. You have, as we pointed out last week, pictures of the Gaumont and Urban-Eclipse type which are orthochromatic in quality. Then you have the Pathe colored picture, also the tinted picture. All these are so many concessions to orthochromatism or correct tone rendering. It should be pointed out that the preference of the public for black and white pictures of the kind we are referring to is accountable for on several grounds other than those of their photographic quality. They are exceedingly well acted, well staged productions and would be popular, we think, no matter what color the film is printed to.

The Sunday Question.

The courts, we see, are again being agitated by the Sabbatarians who want to shut up the moving picture house on Sunday. The Sabbatarians are at the back of the movement for securing from the Appellate Division of the New York Supreme Court a decision declaring illegal all Sunday performances in theaters, except sacred concerts and performances of an educational character. This means, in plain English, that all the theaters of the city and, we presume, of the State, should be closed on the Sunday. Sacred concerts and performances of an educational character are not the kind of thing that anybody wants to go out, especially on Sunday, to listen to. One way and another there is quite enough of this pabulum on the other six days of the week. There are the sacred and educational influences of work; the pursuit of one's daily bread for those six days. We think people need a change on a Sunday, something of a restful, lightly amusing, restorative character. The kind of thing that one gets in a well conducted moving picture house, for example—the kind of things that we sat and listened to the other evening when Henry Lee took us around the world.

It is curious to note that the land which gave Sabbatarianism, Puritanism and religious bigotry its birth, England, is just this moment in the throes of a Sabbath question as regards the moving picture house. The authorities are trying to close the moving picture house there on Sunday, whereas the saloon, the concert room and, in Summer, open air music performances are permitted. It was only recently in England that art museums were allowed to be opened on Sunday. The English Sunday is the dullest and most despondent day on the face of the earth. The moving picture men and others are trying to lift this reproach. There is nowhere, say they, for the poor man to go on a Sunday afternoon or evening but to church or the saloon. The moving picture men are for up-to-date, inexpensive entertainments and want to provide him with an alternative to these places.

We hope all moving picture men, not only in New York City, but in other States, will fight hard both individually and by combination against the Sabbatarians who want to close the moving picture house on Sunday. Last Sunday were were curious to study for ourselves the attitude of a moving picture audience towards the entertainment on a Sunday morning during church time. So between the hours of 11 and 1 we sat in one of the best known moving picture theaters on East Fourteenth street, New York City. The floor of the house was filled by an orderly assemblage who were interested in the pictures by Biograph, Pathe, Urban-Eclipse, following them with an intelligent interest, laughing moderately where laughter was called for, and in every other respect showing an intelligent interest in the stories and scenes of industrial and other phenomena exhibited on the screen. Where is the harm in all this, we ask? The audience was thoroughly well behaved, they were refreshed in their minds, after the late labor of the Saturday, and we have no doubt that each and every one of them left the theater the better for the pictures they saw.

These people do not frequent art museums; they are not profound students of literature, they are just the ordinary, work-a-day class who seek change in recreation on a Sunday. If the Sabbatarians deprived them of such an opportunity their money, instead of going into the pockets of the moving picture theater owner, would go into those of the saloon keepers. For ourselves, we prefer that these dimes and nickels should go to the film maker rather than to the brewer. Which would the Sabbatarians prefer, we wonder?

Clashing of Subjects.

Within a few days of each other two films will shortly be released each dealing with the same subject. That subject is "Carmen." One is a French made picture and the other made in this country. The moving picture public therefore will have an opportunity of intsituting a comparison between two different kinds or rather schools of treatment of the same subject. "Carmen," if we remember aright, is a Spanish theme, treated by a French writer, Prosper Merimée. Then Georges Bizet wrote the music of the opera. The music of the opera has made the story world-famous. It occasionally figures as a ballet d'action. It was inevitable, of course, that it should figure on the moving picture screen, and we, ourselves, are looking forward to seeing how the American version compares with the French version.

This fact has suggested to us the reflection that it is, perhaps, generally speaking, unfortunate that there should be any clashing of subjects amongst the film makers. It is, we think, regrettable, although possibly unavoidable, because the comparisons provoked can hardly be agreeable to either party. What we would like to see would be each film maker when dealing with narrative subjects work to his own list. We throw out the suggestion that the representatives of the film makers should get together and agree, as far as possible, not to clash in the selection of well known subjects. A French made "Hamlet" is now being released in this country. If there has not been an American made "Hamlet," it is tolerably sure to come. "Macbeth," too, is also being put on this market. This is a picture also made in France. The treatment of such well known subjects as these is bound to vary with the particular country in which the pictures are made. The result is that the moving picture public will be somewhat puzzled as to which is the archæologically and histrionically correct version. We well remember a great actor of French extraction playing "Hamlet"; he provoked many smiles. Equally so when an American producer handles a French subject of historic interest, it is difficult for him to get into the proper spirit of the production.

Of course, it may be argued that with an open market and with a choice of subjects competition makes for the popularity of the best work of the public. On the other hand, we think that clashing from the business standpoint is bound to injuriously affect the competitors. It is quite conceivable that our weekly release of licensed releases may contain exactly the same subjects from two or more makers—a state of things which our suggestion is intended to obviate. Whereas, if there was an agreement amongst the makers, or at any rate a previous understanding, clashing would be avoided. Something in the nature of an exchange is needed amongst the makers for carrying out this suggestion of ours, if it is thought worth while by the powers that be.

Programs for Children.

Six weeks ago we gave an advance notice and appreciation of the praiseworthy move on the part of the Kalem Company to supply a series of pictures especially for the children but calculated also to interest the grown-ups. The very necessity for a program of this kind led us to believe that the Kalem Company would be well rewarded for their enterprise, but we reckoned without that very important element in the distribution of the manufactured product, viz., the exchange. Mr. Exchange Man very promptly decides that the call for this kind of subject will be so slight that he will be unable to get back the money invested, and consequently the orders for the new reel were so few that the Kalem Company practically abandoned the idea. But events have proved that the Kalem Company were more alive to the niceties of the game of separating the public from their nickels than the exchange man, for their first children's picture was such a success that orders were telegraphed in for extra copies. The second and third were also immensely popular, and the exhibitors have been loud in their praises and trust that the series will come along with regularity. Sitting in a New York theater last week, while "The Little Old Men of the Woods" was upon the screen, we overheard comments by adults sitting around us that would have gladdened the heart of the producer, and the applause the picture received should make every exhibitor demand it for his program. At all events it proved to us that the exchange man is wrong when he says that the demand is all for Wild West drama. Now while the attitude of the exchanges to the innovation introduced by the Kalem people has caused them to suspend for a time the children's series and give us another dose of drama in their second reel, we are informed that an occasional children's picture will be issued—perhaps once a month. Exhibitors and exchanges should watch closely the effect, and if the public takes to this kind of picture, the manufacturer should be encouraged, as they will tend to combat the argument of the alarmist and reformer, who in his ignorance or mistaken zeal advances the opinion that the moving picture parlor is no fit place for youth.

Pictures Supersede Puppet Shows.

Italians, who, as is well known, are numerous in some cities and possess certain well defined ideas regarding their amusements, have permitted motion pictures to supersede their loved marionette shows, and where once these small imitations of real actors held undisputed sway, they are now seen no more. In their places motion pictures are exhibited to crowded houses. The audiences are better pleased and the proprietors are making more money.

Newark, N. J., is an example of this change. It at one time enjoyed the reputation of giving the best puppet shows in the country, and it was a long time before the managers yielded to the influence of the new amusement. Gradually they did, however, and now not a puppet show is left in Newark. Motion pictures have succeeded them all. The larger audiences are apparently better pleased and the proprietors are doing better.

Puppet shows are virtually an Italian institution. They are the nearest thing to real actors and dramas most of the peasantry in Italy ever see, consequently they are more or less interwoven with the life of those who come from the country or the small towns. Proprietors deemed it a risky experiment to undertake to wean them from their national amusement and they hesitated a long time. But when it was done they discovered that Italians like motion pictures and will pay their money to see them, and now the puppet show has disappeared.

The Italian is demonstrative and he makes his likes and dislikes for a motion picture known very vigorously.

Formerly they hurled all sorts of things at the puppets. They don't do that with the motion picture, but they make their dislike plainly understood. On the other hand, managers are not infrequently requested to run a film a second time which the audience particularly likes.

They like romantic subjects, with vigorous action, and in time it is possible to educate them to appreciate motion picture humor, but early attempts are discouraging. Give them strongly developed romance, with plenty of vigorous acting, and they will applaud your pictures and fill your theaters.

Usefulness of Moving Pictures.

The increasing popularity of motion pictures is convincing testimony of their usefulness. This country is too intensely practical to long tolerate anything that does not perform some definite object, or is not of some direct usefulness.

From being a mere toy, a mechanical marvel, the motion picture has developed in a few short years into the most universal amusement known, and its influence upon the literary and art taste of the nation is second only to the educational institutions.

With perhaps 12,000 houses throughout the country where motion pictures are exhibited, the opportunity for development along beneficial lines is boundless. No such opportunity ever existed before; but fortunately the one here presented is fully realized and full advantage is taken of it.

Apart from the amusement feature of the motion picture, it has an educational value which cannot be measured. It is utilized in schools, for example, to illustrate certain phases of educational work. Take the growth of plants. Even watching the plant itself grow will not convey such a clear impression to the student as a motion picture illustrating the same thing and condensing the life history of a plant, naturally lengthened into weeks and months, into a few minutes. No conception of the value of educational films of this character is possible.

Churches and Sunday schools are using them to illustrate and make graphic and impressive the Bible stories with which all have been familiar since childhood, and the increased power of these stories when adequately presented cannot be calculated.

The travel feature of the many pictures produced cannot be estimated. So clearly and graphically are the scenes presented that one may acquire a reasonably accurate knowledge of distant lands and their inhabitants for the expenditure of a few cents per week; and there is no heavy expense or hardship for actual travel.

* * *

One might go on indefinitely indicating the many marvelous ways in which motion pictures are helpful, but they all partake largely of the same general type or character. And unless one takes full advantage of these opportunities their benefits are of no use. Or, perhaps, it would be better to say that they are not benefits at all.

One must take advantage of the opportunities offered by the motion picture, whether for amusement or instruction, otherwise the usefulness of the invention is wasted and you are not benefited as much as you might be if you would.

Our American manufacturers are paying close attention to the educational possibilities of the moving picture and we will have some important announcements on these lines to make at an early date.

More than one American studio is already equipped with elaborate scientific apparatus and high-power microscopes. The educational possibilities of the motion picture is its strongest lease of life. In fact, there are some truths which can be far more easily and forcibly impressed upon the public mind by visual demonstration on the moving picture screen than by any other means. Take as an example the campaign that is being waged against the common house fly as a promoter of disease; what better aid to a public appreciation of careful prevention being better than cure than a world-wide exhibition of the film, "The Fly Pest," to which reference was made in our issue of January 29? And this is only one of a series that is now under way and which will tend to more and more demonstrate the usefulness of the moving picture.

The Motion Picture Story Considered as a New Literary Form.

By Walter M. Fitch.

In the history of world literature many forms have been evolved, each being brought into being to supply some real need of humanity, and to fit into some essential place.

The novel, until now the youngest of these forms, came into being in the early age of printed books, to carry its message of human sympathy and culture to the homes of the few and scattered educated families of olden time.

Its vogue extended year by year as the number of readers multiplied and the progress of the printer's craft made volumes cheaper. The novel as a literary form has long overshadowed all other forms; it has even seemed to dominate the whole realm of modern literature.

The novel, however, is not universal in its appeal; it speaks to those only who read with readiness, and for whom time, place and circumstance make opportunity.

The modern workingman can read, but he does not. Nor do his wife or children. He is too tired with his day's work; his home is too crowded; interruptions and distractions are too many. He is apt to leave his home in its turmoil and its disorder and to find rest in some neighboring saloon, where a few nickels will pay for his evening's entertainment. This, at least, was the way. Now he takes the children to the nickel show, leaving the tired house-mother to finish her day's work in quiet; or he takes the baby in his arms and takes his wife along while the older children wash the dishes. A very large percentage of the income of these nickel theaters is taken directly from the profits of the brewers. This fact probably accounts largely for the hostility of the daily press to the motion picture; the liquor interests largely sway the press through their advertisements.

The keynote of all literature is sympathy. The novel brought its note of sympathy first to the few and widely scattered men of culture; later to the many inheritors of modern culure. The motion picture brings its note of sympathy alike to the cultured and to the uncultured; to the children of opportunity and to the sons of toil. It is literature for the illiterate, for the man of limited opportunity, or of alien tongue. It knows no boundary lines of race or nation. The same stories are being flashed upon the screen to-night from Moscow to the Golden Gate.

This moving picture story is a new literary form. It is not drama, it is not novel, it is not poem. It contains the elements of all previous forms, but it is itself a new creation, the only new form which literature has evolved since the publication of the first novel in 1741. It is so modern that we cannot see it in perspective; we can as yet realize only in the smallest way its possibilities. We may see a little; we may imagine more; but we should ever bear in mind the vast difference between crude beginnings and full achievement; between "Pamela" and "Les Miserables"; between the "Beggar's Opera" and "Parsifal." The motion picture story is to-day a lusty infant. When it gets its growth it will shed its swaddling clothes and all men will see and recognize its virile power.

The art of printing made possible the novel. The invention of Edison made possible this newest literary form, though the inventor had no suspicions of this literary fact at the time. The first motion pictures were all scenic; later simple pantomimic actions were planned and photographed. Then came the invention of the mercury vapor electric light (the Cooper Hewitt light), peculiarly adapted to photography. This made possible the use of special studios and scenic settings. Producers then began to plan and to stage regular pantomime plays; now the larger producing companies all have these studios; some have private parks many acres in extent, and all send companies into the great natural studio of out-of-doors, there to enact their mimic dramas in the environment of natural scenery.

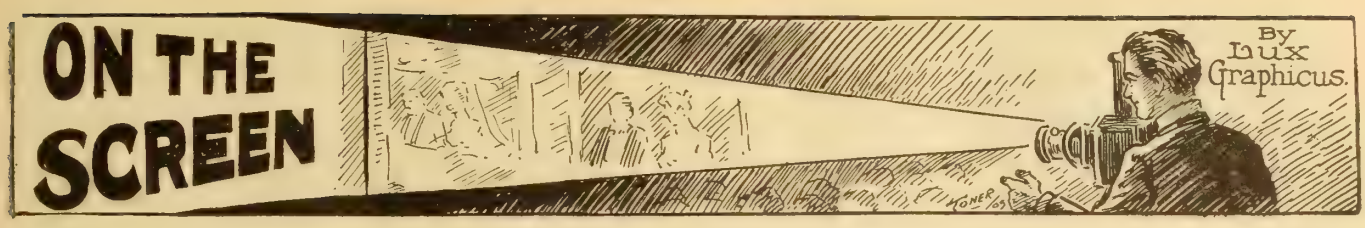
This is the method, but the thing essential is the story; the methods of production and reproduction do not interest the spectator. He goes to see, to feel, to sympathize. He is taken for the time out of the limitations of his environment; he walks the streets of Paris; he rides with the cowboy of the West; he delves in the depths of earth with swarthy miners, or tosses on the ocean with sailor or with fisherman. He feels, too, the thrill of human sympathy with some child of poverty or sorrow; perhaps with some dainty maid in silk attire; he thrills with the touch of mother love or father tenderness. The motion picture artist may play on every pipe in the great organ of humanity!

This is literature, for literature is life, and this is life!

Public Library in the Lobby.

The film stories sent out by some manufacturers are so profuse in detail that we sometimes wonder if they consider such redundancy necessary for a proper understanding of their pictures. We often observe, too, that these film stories contain incidents that are not shown in the film, which shows that they are copies from the submitted manuscript and not written to the picture as it leaves the hands of the producer. But our object at this time in reverting to this new circulating library of fiction is to point out a use to which it is being put by managers of some moving picture theaters which has an opposite effect to that which is intended. It is becoming customary to paste up these film stories in the lobby or display them on an easel or board on the street in front of the theater. There they are read from beginning to end, by men and boys, but we have observed that the reader seldom enters the theater. It occurred to us that some people might be more interested in the stories than in the pictures, and we questioned a few as they were turning away. The reply of one, "Sure, I have read all the story; what do I want to pay to see it for?" should be a tip to these managers to confine their lobby advertising to attractive posters, or, at most, a brief synopsis of the scenes of the play which would excite curiosity to see it in full. In the living drama the synopsis of the play in the house program is confined to the barest outline and the audience depends upon the actors for its interpretation. So in the moving picture drama the story should be told from the screen, and if the producer, even with the aid of sub-titles, has failed to do so, he is unfitted for his position. At all events, it is open to question if the display of the stories in the lobby is good advertising.

The Nicholas Power Company have just received an order for another machine from Bogue & Shepard, who own the Bijou Theater, Johannesburg, South Africa. In June, 1909, they purchased two Power's Cameragraphs No. 5, New York Approved Equipment, and advise that they are very much pleased with the service obtained from them. The machine just ordered is to meet an extension of the moving picture business in this far-off field.



Tempus fugit. Time flies! Here we are at Lincoln's Birthday, well in sight of Spring. Winter is nearly over, and yet it seems such a little while that we were in the Fall, looking towards the Winter with its many developments in the moving picture business. In one of those expected developments I took a strong personal interest. I am bound to say that I have met with some disappointment. I am thinking of the travelogue or travel talk with the moving picture as a base. Last Fall, in addition to Mr. Burton Holmes, Mr. Lyman H. Howe and Mr. Elmendorf, other men were entering the field, all, it was expected, to the advantage and popularity of the moving picture.

* * *

It is dogmatic with me that the more the moving picture is shown to the theatergoing public, the greater is its vogue and popularity likely to be. Not everybodv cares to go to a theater—whether it be the ordinary talking theater or the moving picture theater. Probably, if a census of opinion were taken, it would be found that the moving picture audience which does not go to moving picture theaters is just as large as that which does go. So there you have, in round numbers, something like six or seven million people in the country interested in moving pictures, which constitutes a class by itself, and requires a special means to attract them to the theater which the ordinary picture fails to do.

These people are interested in the world we live in; in travel, in history, in antiquity, in archæology, in the wonders of the world—in the old world, as well as the new. They like to see on the screen what they read about; they like to be talked to by educated lecturers; they are fond of humor, too; they like to know something about the great personages of the world and the manners and customs of other countries: what the people look like, what they do, and how they do it.

* * *

The desire for this kind of entertainment is essentially American. The American mind is laudably an inquisitive one. It wants to know especially about things extraneous and external to its own country. This, then, is the public to which your travel talk lecturer of the type of Mr. Elmendorf and Mr. Burton Holmes has successfully appealed for many years past and will, I hope, successfully appeal in the future. There is, it seems to me, room for many Elmendorfs and Holmes, who have the world before them wherein to exploit their entertainments. And so, it was, taking this purely personal interest in the travelogue aspect of the moving picture, that I was glad to see R. G. Knowles and Fred Niblo enter the field, or, rather, be present in the field, last Fall. Others also came into it whom I need not mention.

* * *

But now, curious enough, Knowles and Niblo are returning to vaudeville; and other competitors of Mr. Elmendorf and Mr. Holmes have folded their tents, like the Arab, and have silently stolen away. Why is this, I wonder? Is it that the pictures were not good enough? the talks not interesting enough? the entire entertainment not quite what the public expected or looked for? Is it, I wonder, that personal magnetism was absent from the platform? Probably it was a combination of all three.

* * *

The more recent case of Henry Lee, with his wonderful personations and graphic talks shows, however, that when the right man with the right entertainment comes along there is always a public for it. And, after all, much depends upon the man who talks. The management may be good, the pictures excellent, but if the man who is to stand up and talk to the people has not personality or magnetism enough, your travel talk or travelogue is likely to fall very flat, indeed. It is not exactly what the talker says; it is the way in which he says it. In other words, one must conclude that good lecturers, like good orators, are very scarce indeed.

* * *

Meanwhile, such old established lecturogues, if I may so call them, as those of Elmendorf and Holmes continue on their way with undiminished success. There are "personalities" behind these entertainments and therein lies the secret of their success. Other mushroom people who have butted into the field have not only been deficient in personality themselves, but have been unable to select, and pay for, the necessary talent. Money will not do everything, even in the moving picture field. You must get the men to do the work; you must make good photographs; you must have good lecturers, good stories, good printing, everything so as to make a success of the lecture end of matters. When these things have been lacking, it is tolerably safe to conjecture that you have the only causes of failure.

* * *

Now, even with all this, even granting the success of existing men in the field, we are, I venture to say, a long way off from the ideal moving picture travelogue. It may savor of hypercriticism, but I don't think that we have yet seen the best travel moving pictures. These things are often produced too hurriedly and under disadvantageous circumstances to produce the best results. Traveling photographers are apt to hurry matters too much, to depend too much for the impression made on the mind by chance visitors to the place, so that the views that are taken are not, in themselves, good, and more, are not representative. Then, again, the photographic quality of these hurriedly made pictures challenge comparison with the photographic qualities of the makers whose business it is to produce moving pictures all the year round; and they suffer by the comparison.

* * *

The public has an uneasy feeling in these travelogue entertainments that it is getting more or less amateurish productions. And very often that feeling is justified by the pictures not being so good as they might be. Then, too much is made of the lantern slide. Again, the matter of the lectures is neither new nor original. Their literary quality is poor and the lectures smack too much of the Sunday school. But, one of these days, somebody will come along who will remove all these reproaches from the travelogue, and people will flock to see the entertainment, just as they do to a recital by Paderewski.

For in this, as in other branches of entertainment work, it is the personal equation, and the personal equation above everything, which counts. Nothing is more delightful to the educated ear than to hear the impressions of an educated man on his travels. The man who can observe accurately, comment intelligently, make his hearers understand exactly what his impressions were. If he is a humorist, so much the better; if he is an orator, so much the better; if he knows how to use his voice, so much the better. It is too frequently the case that the lecturer falls down on one of these requirements. Then your lecture does not go as it should go. People do not go away talking about the lecturer; they do not go back to see him; and so he passes out of sight.

* * *

I have heard many lantern slide lecturers in my time; also some moving picture lecturers. Amongst the latter, however, I have yet to listen to the man who has impressed me with an intimate knowledge and understanding of the pictures of which he is talking. In many cases the pictures have been bought in the open market; or they have been talked to by somebody who did not make them; by somebody who had not been over the ground that he describes, or by somebody of only partial education. The public will no more tolerate a partly educated man on the moving picture stage, than it will in its high-class churches; or on the judicial bench; or in the capacity of lawyer, naval or military officer. It is too often the case that your lecturer falls short in this respect, and so creates a bad impression.

* * *

Even in the five and ten-cent moving picture theater the lecturer rarely pleases the ear. They master the matter of what they have to talk about, but they evince no personal interest in it. Their grammar and pronunciation are alike faulty; they bore their hearers; if even they don't disgust them. The lecture end of matters is sadly neglected in the moving picture house; and as regards the peripatetic or travelogue branch of the business, the world still lies all before a good man, who will come along, charm us with the best possible pictures, and talk to us as the fine elocutionist of the Clifford Harrison and Bellew type were wont to talk to us.

Unless there's something wrong with its charter the Society for the Prevention of Unnecessary Noises has a vast field before it in suppressing the anthropoid vaudeville in the moving picture houses.

* * *

The kindly shelter of darkness usually hides the "illustrated singer" from general view. It is, on the whole, a merciful dispensation of providence. A "stage presence" cannot always be expected, but I wish someone would teach the i. s. what to do with their hands while giving imitations of good singing. One male singer, to whom I am at times compelled to listen, convulsively digs his hands into his coat pockets before bursting into song, and a female singer, who relieves him, is constantly smoothing out imaginary wrinkles in her skirt, while assuring the audience that thinking of yesterday makes her long for to-morrow. Following an example fashionable among noted philanthropists, I will subscribe thirty cents toward a fund for the founding of a "School of Stage Etiquette for Singers," if Carnegie, Rockefeller and Gould will subscribe the remaining nine hundred and ninety-nine dollars and seventy cents.

* * *

Two or three years ago the idea of grand opera in moving pictures would have called forth more or less silly comments from the paid moulders of public opinion. To-day we have "La Tosca," "Rigoletto," "Faust," "Carmen," and more to come.

* * *

Everybody loves pictures of Western life. Life among people who care more about men and less about clothes is bound to be interesting to healthy human beings. The thing has lately been overdone and vulgarized and there are altogether too many animated dime novels. Wait now for some minister or common council to make this abuse the ground for an indiscriminate attack on moving pictures generally.

* * *

Many operators, who were caught in the meshes of loan sharks in Philadelphia, are loudly applauding the vigorous crusade made by a local newspaper against these undesirables. For a time the sharks were bold and defiant; neither the prosecutor nor the police had any terrors for them, until the crusading journal began to hurl poetry at them. This was more than even the most hardened of the usurers could stand and they are leaving in great haste.

* * *

The influence of the exhibitor who controls a large seating capacity, is more profound, if not wider, than that of the editor of the smaller sort of daily newspaper. Such an exhibitor, whether he knows it or not, wields an enormous power for good or evil. It makes the fearless shudder and the judicious grieve to hear some of these men express their preferences over the counter of the film exchange.

* * *

In my travels around the town I make it a point to compare the appearance of the outside of one theater with that of another, and in my comparisons find that the entrance of one differs very little from the entrance of another, that is, from an architectural standpoint. They are for the most part all designed and built the same, all having the arched front, with the ticket box in the center of the entrance, surrounded on all sides by numerous posters graphically explaining in their silent way the pictures to be seen, also drawing one's attention to the fact that for the one admission you are entiled o lisen to an illustrated song as well as viewing the several pictures to be shown, but in such a crude way as to give the place the appearance of a penny arcade or shooting gallery. Some of the managers, displaying more taste than others, have furnished the front of their houses with brass railings, and easles which support neat frames enclosing photographs of leading characters and interesting scenes from the pictures or vaudeville acts shown inside. Now why can't every manager display the same taste, which would surely repay him for the time and money expended, especially in large cities and in such houses that are located on main streets, where a large transient trade is assured the house with the inviting entrance.

How many people are there, who, coming into the city to keep engagements or to do shopping, find they have time on their hands either before or after they tend to their duties, would pass by an attractive m. p. theater?

* * *

There are thousands of people, especially in the better walks of life, who have never put a foot across the threshold of a moving picture theater, and have no immediate intention of doing so, for the one reason that they feel ashamed to be seen pushing their way through the entrance of some untidy looking theater and past a row of home-made sign boards and very vivid colored posters, such as are seen in and around the entrances of the average moving picture theater.

We are as anxious for the exhibitor's welfare and financial future as he is himself, and that is the one reason why we urge him to improve the appearance of his house, both inside and outside, and to extend such courtesies to his patrons, and especially the transients, who, after having once called and noting the care taken of them, will not only go out of their way to call again, but will encourage their friends to go to "such and such" a theater.

I would suggest that you make your house so attractive, both on the inside and outside, that the passing public, and even those hearing of your place, will not be able to stay out, and just as soon as you get the higher class of people into your theater and let them convince themselves that there are worse places than a moving picture theater to patronize, then you will cease to bring scathing remarks from the pulpit and not be troubled by the law, and a child will be admitted as freely as an adult.

* * *

While talking to an exhibitor who, for the past four years, has been getting Association service from one of the largest and oldest exchanges in the city, he informed me that he was beginning to be treated unfairly. Though he does not get first run subjects he is using three reels a day and claims he often gets repeaters, and only last week he received a reel containing 950 feet of film, made up of three different subjects of three different manufacturers, two of which he had used about two weeks previous. Mr. Exhibitor would willingly transfer his trade to another exchange, but as he is already paying a $13 fine for a change he made recently, he is of the opinion that he will be treated more squarely if he goes Independent, and above all he is sure that he can get as good or better service for less money with no danger of paying a fine if he desires to change from one to the other exchange.

LAKE SHORE FILM AND SUPPLY COMPANY.

If all the customers of this well-conducted film exchange have been as lucky as the Moving Picture World they will have received a useful and elaborate leather-bound memorandum book and list of films. Mr. Mandelbaum, the proprietor of the Lake Shore Film Exchange, does not do anything in a small way, and we note with pleasure that he has been appointed as the jobber for Edison Kinetoscopes in his territory. Such things only come as the reward of good business ability. The handsome gold embossed memorandum book, for which we extend our hearty thanks, contains something that should be of great value to the exhibitor. This is a numbered list of all films purchased by the Lake Shore Company for the past six months, which, according to the list in our hands, amounts to about 500 reels. A fine program of up-to-date subjects to select from.

A NOVEL ADVERTISING SCHEME.

A novel advertising stunt is described in a foreign paper. A package is prepared in exact imitation of a Seidlitz powder. On the outer wrapper is printed the words: "A splendid stimulant to be taken after dinner. Directions inside." When opened, the package is found to contain a small handbill advertising a moving picture theater, with directions: "Mix and take. This prescription means a pleasant, enjoyable evening which will cure that tired feeling of the wife, the kiddies and yourself."

THE MATTER OF SMALL TOWN LOCATIONS.

By F. H. Richardson.

Recently several communications concerning what sized town would support two moving picture theaters have appeared, and, last week, editorial comment was made, admitting that a city of 4,500 would not support two houses. Now, it would seem to the writer that a further word on this subject would not be amiss. He is ready to agree that a town of 4,500 is too small to give adequate support to two houses as a general proposition, and even go further than that and say that such a village will usually not give sufficient patronage to pay reasonable profit on even one good house. But the matter of location is one involving several things, each one of which must be carefully considered in connection with each individual town.

* * *

In the first place, as is well known, certain places are known to the craft as "good show towns," while others are known by exactly the opposite designation. It is a well-known fact that two places not twenty miles apart may be widely different as to the show patronage given. Any road showman will tell you this. In certain towns showmen will bank on a good house every time, while in others they will tell you, "Oh, we won't do much business there," although the places named may be practically identical in population. In considering the problem of what size town will support two shows, one may do some intelligent figuring: Let us suppose that the expense account will be kept down to $75 per week, which is low, and that the owner will be satisfied with $40 profit—a total of $115 per week. Now, in order to meet this financial obligation there must be 2,300 paid admissions per week for one house, or 4,600 per week for two.

* * *

If the houses be located close together, it is a fact that the great majority of adult patrons will visit both places the same evening; but this is not true in so great measure of the juvenile patronage. Still, even in a good show town, it is hardly to be expected that there will be 4,600 paid admissions each week in a town of but 4,500, and he who thinks there will, is banking on pretty long chances, taking good weather with bad. Considering the fact that many patrons will come every evening, and a large percentage more than once a week, it is not out of reason to expect 2,300 admissions a week from a population of 4,500 after the business has become established and the people have "learned" to come. Now, right here is an important point meriting consideration: In cities we are accustomed to purchasing our amusement just the same as we purchase groceries. We mentally set apart a sum from our weekly stipend to be expended for amusement, and more often exceed our appropriation than not. Not so in the small town, however. The average small town residenter has been accustomed to consider one circus a year, with the possible addition of a barnstorming show troupe, as plenty and anything beyond as sinful waste. This has been their habit, and you may discover to your cost that habits are exceedingly hard to break. You may literally have to educate your prospective patronage into attending your place of amusement, even though the price be but a five-cent piece. It is not so much the nickel they care for as the fact that they have not been accustomed to any such wild and continued dissipation. When Willie, of the city, tackles Dad for a nickel to go to the show, and gets it, then repeats the operation next night, Dad thinks little of it beyond congratulating himself on the fact that there are shows that cheap. But when Willie, of the small town, sticks his paternal ancestor up for a nickel to squander on moving pictures and then tries the same game a week afterward, he is likely to meet this line of conversation: "Look here, youngster, I give you money t' go t' th' show less'en a week ago, an' here you be agin'! Consarn it all, when I was your age I went t' th' show once in a year an' mebby it was once in two years. I'll be gol danged if you younguns ain't a-gettin' t' be too durn'd sporty for any use," and—Willie don't get the nickel. In looking over a small town and sizing up its amusement supporting possibilities, the character of its people should and must be carefully considered—not their "moral" character, but the sort of folks they are. One must look far beyond the mere "people will patronize my show because there is no place else to go" theory. But, while all this will materially assist one in arriving at an intelligent decision, still, it will be indeed a wise man who can tell what the final outcome will be until it has actually been tried out. Personally, the writer would not consider the installation of a second house in a town of less than 10,000, even though it is known as a good show town.

THE LADIES AND THE GORILLA.

A Humorous Incident Which Actually Occurred in a Theater, in Macon, Mo.

There was as good a comedy outside "The Idle Hour" moving picture show the other night as anything ever spun off the reel. Two stylishly dressed girls, wearing enormous plumed hats, were located midway of the room and defied the printed prayer displayed before the pictures were started:

"Ladies will please remove their hats."

A youth, thin and pale, sat between the gorgeous butterflies. His hair was furrowed down the center with mathematical exactness and neatly banged in front.

A Middle Fork rancher, big and strong looking as a prize-fighter, strode in with a sombrero under his arm and lighted directly behind the two birds of paradise and their tugboat.

Like a huntsman after bear the rancher squinted through the foliage in front of him and caught a glimpse of a brace of villains carrying a knocked-out citizen over to the railroad track where they ingeniously placed him so the engine could cut his head off.

At this critical stage the big rancher became excited. He twisted about to get a closer look at the impending tragedy, but whichever way he turned a display of Parisian millinery was just ahead. He hadn't squandered five cents to see that and he decided the only way to clear the track was to say something. So he spoke up loudly, but not offensively:

"Would you two wimmen mind taking off your headgear so us people back here can see the show?"

The "wimmen" treated the suggestion with cold disdain. Then the rancher tapped one of them on her beautiful shoulder.

"I say"—you could have heard him all over the house, yet it wasn't an angry tone—"your bonnets are in the way so us people back here can't see the show!"

The girls turned, not to the rancher, but to their cigarette-smoking escort, and looked questioningly at him. This, he understood, meant the "insult" was passed up to him. So he whirled about and tried to look like a man.

"See here, mister," he said, as fierce as he could to a man big enough to eat him alive, "these young ladies are here under my protection! You must be careful what you say, sir!"

The rancher eyed him like a big Dane when a bit puzzled at the sudden appearance of a pet dog.

"Keep your shirt on, bub," he remarked, gently. "I wouldn't hurt you for the world, but I paid a nickel to see this show, and so did these people behind me. Just tell your gals to take off their head covers and there won't be no hard feelin's. I spoke to 'em, but I guess they didn't hear me."

An angry retort was on the lips of the pale-faced youth, but the crowd, which was keenly interested, cheered the rancher, and the "protector" changed his mind. One of the girls jumped up and cried:

"Let us get away from this gorilla!"

"I'll see you later, sir," said the pale young man as the "insulted" trio stalked out.

"That's all right, sonny," returned the "gorilla," good-naturedly. "I didn't mean to hurt your feelin's."

The big rancher now had clear view, and from that time on he was a bigger show than the pictures. It was evidently the first time he had ever seen anything of the sort, and he was dead to all else but the story the pictures were telling.

"Gambler Jose," a flashily dressed fellow, ran off with the blacksmith's pretty young wife. The guilty lovers were in an automobile; the strong-armed pursuer—the blacksmith—on horseback. As the race became close the rancher, forgetting those behind him, rose up and wildly waved his sombrero.

"My money's on the man an' the hoss!" he shouted. "Whoop-e-e-e! Go it, boy! You'll git the varmint! I'm wid ye till the cows come home! There they go—hell bent! Low-zee!"

The last observation was caused by the break-down of the motor. The raging blacksmith caught up. "Gambler Jose" and the chauffeur leaped out. There was a swift exchange of shots, and the blacksmith fell, badly wounded. "Gambler Jose" and his understudy carried the injured man to the track and laid him across the rails. At this critical juncture the young wife was conscience-stricken and ran to the rescue of her unconscious husband, 'spite of the protests of "Gambler Jose."

Here was where the big man from Middle Fork Township seemed to be getting his money's worth. He literally jumped up and down with excitement.

"Good girl!" he bawled so loud they could hrear him two blocks away. "I knew you'd do it. Hurry! Hurry! Hurry!

Stay wid him, little woman! Here comes the train. There you go! hooray!"

If there had been real actors on the stage they would sure have had a fit. The audience, long since having lost interest in the pictures, was standing up and clapping hands at the excited rancher.

Finally the scene ended with a happy reconciliation between husband and wife, and the ranchman suddenly recognizing where he was, and that he had been the real show of the evening, flushed as he looked into the battery of smiling eyes all around him.

"Used to be a blacksmith myself," he said, apologetically.

When he went through the lobby on his way out the proprietor tapped him on the shoulder.

"Like the show?" he asked.

"Sure, Mike! When I tell the boys over at Woodville that I seen a train o' steamcars run through a house without knocking down airy brick they'll all want to come in and see if I ain't lyin'."

"Well," returned the proprietor, "if you'll bring 'em in next Saturday night they can have seats way up in front and it won't cost a cent."

This week "The Idle Hour" is advertising the greatest attraction of the season for Saturday night.

A BUGABOO.

In the past two or three years authorities of most of our large cities have had spasm after spasm concerning the tremendous risk of fire in moving picture theaters and laws enough have been passed dealing with this one thing to fill several large volumes. Now the writer believes that the public should be safeguarded in every reasonable manner and he furthermore is of the opinion that there was need for reform in the matter of operating room practice in very many respects, so that after all the laws, while compliance with them has been exceedingly costly and while many of the requirements have been sheer nonsense, have served, on the whole, a good purpose.

But when one comes to consider the matter calmly and without prejudice one finds, if past experience be any criterion, a moving picture theater to be about the safest place one could find outside of a cemetery. Take the great city of Chicago, for instance: there are about six hundred moving picture theaters, or six hundred places using moving picture films, and what is more, there have been nearly that number for several years. Now suppose the average attendance at these places to be but 300 per day, the total daily attendance per day would be 180,000, or a total of 65,700,000 per year, yet you could almost count on the fingers of one hand the people who have been even slightly injured as the result of a fire in Chicago nickel theaters, and so far as the writer is aware but one man has died from fire injuries, and he was an operator. Now this does not look as though moving picture theaters are so very deadly after all, or that danger from fire is imminent, even with the old inflammable film. One must bear in mind, too, that up to a comparatively short time ago there was little or no supervision of Chicago moving picture theaters and in some of the smaller houses conditions were about as bad as they well could be. Why, then, has all this howl been raised about the danger of fire? We all know that the old style film was highly inflammable, but we also all know that moving picture theaters are, as, a rule, comparatively small and that there is therefore but slight danger from panic; also, the small audience can easily file out long before the fire attacks anything but the operating room. So far as the matter of explosion goes, that is all bunk, pure and simple. There is no case on record where even the wall of an operating room (which is in many cases built in very flimsy fashion) has been blown down. The writer has long had a grave, dark, deadly suspicion that the fine Italian hand of the big theaters has been at the bottom of all this outcry, but as this is a deep secret, please don't tell anyone. I wonder what they will find to howl about when the N. I. film is in exclusive use. The matter of immoral film has been largely eliminated and there are not half, nor a quarter as many murders and robberies portrayed on the screen as are nightly set forth in the melodrama theaters. It begins to look as though the powers that be will have to get out their spades and dig for new things to kick about—it really does.

MELIES SOON TO RELEASE.

The company which G. Melies sent to San Antonio, Tex., some time ago, has produced some excellent work and a number of negatives have been already sent to New York to be printed. Mr G. Melies expects to resume his regular issues early in March.

ACME THEATER, EASTPORT, ME.

The above photograph is enough to give one the chills, and we would imange that the audience would have to huddle close together to keep from freezing. But the manager tells us that the place is not such a "frost" as it looks and is playing to good business. It is of interest to mention that this is the most eastern theater in the United States.

COMMENTS ON THE FLEETING HOUR.

By W. Stephen Bush.

Nothing is more certain than the great improvement in the products of the associated film makers. They stand the quality test, and stand it well. The praise applies equally to the domestic and foreign manufacturers. To present a picture historically accurate and dramatically powerful is a task of some proportion, but it has been exceedingly well done in two recent pictures issued by Gaumont, "Civil War" and "The Price of Patriotism." The latter picture has in it great possibilities for music and singing, which every progressive exhibitor will be quick to perceive and improve.

* * *

In New England there is, outside of Boston, scarcely one moving picture theater with a daily change. This is the result of enlightened policy agreed upon by the film exchanges controlling that territory. In consequence, New England is the most productive and most profitable field both for exhibitor and exchange. It is a pleasure to travel through the moving picture circuits of New England; the vaudeville houses are few and far between and the standard of education and intelligence among exhibitors is high.

* * *

There is among many exhibitors an unreasoning prejudice against scenic and industrial pictures. Such pictures, after all, form a very small percentage of the total output, and there are always men and women in every audience who particularly appreciate this kind of films. There is an exhibitor in a large Southern town catering to colored people exclusively, who tells me that his patrons like nothing better than scenic and industrial pictures. Let the reader draw his own conclusion.

SOME METHODS OF TONING LANTERN SLIDES.

By C. Welborne Piper.

The following toning methods are all applicable to slides that have been fully developed and fixed. Methods 1 to 8 are specially suited to dense images, and methods 9 to 12 to weak ones, hence it is often possible to produce a good result from a slide that would otherwise be useless by reason of erroneous exposure or development. When several exposures are made from one negative in the endeavor to produce by development alone the best possible result, most, if not all, of the rejected slides should be capable of conversion into good toned slides. The exact tone obtained varies with the brand of the plate.

For Dense Images.

Chloride Toning (Reds and Red-Browns).—No. 1. Suitable for a slide of full but not excessive density.

Bleach the image thoroughly in—

Potassium bichromate.....	10 grs.	or 20 gms.
Soidium chloride (table salt)....	5 grs.	or 10 gms.
Hydrochloric acid (about).....	5 mins.	or 10 cc.
Water	1 oz.	or 1000 cc.

Add the acid tentatively, only using enough to make the solution act readily. After bleaching, rinse, soak in a 5 per cent. potassium metabisulphite until yellow stain is removed, and then wash well, dry, and expose to sunlight until the image is a red color. The red is obtained more easily if the slide is exposed as soon as dry; if kept away from sunlight for some time the image loses sensitiveness and it will then only assume a brown tone when sunned.

The result must be kept dry and the tone is then practically permanent, the only effect of time being a slight softening of the tone. The sunning process makes the image insensitive to the feeble light of the lantern and no further change due to light need be feared.

The result may be both intensified and made browner by treatment with copper bromide or mercury bromide followed by washing and exposure to light. (See methods 4 and 10.)

A peculiarity of this chloride process, and of the following processes up to No. 7, is the great transparency given to the shadows.

No. 2.—Suitable only for a very dense slide, with slight fog.

Bleach in a 5 per cent. solution of ferric chloride. Wash, first in water acidulated with sulphuric acid to remove yellow stain, and then in plain water. Dry, and expose until a bright red tone is obtained. The exact tone will vary with the quality of the slide, which must be very dense to give a good red.

Iodide Toning (Browns).—No. 3. Most uitable with very dense slides.

Bleach in chloride solution and wash very thoroughly as in No. 1 method, then soak in 5 per cent. potassium iodide until the image is yellow throughout. Wash again and dry. Exposure has hardly any visible effect and may be omitted. In the lantern the tone is a soft brown, and the result is very permanent.

No. 4.—Suitable for an over, but not excessively dense slide. Bleach in—

Copper sulphate.....	24 grs.	or 50 gms.
Potassium bromide.....	24 grs.	or 50 gms.
Water to.....	1 oz.	or 1000 cc.

Wash well and then soak in 5 per cent. potassium iodide for five minutes; wash again, dry and expose. The result is a very pleasing soft brown (umber) and very permanent. The color is similar to that obtained by the mercury methods to be described (Nos. 9 and 10), but these methods are only applicable with weak slides, while this one requires a dense slide.

Bromide Toning (Gray and Brown).—No. 5.—Suitable for slightly over-dense slides.

Bleach in chloride solution and wash as in No. 1 method, then soak in 10 per cent. potassium bromide, wash again, dry, and expose until the image is gray.

This may be regarded as a method of reducing an over-dense slide by the process of turning the black deposit into a transparent gray one. The gray is a good one with just a trace of warmth.

No. 6.—Suitable for a slide slightly less dense than the preceding one.

Bleach in copper bromide solution as in No. 1 method, wash, dry, and expose until image is gray. The result is similar to that of No. 5 method. but the tone is darker.

No. 7.—Suitable only for very dense slides.

Bleach in 5 per cent. ferric chloride solution, clear and wash as in No. 2 method. Follow with a soaking in 10 per cent. potassium bromide for five minutes, wash, dry, and expose until the image is a gray-brown, or a near approach to a true sepia.

Copper Toning (Red).—No. 8.—Suitable only for a very dense slide.

Bleach in 5 per cent. potassium ferricyanide, wash very thoroughly, and preferably, dry the film. Then soak in copper bromide solution (or in copper chloride) until a red tone is obtained. Wash again and dry. The result is very similar to the red given by the uranium method (No. 12), but somewhat softer. It is different from that of Ferguson's copper toning bath and requires a much denser image.

For Weak Images.

Mercury Toning (Browns).—No. 9.—Suitable for slides of slightly under normal density.

Bleach in 5 per cent. mercury chloride solution to which a few drops of hydrochloric acid have been added. When washed, dried and exposed, the result is a very good soft brown. Exposure has so little visible effect that it may be omitted.

If this bleached image is treated with ammonia, soda sulphite, or hypo, a deep purple brown is obtained, and the result seems to be much more permanent than in the case of negatives that have been intensified by similar methods.

No. 10.—Suitable for slides well under normal density.

Bleach in 5 per cent. mercury chloride solution in which 5 per cent. of potassium bromide has been dissolved. Wash, dry and expose. The result is a slightly deeper brown than that given by mercury chloride. Exposure is necessary to bring out the difference between the two tones.

This image becomes a transparent purple brown if treated with hypo, but it is not much affected by ammonia or soda sulphite, and the small effect that is produced is not permanent. If in either of these two mercury methods the shadows become too dense and clogged, then hypo is the best remedy.

No. 11.—Suitable only for a very weak image quite free from fog.

To one ounce of 5 per cent. mercury chloride solution add slowly and with continual stirring, a 10 per cent. solution of potassium iodide until the orange precipitate first formed is just dissolved and the solution is quite clear, then dilute with water to make two ounces. Soak the plate in this solution until the image is brown, then wash in changes of still water until the brown changes to a bright orange. Rinse gently and dry. Running water, if used, will produce stains that are difficult to remove. The result, seen in the lantern, is a very glowing warm brown of great luminosity.

Uranium Toning (Red).—No. 12.—Suitable for slides of (or just under) normal density.

Tone the image very thoroughly in—

Uranium nitrate.....	1 gr.	or 2 gms.
Potassium ferricyanide.....	1 gr.	or 2 gms.
Acetic acid.....	1 dr.	or 120 cc.
Water to.....	1 oz.	or 1000 cc.

Tone until the image is as red as it will become on both sides, then soak in a 1 per cent. solution of ammonium sulphocyanide until all yellow stain disappears. Add 2 grs. of potassium ferricyanide to every ounce of the sulphocyanide solution and again soak slide until the image is a bright red. Wash gently and dry. This red tone is fairly permanent and is not liable to any deterioration that will materially affect the tone of the projected image.

AN ADVERTISING STUNT.

By F. H. Richardson.

The writer pulled off a little stunt, which took well, a short time since. He announced at each performance during the week that on the following Saturday evening each patron would positively be presented with a five dollar bill; that it would not be stage money, but a bona fide five dollar bill. The statement was made so positive that, while people knew that giving out a five dollar bill in actual money with each five-cent ticket was an utter impossibility, still their curiosity was aroused to know just what the stunt was, and Saturday evening the house was considerably more than packed. With each ticket sold a folded paper was given, which on opening was found to be as follows:

Chicago, January 5, 1910.

Mr. Yourself,

To the CARBONATE THEATER, Dr.,

To damages for not attending this theater regularly and telling all your friends what a splendid show we have..... $5.00

N. B.—You may pay same to our cashier at the rate of five cents a day, and we will throw in the best show in the city with each payment.

The people all took it good naturedly and the matter caused quite some talk. The cost was nothing but the printing of the "five dollar bills" on regular billheads, of course; the body of the bill in typewriter type.

THE PICTURE BUSINESS IN CANADA.

(From The Bioscope.)

The Bioscope representative was fortunate enough on Friday last to gain an audience with Mr. R. W. Hulbert, of Toronto, a gentleman who has been connected with the moving picture business for over twelve years, and who is thus in a position to speak with some degree of authority on the state of business in Canada.

During the course of an interesting chat with Mr. Hulbert, who displayed a modesty not by any means naturally apparent in the ordinary visitor from the States, I gathered, says our representative, that Mr. Hulbert had traveled a great deal in the course of his following of the calling of a picture showman, and his replies to the many questions with which I plied him were given with a frankness that stamped them not only with the hall mark of truth, but with an evident desire to give the situation in Canada as it exists to-day without any artificial coloring whatever.

From Journalist to Picture Showman.

It is now a matter of some twelve years since Mr. Hulbert blossomed forth as a picture exhibitor, migrating into the business from that of a journalist and advertising agency man. His first experience of the business was gained in South Africa, where, with Wolfram's Bioscope, he traveled through Natal. His experiences at this early date in matters bioscopic were not always of the most pleasant, but the knowledge he was thus enabled to gain of the business in its many phases was destined hereafter to stand him in good stead, and laid the foundation for an eventually successful career. Later he went to Nelson, and subsequently established himself in the picture business with headquarters at Toronto. At the present time he is running a show in Nelson, and is shortly putting out others.

"What is the main object of your present visit to this country?" I asked.

Forming a New Company.

"Well," replied Mr. Hulbert,' "I am forming a large company shortly for the purpose of establishing rental agencies, and selling British films in Canada, although I do not anticipate such a large return from this latter portion of the business, owing to the fact that there are at present very few traveling shows, but in the hiring business there is a large field open to us. We shall also establish a chain of picture theaters throughout Canada. I am over in England to secure the sole representation of the best British firms for Canada, with a view to the introduction of their productions on an extensive scale. At the present moment we are under a very great disadvantage as regards our film supply in Canada, as we are dependent for our service entirely upon the States, and the result is that British films, as well as Continental productions, are practically excluded, the Americans possessing a monopoly, and making it incumbent upon us to hire and use their films only so far as they possibly can. It is in order to remedy this that I am in England now and that the proposed company is to be formed."

Sole Agencies Secured.

"And what sort of a reception have you received?" I asked.

"I have met with the greatest courtesy at the hands of the leading houses in London, and I believe that good business will result. From the Gaumont Company I have secured the sole rights for Canada of the Shackleton films, whilst from Lieut. Shackleton himself I have secured the sole rights for the United States. I have further secured the rights of production in Canada of sevreal other leading British and Continental film makers; in fact, I may say, I have captured most of the best film producers. It is my aim to put the business on a higher and more educational plane. In connection with the Shackleton films, lecturing companies will be put out in Canada and in the States. In Canada I am trying to interest, and have interested, the very best people. Our idea is to try and conduct theaters on a high moral plane; that is, to make them clean, well appointed and well ventilated, and to give a really good class picture, and this we think we can best do by the large use of British and Continental films."

The Situation in Canada.

"What is the situation in Canada of the picture business to-day?" I queried.

"As regards the situation in Canada at the present time, things are booming, as regards the moving picture business. New houses are being constantly opened up, and there is hardly a place in the whole of Canada to-day that has not already, or is not contemplating having, a moving picture show. We consider that a population of 2,500 is quite sufficient to support a picture show.

"Speaking generally, I should say that the shows in Canada compare very favorably with those in the States. Most of them are well laid out and decorated and are running a very good class of show."

Canada Compared with England.

"How do you think the English electric theaters compare with the picture places in your own colony?"

"To tell the truth, like all visitors for only a brief period to your country, I have had my time too fully occupied with business matters to be able to take much recreation. I have, however, taken advantage of the opportunity of visiting the Theater de Luxe in the Strand. That is a little more elaborate than the shows in Canada. The arrangements which appertain to the conduct of these theaters in London differ from those in our colony. We do not allow smoking, for instance, and none of our lady patrons retain their headgear whilst in the theater. It is a recognized thing for all ladies to remove their hats. In some places they come to the picture theater, dressed as for the ordinary theater, with no head covering beyond a fascinator or shawl. Then, again, it would be difficult to find a picture theater in Canada that had not an inclined floor, no matter how small a place it is.

"So far as the English picture palace program is concerned, your English program is very good, but it seems a little too long and tedious at times. In Canada the length of the program depends on the price charged for admission. We show either two or three reels. We get so many people who want to see the show that there is a tendency now to rush the pictures through too quickly, giving them too jerky a movement."

"Do you go in for much music with the pictures?"

"Oh, yes; we have both piano and orchestra. On Saturday nights when there is a full orchestra we charge extra for admission. This is done more with a view to relieving congestion on Saturday nights. We show very little comic. Generally we have one reel of scenic and educational stuff, one reel of dramatic and, if there are three reels, one reel of comic, to make a well-balanced program."

English Versus American Film.

"What is your opinion of the English film as compared with the American?"

"So far as I have had an opportunity of forming an opinion, I think that the English topical films compare very favorably with American, or at any rate a very large number of them. Of course, the Americans are making a big bid for business, and are certainly working hard. As regards dramatic subjects, I have not had much chance of comparing the quality, as we do not get many of the English productions in Canada. With regard to the comic element, I will say this, that very often it is hard to see the point in the English films, whereas the French subjects are always sure to raise a laugh, though they are often too far-fetched, and at times are absurd. Still, there is a large class of people who like those films, whilst at the same time many object to the rough and tumble kind of fun. The danger with the French film is that it often approaches too near the suggestive, and Canadian audieneces do not like anything of that kind. My own belief is that the time is fast approaching when there will be less desire for comics and a greater hankering after educational subjects."

The Effects of the Picture Shows.

"How do you think the picture show is affecting the people; is it having a good influence upon them?"

"Oh, yes; the effect of the picture show for good has been very marked. It has taken the people away from the saloons, and there is a great future for the business in Canada; there is no doubt about it. There is equally no doubt that in the States the general tendency is to raise the tone of the shows by securing films of an elevating character."

The Laws in Canada.

"How are you off for restrictions and laws in Canada affecting the bioscope industry?"

"The laws are strict in many places; indeed, in some parts you can only run a machine by hand. We have very strict laws as to fire protection, and our machines have to be absolutely fireproof. We should never be allowed to run our films as you do in England, for the only portion of film allowed to be exposed to view is that actually in the gate. All the other must be enclosed whilst working. We have one license only, a theatrical license. Our admitting capacity is regulated, and for a place with so many seats we pay $100. Directly you exceed the number of seats covered by that license, you have to pay a $200 fee for your license."

OPERATORS' COLUMN.

Conducted by F. H. Richardson.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

(In this department Mr. Richardson will answer any and all questions propounded by operators or managers, illustrating the answers when necessary.)

In assuming the conduct of this department, I wish to say that it is my desire, as well as the wish of The Moving Picture World, that operators and managers make free use of it. Knotty problems often arise which are beyond the ability of the individual with but limited experience, and in this department these problems will be solved, so far as possible. Name and address of writers must accompany the letter, but they will not be published. In asking questions remember it is essential that full and complete details be given in order that I may form an intelligent idea of just what is wrong. F. H. RICHARDSON.

* * *

E. B. L., Brooklyn, N. Y., asks that I recommend some book on electricity. This I do not care to do. I would suggest that he go to a public library and look over all the works on electrical matters, selecting for purchase the one he thinks will best suit his needs.

* * *

Moberly, Mo., wants to know how he can focus his lens before starting the picture. Cut a thin piece of clear mica (isinglass) long enough to reach over the aperture and out at top of film gate, the width of a film. Now with a knife point lay off the surface by scratching perfectly straight lines both ways about ⅛ inch apart. Place this in machine, closing gate upon it just as you would on a film and focus until the marks stand out clear, straight and distinct.

* * *

Seattle, Wash., wants to know where a stereo lens which has the forward lens cracked can be repaired.

In reply I would say that all the lenses which go to make up the complete lens are ground to fit each other and no one but the maker of that particular lens could successfully repair it at any reasonable cost. Even the one who made it would probably charge almost as much as the price of a new lens. When one of the lenses gets cracked it is best to discard the whole lens and buy a new one. Trying to repair a projection lens is invariably an unsatisfactory operation in the end. The result, too, is more or less a matter of doubt.

* * *

Atlanta, Ga., wants to know whether 18, 20 or 22-inch chairs are most desirable, and what distance between rows is best, also what should the width of aisles be.

Width of chair is purely a matter of individual preference, within the range given. If your seating capacity be limited use the narrow chair. The 22-inch chair is wider than there is any necessity for in a moving picture theater. They are more comfortable in a house where the performance lasts two or three hours, but the 20-inch ones answer every requirement for the picture theater. Thirty-two inches from chairback to chairback is the best distance to space the rows and it answers every need for space. As to aisles, if there be more than one, 3 feet is wide enough; but if you have just one central aisle it should be not less than 4 feet in the clear. In spacing the rows and determining width of aisles, however, first carefully look up the local laws which bear on that subject.

* * *

Mr. L. E. Adams, of Lewiston, Me., writes in setting forth a discovery he claims to have made. His idea is that by using a second projector with lens matching the one with which the picture is projected, and set to register on the screen exactly with it, colored light may be thrown on the picture, producing a mono tint effect. The colored glass is placed in the slide carrier of the second machine and is projected through the empty aperture plate. Mr. Adams claims to have thus secured a colored background and a pure (presumably white, though he does not say so) highlight. He claims also that by using a second colored glass, of different shade, in the projecting machine itself the highlights will take that tint and the background be tinted with the other color. He says, use a dense colored glass for the background and a light one for the highlights.

This seems at first glance to be an impossibility, since one naturally would suppose that the light from the second machine would kill the picture. Still, we have learned not to condemn anything until it is actually tried out, and it is therefore given to our readers for experiment.

Dyersville, Ia., asks why the use of motors is prohibited in many large cities.

It is for the reason that when operators run their machines with a motor they are inclined to get careless. The operator's place is right beside the machine every second of the time it is running, and the best way to insure his presence is to compel him to operate the mechanism by hand. More than this, many slight defects in the operation of the machine are most quickly detected by sense of touch of the hand on the crank. To make a long story short, the use of a motor is prohibited in many cities as the best and surest method of chaining the operator's attention to the machine every second that it is in operation.

* * *

Houston, Tex., asks whether or no alternating current fans can be made to operate on direct current.

They cannot.

* * *

Portland, Me., wishes to know what kind of oil is best for gears and intermittent movement.

Any good oil will do, but it should be put on the intermittent very sparingly and often. The writer, however, prefers what is known as valve oil for the gears. It is a very heavy lubricant, lasts well and does not so readily run off. Valve oil such as is used for engines, I mean. Avoid cheap oils as they contain, usually, a large percentage of kerosene.

* * *

Atlanta, Ga., asks what focal length condensers should be used for an 85-foot throw.

This depends somewhat on size of picture, as well as throw. In other words, there is a distinct relation between the focal length of condensers and projection lens. The smaller your picture, the longer focal length will your projection lenses be for a given throw. For an ordinary sized picture, however, two 7½ condensers will answer for an 85-foot throw. In asking such questions always give size of picture as well as length of throw.

OPERATORS OVER-CONFIDENT.

One of the things we have to contend with in the moving picture projection field is the know-it-all operator, and it is positively astonishing how numerous he is. The locomotive engineer, the clerk, the mason, the carpenter and practically all the professional and tradesmen freely admit that there is always something to learn in their business and as a rule they are not only willing but eager to become better posted.

But not so with the average operator! He seems to have a perverted idea that he can supply the place of knowledge with bluff. Try to tell him anything, or even talk anything over with him, and he immediately gives you to understand that he learned all about that while still a baby at his mother's breast.

The problems which are to you the most perplexing are to him clear as the azure sky—though you can never pin him right down to the matter of imparting any portion of his wonderful knowledge. But if you happen to listen to his conversation for awhile, or if you drop in where he is operating and watch the show, you are likely to form the opinion that he is a—well, that he has made a serious mistake in estimating his actual ability.

This thing of pretending knowledge you do not possess is sheer idiocy, since it cuts you out from many chances to learn. That there is much to learn in the matter of projection none but the fool will deny. The study of the laws of optics is alone an exceedingly deep subject, while the electrical end is one which may well keep one busy for an indefinite time. True, the machine itself is simple enough, still few there be who thoroughly understand its proper adjustment. Get busy, gentlemen, and stop bluffing. Study your business and be ever ready and eager to learn. Don't imagine you know it all, for you don't and the chances are that were the truth known you really are ashamed of how little you know about your business when it comes to a show-down.

In this connection it is well that the boards of examiners are making the test more difficult. At least it will shake some of the egotism out of some of the I-Know-It-Alls when they get turned down and start them doing some real studying to perfect themselves in their craft.

At the meeting of the Patents Company licensees, on February 7, the licenses of the S. Nye Bass Film Exchange, New Orleans, La., and the Theater Film Service, San Francisco, Cal., were cancelled.

FACTS AND MISTAKEN IDEAS ABOUT MOVING PICTURE ACTORS AND ACTRESSES.

The erroneous notions which some persons get about the qualifications for motion picture actors and actresses are very strange and sometimes startling. If anyone imagines that the requirements are limited, he has another guess coming. Some think all that is necessary is to stand or pose while the picture is being taken. Others, that a few exaggerated gestures, expressive of fear, laughter, grief, anger, etc., fill the bill.

These notions are wrong and should be discouraged. The facts are, only the best and most capable actors and actresses obtainable are engaged by the producers of motion pictures, particularly in the regular or stock companies; men and women of recognized stage experience, persons of intelligence and culture, and even their "supers" must be capable and experienced. Motion picture acting is a high art. The standard of plays now being produced demands a high order of ability, and you can build on this statement, by one who knows, that the standard will be still higher in the next six months.

In a recent interview on this subject with the Vitagraph Company of America, who always insist upon the highest qualifications, we were informed that 650 persons applied to that company within the last four months. Of this number, one-half, or fifty per cent., were inexperienced, with the idea that the only recommendation necessary was good looks (?) or that "They would like to try it because they had nothing else to do or they could make more money 'posing' for motion pictures than doing anything else." One girl applicant was asked:

"What is your specialty?"

"Specialty?" she repeated. "What's that?"

"What part in the play do you usually take?"

"Oh!" said she, "I like to take the part where they make love."

Another was asked what experience she had as an actress.

"Ive studied elocution," was the reply.

Still another said that she was always good at making fun of people and would like to pose in motion pictures. Mother says, "She doesn't know what else I am good for."

The most extravagant case was that of a young chap who said that he would like to take part in moving pictures. When asked what experience he had, he replied:

"My father drives a furniture van."

Young men and women are not the only ones who get silly ideas about acting in motion pictures. Older ones get them, too, as illustrated in the case of a maiden lady of doubtful age when asked if she was ever on the stage, said:

"No, mother objects to my going on the stage and I thought I would go in motion pictures."

"In that case," we said, "you had better go and bring your mother with you," and she never came back.

This is one in which the applicant got the idea that every motion picture involved a chase. When asked what his specialty was, he informed us that he won a medal in a half-mile dash and thought he could do well in chases. This was the limit of endurance, and it is not necessary to add that he started a chase right there and then, and we never went outside the gate to see where it ended.

Many more instances of young men and young girls who get foolish notions about acting in motion pictures could be cited, but these are sufficient to disabuse the minds of any persons who are silly enough to entertain them and who might better be applying their time and attention to some occupation for which they are suited. It is just as absurd to entertain these notions as to say that motion picture acting would be a splendid occupation for the deaf and dumb.

W. C. Kunzmann, Cleveland correspondent and representative of The Moving Picture World, with headquarters at Royal Court, 1830 East 19th street, has taken over the renting and selling of the Jeffries-Johnson fight slides, the biggest moving picture feature of this year, for the Malaney Syndicate, Sandusky, Ohio. Mr. Kunzmann will represent this house of features in Cleveland and all surrounding towns. The above feature are colored slide views of Jeffries and Johnson, their trainers, the promoters and other men and scenes connected with the coming battle. Up-to-date managers are taking advantage of this big feature and "Forerunner of the Fight." Managers have played to packed houses wherever these slides and views of these two talked-of fighters have been shown. Be the first to show them in your city.

Lexington, Ky.—Robert Geary and C. B. Combs have opened the "Pekin," a new moving picture theater.

LOS ANGELES HOME OF THREE FILM CONCERNS.

Climate and Scenic Settings Are Ideal.

[From the Los Angeles "Examiner."]

A large proportion of the moving pictures made in America are produced in Los Angeles. With three of the largest companies in the country here, the mountains, the valleys, the orange groves and the seashores teem with persons riding, running and posing before the motion camera, and the films are being enjoyed by audiences in nearly every city of the country and many in Europe, as they are thrown upon the screens, showing delightful California scenery.

The reason Southern California has been chosen by the motion picture companies is that the background for any kind or style of picture may be found here. If the requirements demand snow, a party of picture actors or actresses may be seen ascending Mt. Loewe. If, on the other hand, the strand or seashore is necessary in bringing out a scene in the picture, coves and stretches of sand are at hand.

Tropical settings are found necessary in many pictures, and they are easily found, even to the banana groves. Views in orange groves, now being shown on thousands of screens throughout the land, were made within ten miles of Los Angeles.

Quite a Colony.

Altogether there are three companies now operating in and about Los Angeles, the last to arrive being the Biograph Company of America, which reached here last week, and at once began producing films. This company alone numbers more than half a hundred persons, and, together with the other two companies, the Selig Company and the New York Motion Picture Company, the number of motion picture actors and actresses now living in the city numbers upward to 200. There are about two-score trained horses with the outfits and almost a trainload of properties and costumes have been brought here by the three concerns.

Helps California.

What the business must mean to California in a commercial sense is clearly apparent. It is now well known that many of the pictures of this country are being made here, and the backgrounds of orange groves, tropical plants, mountain scenery, seashore life and snow-covered crags is creating great interest in other parts of the country.

Since it has been noised abroad that so many of the pictures are being taken, the participants have been handicapped by the number of spectators. That is one of the things most dreaded by the picture actors. It is resented by them the same as an artist resents the intrusion of visitors to view an uncompleted canvas.

Indian pictures have occupied the attention of the New York Motion Picture Company to a large extent during the past month, and they have two genuine Indians to take part in the scenes. They are Young Deer and Miss Redwing, members of the Winnebago tribe, both of whom have posed for some of the best-known artists in the country, and are perfect types of their race.

Los Angeles persons are also engaged to take parts in the pictures. On last Thursday and Friday more than 100 persons were engaged to act as the "crowd" at the ringside of a prize fight necessary in one of the pictures, and in many others has it been found necessary to engage additional persons to the company until there has sprung up a big colony of "moving picture supers" in this city.

The coming to Southern California by the picture firms is not a Winter engagement, but will be an all-year enterprise. At first they came here to escape the snow and ice, but the bright quality of the sunshine and the number of clear days in which they may work, together with the variety of scenery, has all been found ideal, and their making here is now permanent.

A license has been issued to Praetorius & Sibley to conduct a booking agency at 729 Sixth avenue, New York. Chris Praetorius is the senior member of the new firm and Homer W. Sibley, the junior. Mr. Praetorius is well and favorably known among the vaudeville performers as an arranger of music. Mr. Sibley was formerly the manager of the booking department of Len Spencer's Lyceum, and is well known among the moving picture people in Greater New York and the East. The new firm will furnish first-class vaudeville acts for clubs, etc.; they will also have a department where singers, lecturers and musicians will be furnished for the moving picture theaters. They are now located in the Spaulding Building, 29-33 West Forty-second street, New York, having moved to their new quarters on December 1.

SENSATIONAL LOGGING (Essanay).

Some time ago this firm issued a film called the "Wonders of Nature" which was one of the best reproductions of magnificent scenery ever presented. The comment was made at the time that the operator fully appreciated his opportunity and took full advantage of it. Again the operator has accomplished something well worth while. Logging has a peculiar fascination for most people, probably because it is such a hazardous occupation. And when it is adequately reproduced, as it is in this instance, it forms a remarkably attractive picture. Moreover, the scenic beauties add to it. Made in the most beautiful section of the Appalachian mountains, the Cumberlands, of Kentucky and Virginia, it conveys an accurate impression of the scenic wonders of the region. The last scene, breaking a jam 50 feet high, containing 200,000 logs, is sensational in the extreme and probably affords a stronger impression of what logging really is than anything outside of the actual work itself. The Essanay people are to be congratulated upon producing such an excellent picture. They are to be congratulated upon having a corps of operators who appreciate not alone the scenic value of a particular locality, but the best methods of reproducing those scenes so as to convey an impression of what the original scene is. The work is remarkably well done. The photography is clear and the tonal values are maintained at a high standard, affording an artistic picture well worth seeing.

TWELFTH NIGHT (Vitagraph).

Another of the ambitious releases by this house. This reproduction of one of Shakespeare's most pleasing comedies is satisfactory in every particular. The staging is according to the best traditions of Shakespeare's time and the acting is in harmony with the modern understanding of the piece. The story is known to all readers of English and need not be repeated. The acting appears to interpret what may be termed the modern impression of the Shakespearian drama. Of course, much must be eliminated, otherwise it would be impossible to make any adequate reproduction of the play. The condensing has been done by a master hand, however, and does not mar the piece itself. In some degree, perhaps, it is an improvement, since it eliminates many of those portions which illuminate the main story, though they are not essential to its development, nor to an understanding of it. Manufacturers who endeavor to place such pictures before audiences numbering in the aggregate many thousands scattered through the country are to be commended. It brings to the many who really enjoy this drama an opportunity to see it adequately performed, and at a nominal cost. It elevates and improves the literary taste and appreciation of the great mass of the people, performing in this way service which cannot be measured in material terms. Such work is in the nature of an educational service, which is deserving of the heartiest support of all who are working for the improvement of humanity.

"Civil War" (Gaumont).—Whoever is responsible for the war pictures, or the reproduction of war scenes, in this establishment may be performing a valuable public service without really appreciating it. The glories of war have engaged the attention of literary men and poets through all the ages of the world. The Gaumont films exhibit the other side with sufficient horror to make war repulsive, and therefore they will have an influence in preventing wars in the future. One doesn't like to look at war pictures, but if they will help to abolish war one need not wish them left off the programs.

"Politics" (Selig).—Here is a lively mix-up that will keep the audience interested and highly amused all at the same time. Politics, memories of the late war, a love story, ending in a hurried wedding because the young people cannot bear to be separated, even though their respective parents have vowed eternal vengeance upon each other, and an ending as blissful and peaceful as the calm serenity of a Summer morning, when everybody makes up with everybody else and all political differences are forgotten in the congratulations showered upon the young couple. The Selig players have a happy faculty of working out a story of this character with sufficient understanding of human nature to make them appear real. The acting in this film is particularly good and supplies no end of fun while the picture is on the screen.

"Sentimental Sam" (Lubin).—An amusing picture representing a husband and wife each attempting to commit suicide after their first quarrel. Sammy drops in just in time to see what is transpiring, and by showing the farewell notes each wrote to the other succeeds in affecting a reconciliation so engrossing and affecting that they forget Sam's presence in the joy of their exuberant affection.

"It Might Have Been" (Lubin).—A bit of comedy from this house which, like all others that originate in the same place, keeps the audience well amused. The Lubin comedians are funny, sometimes without appearing to know it, and in this instance they perform their parts to perfection.

"The Woman from Mellon's" (Biograph).—A story which is more amusing than some funny pictures which are offered. The mix-up in the love affairs is funny. When the father sends for a woman to watch his daughter, the detective agency sends the lover made up in woman's clothes, and then the fun begins, culminating when the father proposes eloping with the pretty detective. The marriage ceremony is performed, and the father, realizing his own embarrassing predicament, gives his blessing, and Cupid once more is vindicated.

Seaside Adventures at Home (Gaumont).—A funny story, representing how a young man gave himself an outing without leaving home. The audience enjoys it quite as much as he does himself. The swim in the kitchen is a novelty which will appeal to those who like something odd and unusual.

"The Course of True Love" (Biograph).—If a love story was told from beginning to end without anything to disturb its delightful charm, no doubt it would be so commonplace that it would be lacking in interest. Consequently, various disturbances are interlarded to add to the interest and keep the interest of the reader, or hold the attention of the audience which is watching a picture. In this instance the poor little flower girl who innocently causes the misunderstanding that almost separates the lovers excites one's pity. She is the pathetic figure in this story, and unquestionably the sympathy of the audience will flow to her. That the lovers make up their differences does not seem strange. Lovers have a way of doing that. That they will live happily ever afterward is equally apparent, and this affords a satisfactory ending to a drama which included something of storm and stress. Like all the Biograph pictures this is well acted and the photography is quite in keeping with the subject and its suggestions.

"Celestial Vengeance" (Lubin).—Perhaps Lubin's films have come to be considered as unusually attractive because they generally include something novel, and most persons who see motion pictures will agree that novelty possesses an irresistible strength of attraction. It is novel to see a man go to Chinatown and steal an idol; but the real novelty, after all, lies in the punishment which is meted out to the thief when the Chinese find the desecrator of the shrine. The interest centers there and the effect upon the audience is like the effect of most of the Lubin films. There is plenty of action, some of it of the liveliest character, and acting and photography are alike good.

"The Bandit" (Pathe).—A well acted and clearly photographed film depicting first the charity of a brigand, whom a poor widow has befriended, and then representing this brigand as executing summary justice upon the landlord, who refused to give a receipt for money paid him by the widow. No one pities him when he is despoiled of a portion of his wealth by the brigand. It seems only an ordinary course for justice to pursue.

"In the Serpent's Power" (Selig).—Here is one from the Selig studios, lifelike and engaging, carrying one to Genoa and breathing the spirit of Italy itself. The reproduction of Italian scenery is remarkably well done. In fact, it does not require any difficult work on the part of the imagination to believe one is looking upon a scene in the actual life of that interesting country. It is full of action, in some instances of a very exciting, not to say sensational, character, and it causes one to observe closely in an endeavor to comprehend what comes next. It is one of the Selig sort, with all the snap and dash and accurate interpretation which are so characteristic of the Selig films.

"The Passing Shadow" (Vitagraph).—A story of a son cast off because he married against his father's wishes, with attendant poverty and distress. This story is lifted out of the category of commonplace by the entrance of the son to father's library to leave a Christmas present, his discovery and shooting for a burglar. Then comes the reconciliation, with the resultant happiness of all parties concerned. There is nothing particularly striking about the picture, aside from the incident that results in reconciliation, but the story is interesting, well acted, and does not fail to please the audience.

"Servant from the Country" (Gaumont).—A series of amusing, though not altogether pleasant adventures which beset a family who employ a servant from the country. She becomes frightened and hurls a live lobster out of the window, and gives a good suit of clothes to a beggar, mistaking him for a tailor. The comedy is lively and calculated to keep an audience in good humor. The photography is clear and satisfactory.

"Settled Out of Court" (Gaumont).—A novel way of settling a threatened divorce case. By raising a smoke a tactful lawyer brings an estranged husband and wife together and makes a settlement out of court an easy proposition. While the smoke from an oil stove might not always be a potent influence in settling such disagreements, this picture is not without its serious aspects, even though it was, perhaps, intended to be a comedy. It might set others thinking along similar lines and in that respect, at least, suggesting possible arrangement of any existing dispute.

"The Livingston Case" (Edison).—A detective story much on the order of the famous "Sherlock Holmes" tales. By a process of deduction a detective follows out a series of clues by which he obtains a confession from a suspect. The film is dramatic in the extreme. The action is well sustained throughout and works out to a climax both startling and unexpected. It is a good story and deserves a long run. It is one of those stories which appeals both by its novelty and its intrinsic interest, and holds the attention of the audience throughout at a high pitch.

"In Ancient Greece" (Pathe).—A reproduction of an ancient Greek dance which is so lifelike, and withal such an excellent pictorial representation of a dance from ancient Greece that it is hard to believe the dancers do not actually appear in the flesh. Perhaps the principal attraction of this film lies in its concrete representation of what has been many times described, but which can scarcely be understood without something more tangible than words. It is well worth seeing and should be popular.

"The Confederate Spy" (Kalem).—A Civil War story in which a young lieutenant is sent on a dangerous mission to secure certain Federal plans, but is wounded and the papers are delivered by a faithful old colored servant. The first scene, a typical Southern plantation home before the war, is beautiful and is, perhaps, a sufficient reason for the picture, if there was no story connected with it. Much good will be done by presenting to those who know nothing about such scenes a reproduction of them. Perhaps in that way a better understanding of the character of the Southern people can be disseminated. There is a scene, too, of a deserted cabin in an almost impenetrable swamp, with the picture of the mistress of the beautiful home forced to that hovel for refuge. The contrast is almost a shock and graphically represents what the war cost the Confederacy. The film is well acted and the setting is also good. The steady improvement in the quality of these films is noticeable and the firm deserves commendation for their good work.

"The Price of Fame" (Essanay).—An intensely dramatic picture, depicting graphically the struggles of a musical composer, the apparent perfidy of his wife, resulting in her leaving him, his triumphant success and finally their reunion just as she has given up all hope and expects to die. The Italian character is portrayed with a fidelity which makes the acting seem like the work of real people, rather than the pictorial reproduction of what actors have performed. The situations are dramatic and the climax, the reunion of husband and wife, is well managed. It seems real, so good is the acting. One cannot forbear commending this house for the steady improvement in their dramatic work, as well as their photography, and the combination is producing films which win the applause of the best audiences.

"Coals of Fire" (Urban).—While an explosion in this picture is well managed, and the resulting blindness and kindness of an abused child are interesting features, one is almost ready to believe that its principal attraction will be found in the reproduction of scenery among the Pyrenees. The operator has done his work so well that the mountains, with their gorges and beautiful valleys, seem to stand before one, perfectly reproduced, with tonal values so well preserved that it is a pleasure to look at them. The story supplies a reason for making the picture, but the scenic beauties are sufficient to make it popular without the story.

"Venetian Isles" (Urban).—An adequate picture of Venice, perhaps one of the most successful pictures this house has ever put out. It is Venice, the beautiful, with all its characteristic features so well reproduced that it lives before one's eyes, and as the gondolas glide smoothly along, one's imagination makes one believe that for the time, at least, one is basking in the delicious sunlight of that marvelous and poetic clime. No other place on earth is like it, and the house which produced this film is to be congratulated upon bringing out a picture which so satisfactorily reproduces the distinguishing features of the marvelous city. It is a distinction of which any firm may well feel proud, to be able to make a picture which will appeal so graphically and convey such an accurate impression of the actual scene. The chief mission of the motion picture is, in this way, fulfilled.

"Roller Skating in Australia" (Pathe).—A remarkably good scenic picture, well described in the title, and affording opportunity to acquire accurate information respecting the sport in that far-away portion of the world. An important feature of the motion picture's province is to bring together distant portions of the world, and make the inhabitants of one portion acquainted with what goes on in other parts. Not all persons can travel and see these things for themselves, but there is no limit to the number who can view the scenes in motion pictures.

"The Little Old Men of the Woods" (Kalem).—One of the fairy stories announced by the house which it is intended to release each week. In this instance one of Grimm's well-known tales is adequately dramatized and made even more interesting than the story itself. It is the well-known story of Snow White, whose queen mother died when she was a baby and whose stepmother attempted later to have her killed. The little dwarfs in the wood protected her and ultimately the cruel stepmother is unmasked and receives just punishment. It is a pretty story, well told and clearly photographed, making an extremely attractive picture. While these films are supposed to be particularly attractive to children, older persons will not fail to be interested. If all these series are as well done as this, the house can depend upon a cordial welcome from its own patrons and the public.

"The Surprise Party" (Edison).—All surprise parties are interesting. Some more than others, perhaps, though of course this feature would be inherent in individual conditions. This surprise party was a donation at the local minister's, and refreshments were ordered from the city. Through the pranks of boys, the refreshment box was mixed with a box of animals intended for a theater, and then there was, indeed, a surprise. The players have seized upon and have developed the salient features in this story and have made a very laughable occasion of it indeed. It is a happy combination and the fun is lively without a suspicion of taint or anything disagreeable. Such humorous pictures deserve the heartiest commendation of all lovers of the silent drama.

"The Bad Man from Riley's Gulch" (Edison).—A drama representing what has occurred many times in Western saloons when a bad man enters and begins bullying everyone in the place. So far the picture is familiar, but when the bully is put to flight by a determined little woman wielding a pair of shears the picture has a different ending from some of them. This one is well acted, but apart from that it posseses considerable interest because it shows a type of character which is fast passing away, if, indeed, it has not entirely passed, excepting in remote frontier or backwoods settlements. The typical bad man was a product of a condition, and in a general way that condition has ceased to exist in most localities and with it has gone this type of bullying desperado. Preserving the type adequately has been well performed in this picture.

"His Just Deserts" (Edison).—A workman in a Southern iron foundry makes advances to the wife of another workman, and because he is repulsed wreaks summary vengeance upon the husband. But Nemesis overtakes him and he meets a horrible death in the molten metal. The death scene is very realistic and is admirably managed. It is difficult to suggest any improvement in the scene. The foundry itself is well illustrated and in all particulars the picture gives satisfaction.

"The Female Bandit" (Bison).—A melodramatic story of suffering, heroism, a female bandit holding up a coach, rescuing a child from a burning house and several other thrilling adventures. The action, perhaps one might call it the life of the piece, is sufficiently good to hold the interest of the audience from beginning to end. The technical qualities are likewise satisfactory.

"Justice in the Far North" (Imp).—A melodramatic picture chiefly interesting because it reproduces far Northern scenery, representing possibilities of suffering which are unknown here. The story itself, a repetition of the familiar one of a wife abused by a husband who does not, or will

DO YOU SUPPOSE

J. H. HALLBERG

or believe that exhibitors who have bought various makes of current savers during the past year would come to me and put down cold cash and besides give me their old current saver in trade for the

HALLBERG Economizer

if it wasn't a fact that the "HALLBERG" saves more money on the electric bill and gives a better light?

NOT A BIT OF IT!

THERE'S A REASON, and I can prove it. If you don't believe me ask Mr. Cohen of Cohen Bros. & Peyser, who own and operate the Knickerbocker Theatre, No. 879 Prospect Avenue, New York City. He put in an Inductor current saver, and used it a short time. He paid me cash and gave me the Inductor current saver besides for one "HALLBERG" Economizer. He was so well pleased with his "HALLBERG" that when he opened a second theatre on corner of Home Street and Prospect Avenue, he bought another "HALLBERG" Economizer. Ask him the reason!

I have been in the current saving business longer than any one else, and I am the only one who has stayed in the business since the beginning and this would not have been possible if I had not made good as I get from twenty to fifty dollars each more for the "HALLBERG" Economizer than the makers of other current savers get for theirs. You will have to have the "HALLBERG" Economizer sooner or later—Why not buy it in the first place? DO IT NOW.

Write for Free Booklet No. W-17

J. H. HALLBERG, 28 Greenwich Ave., New York

TO YOU

We appreciate and welcome competition—we want you—entreat you to carefully consider every line of Film Service that representatives or advertisements recommend. Study them all—weigh their qualities and their values and be governed accordingly—of course we'll be satisfied, because such comparison must result in our favor.

Our Premier Film Service

is sure the "candy" anyway you figure it

The Pittsburg Calcium Light & Film Company

Pittsburg, Pa. Des Moines, Ia. Rochester, N. Y.
Wilkes Barre, Pa. Cincinnati, Ohio.
Omaha, Neb.

ELECTRA

Pink Label

·TRADE MARK·

CARBONS

Superior to all other Carbons on the market

WHY experiment with other Carbons, when the HIGHEST GRADE ELECTRA CARBONS can be had at reasonable prices from the

SOLE IMPORTER

HUGO REISINGER

11 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

not, understand her and treat her decently, and his realization of her value after he has received his lesson. This is not novel, perhaps, but it is interesting and is told in a convincing way that exerts an irresistible power upon the audience. No one pities him when he is shot and severely wounded by his wife, but there is some ground for sympathy for the man who befriended her and almost loses his life for doing it. The picture is, photographically, an improvement on some that have gone before and the acting is in harmony with the subject.

"His Daughter's Legacy" (Pantograph).—A story which appeals because it has a love tale running through it, destined to be turned to sorrow later, however. It is the story of the love of a city man for a country girl, one of those instances where the girl elopes with him, and the result is a happy marriage; happy for a time, at least. Eventually, however, he dismisses her and with her infant in her arms she seeks her father's cabin and falls exhausted on the floor. Years later her husband searches for her and traces her there, only to find she has died in the meantime, but his daughter welcomes him, and with the grandfather's consent he takes her away. The acting is fairly good, only a few points showing variation from the proper standard. Photographically, the film is clear, with the exception of here and there a place that could be improved, and the tinting has been managed with skill and discretion. The film is an advance on former Pantograph releases and indicates improvement in the operating and producing departments. Better things may reasonably be expected.

"The Ten of Spades" (New York Motion Picture Company).—A Western melodrama which develops some interesting situations and offers a number of quite unexpected climaxes. It contains an excellent cowboys' chase and some other features which represent life as it formerly existed in some parts of the West. The tearing of the card is not a new episode, but it is, perhaps, presented in quite as interesting a way as it has been heretofore. The last scene is not quite as convincing as it might be with some minor changes, but there is something about it which holds the attention of the audience and prevents a dull close. Altogether the picture is fairly satisfactory and represents an advance compared with some previous films from the same house.

VITAGRAPH NOTES.

The third reel which has been added to the Vitagraph output is intended by them to be of an educational nature. That is, if the exchanges will fall in with their ideas. But it is obvious that the exchange waits for the calls of the exhibitor and the exhibitor in every case is not guided by the tastes of his patrons, else the manufacturers who have tried to bring about an improvement in the class of subject would have received more ready encouragement.

In "The Wayside Shrine," a current Vitagraph release, we are shown some beautiful natural scenery. This simple and all too common story of the innocent maid who loved not wisely but too well is presented with a fidelity and studied care which shows to what extent the manufacturers are endeavoring to perfect their product.

* * *

The Vitagraph Company have a number of delightful dramatic and comedy surprises in process of issue for the month of March: "An Eye for an Eye," a drama of powerful interest, on March 1; "At the Eleventh Hour," an emotional drama, March 4; "Beautiful Snow," a comedy full of hits and smiles, and "The History of a Sardine Sandwich," on March 5; "A Brother's Devotion," a drama full of sympathetic heart throbs, March 8; "Conscience, or A Baker's Boy," another picturesque Venetian drama, March 11; "Taming a Grandfather," a comedy drama, on March 12. We have already called attention to the issues on February 22; the great French drama, "Paid in Full," February 25; of the society drama, "A Lesson by the Sea," and the Venetian play, "The Soul of Venice," February 26.

* * *

The dramatizing of the novel, "St. Elmo," by the Vitagraph Company will be a feature which the trade and public can look forward to with great interest and anticipation. No expense will be spared in the production.

Scene from "The Wayside Shrine," Vitagraph Company.

Since the announcement of the "Uncle Tom's Cabin," the Vitagraph studio has been besieged by an army of small boys and men with dogs, making application in behalf of their canines for a part in the chase of Eliza by the bloodhounds. The studio might have been mistaken for a pound if it hadn't been for the activity of the gatekeeper.

* * *

The number of inquiries from church people throughout the country about "The Life of Moses" and the cost of renting the whole series, shows that it is not only popular as a general release and great specialty, but also that it has proven a great leader to a higher appreciation of the efforts of the producer and exhibitor in the high character of entertainment they are furnishing the public.

EDISON NOTES.

Another Film by E. W. Townsend on February 22.

Edward W. Townsend, of "Chimmy Fadden" fame, has written another story for Edison films. The title is "A Victim of Bridge," and the plot of the story is laid in the sacred precincts of the most exclusive New York society, of which Mr. Townsend is especially qualified to write. A young matron, a leader in the social set, gambles beyond her means, and learns a lesson never to be forgotten. The action throughout is said to be intensely dramatic. A special cast was engaged for the picture, and it is claimed that the stage settings and gowns worn make a production worthy of a Broadway theater. Photographically the picture is pronounced to be superb.

"The Pied Piper of Hamelin" in an Edison Film.

"The Pied Piper of Hamelin," Robert Browning's wonderful poem, has found its way into Edison production and will be released at a not very distant date. There is a world of possibilities for the motion picture in this interesting subject, and the Edison Company may be depended upon to realize them. All the picturesqueness of the poem will be preserved in its pictorial presentation, but, for the sake of a happier ending, the Edison people, instead of leaving the children of Hamelin town buried deep in the mountain's side, will picture them as restored to their anxious parents.

* * *

"A Victim of Bridge," by Edward W. Townsend, is being advertised by the Edison Company as a production of more than ordinary character, distinguished not alone by the fact of its having been written by so prominent an author as Mr. Townsend, but because of the lavishness of its stage-settings and accessories. The gowns worn by the ladies in this story of New York's "Four Hundred" are said to be direct importations from Paris and the latest creations by the architects of style and fashion in that city. Judicious advertisement of that fact among the feminine population of every city, town or hamlet that boasts of a moving picture theater where the film is exhibited ought to crowd the theater to the doors. The production was staged with a special cast of characters, able to look and act its characters to a nicety. "A Victim of Bridge" will be released February 22.

* * *

"Carmen," with Mlle. Pilar-Morin in the title role, has been practically completed, but the Edison Company is withholding announcement of its release pending the perfection of a few minor details which will shortly be taken care of. "Faust" was a film for any company to be proud of, and the Edison people are not yet done receiving compliments on it, but "Carmen," interpreted by this wonderful French woman, ought to completely overshadow its success. It is promised to be a sumptuous production, without a rival in the history of motion pictures so far as magnificence of costuming and scenic arrangements are concerned. "Carmen" ought to be unusually suited to a woman of Mlle. Pilar-Morin's temperament and talent, and we shall be disagreeably surprised if in its delineation she does not offer a piece of characterization that will surprise even her warmest admirers.

MORE EUROPEAN FILMS FOR THE AMERICAN MARKET.

That enterprising young lady, Miss Frida Klug, to whom we have before alluded, has been very busily and very quietly laying the foundation of a new business. She has made arrangements with the Powers Company to handle the Columbia films in Europe through her European connections and negotiate for the purchase of suitable European negatives for this country. These will be issued to the trade here by The Powers Company, who have installed an elaborate and costly factory at Wakefield, N. Y. The Powers Company have been busily preparing negatives for some time and will shortly resume their regular releases. Meanwhile they offer a timely subject, "The Paris Disaster," from a negative made by Le Lion Company, of Paris, shipments of which will be made from the Powers factory on the 15th inst.

ECLAIR FILMS.

A selection of the products of this well-known French concern is now being regularly supplied to the American independent trade by a regularly established agency at 31 East 27th street, New York. Two of their current issues are of special merit. "Duty and Conscience" shows the trial to which a gamekeeper was put to do his duty and at the same time be merciful to a poor woodman who is caught in private grounds in the act of shooting a rabbit to bring food to his starving wife and children. Conscience prevails and a happy ending is given to an impressive story. Another Eclair film, "Face to Face," is a war drama of great strength. The scenes are well connected and the story interesting and will be a strong addition to any program. In each of these pictures the excellent quality of the photography does justice to charming and well-selected scenery, and several of the outdoor scenes are so beautifully toned and tinted that it is very evident that the Eclair photographers are experts in their profession.

A GREAT NORTHERN HEADLINER.

Those who have followed the subjects and manner of execution of Great Northern films cannot fail to have noticed a steady improvement in the settings, and especially the acting. This is most favorably exemplified in their dramatization of the story of "Madame Sans Gene," which will be released shortly. The entire company which presented the play at the Academie Royal in Copenhagen were engaged for the production of the film, and the scenic effects are far beyond the average film setting. The Great Northern Film Company have prepared a gorgeous poster for this subject, in which all the colors of the spectrum are utilized to produce a harmonious and rich effect, never before seen in a show poster.

A. G. WHYTE OPENS CHICAGO OFFICE.

That hustling young entrant into the film business, A. G. Whyte, who is the sole agent for Nestor Films, leaves New York this week for Chicago, where he will open an office to represent other Eastern independent manufacturers. Whyte is very popular among the exchange men and it is a foregone conclusion that those manufacturers who place their Western business in his hands will not lose by the transaction.

"IMP" RELEASES DOUBLED.

Independent exhibitors who clamor for "Imp" films will be pleased to know that the promised twice-a-week release of these films is now an accomplished fact. The factory end of matters have been hustling for some time to get subjects ahead so that the extra reel will not tax their resources to the extent of sacrificing quality. And only when this is combined with quantity should such increase be encouraged.

LUX FILMS.

It was our good fortune to see on the screen during the past week no less than three films bearing the "Lux" trademark. Two were dramas and one a comedy, and for photographic excellence, stagecraft and action we can only in all fairness accord them the highest praise. The Lux firm in Paris issue three reels—an average of five subjects—a week, and Mr. Prieur, who handles the agency in this country, thus has an excellent variety from which to make his selection. Independent exhibitors who include the Lux films in their program certainly will make no mistake.

EDISON MODEL "B" IN COMPETITIVE DEMONSTRATION.

On February 1, through the courtesy of Mr. Robt. Jeanette of the Globe Theater, Boston, Mass., and under the auspices of the Howard Moving Picture Company, a competitive demonstration was arranged between the new Edison Underwriters' Model "B" Kinetoscope and two other projecting machines of well-known manufacture. Invitations were sent to and accepted by over one hundred owners and managers of moving picture theaters in and around Boston. Among those present were F. H. Stewart, the traveling demonstrator of the Edison Model "B," and representatives of the two other manufacturers. The machines were given a thorough and impartial test under all conceivable conditions. In point of steadiness and clearness of projection the Howard Moving Picture Company reports that the Edison Model "B" clearly proved its superiority over the other machines, with the result that they clinched several good sales on the spot and were assured by many of the exhibitors present that their intention was to install the new model in the near future.

On February 3 another demonstration was given at the Majestic Theater, 52 South Pearl street, Albany, N. Y., through the courtesy of Emil Deches, manager. This demonstration was also well attended by exhibitors from Albany, Schenectady, Troy, Cohoes and neighboring cities. Directly after the exhibition the Actograph Company of America ordered two Model "B" machines direct from the factory by long distance telephone. Further demonstrations are to be given throughout New York State, and the success that has attended Mr. Stewart on his trip so far is expected to be duplicated in every instance.

CORRESPONDENCE.

CHARLES URBAN GIVES ALL HIS TIME TO KINEMACOLOR.

January 25, 1910.

To the Editors, Moving Picture World.

Dear Sirs—The daily increasing popularity and enthusiastic reception gained by—and accorded to—the new departure in kinematography—i. e., Kinemacolor, which reproduces the world's events in the hues and tints of Nature—has occasioned such an exceptional demand that its universal exploitation calls for all the time and energy at my disposal.

In the hope that the sacrifice of one of the positions I previously held would enable me effectually to control the acquisition, manufacture and output of suitable natural color film subjects and appliances, I retired, in November last, from the board of directors of the Societe Generale des Cinematographes "Eclipse," Paris.

I have since found, however, that the Kinemacolor success, its supply and demand, are so growingly insistent that the whole of my resources and powers are necessary for the general adoption and further development of the system.

In this regard, will you kindly permit me to announce to the trade, through the medium of your journal, that I have now entirely severed all active personal connection with the Charles Urban Trading Company, Limited, London?

E. H. Guest, also, the able secretary, and, latterly, general manager of the above company, has placed his resignation in the hands of the directors, that he may assist me in the same direction by undertaking the secretarial and managerial duties of the Natural Color Kinematograph Company, Ltd., whose registered offices and manufacturing departments will remain, as heretofore, at Urbanora House, where all communications addressed either to myself or to E. H. Guest will receive prompt attention.

M. Emile Cheneau, commercial director of the Societe Generale des Cinematographes "Eclipse" of Paris, has been appointed to the temporary charge of the affairs of the Charles Urban Trading Company, Ltd.

While personally thanking you, sir, for the courteous editorial treatment consistently accorded to me, and the members of the trade generally and exhibitors particularly for their support and encouragement since the first introduction of the Kinematograph, I venture to hope that my efforts in this new departure will meet with equal appreciation at their hands, and yours. Believe me,

Yours faithfully,
CHARLES URBAN,
Managing Director, Natural Color Kinematograph Co., Ltd.

OPERATORS' COLUMN.

Watertown, S. D., January 31, 1910.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir—Your article in issue of January 29, "A School for Operators," gives me hopes to see a pet hobby of mine realized, "A correspondence school for operators," one with men like F. C. Taylor and our friend, F. A. Richardson, at the head of it. It would be of untold value to the thousands of struggling operators through the country that have no way of gaining knowledge of their work only by the "cut and try" method. It may work out in the end, but in the majority of cases think what the machine, films and slides, to say nothing of the poor, suffering humanity that has to view his work. I don't think there is an operator but would find it a profitable investment, no matter how much he knows, to take a course. I know what it is to go it alone. My experience with the moving picture machine started with the first wonderful Lubin machine, it only weighed about 300 pounds. The intermediate worked with a crank that came around and hit the film a slap to pull it down into place. It gave me a wonderful practice mending films, but I think I could be taught something of that art. At least it would hurt none of us to find out how others do the work, and if easier and better than ours adopt it. And it stands to reason that an operator that could pass a correspondence course would be better fitted to do his work than one that never took it. Brother Operators, if we all want the school we can get it, if enough of us ask for it.

Very truly yours,
A. W. CROWE.

A GOOD INVESTMENT FOR 1910.
A subscription to the
MOVING PICTURE WORLD, $2.00.

THE JUDGMENT OF PARIS.

Marshfield, Coos Bay, Ore.
January 30, 1910.

Editor Moving Picture World, New York.

Dear Sir—I have the honor to announce that your man who writes "Comments on the Films" is crazy as a bedbug Through the courtesy of Manager Keller, of the Orpheum here, I have just seen what you say in your issue of December 18 about "Through the Breakers" and "The Biograph Girl.' That picture was shown here during the past week, and—that isn't the Biograph Girl, at all. She is all right; she is the handsomest girl (or lady) on the moving picture stage; she is a superb and charming actress; she is in every way adorable; we are all glad to see her appearing again regularly, for we thought, awhile back, that we had lost her—but she is not "the Biograph Girl"; not THE Biograph Girl.

The Biograph Girl who won all the hearts, male and female, in this neck of the woods was the one who used to play Mrs Jones in the Jones comedies. I could mention a lot more of her parts, but that one is the easiest to clearly and briefly designate. She has been gone from "the bunch" for months and the Biograph people ought to be lynched for letting her get away. She is, or was, with the I. M. P., and appeared in "The Forest Ranger's Daughter," which dropped in here on a special occasion. Look in the I. M. P. ad. in your issue of above date and you will see a horribly poor picture of her. Now, that is, or was, the Biograph Girl—and I am confident that you could find about 8,000,000 people in the United States who would agree with me. You could find a lot of them in this town, and only one who would agree with you in liking the Beauty better.

But that girl was simply out of sight—unapproachable She was in a class by herself. In every part she played she was an exquisite delight. Whether comic, pathetic, dramatic, tragic, or any other old thing, she simply took the rag right off. The power of expression that lay in her features was nothing less than marvelous, and the lightning changes were a wonder. In fact, she was a wonder altogether, and her versatility would be unbelievable if a fellow hadn't seen it To see her play Mrs. Jones in a tantrum and then see her as the Russian Nihilist girl, for instance, in a drama of which I have forgotten the name; as a young girl; as a mother; to see her as a highly polished society lady, one time, and at another time see her straddle a cayuse as a Western girl and ride like a wild Indian—to see her take these widely varying parts and play each as though she were in her native element with every pose and motion and expression in perfect harmony with the character—all this was a revelation. And to see her in a love scene was enough to draw a fellow right across the continent, if he were not fifty years old and married—and broke.

And now you think someone else is the Biograph Girl! If you think I am off my base, you go and see that girl in some I. M. P. picture where she has a chance—if they make any such. And that is the deuce of it. She doesn't belong anywhere else but with the Biograph people. They are the only ones who seem to have regularly plays that call for and bring out her grade of talent. But look it up, anyway, and see if I am not right. Yours very truly,
P. C. LEVAR.

[Does our brother of the "Daily Coast Mail" remember the classic story of "The Judgment of Paris"? Paris had to make a choice as to which was the loveliest of three lovely girls. He solved his problem by inducing them to race for the title. We emphatically decline to be drawn into any expression of comparative opinion as to the personal and histrionic gifts of the ladies referred to in Mr. Levar's letter. We admire both. So does the moving picture public of the world.—Eds. M. P. W.]

Cohen Bros. & Peyser, proprietors of the Knickerbocker Theater, Prospect avenue, New York City, purchased an inductor current saver with their moving picture machine a few months ago. The distance from the lens to the screen in this theater is over 90 feet, which requires a very powerful and steady current at the arc with alternating current. Mr. Cohen, the manager, soon discovered that some of his competitors, using the "Hallberg" Economizer, were getting a better light, and he, therefore, made a contract with Mr. Hallberg to exchange his current saver for a "Hallberg" Economizer, which greatly improved the illumination on the sheet. Mr. Cohen was so pleased with this installation that when he opened his new theater a few weeks ago, at Home street and Prospect avenue, he purchased an additional "Hallberg" Economizer for the new place.

Among the Exhibitors.

Morristown, N. J.—A. Esposito, owner of the Palace Theater, is building a new $25,000 vaudeville and moving picture house, with a seating capacity of 1,000. B. Cook, of the I. A. T. S. E. of New York, and who now operates a Pathe machine in the Palace, will have charge of the electric effects.

Coalinga, Cal.—Frank O'Connell, an amusement promoter, of Los Angeles, has opened a new and handsome moving picture theater, to be known as the Star.

Atlantic City, N. J.—It is a year ago since the Luna Moving Picture Theater opened its doors to patrons, and its proprietor, J. Cantes, has found his business continually improving and is for the third time compelled to enlarge his seating capacity.

New York City.—A new moving picture theater is being erected on the north side of Ninety-ninth street for the Harburger Realty and Amusement Company.

Green Bay, Wis.—The Star Electric Moving Picture Theater, conducted by Miss Mabel Hall, has suspended business. This show was forced to close on account of having poor business.

St. Louis, Mo.—One of the most up-to-date anl thoroughly equipped moving picture and vaudeville theaters here is now nearing completion on Jefferson avenue, just north of Lafayette avenue. It will be known as the New Lafayette Theater and will cost when finished about $30,000, with a seating capacity of 850. The theater is under the proprietorship of the Independent Amusement Company.

New York City.—The Baptist Temple, at 11 and 13 West 116th street, in which a colored congregation worships, has been sold to Levy & Starr, who propose altering it into a moving picture theater.

Alexandria Bay, N. Y.—J. Claude Ellis and Will E. Muller have opened the Elite Theater, in the Miller block, on James street, and will conduct it as a first-class moving picture theater.

Rome, N. Y.—O. H. Calvin has leased the Opera House here, which he will convert into a moving picture theater.

Buffalo, N. Y.—A $15,000 moving picture theater is being erected here, of which J. A. Rferd is the proprietor.

St. Louis, Mo.—O. T. Crawford's Novelty Theater is the latest picture house to be opened here. This theater is located on Eastern avenue and has a seating capacity of 900.

Altoona, Pa.—Andy Gamble has purchased the Grand Theater, on Eleventh avenue.

Catonsville, Md.—The latest picture palace to open here is the New Lafayette, situated on E street, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets.

Scranton, Pa.—The new nickelette which is to be established in the Arcade building will be one of the finest in the city, according to the plans Architect Harvey Blackwood is now preparing. It will be run as a first-class picture palace and will be able to seat about 500 people.

Bridgeport, Conn.—A new moving picture theater is being erected on Fairfield avenue.

Washington, D. C.—The Mayer Amusement Company have erected a new picture house here, on F street, near Seventh, which will be under the management of A. C. Mayer. All of the latest moving pictures and high-class vaudeville acts will be furnished.

New York City.—The Harlem Casino property, which occupies a plot 100 by 125 feet at the northeast corner of Seventh avenue, has been bought by the Peoples Vaudeville Company, where they will erect a new moving picture theater.

Springfield, Mass.—P. F. Griffin has bought the Enterprise Theater here.

Boston, Mass.—Miss Lotta Crabtree is building a moving picture theater on the site of the Hotel Cecil, which will be able to seat about 500 patrons.

Plymouth, Mass.—A license has been granted to Herbert S. Clarke to conduct a moving picture and vaudeville show for the Pastime Theater, located in the Bittinger building.

Worcester, Mass.—New exits are being built at the St. Jean Opera House, which presents moving picture entertainments, to comply with the law.

Fort Worth, Tex.—A new moving picture theater, The Bioscope, situated at 1204 Main street, has at last opened. It is said that this house is one of the prettiest in this city.

Norwich, Conn.—Eugene Pigeon has leased the Murphy building, on Canal street, and is to put a motion picture show in the place.

Utica, N. Y.—The latest moving picture theater to open here is the Royal, owned by William Evans, and it is situated on the corner of John and Ann streets.

Worcester, Mass.—The Mack Amusement Company has opened the New Bijou Theater at the corner of Millbury and Lamartine streets. The theater has a seating capacity of 700, 400 on the floor of the house and 300 in the balcony. The main entrance to the theater is on Millbury street and has seven exits. Dave Manley, formerly connected with the New York Theater, is the manager of the house.

Milwaukee, Wis.—A new moving picture theater will be installed in the building at 194 Third avenue.

Hartford, Conn.—The Parkville Hall is being converted into a moving picture theater.

Winchester, Va.—The Casino Theater has been purchased by Kern & Haddox.

Louisville, Ky.—The Hopkins Theater, formerly a melodrama opera house, has given up plays and is now running moving pictures and vaudeville.

Statesboro, Ga.—A new moving picture theater has been opened here for W. D. Morgan.

Mexico, Mo.—Jack Amick will erect a moving picture theater here.

Pittston, Pa.—The Gem Theater, located at 14 South Main street, has gone out of business.

Palmer, Mass.—A new moving picture theater is being erected here, which will have a seating capacity of 400, and will cost the proprietor, Raymond Jadoin, $4,000.

Muscatine, Iowa.—The Toohy building, on Sycamore street, is being remodeled for a moving picture theater for F. M. Meyers and T. A. Lisy. The seating capacity is 250.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Robert L. Gunaer is erecting a moving picture theater at 521 West Utica street.

Stafford Springs, Conn.—C. Elaire has sold his moving picture theater here to Joseph Dennith.

Concord, N. C.—A new moving picture theater is being erected for J. Lee Stone and S. T. Cochrane.

San Diego, Cal.—The San Diego Moving Picture Theater will soon open a moving picture show in the Bancroft building, corner Fifth and G streets. This theater has a seating capacity of 300 and will be managed by M. S. Le Claire.

Connellsville, Ohio.—Will Wells, who has been operating a moving picture theater at Connellsville, Ohio, has sold his rights there and opened another show at Athens.

Bangor, Me.—The Gem Theater, on Exchange street, one of the handsomest theaters in this section, has closed on account of lack of room. Mr. Russell, the manager, says that it is his intention to have a balcony put in and have the main floor widened so as to allow many more patrons to see the show.

Easthampton, Mass.—The Star Theater here has been sold.

Bronx, N. Y.—The new moving picture theater at Webster avenue, near Fordham road, has been remodeled. This is now one of the most up-to-date theaters here.

Pottstown, Pa.—The Colonial Theater, Pottstown's largest and prettiest vaudeville and moving picture house, has just been opened in a brand new building.

Duluth, Minn.—C. Wall has sold the Bijou Theater here to J. F. Carey and has bought the Elco Theater.

New York City.—Plans have been filed for remodeling and refitting the moving picture hall at 24 Spring street. The improvements are to be made for John Malgrieve, the owner.

Brockton, Mass.—John Olsen has purchased a plot of ground here, where he intends to erect a moving picture theater.

Decatur, Ind.—Green & Bovin have purchased the Hatton & Anderson moving picture theater here.

Eaton Rapids, Mich.—Orville K. Morris and H. G. Schiddle have purchased the Majestic Theater here.

Wichita, Kan.—R. F. Chambers has sold the Orpheum Theater here to C. L. Jury and J. H Foster.

Lewiston, Ill.—Wilson & Wiley have purchased the Bell Moving Picture Theater here.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Harry Levy will erect a new moving picture theater at 405 South Park avenue.

Huntsville, Tex.—Richard Phillips has opened a new moving picture theater at the corner of Main and Cedar streets.

Rutland, Vt.—Joseph Doyle has sold his interest in the Theatorium on Church street to C. M. Leach

South Bend, Ind.—Thomas M. Moss is planning to open a new vaudeville and moving picture show at 118 South Michigan street.

Woodstock, Ill.—The Gem Amusement Company is planning to open a new theater here.

Oneida, N. Y.—Geo. H. Stacy has sold the F. Tygert moving picture show here to Arthur Christensen.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—The Sun Theater Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000 The incorporators are: B. J. Roahm, John H. Wasson, Geo. A. Dornete and others.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Architects Kirchoff & Rose have completed the plans for the erection of a moving picture theater at 194 Third street for John B. Olinger.

Humboldt, Neb.—J. T. and I. N. Moore have sold the Crystal Moving Picture Theater here to Frank M. Boss.

Washington, Ohio.—J. C. Robertson and Chas. Johnson are making arrangements to open a new moving picture show here.

Lewiston, Idaho.—Thompson & Applestone are preparing to open a new theater here.

Sibley, Iowa.—I. F. Stucker has decided to open a new moving picture theater here.

Watervliet, N. Y.—Frederick Andrews has purchased the Star Moving Picture Theater on Broadway.

Centerville, Iowa.—Pewthers & Bon have purchased the Majestic Moving Picture Theater here.

Auburn, Cal.—Louis Tester has sold the Fairyland Theater here to C. A. Clark and J. A. Irving.

Owensboro, Ky.—W. R. Williams has purchased the Majestic Theater here.

Central Neb.—A. L. Lindsey will open a new electric theater here.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Robert L. Guemar has secured a permit for the erection of a new picture theater on West Utica street.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Katherine Miller will erect a moving picture show at 1820 Genesee street.

Brazil, Ind.—Robert Stewart is considering the erection of a new picture theater here.

Two Harbors, Minn.—Hans Olson and George Alstett have bought the Star Moving Picture Theater here from Fred Hillier.

South Bend, Ind.—W. S. Butterfield will erect a new vaudeville and moving picture theater here.

Quincy, Mich.—Lee H. Young is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Columbus, Ind.—Mr. Barton is making arrangements to open the Crystal moving picture show here.

Middletown, Ohio.—John J. Ryan is planning to erect a large vaudeville theater here.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The old Dime Savings Bank, situated on the corner of Court and Remsen streets, has been converted into a first-class moving picture and vaudeville theater. This place was formerly the site of Hooley's old opera house.

Huntsville, Tenn.—R. Philips has a lease on the store on Main and Cedar streets where he intends to erect a moving picture theater.

Baltimore, Md.—The property at 4 South Stockton street is being altered and an unknown party will build a new picture palace.

Rochester, N. Y.—A new moving picture theater is being erected at 41-43 Clinton avenue for Maurice H. Kuhn.

Jacksonville, Ill.—H. Gladdings has leased the Bijou Theater here which he will devote to moving pictures and vaudeville.

Minneapolis, Tenn.—The Dreamland is a new picture house which has opened here. It is located on Fifth street, opposite City Hall, and will cost $30,000 when finished.

North Tonawanda, N. Y.—The Scenic Theater here is being operated now by the Gem Amusement Company, with U. E. Ackley, manager.

Pottstown, Pa.—The latest moving picture theater erected here is the Colonial, which is situated in the Krelitz Building, and has a seating capacity of 380.

Stroudsburg, Pa.—Work has begun for the erection of the New Star Theater, on Washington street, which will be equipped with all new opera chairs, etc. The proprietor, R. D. Depuy, states that it is his intention to run first-class pictures. The theater is due to open by April 1.

Newburyport, Mass.—The Star Theater here has again opened under the management of P. Graham.

Pittston, Pa.—The Gem Theater, 14 South Main street, has been forced to close on account of poor business.

Buffalo, N. Y.—A new moving picture theater is being erected at 521 West Utica avenue.

Melford, Mass.—Manager Shannon, of the Gorham's Theater Company, was looking over property preparatory to the consideration of erecting a new vaudeville and moving picture theater in town.

Goshen, Ind.—E. J. Stanton has decided to reopen the Vaudette Theater again.

Freehold, N. J.—Edward T. Skyrm bought the old Lounsberry stove store property, on Throckmorton street.

Louisville, Ky.—After experimenting eight months with vaudeville and melodrama, the Hopkins Theater will again run moving pictures and illustrated slides.

New York City.—Plans have been filed for the erection of a moving picture theater, at 2056 Third avenue, for Francis Hustace.

Pittsfield, Me.—Clifford Bragg has leased the Park street moving picture theater from C. B. Strople.

Sevenmile, Ohio.—Col. I. W. Boatman has opened a moving picture theater here.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—H. J. Woronov will remodel the building on Grand avenue, north of Grand street, into a moving picture theater.

Martins Ferry, W. Va.—W. W. North has leased the Lyric Theater and will operate it as a moving picture house.

Kokomo, Ind.—G. P. Weed has purchased the interest of his partner, Al Wise, in the Fairview Moving Picture Theater.

Leavenworth, Kan.—Ed Lampson has sold the Palm and Fern Theaters here to F. I. Buckingham.

Norwich, N. Y.—The Star Theater Company is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Champaign, Ill.—Harry Stevens has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Nevada, Ia.—The Nevada Electric Company has sold the Electric Theater here to Williams & Williams, of Beresford, S. D.

Waterloo, Ia.—J. L. McClinton will open a new moving picture theater at 116 Fourth street.

Roanoke, Ill.—Adamond Faucon and Alfred Bodhaine have opened a new moving picture theater here.

Parsons, Pa.—Ralph Davis has opened a new moving picture theater at Miners Mills.

Clinton, Ia.—C. C. Shiery has sold his moving picture theater here to W. W. Gibson.

Medora, Ill.—Thos. Richardson is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Los Angeles, Cal.—J. O. Kaiser is having plans prepared for the erection of a new moving picture theater at 319 South Hill street.

Alliance, Ohio.—Gus Tantar has purchased the Princess Theater here from Charles E. Best.

Toledo, Ohio.—The Bettis Company is planning to erect a new vaudeville and picture theater here.

Eddyville, Ky.—Sisk & Overall have sold the Odeon moving picture show to the Lyric Amusement Company.

Baltimore, Md.—Herman S. Hackerman has secured a permit for the erection of a new moving picture theater at 1204 Patterson avenue.

INDEPENDENT

We rent new Films. Handle all the leading Makes, both AMERICAN AND FOREIGN; beautiful Posters; exclusive Feature Service. Write for prices.

CINCINNATI FILM EXCHANGE, 214-16 West 5th Street, CINCINNATI, O.

KEEP YOUR EYE ON US

AMERICAN FILM BROKERS—German Savings Bank Building
147-157 4th Avenue, New York City

A big lot of Independent Films like new very cheap. One brand new Edison machine—1 pin movement. Song Slides, Announcement Slides and Accessories, cheaper than anybody else.

INTERNATIONAL FILM COMPANY

110 WEST 34th STREET NEW YORK

NOTE OUR SPECIALTY
All Films at 2 cents per foot

Dealers in Films, Moving Picture Machines, Carbons, Tickets, Song Slides, Announcement Slides and everything pertaining to the Moving Picture business.

Want to Buy 1000 Reels Independent Film

Curtainyline

For three years has given satisfaction to the most exacting Exhibitors—they will use nothing else on their curtain

Brings Out the True Photographic Outlines. Fireproofs Your Curtain
Try a $3.00 Carton and Note the Wonderful Improvement in Your Pictures

A $3.00 carton is sufficient for any ordinary cnrtain. All exchanges carry it in stock

Curtainyline Curtain & Producing Co.

22 Fifth Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

Theatre For Sale

GREAT OPPORTUNITY.

ESTABLISHED, POPULAR AND PAYING THEATER IN MANUFACTURING OHIO CITY. Seating capacity 415. Two Edison machines, exhaust fan and six other fans. New scenery, everything in first-class shape. Electric light signs and a pretty front. 15,000 inhabitants and only one other vaudeville show in the city. Will sacrifice for $2,500 cash if sold within three weeks, as other business in the State of Washington compels me to leave for the West. Address for further particulars, O. MASON, care of Moving Picture World.

PARIS FLOOD SLIDES

12 Colored Slides and Printed Lecture for $6.00. Be the first to get it.

We furnish you with the best song slide service to be had for the small cost of 50 cents a set per week. We have a large number of beautiful announcement slides also Washington slides. We also have short travel lectures. Get the new slides before your neighbor gets them. Write at once for our lists.

LINCOLN TRANSPARENCY EXCHANGE
16th Floor, Masonic Temple - - Chicago, Ill.

National Song Slide Exchange

Song Slides, Rented, Bought and Sold
Our Service is Exclusive
Announcement and Advertising Slides

WRITE US

303—59 Dearborn Street - Chicago, Ill.

Cement La GRIPPE Cement

F Renters	We will send	W Buy a
O Exhibitors	you for	H Spoonfull
R All Films	ONE DOLLAR	Y at a Time?

A BIG HONEST CAN OF CEMENT
POSTAGE PREPAID

Equal to 10 of those small bottles you have been buying. Satisfaction guaranteed or money returned.

La GRIPPE FILM CEMENT CO.
76 Broad Street, Boston, Mass.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY, Feb. 22

SPECIAL LECTURETTE
LIFE OF WASHINGTON

Set complete, 12 slides, colored, with lecture, $4.00

SINGLE PORTRAITS, COLORED, 50c EACH

SLIDES MADE to YOUR ORDER
From 50c to $1.50, depending on copy

We Carry a Complete Stock of
ANNOUNCEMENTS, SERPENTINES, FLAGS, Etc

BRAYTON MANUFACTURING CO. 122 Randolph Street CHICAGO

Nelson, Neb.—Gee & McCloseky are preparing to open a new picture show in the Long Building.

Boston, Mass.—Frank L. Brown, manager of the Pastime Theater here, has resigned his position as manager and will take charge of the New Beacon Street, which is one of the latest moving picture theaters erected here. It is situated on Tremont street, near Scollay square, and has a seating capacity of 800.

New York City.—A new moving picture theater has been erected at 1510 Broadway.

Iron River, Wis.—Pat Chantelots has purchased the Bijou Theater here and will conduct it as a first-class moving picture theater.

Park Falls, Wis.—The popular Savoy Theater, on the corner of Fourth avenue and Fourth street, has changed hands. Walter Blume has leased it, while the former proprietor, George Turner, has gone to Ironwood, where he will erect a string of picture houses.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Nathaniel Stack has obtained a license to run a moving picture theater, at Reid and Gates avenues.

Louisville, Ky.—A new moving picture theater has been erected here which has a seating capacity of 2,400, and will be under the management of Edward W. Dustin.

Elmira, N. Y.—A new moving picture theater is being erected here for the Shea Brothers.

Omaha, Neb.—The building inspector in this section ordered the proprietor of the Parlor Theater, at 1408 Douglas street, to close for not keeping the house clean.

Northampton, Mass.—The Star Theater, in the White Block, on Main street, has been forced to close, caused by lack of patronage. This leaves the Bijou Theater the only house of amusement in this section.

Brockton, Mass.—John Olsen and Samuel Hapgood are having a new moving picture theater erected on Main street, opposite Tremont, which they will operate as a high class moving picture palace.

Duluth, Minn.—Hans Olsen and George Alstett have purchased the Star Theater from Fred Hillier.

Boise, Ia.—A new moving picture theater is being erected here.

Dubuque, Ia.—Frank C. Guerens has purchased the Clay Theater, which he will convert into a moving picture auditorium.

Bronx, N. Y.—The Tremont Vaudeville Theater, situated at Webster avenue, north of Tremont avenue, will open shortly under the management of Louis Beck. The seating capacity is 1,250. It will be devoted to vaudeville and moving pictures.

Duluth, Minn.—The Gem Theater here has changed hands. H. Magen will manage the house.

Bellaire, Ohio.—The Spragg Amusement Company have taken a two years' lease on the Olympic Theater, formerly a vaudeville house. Mr. Morris, secretary of the company, announces that he will run all licensed films.

Manchester, N. H.—The Crown Theater opened its doors on February 7, and is devoted to vaudeville and moving pictures. The seating capacity is 750. It will be managed by the owners, Couture Brothers. It is said that this house is one of the finest and most up-to-date palaces in New England.

Eau-Claire, Wis.—Walter Bonell has disposed of his interest in the Orpheum Theater to William J. Moe.

McPherson, Kan.—A new moving picture theater is being erected here and will be under the proprietorship of E. S. Guymon.

Philadelphia, Pa.—George Hogg is estimating on plans for a moving picture theater at Front and Girard avenue, for the Jumbo Amusement Company.

Gilbertville, Mass.—E. Elain has sold his moving picture theater to Joseph Dennith.

Buffalo, N. Y.—A new moving picture theater is being erected at 521 West Utica street for Robert L. Gumaer.

Little Falls, N. Y.—A new moving picture theater is being erected in the old Evans Hall and will be known as the Royal Theater.

Holyoke, Mass.—J. J. O'Connor and Michael Moriarity have taken a lease on the old Lyman Market, and will convert it into a first-class moving picture theater. The seating capacity is said to be about 500.

Omaha, Neb.—Permission was granted to the Parlor Theater, 1408 Douglas street, by the building inspector, to reopen the place for moving pictures.

Louisville, Ky.—James P. Whallen has erected a new picture palace here, which is said to be the finest in Kentucky. The new theater will be known as the New Princess and is located on the south side of Jefferson street, east of Fourth avenue. This place will be able to seat hundreds of patrons.

Newark, N. J.—A new picture palace has been erected at 83 Sixteenth street, to be known as the New Amsterdam Theater, for the Grand Amusement Company, and has a seating capacity of 300.

Norwalk, Conn.—The Pastime Theater, in Main street, which has been closed for some time, has again opened its doors.

Worcester, Mass.—Another moving picture house will be added to the string here. This one is the New Bijou Theater, at Vernon square, and has a seating capacity of 700, 400 on the floor of the house and 300 in the balcony. The main entrance to the theater is on Millbury street, which is handsomely designed. David Manley, formerly connected with the New Park Theater, will be the manager.

Reinerton, Pa.—A new picture house has been erected here.

Chicago, Ill.—A. A. Buerger has secured a permit for the erection of a moving picture theater at 5056 Ashland avenue.

Delavan, Wis.—The property between the Delavan Steam Laundry and Williamson's Meat Market is being converted into a moving picture theater.

Mansfield, Ohio.—William Georgeon has opened his new moving picture theater at 5 North Main street.

Sheridan, Mont.—A new moving picture theater has been opened on Main street for W. H. Sheridan.

New Britain, Conn.—The Scenic Theater here is now under the proprietorship of Rudolph Simons. It was formerly conducted by Hallaby & Perukas.

Bridgeton, N. J.—Roray & De Armott will open a new picture show in the Eagle Building, on North Laurel street.

Rockville, Conn.—The Turn Hall here has been convertel into a moving picture theater. George W. C. Dowding is the present manager and proprietor.

Spring Valley, N. Y.—A new picture theater is being built on Main street for P. B. Lespinse.

Archbald, Pa.—The Unity Nickelet, on Church street, which for the past several weeks has been dead to the public, will again open and be under the new management of the Scranton Theatrical Company.

Baldwinsville, N. Y.—The vaudeville and moving picture show, known as the Dreamland Theater, will run under the name of the Star and under new management.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Plaza Theater, at Bay Nineteenth street and Bath avenue, will open again and will run all high-class films and vaudeville.

St. Louis, Mo.—O. T. Crawford's Novelty Theater, on Easton avenue, near Grand, which is said to be the only fireproof theater in St. Louis, will open in a few days and will be devoted to moving pictures and vaudeville. The seating capacity is 750.

New York City.—Plans have been filed for the remodeling of the tenement house, situated at 75 Mulberry street, into a moving picture palace, for R. Pennachio.

Boston, Mass.—Irving T. Moore has leased the property at 102-104 Dartmouth street for a moving picture theater.

Port Morris, N. J.—The Salem Motion Picture Theater here has been purchased by Roscoe Miller.

Houston, Tex. O. H. Carmichael has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Brockton, Mass.—The New Orpheum Theater has been bought by John L. Owens from the Belmont Amusement Company.

Allentown, Pa.—The Pergola Theater has been completed and is now larger and well improved. It will open in a few days under new management.

Reading, Pa.—A. S. Rauenzahn has opened his new moving picture theater on State street. This house will be known as the Empire.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—A new picture theater will be opened here shortly and will be under the proprietorship of F. L. Emmert.

Summit, N. J.—The Summit Opera House, formerly Howard Hall, has reopened and will be under the management of Ford & McCrane. All of the latest moving pictures will be shown here.

New York City.—Plans have been filed by Louis Charles Maurer for the erection of a new moving picture show, at 114-116 Park row, which will cost the lessee, Variety Amusement Company, $7,000.

Painesville, Ohio.—M. Shaffer has purchased the interest of the Grand Theater from his partner, Mr. Stuart.

Buffalo, N. Y.—A new moving picture theater is being erected at 405 South Park for Harry Levy.

Manchester, N. H.—Chas. H. Bean is planning to enlarge the Pastime Theater to accommodate the increased patronage. The seating capacity at present is about 450.

Hartford, Conn.—The Hartford Theater has taken up moving pictures.

Newark, N. J.—A new picture theater is being erected at 387 Springfield avenue.

Morristown, N. J.—A new moving picture theater is being erected in Speedwell avenue, near High street, for Antonio Esposito.

Findlay, Ohio.—The Mystic Theater, on Main street, South, has again been thrown open.

New York City.—The building formerly occupied as a Catholic Church, on Webster avenue, near Pelham avenue, is being altered into a moving picture theater.

Bloomfield, Ind.—Ben Freeland and Roy Beach have sold the Nickelo moving picture show to Bruce G. Langton and Ashburt Hains.

Stevensville, Mont.—Frank Mott and Bert Goff, of Hamilton, are making arrangements to open a moving picture show here.

Evansville, Ind.—Charles Frohman is preparing to open a new theater here.

Minonk, Ill.—Charles Garrett has purchased the moving picture show located in the Hillard Carls Building.

Mt. Gilead, Ohio.—H. S. Andrews has purchased the Queen Theater here.

Palmyra, Ill.—L. D. Hopkins has opened a new moving picture theater here in the Concert Hall.

Dubuque, Ia.—Frank C. Gierens has purchased the Clay Theater here.

Painesville, Ohio.—Mr. Stuart has disposed of his interest in the Grand Theater to his partner, Mr. Schaffer.

Caldwell, Ida.—John R. Meldrum opened the Star Theater February 1.

Auburn, Neb.—Mrs. E. M. May has sold the Lyric Moving Picture Theater here to H. C. Dirks.

Hamburg, Pa.—A. S. Reuenzahn has opened a new moving picture theater on State street.

Devils Lake, N. D.—Wm. Nimmo and M. S. Cowley have purchased the opera house.

Fox Lake, Wis.—H. H. Fullmer has purchased the Fox Electric Theater.

Fairfield, Ia.—Mr. Van Ness is preparing to open a moving picture show here, to be known as the Scenic.

Owensboro, Ky.—Scott Haynes has sold the Majestic Theater to W. R. Williams.

Scranton, Pa. M. Hessinger will erect a moving picture theater on Pittston avenue.

Washington, Ohio.—Robertson & Johnson have opened a new moving picture show here. It is known as the Fayette.

Covington, Ky.—Benjamin D. Griffith has purchased the nickel theater of O. G. Lathrop, on East Eleventh street.

Allentown, Pa.—Geo. W. Bennethum is preparing to open a moving picture show here.

Webster City, Ia.—Rogers & Woolwine will start a moving picture theater here.

Two Harbors, Minn.—F. W. Hiller has sold the Star Theater here to the Glen Theater Company.

Hamilton, Mont.—Bert Goff and Frank Mott will open a new moving picture show here.

Waterloo, Ia.—J. L. McClinton and J. W. Marcellus have leased the Cascaden Building for a moving picture theater.

Tiffin, Ohio.—Edward L. Moore has leased the Grand Theater here.

Eaton, Mich.—Orville K. Morse and H. J. Schidel have purchased the Majestic Theater here.

Pana, Ill.—L. M. Stinnett has purchased the White Palace moving picture show here.

NEW INCORPORATIONS.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Picture Garden Theater Company. Capital, $1,500. Directors: Wm. M. Steele and Eugene E. Young.

Wilmington, Del.—Broadway Amusement Company. Capital, $10,000. Directors: A. Orland, M. Park and Joseph A. Mastbaum.

St. Louis, Mo.—Knickerbocker Amusement Company. Capital, $5,000. Directors: George T. Meyer, August A. Meyer and Adolph Prack.

Charlestown, W. Va.—Capital Film Company. Capital, $50,000. Directors: Charles P. Sudworth, H. B. Campbell, C. T. Handler, L. J. Mather and Edward N. Hopewell.

FILMS FOR RENT

One shipment, slides, signs and posters included. Write for terms.

HUDSON FILM CO.
136 E. 14th St. New York

Exhibitors, Notice!

Do you want to sell your theatre? Do you want to buy a theatre? We buy and sell moving-picture theatres. List your houses with us for QUICK SALE.

OKLAHOMA and TEXAS Exhibitors Take Notice!

We can lease your theatre and run it on a percentage basis, and make you more money than you are now making.

Let Us Prove It to You

We can handle your new ideas, inventions and patented articles to good advantage.

Write Us Now

LYRIC AMUSEMENT COMPANY
HOYT G. MORROW, Gen. Mgr.
224 Baltimore Bldg., Oklahoma City, Okla.

Perfect Weld Non-Inflam Cement

Send me $1.00 and I will send you recipe for making a Perfect Weld Non-Inflam Cement. A recipe for a curtain coating that will increase brilliancy of picture 33⅓ per cent, and two other valuable recipes. Do it now.

WILL CARLETON
Gem Theatre, Grundy Centre, Iowa

BIOGRAPH FILMS

TRADE MARK TRADE MARK

RELEASED FEBRUARY 14, 1910

One Night, and Then

A SOUL LIFTED FROM THE SLOUGH OF INDIFFERENCE

This is positively the most intense dramatic subject yet produced by Biograph. It presents a strong moral in the all too ready inclination to calumny. Henry Ravol has gained the reputation of being a man devoid of sympathy, simply using his enormous wealth to gratify his longing for the false pleasures of life. Burned up by the fires of dissipation, he is told that he has but a few days to live. He decides to anticipate by self-destruction, but in a manner to deceive his fawning friends. Hence, to carry out his plan, in disguise he goes to a poor neighborhood and there gets a chance to bestow charity. Not having any money about him, he goes back to his home and is shot as a burglar while securing it. He is recognized, and to the doctor who is called he gives the money, telling him he can do nothing for him, but to go and relieve the wants of the poor family. Despite this, the morning papers in noting his death print a reviling article.

APPROXIMATE LENGTH, 992 FEET

RELEASED FEBRUARY 17, 1910

The Englishman and the Girl

HE LAUGHS BEST WHO LAUGHS LAST

In this Biograph subject is presented a comedy bordering on the burlesque. The Village Amateur Dramatic Club is rehearsing for a performance of "Pocahontas," when word is received that an Englishman is about to visit the family of the leading lady. The Englishman seems to have an impression that Indians may be seen running wild through the streets of the American cities, and the young folks plan to strengthen this impression. When he arrives they dress up in their Indian costumes with a view to frightening him. He, however, is made of stouter stuff than they imagine and turns the tables on them. His bravery makes as great an impression on the lady as her artlessness does on him, and there is an attitude prognosticating wedding bells in the near future at the end of the film.

APPROXIMATE LENGTH, 975 FEET

A Full Description of these Subjects will be Found on Another Page

Release days of Biograph Subjects — MONDAY and THURSDAY

Get on Our Mail List and Keep Posted. Write for Our Descriptive Circulars

BIOGRAPH COMPANY

Licensee of the Motion Picture Patents Co.

11 EAST 14th STREET :: NEW YORK

GEORGE KLEINE, Selling Agent for Chicago (52 State St., Chicago, Ill.).

SLIDES
of Highest Quality

LATEST SONG SETS

I Didn't Mean to Make You Cry.
Every Girl I Get the Other Fellow Steals.
Betsy Ross.
Kitty Gray.
The Flower of Singapore.
The Spot that My Heart Calls Home.
The Wreck of the Good Ship Love.
In The City Where Nobody Cares.
I Rather Say Hello Than Say Good Bye.
I Love My Steady But I'm Crazy About My Once In Awhile.
Candy
I Have Got Something In My Eye.
Kitty.
Chasing The Eagle.

High class slides made and colored to order from prints and negatives

Scott & Van Altena
59 Pearl St., New York City

NEW SLIDES

For the Following Songs—JUST OUT

Sunbeam.
Tie Your Little Bull Outside.
The Girl Behind the Counter is the Girl For Me.
The Moonlight, the Rose and You.
Her Name is Mary Donohue.
Busy Little Cupid.
When the Daisies Bloom.
Shaky Eyes.
Mandy How Do You Do.
Margarita.
Love Me Dreamy Eyes.
Nora Malone.
By the Light of the Silvery Moon.
There's Nothing Else in Life Like Love, Love, Love.
Take Me Back to Sunshine Land.
Mary you're a Big Girl Now.
My Dream of Long Ago.
When I Fell in Love With You.
Rosenbaum.
When You've Won the Only Girl You Love.

DeWITT C. WHEELER

120 W. 31st St., N. Y. City

FILMS HOWARD MOVING PICTURE CO. FILMS

Repair Work a Specialty. Agents for Motiograph, Power's and Edison Machines. Supplies and Sundries.

564 Washington Street, - - Boston Mass.

Established 1894. (Opposite Adams House). Incorporated 1908.

Canadian Exhibitors

Looking for a first-class film service, write the Crystal Palace Film Exchange for particulars. We handle both Licensed and Independent films and can give you a right up-to-date service. We own and operate the most successful Moving Picture Theaters in Canada.

Located at

141 Yonge Street, Toronto.
331 St. Lawrence Blvd., Mont.
27 King Street East, Hamilton.

Agents for Power's and Edison Machines.

Crystal Palace Film Exchange

141 Yonge Street. Toronto, Can.

Feature Films For Sale

200 Reels of high class films at slaughter prices.

SAXE FILM EXCHANGE

1416 Broadway - New York

WANTED

Scenic, industrial, topical and educational films. Any make or countries. Send list and lowest prices.

R. R. BRIGGS 1637 Fairmont Avenue PHILADELPHIA, PA.

BIOGAPH COMPANY.

THE ENGLISHMAN AND THE GIRL.—"He laughs best who laughs last," is the truest maxim ever coined, and Robert Wilberforce, an Englishman, the hero of this Biograph story, enjoys to the extreme the full strength of it. At Cedarville there is an Amateur Dramatic Club, composed of the leading histrionic lights of the town. Like all amateurs they tackle only the heaviest of tragedies and classics, which they performed in their own "inimitable" style. On this occasion they were assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thayer, rehearsing for an elaborate production of "Pocahontas," with Dorothy Thayer in the role of the Indian maiden. A letter is received from Cousin Tom introducing Arthur Wilberforce, who has lately arrived from England, and who is imbued with the idea that Indians are to be seen on the streets of the big cities in their primitive state, which he assumes is wild, ferocious and shooting up things. This intelligence Dorothy imparts to the members of the Club, who decide to give him a right royal welcome on his arrival. Arthur soon arrives and Dorothy takes him to the village store, ostensibly to get mail, but really to show him off. He is a peculiar looking genius of cockney type, with a form of a lamp-post, and as graceful as a duck; in fact, he looked like the "before" image of a flesh food advertisement. Over six feet tall, he is forced, when coming to a sitting posture, to make four folds instead of three of an ordinary human being. Well, the young folks anticipate having the time of their life, and making up in the Indian costumes they have hired for the play, they pounce down on him. Taken unawares, they bind his hands and pretend to be about to despatch him, when Dorothy rushes in as the Indian maiden and saves him. Laying aside the weapons, the make-believe braves untie Arthur's hands. No sooner is he free than he grabs up an ax and gun, and in an instant the tables are turned. Through the house he chases them, upturning everybody and everything in the way. Hotfoot they all rush to the village store to hide behind boxes, barrels and counters. Arthur stalks in, the hero of the day, and after viewing the place, which looks as if a cyclone had struck it, departs with a triumphant air. Having driven the enemy to cover, he struts back to the Thayer domicile, where, in the garb of an Indian maiden, he meets Dorothy, who stands regarding him admiringly, as if to say, "Ain't he grand!" Arthur has by this time discerned the hoax, and fully appreciates the joke, for he has not only had the last and best laugh, but realizes that little Dorothy cares for him as he does for her.

ONE NIGHT, AND THEN.—Calumny is positively the worst offense against God and man, for it not only affects man, but presumes upon God's justice. No mortal power can reveal the secrets of the soul. God alone knows our hidden workings even better than we do ourselves. He reasons our faults and our virtues, giving value according to conditions. We may spend a life in absolute indifference but there will come a time when we shall have an opportunity to prove ourselves. This chance came to Henry Revol, and happily, he seized it, though it cost him in a worldly reckoning, dear. Revol was a wealthy bachelor, who had nothing but time and money at his disposal. We see him at his mansion in the midst of a Bohemian gathering. The party is made up of the lights of theatrical, literary and art circles. It is nothing unusual; simply one of the reckless affairs so often held at his home. These are the "false pleasures" of life, made all the more pronounced when contrasted with the "simple life"—a scene in an humble home where a mother lives in the love of her children. Revol is simply burned up by the fires of dissipation, and at a succeeding affair falls fainting in his chair. The doctor summoned, tells anticipate fate, but the thought of the jeering of anticipate fate, but the thought of the jerring of his fawning friends pricks his pride, when a plumber enters his home to do some repairing. An idea strikes him. He will exchange clothes with him and go out somewhere incog. This he does, and after leaving what money he has about him on the mantel, only taking enough to pay for a room for the night, and throwing his now useless keys in the fireplace, he leaves and engages a room in the poor section of the town. Paying for the room, he sits with revolver in hand while he smokes the last cigarette. As he blows the last puff of smoke out, he places the pistol to his head, when a low, sorrowful moan reaches his ears. He listens, but all is still. Again, the pistol is raised, and again the cry, now louder and more prolonged. Going to the connecting door he plainly hears the sobbing of a woman in grief. He knocks, and the door is opened, and there he sees the poor mother bending over her sick child, helpless, as she hasn't any money for medicine or food. Here is his opportunity, but as is nearly always the case, there is an obstacle. He has no ready money himself. He will return to his home for it, but how will he get in as he has thrown away his keys and destroyed his identity? Under these conditions, he is forced to break into his own house to bestow his charity. This arouses the servants and he is shot down as a burglar. When they discover his identity they summon the doctor, to whom he exclaims: "Doctor, you can do nothing for me. Go and relieve the wants of the poor family." This the doctor does, and Revol's last moments are made bright in the thought of being at last given an opportunity to do good. The next day when the doctor visits the poor woman, sunshine bathes the modest home, and she wants to know what return she can make for all these blessings. The doctor at first intimates nothing, when he notices a lily in a vase at the head of the child's bed. This he takes and places on the bier of Revol. "And the greatest of these is charity."

EDISON MFG. CO.

THE PRESIDENT'S SPECIAL.—The story of "The President's Special" is simple and direct, yet exceedingly dramatic. The day operator at Willoughby Station comes on duty and finds Collins, the night man, quite ill. Collins leaves for home, promising to be at work again in the evening. This he fails to do and the day operntor is forced to stick at his post for forty-eight hours. His wife calls at midnight to bring him his lunch and endeavors to cheer him up while he is struggling with the powers of sleep. At this juncture he receives a telegraph message instructing him to flag passenger train No. 9 and sidetrack same, giving the President's special the right of way on the track. This the wife learns and leaves.

The operator, left alone, begins a terrible struggle to keep awake. At last nature conquers will power. We see the operator's head fall to his arm, and sweet sleep reigns supreme. Suddenly breaking the silence of the night, passenger train No. 9 dashes by. The rattle of the wheels awakes the sleeping man, but too late! He has paid the awful price of a moment's sleep. To his mind come constantly the words, "A wreck, a wreck, and I am the guilty man." His dream becomes confused. He sees the trains rushing down the track towards each other—an awful crash; and all is darkness before him! Now come the victims of his guilt, accusing him of his crime, mocking and jeering at him. Death seems to be the only solution to shut them from his sight. He draws forth the revolver and, as he raises the weapon to fire, his senses reel and he falls fainting to the floor.

Suddenly the scene changes to the quiet of his home. His child is saying her midnight prayers, in the midst of which his wife hears the long, low whistle of No. 9 coming down the track. In a second she realizes that her husband has failed to flag the express. Grabbing up a red table cloth, she dashes from the house to stop the train, but it is too late—the train has passed. Fate at this moment takes up the destiny of lives and brings down the road an automobile. The frantic woman hails the car, and in a spirit of desperation tells what is needed to save hundreds of lives; the train must be stopped. A second of explanation, and the big touring car is seen dashing down the road at the rate of sixty miles an hour after the express train.

Then follows a race so thrilling that few spectators have ever witnessed its equal on the moving picture canvas. The train is reached, the engineer sees the signal and stops the express. A wreck has been averted, and the wife of the telegraph operator at Willoughby Station becomes the heroine of a splendid, dramatic moving picture.

THE MINIATURE.—Andrew Jackson, the seventh President of the United States, stands forth as one of the strongest characters in American history. His likes and dislikes were very decided, and as he never was at all backward in giving his opinion, and as his opinion very frequently was contrary to the opinion of a great many of the people, he of course made a great many enemies. As was the custom in those days, he fought several duels. The best remembered, and the most picturesque, was the one with Charles Dickinson, brought on by an insult offered Mrs. Jackson by Dickinson.

Using this incident in Jackson's life for a subject, the Edison Company has produced a film that will prove of unusual interest to the picture loving public, and one that will attract people who have previously cared nothing for this mode of entertainment.

At the opening of the picture we see an old Southern lawyer's office, where Dickinson and his friends are talking over the probabilities of Jackson's election to the Presidency, when the suggestion is made that Dickinson, who is a dead shot, draw a challenge from Jackson, and kill him. Dickinson is successful in this, and we see Jackson in his home just before leaving for the duel, admiring a miniature of his wife, which he afterwards places in his breast pocket. On the way to the duelling ground, Dickinson's skill with a pistol is shown by his breaking a glass, and also shooting a card from an innkeeper's hand. The duel is accurately shown, Jackson withholding his shot until after Dickinson fires, and then taking deliberate aim, killing his opponent. Jackson is saved by the miniature of his wife, his opponent's bullet lodging directly in its center.

A TRIP TO MARS.—A celebrated professor of chemistry discovers two wonderful powders. When combined, they form a product which reverses the well-known law of gravity and sets all objects that it touches free to roam in space. The professor's joy over the discovery of this reverse gravity is so great that he starts out to tell the world. While waving the two papers containing the powders over his head, a little of each is accidentally spilled on him. Before he can realize what is happening the professor is sailing out of the window and through the clouds, on his way to the planet Mars. Arriving there upside down he scrambles along the under surface of the planet and finally finds himself in a dense wood of trees, which are of enormous size. The upper halves of the trees are semi-human monsters which reach out long arms to seize him as he runs between their trunks. Escaping this peril, he climbs upon a ledge of rocks. Jumping off a promontory, he lands upon what, when the rocks wake up, proves to be the lip of a half-human Martian.

We see the creature open his eyes and lips, and from the latter issues a cloud of steam with such force that the professor is blown high in the air. The Martian watches his descent and catches the professor on his gigantic hand. The professor looks up at the enormous face above him and sinks on his knees. Again the Martian blows his breath upon him, and slowly the professor congeals until he is a snowball, which the Martian places over the fire. The ball swells and swells until it explodes, and the professor is again blown off into space, but this time in the direction of Mother Earth. We see him falling headlong and turning over and over in his homeward flight, until he drops into his laboratory again; and having had quite enough of reverse gravity, the professorr casts the powders in rage upon the floor. The result is that one side of the floor and the same side of the room rise until the professor slides down its perpendicular edge; and the last that is seen of him the room is spinning him around at a dizzy pace.

ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.

AVIATION AT LOS ANGELES, CAL.—The world-wide interest centered in the recent Los Angeles aviation meet should assure the popularity of our film, depicting the most important features of the week's events. This meet was important in the fact that a number of the most prominent of the world's aviators took part, and that a number of former records for speed attained, altitude reached and distance covered, were broken.

The spectacular and sensational performances of M. Paulham, the Frenchman, have been sufficiently described in the daily press and any further description would be superfluous. Paulham ascended, in one flight, 5,000.04 feet, a feat which previously had been thought impossible for the heavier-than-air machine. He also broke the distance record when he flew 45 miles in 1 hour and 22 seconds.

Our film shows close-up views of Paulham, Curtiss, Knabenshue, Beachey, Hamilton and other of the aviators in their machines and in flight. The machines are shown in starting, in speeding and in landing.

Trying for the quick start record is another feature of our film.

The speed record was retained by Glenn Curtiss, driving a Farman biplane, when he won over Paulham in the 1.61 miles race in 2:13 3-5.

The dirigibles of Knabenshue and Beachey are shown in starting, racing and landing.

Lieutenant Beck is shown riding with Paulham, when the former ascended with the aviator to test the practicability of bomb throwing from an aeroplane in war times.

BABY'S FIRST TOOTH.—Mr. Lighthead rises from the breakfast table one morning, hustles into him overcoat and hat, kisses his wife good-bye and hurries out to catch the next downtown car. Mrs. Lighthead waves him good-bye and then returns to the baby. The little one has been in a bad mood ever since it has waked up and Mrs. Lighthead, after having tried all means to soothe it, is in a quandary what to do. Suddenly she makes the important discovery that baby is cutting her first tooth! The little woman is elated and hurriedly runs to the 'phone to tell her husband about it.

Mr. Lighthead is in his office going through his morning's mail when the telephone jangles violently. He hurries to answer it and recognizes his wife's voice.

"Come home—quick! Hurry, please hurry! Baby—" but the connection is suddenly broken and the excited Lighthead jumps for his hat conjuring up all sorts of terrible accidents which may have happened to his wife and baby.

A vivid picture of his house in flames spurs him to greater speed as he runs down the street in the direction of his home. A man in a sleigh volunteers to drive him home, but in rounding a corner the sleigh is overturned and Lighthead is ducked into a snowdrift. He runs for a passing car, which is already crowded to more than its capacity and in an effort to scramble aboard is pushed off into a mud puddle. He hails a passing taxicab, but immediately he seats himself within it the engine breaks down and later, in endeavoring to fix it, the engine explodes and tears his clothes to remnants.

After other adventures Lighthead resolves to finish his journey afoot. But two policemen stop him and he is released only when he is identified by the family physician. Lighthead explains and, followed by the policemen and the surgeon, he finishes the disastrous journey when he runs panting up his front steps.

Mrs. Lighthead greets her husband, smiling delightedly.

"O, dear," she exclaims, "I'm so glad you came.

Get the crowd coming your way and KEEP them coming by giving the clearest, steadiest pictures—use

THE EDISON KINETOSCOPE

It's easier and cheaper to start with a good machine and build up the good patronage and KEEP it, than it is to start with a cheap machine, build up a good patronage, lose it and have to begin over again.

The Edison Kinetoscope is the best motion picture machine made, does not get out of repair, and outwears any other machine.

The Edison is the machine that brings back the same crowd every night.

Full particulars, booklet and copy of the Edison Kinetogram will be sent you if you write.

EDISON FILMS

Release of February 15

THE PRESIDENT'S SPECIAL

A thrilling melodrama in which a head-on collision between two express trains is averted through the heroism of the telegraph operator's wife, who, finding her husband has failed to flag one of the trains, races after it in an automobile running sixty-miles an hour. A picture whose extreme realism and intense dramatic action will hold an audience spellbound.

No. 6589 Code, VESTIAIRO App. Length, 950 feet

Releases of February 18

THE MINIATURE

Dramatic. An incident in the life of Andrew Jackson during his Presidential campaign, when, resenting an insult offered to his wife, he fought a duel with Charles Dickinson and killed Him, the bullet from Dickinson's pistol imbedding itself in a miniature portrait of his wife which Jackson carried. Splendidly acted and costumed. The duel scene especially vivid.

No. 6590 Code, VESTIARIAN App. Length, 725 feet

A TRIP TO MARS

A phantasy replete with illusions and trick photography. An old professor of chemistry discovers the secret of reverse gravity and is whirled away from the earth to the planet Mars where he discovers some gigantic and grotesque people and has some funny adventures until blown off the planet back to earth. A funny and clever film.

No. 6591 Code, VESTIBULAR App. Length, 265 feet

Release of February 22

A VICTIM OF BRIDGE (Society-drama)

Written for Edison production by Edward W. Townsend.

No. 6592 Code, VESTIBULO App. Length, 990 feet

Releases of February 25

LOST AND REGAINED (Dramatic)

No. 6593 Code, VESTICELLA App. Length, 445 feet

THAT GIRL OF DIXON'S

No. 6594 Code, VESTICEPS App. Length, 475 feet

WATCH FOR THE RELEASE OF MARCH 1

RANSON'S FOLLY

Especially prepared by Richard Harding Davis

EDISON MANUFACTURING CO.

MAIN OFFICE and FACTORY: 72 LAKESIDE AVE., ORANGE, N. J.

New York Office: 10 Fifth Avenue. Chicago Office: 90 Wabash Ave.

KINETOSCOPE JOBBERS

Geo. Breck, 70 Turk St., San Francisco.
Howard Moving Picture Co., 564 Washington St., Boston.
Yale Film Exch. Co., 622 Main St., Kansas City.
P. L. Waters, 41 E. 21st St., New York City.
Lake Shore Film & Supply Co., 314 Superior Ave., N. E., Cleveland.
Chas. A. Calehuff, 4th & Green Sts., Philadelphia.

Office for United Kingdom: Edison Works, Victoria Road, Willesden, N. W., England.

Dealers in All Principal Cities

O. T. Crawford's Film Service

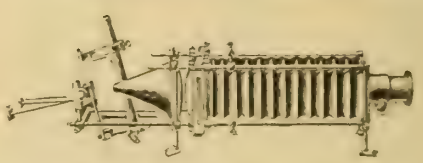
ACKNOWLEDGED

"BETTER THAN THE BEST"

Let us convince you that we can give you just the service you require. Better write to-day.

O. T. CRAWFORD FILM EXCHANGE CO.

1401 Locust Street, ST. LOUIS, MO.
319 Fourth Avenue, LOUISVILLE, KY.



Stereopticons $10; 50 000 Tickets $3 50; Automatic Arc Lamp 15c; Slide Mats 1c; Stereopticon Lenses 50c; Economizers $30; Slide Carriers 40c

FILMS RENTED, SOLD OR EXCHANGED

L. HETZ, 302 E. 23d Street New York

SPECIAL PRICES TO THE TRADE

Films For Sale 50 new reels of perfect film, extra good condition, to close out, at $18 50

Second hand Edison machines for sale at a bargain. Parts to fit all machines in stock.

MAYER SILVERMAN, 322 Fulton Bldg., Pittsburg, Pa.

THE MASTERMARK OF PICTUREDOM

SELIG

Hobart Bosworth IN THE ROMAN

Release Date February 14th

Length 1000 Feet

Code Word: "Roman"

A story of Roman Political Warfare. Historically correct, following as it does exact lines of history.

TRADE S MARK

Did You See "The Cowboy Millionaire"?

THEN—Your Happiness is Complete When You See

THE GIRLS OF THE RANGE

"Just as good, and some say better"

Release Date Februarv 17th

Length 1000 Feet

Code Word: "Range"

Don't Say "I'm from Missouri"—Get Wise!—Get It!!

SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY Inc. - - - 45-47-49 Randolph Street, Chicago, U. S. A.

THE MASTERMARK OF PICTUREDOM

thing!" And Lightfoot falls fainting into the arms of the law!

THE COWBOY AND THE SQUAW.—Tom Ripley, a cowpuncher from the Circle A ranch, wins the hatred of Jim Simpson, another cowpuncher, when he defends Lightfeather, a pretty squaw, from the insults of Simpson. The affair occurs in the Silver Dollar saloon in Bisbee.

Some few days later Lightfeather goes to her protector's cabin and presents him with a pair of fine moccasins. Tom is duly grateful and advises the little Indian maiden that if she is ever annoyed again, not to hesitate to shoot the persecutor.

Not long after this meeting Simpson encounters Ripley out on the range on the brink of a precipice. A fight ensues in which Ripley is thrown over the cliff and frightfully wounded on the rocks below.

Ripley's riderless horse gallops away and is later seen and recognized by Lightfeather. The squaw mounts the horse and follows the tracks back to the top of the cliff where she finds her good white friend. After much difficulty she assists him back to the cabin and cares for him in his convalescence.

Simpson, who has vowed to "get" Ripley at any cost, watches Tom's cabin day and night but the wary Lightfeather has seen him skulking about and keeps a sharp lookout after Tom. Later when she sees Simpson slipping threateningly on Ripley and about to fire at him, she draws her own weapon and a timely shot kills the would-be murderer.

Ripley turns to find Simpson lying dead, just behind him, when the little squaw comes from behind her hiding place in the nearby bushes, confessing that she had killed Simpson to save him.

Ripley brings up his horse and swinging into the saddle, pulls the squaw up behind him, just as a party of cowboys, who have heard the shot, run upon the scene.

A lively chase follows. By numerous tricks Ripley throws his pursuers off the trail and after a long ride draws rein at a little creek, the boundary line of two counties. When he crosses this he knows he will be safe from the sheriff, at least. Pulling a notebook from his pocket Ripley scribbles a line to the sheriff, which he ties to a weed at the water's edge.

Some time later the sheriff and his posse arrive at the crossing and find the note. It reads:

Buck Brady, Sheriff:

We have crossed the boundary line forever. Good-bye. The squaw only killed a cur, and you know it. TOM RIPLEY.

The sheriff reads the note aloud and turns to his men. "Tom's right," he says, "that Simpson was never no account, nohow." And the little party of cowboys swing leisurely into their saddles and turn their horses' heads toward home.

O, SO SICK!—Mrs. Watt receives a message from the president of the Zulu Missionary Society, of which she is a member, that she and Mr. Watt are invited to attend an important meeting of the society that afternoon. Dr. Moon, the missionary, just lately returned from his work in the field, is to lecture on "How to Reach the Savage Heart," there are to be other prominent speakers, and Mrs. Watt is in quite a flurry of expectation. But Watt looks gloomy. "O, hang the Zulus!" he exclaims.

"John Watt!" from his better half. "You shall attend that meeting this afternoon and don't try to worm out of it."

Watt immediately sets his brain working and finally concocts a most plausible excuse. He pleads sick and when the hour arrives for their departure, he is moaning and writhing in utter agony, while his wife departs for the meeting, not a little skeptical as to the genuineness of her husband's suffering. Immediately after she leaves Watt cracks his heels together, jumps into his coat and hat and goes out to hunt up "the boys."

An hour later finds four or five of them gathered about the Watt dining table, smoking, drinking and playing poker. They are in the midst of it when the bell rings and Mrs. Watt asks to be admitted. She has missed her train.

In a quandary Watt turns to his friends, wondering how to get rid of them. A lucky thought strikes him. He hunts up a number of old frock coats and battered silk hats and presses his friends into service as "physicians." When Mrs. Watt is admitted she finds four doctors around John's bedside, all very apprehensive about poor John's condition. One prescribes cod liver oil and sends Mrs. Watt out to the medicine chest to fetch it.

It is then that Mrs. Watt discovers the trick when she finds the poker chips, syphon bottle and the real duds of the "physicians." Immediately she routs out the surprised M.Ds. and prepares to give John the medicine as prescribed by "Dr. Sawbones": "One pint bottle of cod liver oil every three hours."

It is needless to say that John was cured and that he will attend the next society's meeting without a murmur.

GAUMONT.
(George Kleine.)

A BAG RACE.—Who does not thoroughly enjoy a visit to a fine amusement park with its infinity of varied forms of entertainment? "The Scenic Railway." "The Great Wheel." "The Chutes." "Hell Gate." "The Figure S." "The Baby Incubators." "The Circling Wave." "Bumping the Bumps" and the myriad other side shows all have their attractions, but after we have "taken in" these different features, how agreeable it is to sit and listen to the seductive strains of the fine military band!

There we meet our friends, discuss the different performances we have seen and generally relax ourselves from the effects of the day's work. Now a party of young students, after seeing all there is to see at Luna Park decide to provide a "star attraction" for the crowd and at the same time amuse themselves while furnishing an excellent subject for this most entertaining and novel motion picture. Accordingly, they "line up" for a "bag race," each competitor being tied up to the neck in a big gunny sack. The course takes them all around the grounds, up and down flights of stairs, over various obstacles and across the "shaking floor" of one of the principal side shows.

THE GAMBLER'S DOOM.—Mr. Francis is a young man of most reckless and extravagant habits. He dissipates, gambles and plays cards to such an extent that he is soon head over ears in debt. Accordingly, he goes to his long-suffering uncle, from whom he has been in the habit of borrowing money, always without any intention of paying it back.

Mr. Freeman, the wealthy uncle of Mr. Francis, tired of being swindled so often and for such large amounts, tells his nephew that he has no money to lend him. The nephew points to the safe and intimates that his uncle can produce money from it if he so desires. Freeman refuses point blank, turning his back towards his nephew and the safe.

Young Francis, evidently expected a rebuff, for he stealthily draws a revolver from his hip pocket, but on reconsideration puts it back. His uncle, unknown to him, has witnessed this act in a mirror. Francis goes away in a rage. Then the old man writes a note, seals it in an envelope and calls his faithful manservant, John. He gives him the note, after he had written on the envelope, "To my faithful servant, John. Not to be opened until after my death."

John accepts the note with some hesitation.

Then the scene changes and old Freeman is seen lying in a chair with a fatal bullet wound in his temple and a revolver on the table near his hand. The police arrive—the nephew and the servant are called and a coroner's verdict decides "death by suicide." The police then leave, expressing sympathy with the nephew. After their departure, John remembers the note. He goes to his room, pulls open a drawer, finds and opens the communication. In it he reads that Francis intends to kill the old man, who, however, had no desire to die.

It stated further that in the safe was a motion picture camera, which contained a film on which would be found a photographic revelation of Freeman's murder. John takes out the negative film, has it developed, and as a result, instructs the police to bring Mr. Francis to a certain moving picture show on a given date and hour, without arousing his suspicions.

Then we see the people crowded into the theater, among them the guilty nephew and the police in plain clothes. The show commences and the entire shooting scene with the events leading up to it are projected on the screen. The startled Francis rises up in haste to leave but the police arrest him and hurry him away to the "Gambler's Doom."

LUBIN MFG. CO.

LOVING HEARTS.—The young author writes a story, and a love letter does not please him. He writes a new letter and the old one flutters to the floor. His sister sees it, and, thinking only of her sweetheart, believes that the long delayed proposal has been made at last. In her excitement she drops the letter, which is found by the butler, who replaces it on the table. The housekeeper thinks he meant it for her and she, in her excitement, drops it, when it is taken up by the maid. The grocery boy has been slow to speak, but she is happy now and runs off to tell the cook. The arrival of the policeman on the beat prevents the full tale and the maid, too, drops the letter. The policeman picks up the letter and hands it to the cook, supposing she had dropped it. She thinks he means it and embraces him. He tells her that he did not write the letter but that he wishes he had, and they ratify the engagement, returning the letter to the maid. She sees the grocer's boy coming and hurries to meet him at the door. Naturally he is surprised at her effusiveness but is entirely willing to become engaged even though he did not write the letter. The butler becomes engaged to the housekeeper. Harold speaks to the author's sister, and at last the letter is returned to the writer and explanations follow.

THE HAND OF THE HEIRESS. Grace Seymour is no title hunter, though her ambitious mother and wealthy father have planned to buy her a duke. The little heiress overhears the terms of the engagement and tearing up the check her father has just handed the duke, declares that she will marry only for love. She plots with the maid to run away in search of true love and engages board at a country place in the suburbs. The only other boarder is a young artist, with whom she falls in love, and life is very pleasant until her identity is discovered to the young man by an accidental meeting with her parents. She has just been insulted by the duke, who does not recognize her in her simple gowns, and the artist has knocked the offender down. To knock down a duke is some accomplishment in the eyes of the father and the pair are bundled into the auto with the promise that this time the course of love shall run true and smoothly.

A HONEYMOON THROUGH SNOW TO SUNSHINE.—This is a scenic release with a touch of romantic sentiment and a thread of story to break the monotony of straight scenery. The start of the honeymoon is made in Philadelphia during the blizzard of last December when fourteen inches of snow covered the ground. The honeymooners enter a carriage to be driven from the minister's house to the station, but the carriage becomes stalled and with their hand bags they struggle through heavy drifts to the Pullman that is to whisk them to the Southland. Next they are seen in the city park in Jacksonville and they visit the Florida Ostrich Farm with its most interesting exhibit of birds of all ages. At St. Augustine they stop at the famous Ponce de Leon, the courtyard of which is a most remarkable bit of architecture, and they also inspect old Fort Marion. At Palm Beach they take a roller chair trip through some splendid scenery and go from there to Miami, where in the grounds of the Royal Palm Hotel is played the little drama of the first quarrel. The bride receives a note from her brother making an appointment. She refuses to show the letter to her husband in order to tease him a little, and he follows her in jealous rage. When he sees her meet a strange man and kiss him he hires a couple of boatmen to attack the rival. When the letter, dropped by the little bride, is discovered, he has to hurry to head the boatmen off and then hastens on to make the acquaintance of the brother-in-law, whom he has never met.

PATHE FRERES.

THE TWO RAFFLES.—John Freddie, the comedian engaged at a theater of varieties in a burglar turn, lingers after the performance for a little conviviality with his colleagues and is forced to rush away to catch his train for the suburbs without stopping to change his clothes.

Arriving at his villa, he is slightly disconcerted to find that it has been partly ransacked by a housebreaker, who has taken refuge under the bed on hearing his footsteps. Recovering his presence of mind, Freddie immediately divests himself of his overcoat and starts to finish the work commenced by the professional, who, satisfied that he has nothing to fear, makes his ship with one of the profession, as he naturally presumes him to be.

The work proceeds merrily until Freddie contrives to press the electric bell. Footsteps being heard, the burglar consents to hide in a cupboard indicated by Freddie, who immediately closes and locks the door after him, and it is not until the professional finds himself in the hands of the police that he realizes how he has been sold.

CORA, THE CONTRABAND'S DAUGHTER.—Outside her father's cottage the smuggler's daughter flits about attending to the wants of her parent, who presently rises to greet an acquaintance and to transact some business in connection with his dishonest trade at the back of the house. It is at such times as these that Cora can snatch a moment of fleeting happiness with Robert Severn, the customs officer, who is in love with her. The knowledge of her father's trade, however, prevents the girl from responding definitely to the young man's advances.

The smuggler is in the habit of descending the steep face of the cliff by means of a rope and receiving smuggled goods in a small cove at the foot of the rocks. Surprised one day by Robert, he turns to ascend the rope, dealing the customs officer an ugly kick which stretches him senseless for a few minutes. On his return home, the smuggler recounts his adventure to his daughter, who forces him to return and save Robert, now caught like a rat in a trap by the incoming tide.

Before the emotion displayed by the young people at the danger which Robert has just escaped, the smuggler guesses their secret and resolves that he will not stand in the light of his daughter's happines. Renouncing smuggling, he turns fisherman, and a few months later is ready to welcome Robert as a son-in-law.

THE TROUBADOUR.—Three suitors aspire to the hand of Muriel, the miller's daughter, one a big, handsome captain, with a fierce mustache, another the scrivener, who thinks his money bags will gain him the desire of his heart, and third Harold, the minstrel, debonnair and gay, whose music has charmed the maid into confiding her affections to him.

Unfortunately, the daughter's choice does not coincide with that of her parents and the minstrel is banished. By the magic of his music, however, he calls up a supernatural being and the gift of a talisman suddenly endows him with fortune, which he forthwith places at the disposal of his lady love. Muriel still refuses to marry, however, without her parent's consent, and Harold speeds away to ask it once more. Meeting with a peremptory refusal, Harold uses the magic power of his talisman to force the obdurate pair to give way. Uncanny apparitions dance in the kitchen, and the hanging bags of flour become most gruesome objects, causing an inquiry to be made by the guard into the doings of the miller and his wife. Now is Harold's chance; with a wave of the talisman the fearful apparitions disappear and the thankful parents give the desired consent. The marriage is thereupon celebrated with rejoicing in a scene of brilliant splendor, and the miller finds that after all his daughter's choice was best.

ON FRIDAY, FEB. 25th

The Release of

PATHÉ FRÈRES

FILM D'ART

OUCHARD

The Merchant

Length, about 756 Feet

A most dramatic play founded on an old Russian Folk Song and played by the leading actors of Moscow—the new Pathe Freres Film d'Art Stock Company. This film is exquisitely colored and will prove a winner wherever shown.

Insist Upon it at Your Exchange

PATHÉ FRÈRES

NEW YORK	CHICAGO	NEW ORLEANS
41 West 25th Street	35 Randolph Street	813 Union Street

Pacific Coast Agency—Turner & Dahnken, 136 Eddy Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Get Your Posters from the A. B. C. Co., of Clevland, Ohio

COMING SOON!

"THE VIOLIN MAKER OF CREMUNE." Watch for it!

Renew Your Films

EXCHANGES!

We were so busy that it was necessary to secure new and LARGER quarters to

REMOVE DIRT AND SCRATCHES

from your old film and put them in condition to earn money for you the same as new film.

WE are positively not connected with any film exchange whatever but located at 22 Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

OLD RELIABLE FILM RENOVATING CO.

22 Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

J. S. SPEER, Manager.

Write for References from 75 Exchanges

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER

Miror Vitae Products," Projectors, Cameras, Film-Making Machinery, Films, Slides, Stereopticons, Specialties, Lens Grinding, etc. Special condensors, carbons and lugs.

109 East 12th Street, New York

CHEAP

Steel Frame Theatre Chairs

ABSOLUTELY Non-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small theatres and Moving Picture shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also Seating for Out of-Door Use.

Address Dept. W,

STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich.

New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue

Boston Office: 224 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

PITTSBURG — McKENNA — NEW YORK

Did you get one of our NEW CATALOGS?

Prepared especially for the man who wants information concerning

Brass Railings, Picture Easels, Grilles, Etc.

WRITE NOW TO

McKENNA BROS. BRASS CO.

1st Ave. and Ross Street PITTSBURG — "It's the Front that Attracts the Business" — 238 Broadway NEW YORK

The young people, however, finally get married and now we see them a year later. What a change! All pretense is now over, and mother-in-law and son-in-law are having an altercation of a most violent nature which ultimately ends in a most unexpected manner.

THE JOCKEY.—Osborn, the trainer, is asked by an old friend to complete the training of his nephew, Jim Blackwood, and as time goes on Jim, steady and hard working, finds himself very happy in the home of his uncle's friend, graced by the presence of the trainer's pretty daughter, Kitty. A lucky accident gives the young fellow his first chance and his career opens with very bright prospects. He is overjoyed when some months later he is given a chance to ride Sunbeam, the favorite in a forthcoming big race, but pitfalls are in his path, and Jim finally succumbs to the temptation of a bribe offered by Sam Marsh, a race track crook, to destroy all chances of Sunbeam winning. Kitty, however, who has been by accident or design close at hand, overhears the agreement, and, dauntless and prompt in action, she resolves to save Jim's honor and changes the horses in their stalls, so that when Jim comes to dope Sunbeam he operates, unknowingly, upon another horse. The great day arrives. Everyone is out to see the big race. Sunbeam is the favorite and great sums of money are put up on him and taken by Marsh. At the quarter, half and three-quarters another horse leads, but in the stretch Sunbeam comes to the front and romps in a winner by several lengths, to the mingled rage and mortification of the crooked bookmaker. In the evening a wordy war is waged between Jim and Marsh, but Kitty intervenes and explains the situation. Baffled, Marsh slinks away, while Jim, shamefaced and repentant, pleads with Kitty to marry him and help him to avoid future temptations—and she does.

THE FOOT JUGGLER.—On a stage set for his act the juggler appears, and after taking his position on his back on a stand proceeds to do the most wonderful balancing and juggling feats with his feet, being more skillful than many jugglers are with their hands. He takes a heavy table and spins it around and around, over and over, until one wonders why he never gets dizzy and makes a miss. His exhibition is really a wonder.

BEFORE AND AFTER.—Here we have a young man assiduously bestowing all the attentions possible upon the woman whom he hopes will some day be his mother-in-law in a praiseworthy attempt to gain her good will. So attentive is he, indeed, that he more than once brings a frown of displeasure to the fair brow of his lady love.

VITAGRAPH COMPANY.

THE WAYSIDE SHRINE.—The central interest of this drama is the tender love and devotion of a father for his motherless daughter, to whom he not only fulfills the duty of both parents, but makes himself her companion in all her interests and pastimes. Periodically they visit a little wayside shrine, where they offer up prayer and do homage to their patron saint.

The little girl grows into womanhood, and one day, as they visit the shrine, they find a young and handsome artist sketching. They at once become interested in his work and incidentally the young girl and fellow are attracted to each other. By glance and action you can see that it is "love at first sight." The artist asks the father of the young girl if she can pose before the shrine while he completes the picture. The father consents.

From this point their attachment and association increase. The village priest notices this and warns the father of the possible danger of trusting an unsophisticated girl so much in the company of a man of the artist's experience and possible worldliness. The father heeds his words and does not encourage the young man's attentions. It is too late, however; the girl is too much in love with the young artist to distrust him.

The young man agrees to marry her. She leaves a note for her father, explaining that she has fled with her lover. The old man's agony of sorrow when he finds the note is pitiful, but his love for her and his faith in God sustain him. Through the long months of his loneliness and his daughter's absence, he keeps the little home in order, where we saw her as a child and as she left it when she went away, never ceasing his vigil for her return, keeping a lighted candle in the window at night.

Deserted by her lover, she returns to the scene of her childhood and seeks the wayside shrine in penitence and remorse. As she beholds the familiar and sacred place, she falls in a swoon. Her old father discovers her, clasps her in his arms and leads her home, then to her little bedroom, which the dear old father has kept just as she left it. He kisses her "good-night," and, when the old village priest again calls to console the father, we behold her peacefully sleeping in childish repose of home, sweet home.

MURIEL'S STRATEGEM.—Muriel lives with her grandfather, a widower, a real old aristocratic Southern gentleman, who is very fond of her—in fact, the love is mutual. She is in love with a very worthy young man named Harvey. Muriel's grandfather objects to him because he is poor, and, notwithstanding Muriel's pleadings in Harvey's behalf, her grandfather persistently holds out against him. Harvey speaks for himself, but the old gentleman says, "No," and dismisses him abruptly.

Now woman's wit gets busy, and Muriel, after drying her tears, comes across an old miniature portrait of her grandmother, when she was a girl, and whom Muriel resembles very closely. Upon comparison with herself, as she looks in the mirror, Muriel recognizes the picture to be exactly like herself. She decides upon a strategem suggested by the miniature, and immediately goes to a cupboard and pulls out an old trunk from which she takes a lot of old-fashioned clothes which belonged to her grandmother. In the bottom of the trunk she unearths an old newspaper containing on account of her grandmother's elopement with and marriage to her grandfather, just previous to the Civil War, in opposition to the parents of the bride.

Muriel dresses herself in one of her grandmother's quaint gowns, and, while her grandfather is quietly dozing in his easy chair, she enters his room and stands where he can see her when he awakes. Gradually opening his eyes, he beholds Muriel, who appears to him as a vision of his wife, who tells him of his elopement and marriage to her and chides him for his opposition to Muriel's marriage to Harvey. The old gentleman can stand it no longer, and, completely overcome, he falls back in his chair in a half faint.

Muriel becomes alarmed and rushes to his side, puts her arm around him and tells him that she was impersonating her grandmother; how she found the newspaper, the miniature and the clothes and all about it.

Her grandfather is so glad it is nothing worse that he tells her that he was unfair, kisses her and gives his consent to her marriage to Harvey, who is soon upon the scene with Muriel to claim his prize and receives the old gentleman's blessing.

BEAUTIFUL WINDERMERE.—One of the Vitagraph's studies from life and nature, a charming portrayal of panoramic beauty.

Lake Windermere is located in the northwestern part of England, about 250 miles from London, on the borders of Westmoreland and Lancashire. It is the largest lake in England—11 miles long, one mile wide and 200 feet deep, and empties into Morecambe Bay. It is celebrated for its many small islands and its magnificent surroundings. High and wooded hills slope gradually to its shores; picturesque cascades and waterfalls gush forth crystal streams of laughing waters, which flow into the great lake.

Here is a Mecca for the artist, the poet, the author and all lovers of nature. A small steamer plies from one end of the lake to the other, and the small craft of the fishermen and the oarsmen are seen upon its surface at all times. This vicinity is also noted for its sheep raising, which has made Lancashire the pride of England. High above the placid waters of Windermere stands "Rydal," the home of Wordsworth, the poet, who for many years gazed upon the tranquility of these surroundings and meandered through the hills and glades and imbibe inspiration from their sublimity and grandeur. Quaint cottages of the peasantry dot the roads which lead to the hotels and inns that make Windermere a great resort.

Latest Slides

"Loving Two-Step Man."
"Ain't You Coming Out To-night?"
"The Moonlight, the Rose, and You."
"Shoes and Socks, Shock Susan."
"Yiddisha Rag."
"I'll Make a Ring Around Rosie."
"'Tis Tough When Issie Rosenstein Loves Genevieve Malone."
"The Little Cottage on the Hillside."

AT $4.00 PER SET.

Excelsior Slide Co.

138 East 14th Street
NEW YORK

Films I have a system of keeping away from Repeaters. No reels older than one year. This sounds bad but not half as bad as it is to hand you gunc three years old.

I am open and frank and tell you what you get for your money—Try me for a week anyhow. You can't lose

PURDY'S FILM EXCHANGE
300 EAST 23d STREET, Cor. 2nd Ave., NEW YORK CITY

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF LICENSED FILMS.

Monday, February 14.

Biograph—One Night and Then (Dramatic).....992
Lubin—Loving Hearts (Comedy).....500
Lubin—The Hand of the Heiress (Dramatic)....450
Selig—The Roman (Dramatic).....1000
Pathe—Enterprising Clerk (Comedy).....643
Pathe—Druid Remains in Britany (Sc., Col.)....328

Tuesday, February 15.

Gaumont—The Ghost (Dramatic).....698
Gaumont—Pastoral Scenes (Mystical).....285
Edison—The President's Special (Dramatic).....950
Vitagraph—The Wayside Shrine (Dramatic).....930

Wednesday, February 16

Urban—The Acrobatic Fly (Nature Vaudeville)..200
Urban—The Blue Swan Inn (Dramatic).....770
Essanay—Aviation at Los Angeles, Cal. (Educational) 600
Essanay—Baby's First Tooth (Comedy).....385
Pathe—Carmen (Dramatic) 900
Kalem—The Fisherman's Granddaughter (Dr.)..950

Thursday, February 17

Biograph—The Englishman and the Girl (Dr.)...975
Lubin—A Honeymoon Through Snow to Sunshine (Dramatic) 950
Selig—The Girls of the Range (Dramatic).....1000

Friday, February 18

Edison—The Miniature 725
Edison—A Trip to Mars (Scenic).....265
Kalem (The Trapper and the Redskins (Dr.)...705
Pathe—A Panicky Picnic (Comedy).....672
Pathe—The Little Beggar (Dramatic).....311
Vitagraph—Muriel's Stratagem (Dramatic).....655
Vitagraph—A Trip Through England (Scenic)..320

Saturday, February 19

Gaumont—Better Than Gold (Dramatic).....577
Gaumont—The Comedy-Graph (Comedy).....338
Essanay—The Cowboy and the Squaw (Dr.).....935
Pathe—Three Queens and a Jack (Comedy)....600
Pathe—Fate Against Her (Dramatic).....314
Vitagraph Life of Moses (The Promised Land)..990

OPERA CHAIRS
That Stand the TEST

The hard usage accorded opera chairs makes the selection of a chair of PROVEN QUALITIES essential.

Our Opera Chairs are conceded to be the IDEAL seating, as they are comfortable, permanently noiseless and combined with a distinctive style and excellence that is unequalled.

HIGHEST QUALITY LOWEST PRICES

Write for Catalogs

AMERICAN SEATING COMPANY

Dept. V.
215 Wabash Ave.
CHICAGO

NEW YORK
BOSTON
PHILADELPHIA

Immediate Shipment

WE CARRY OPERA CHAIRS IN STOCK

If you want a GOOD CHAIR, at a LOW PRICE, we have it. Inquiries answered same day as received.

Ask for Catalog No. 305

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

KALEM FILMS

The Fisherman's Granddaughter

ISSUES OF FEBRUARY 16th and 18th.

"The Fisherman's Granddaughter" is another strong, romantic drama by our Southern Stock Company, operating in our new studio at Roseland, Florida. The scenes are laid along the banks of the picturesque St. Johns River and are the acme of beautiful realism. LENGTH, 950 FEET.

The Trapper and the Redskins

705 FEET

"That's What They All Say"

222 FEET

Here is a reel which will prove a positive sensation, made up of the greatest Indian subject we have ever produced (and that's going some), together with a real comedy of the side-splitting variety. We don't very often put out a comedy subject, because they have to be pretty good to get by our own knockers' club; but this one proved a scream, so you get it. Remember this reel, a great big Indian feature and a corking comedy all in one.

Say, we have got hold of a bunch of real Indians, who can act, and we are going to give you some hummers.

WATCH THE KALEMS!

Kalem posters can be obtained from your exchange or by mail from the A. B. C. Co., of Cleveland, Ohio

KALEM CO., Inc.

Eastman Kodak Building

235-237-239 WEST 23rd STREET
NEW YORK CITY

LUBIN FILMS

RELEASED MONDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1910

The Hand of the Heiress

A dainty little idyl of a real American Girl who would not permit her parents to purchase a duke for her. When they persisted in their intention she ran away and found herself the true love that is worth more than titles. A story well planned and well acted with scenic backgrounds of unusual beauty. APPROXIMATE LENGTH, 490 FEET.

Loving Hearts

A letter discarded from a story by its author unites eight loving hearts before it is discovered that it is merely a bit of fiction. A snappy little romantic farce offering both love interest and comedy. APPROXIMATE LENGTH, 460 FEET.

RELEASED THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1910.

A Honeymoon Through Snow To Sunshine

Wading through the two-foot drifts of the Christmas blizzard, the newly wedded couple make the train that takes them to the South and sunshine. The Ostrich Farm at Jacksonville, and the prettiest bits of scenery at Palm Beach, St. Augustine and Miami form the settings for the thread of the story. This subject possesses unusual pictorial value and the photography is notably good. A sure business-getter in these dull February days. APPROXIMATE LENGTH, 950 FEET.

Send for catalogue of our 1910 machine

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY 926-928 MARKET STREET PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Wurlitzer

55 YEARS LEADERS IN MUSIC

BETTER MUSIC AT SMALLER COST

FOR ALL MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

Have you investigated the Wurlitzer PianOrchestra?

The leading Nickelodeons are putting in this marvelous Automatic Orchestra. It furnishes better music than a regular orchestra of 5 to 25 pieces, is always "on the job," and cuts out the enormous expense of musicians. The money saved pays rent.

Easy terms, less than paid to musicians. We supply the U. S. Gov't. with musical instruments. Write for big 96-page catalog & testimonial booklet showing Wurlitzer PianOrchestras in leading Nickelodeons.

The RUDOLPH WURLITZER Co

World's Largest Mfrs. Automatic Mus. Insts.

NEW YORK CINCINNATI CHICAGO
25-27 W. 32d 117-121 E. 4th 266-268 Wabash

How to Put on the Passion Play

By W. Stephen Bush.

With the great revival of the Passion Play, again to be enacted in Germany this coming Spring, exhibitors will consult their own best interests by ordering the well-known book above named. The first edition has been exhausted, and the second, now on sale, contains many valuable additions. The book has the unqualified endorsement of the Moving Picture World and contains:

A complete lecture, running with the pictures on the screen.

A complete musical program.

Valuable suggestions of a general nature.

Sent postpaid for One Dollar to any address in United States, Canada or Mexico.

W. STEPHEN BUSH,
44 North 10th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CALEHUFF

A Member of the FILM SERVICE ASSOCIATION

Headquarters for only the best of latest FILMS and SONG SLIDES. No junk.

MACHINES, SUPPLIES, Etc.

LATEST SONG SLIDES
$5.00 per set

N. E. Cor. 4th & Green Streets,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Classified Advertising.

Classified advertising, no display, three cents per word, cash with order. Postage stamps accepted for small amounts.

HELP WANTED.

FIRST-CLASS PIANO PLAYER, who can sing, wanted. No boozer. Two matinees. Give experience and references, and tell how much you are worth a week to B. G. DRUMMOND, Mgr., Bijou Dream, Albion, N. Y.

WANTED—Male or female singer, female preferred; only those apply who have voice of quality and volume; right price paid to right persons; satisfactory reference required; reputation must accompany the singer; no flirts tolerated. Address, SCHMIDT BROS., Mgrs. Theatorium, New Castle, Ind.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

EXPERIENCED moving picture writer: American subjects only; comedy a specialty. N. O. T., care M. P. W.

TENOR SINGER wants position at once; will sure make good. Salary reasonable. References from former managers. Address ROBERT P. FOURNIER, 56 Oak Street, Providence, R. I.

SINGER of ability wants position. Four years illustrated song experience. Thoroughly proficient. Baritone voice with a range of two octaves. Wishes to connect with first-class house and thoroughly reliable people. (Don't send telegrams collect.) Address THOMAS F. GIBLIN, 245 Manton Ave., Providence, R. I.

A GOOD M. P. OPERATOR with 9 years' experience wants position. Familiar with all makes of machines; does own repairing. J. FRANCIS MOCKLIN, Dock St., Royalton, Pa.

POSITION WANTED—M. P. operator or manager, city or out of town, 8 years' experience. Address at once S. W., care Moving Picture World.

AT LIBERTY—Moving picture and vaudeville pianist. Only reliable managers reply; state salary. Address MUSICIAN, care Logue Bros., Williamsport, Pa.

MERCHANDISE.

FILMS FOR SALE.—Films in first-class condition 1 cent and 2 cents per foot. Write for list, K. A. KALEY, Nicholas Bldg., Toledo, Ohio.

SONG SLIDES, $1.50 per set. NATIONAL SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE, 303-59 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE—Passion Play (Edison's) 2 reels, 24 scenes, tinted, good condition, $75.00 or rent. LOEB'S FILM EXCHANGE, 140 St. Charles, New Orleans, La.

FOR SALE—1,000 ft. reels film, released to Jan. 1, $10 and $15 per reel; Edison, Lubin, Power's machines, $60; new $100; Model B gas outfits, $25; song sets, $1.50. For Rent—6,000 ft. film, 3 sets slides, $10; 9,000 ft., $12, one shipment. Will Buy—Passion Play, film, machines. H. DAVIS, Watertown, Wis.

BUILDING, 29 x 40 ft., used for moving pictures; suitable for auction room and various kinds of business; rent, $400 per season; commands two streets. L. A. H., 300 Cookman Ave., Asbury Park, N. J.

FOR SALE—Power's No. 5 Cameragraph, practically new, with stereopticon lenses; 144 Reedsboro opera chairs, splendid condition. Quick sale.

FOR SALE—One moving picture outfit consisting of one Edison machine (Exhibition model), one Edison Phonograph, 134 opera chairs (self seat-raising), two fire extinguishers, one rheostat. Will sell all or any part of lot, and very cheap. Every item in splendid shape. Address, JOS. C. BUCHART, Evansville, Ind.

FOR SALE—Paying moving picture and vaudeville house in town of 12,000. Only house in town. Reason for selling, poor health. FAIRYLAND THEATER, Boulder, Colo.

WANTED—For Travel Talks, Scenic, Industrial, Topical and Educational films—any make—all countries. Send list and lowest prices. R. R. BRIGGS, 1637 Fairmount Ave., Philadelphia.

FIRT-CLASS OPERATOR—Have had experience; can do electric wiring; at liberty March 1. N. T. GUY, Blandinsville, Ill.

WANTED—Moving picture machine; state make, condition and lowest cash price; also want films, slides, etc., suitable for road show. CLARK J. HERRINGSHAW, Lakeside Building, Chicago, Ill.

LATEST MOTIOGRAPH, perfect condition, with pedestal base; will sell reasonable. Box 18, New London, Conn.

FOR SALE—Brand new Model B Gas Outfit, with burner; $18 complete. M. E. HOVELL, 10 East 15th St.

"TITLE POSTERS"

Are THE Thing for Advertising

MOVING PICTURES

They cost 5c each or by mail 6c. The full service of one poster for every licensed subject released for a month costs only $7.50 including prepaid delivery charges.

Free Sample for the Asking

TITLE POSTER CO.
231-233 Bowery, New York

A Poster for Every Picture

The Buckeye Film & Projecting Co. (Inc.)

Members of the N. I. M. P. A.

309-311 Arcade Bldg., Dayton, Ohio

MR. EXHIBITOR, we absolutely guarantee to furnish you the best strictly INDEPENDENT film service in this country. We guarantee NO JUNK, NO RAINSTORMS, NO REPEATERS. All we ask is that you give us a trial and be convinced. We can give you an IDEAL EXCLUSIVE SERVICE because we have standing releases with all leading AMERICAN and FOREIGN FILM MANUFACTURERS.

Write to-day for full particulars, or call and see us at our offices and see for yourself.

Write, Phone, or Wire us to-day.

THE BUCKEYE FILM & PROJECTING CO. (Inc.)

309-311 Arcade Building, Dayton, Ohio

Andrews OPERA CHAIRS

Over 75 per cent. of the finest theaters in the United States and Canada are furnished with them. They are used in 318 of the 405 moving picture theaters in Chicago.

To meet the growing demands for

LOW PRICED OPERA CHAIRS

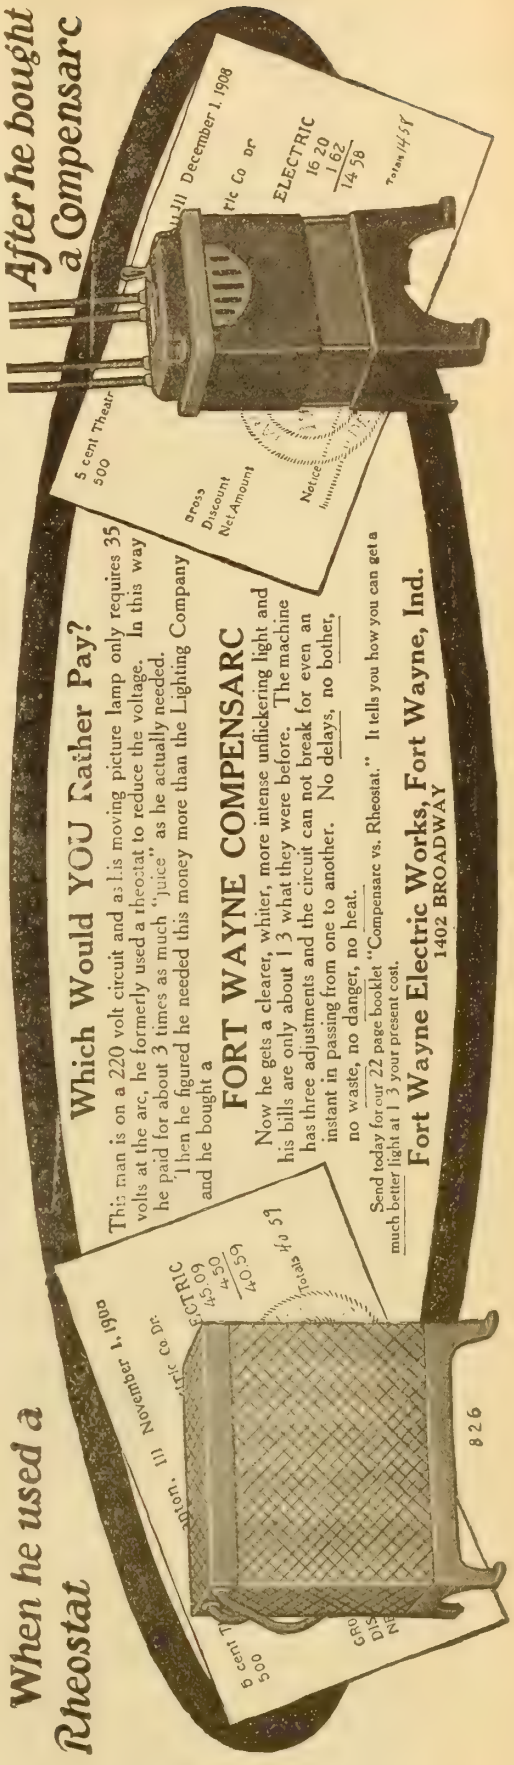
we have originated a number of styles, though inexpensive, are characteristic of

ANDREWS QUALITY

Write for our large catalogue, illustrated in colors, which will guide and assist you, when contemplating the purchase of Opera Chairs.

THE A. H. Andrews Co.
CHICAGO ESTABLISHED 1865
NEW YORK SAN FRANCISCO
ST LOUIS TACOMA

After he bought a Compensarc



Which Would YOU Rather Pay?

This man is on a 220 volt circuit and as his moving picture lamp only requires 35 volts at the arc, he formerly used a rheostat to reduce the voltage. In this way he paid for about 3 times as much "juice" as he actually needed.

Then he figured he needed this money more than the Lighting Company and he bought a

FORT WAYNE COMPENSARC

Now he gets a clearer, whiter, more intense unflickering light and his bills are only about 1/3 what they were before. The machine has three adjustments and the circuit can not break for even an instant in passing from one to another. No delays, no bother, no waste, no danger, no heat.

Send today for our 22 page booklet "Compensarc vs. Rheostat." It tells you how you can get a much better light at 1/3 your present cost.

Fort Wayne Electric Works, Fort Wayne, Ind.
1402 BROADWAY

When he used a Rheostat

SOUVENIRS For any show. Prices, 3, 4, and 5cts. each, in 100 lots.

Terms, cash with orders, or 1/3 cash, balance C. O. D. Samples sent upon receipt of 50cts.

VAUDETTE CO., 7 Coventry Bldg., So. Akron, Ohio

SWAAB

The Pioneer Film Exchange of Philadelphia
and
Largest Dealer in Machines and Supplies

Agent for Power's Cameragraph
Lang's Rewinder
and
Cary Coated Carbons

The Trade Supplied. Licensed Films Only

LEWIS M. SWAAB
338 Spruce St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Sound Effects
FOR Moving Pictures

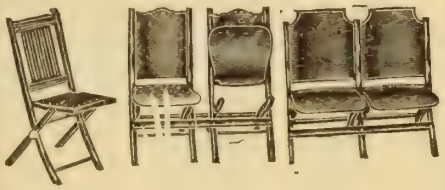
No Picture House is complete without our Sound Effects. They make your show realistic, increase your box office receipts 100%, satisfy your patrons.

Write for our catalogue A.

25% lower than any house in America.

M. P. SOUND EFFECT CO.
19th Ward Bank Building
57th St. cor. 3d Ave., New York City

Folding and Assembly Chairs



Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use

Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue

PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
NORTH MANCHESTER, - - - INDIANA

LICENSED FILMS.

BIOGRAPH COMPANY.

Jan. 3—The Rocky Road (Dr.).....990
Jan. 6—The Dancing Girl of Butte (Dr.).....984
Jan. 10—Her Terrible Ordeal (Dr.).....952
Jan. 13—All on Account of the Milk (Dr.)....989
Jan. 17—On the Reef (Dr.).....988
Jan. 20—The Call (Dr.).....989
Jan. 24—The Honor of His Family (Dr.).....988
Jan. 27—The Last Deal (Dr.).....991
Jan. 31—The Cloister's Touch (Dr.).....993
Feb. 3—The Woman from Mellon's (Dr.).....988
Feb. 7—The Course of True Love (Dr.).....987
Feb. 10—The Duke's Plan (Dr.).....985
Feb. 14—One Night, and Then (Dramatic).....992
Feb. 17—The Englishman and the Girl (Dr.)...975

EDISON MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Jan. 21—The Luck of Roaring Camp (Dr.).....490
Jan. 25—A Woman's Strategy (Dr.).....975
Jan. 28—A Georgia Possum Hunt (Des.).....140
Jan. 28—The Skipper's Yarn (Dr.).....850
Feb. 1—The Japanese Peach Boy (Fairy Story).940
Feb. 4—His Just Deserts (Dr.).....350
Feb. 4—The Surprise Party (Com.).....330
Feb. 4—The Bad Man from Riley's Gulch (Com.).....315
Feb. 8—The Livingston Case (Dr.).....995
Feb. 11—An Equine Hero (Edu.).....725
Feb. 11—A Queen of the Burlesque (Com.).....260
Feb. 15—The President's Special (Dr.).....950
Feb. 18—The Miniature 725
Feb. 18—A Trip to Mars (Scenic).....265
Feb. 22—A Victim of Bridge (Dramatic).....990
Feb. 25—Lost and Regained (Dramatic).....445
Feb. 25—That Girl of Dixon's (Dramatic).....475

ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.

Jan. 12—Electric Insoles (Com.).....502
Jan. 12—The Old Maid and the Burglar (Com.).498
Jan. 15—Review of U. S. Troops, Fort Leavenworth (Scenic) 1000
Jan. 12—Home of the Gypsies (Scenic).....321
Jan. 19—The Coast Guard (Dr.).....747
Jan. 19—Riva, Austria, and the Lake of Garda (Scenic) 204
Jan. 26—Tommy in Dreamland (Com.).....491
Jan. 26—The Lass Who Loved a Sailor (Dr.)...417
Feb. 2—Sheltered in the Woods (Dr.).....806
Feb. 2—The Might of the Waters (Sc.).....167
Feb. 9—The Price of Fame (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 12—Western Chivalry (Com.).....568
Feb. 12—Bitter-Sweet (Com.).....450
Feb. 16—Aviation at Los Angeles, Cal (Educa.).600
Feb. 16—Baby's First Tooth (Comedy).....385
Feb. 19—The Cowboy and the Squaw (Dr.).....935
Feb. 23—O, So Sick (Comedy).....
Feb. 23—The Winning of Father (Comedy).....
Feb. 26—The Mexican's Faith (Dramatic).....

KALEM COMPANY.

Jan. 7—The Deacon's Daughter (Dr.).....950
Jan. 14—The Romance of a Trained Nurse (Dr.)
Jan. 21—The Magic Flower (Fairy Tale).....
Jan. 28—The Man Who Lost (Dr.).....930
Feb. 2—The Step-mother (Dr.).....980
Feb. 4—The Little Old Men of the Woods (Fairy Story).....945
Feb. 9—The Confederate Spy (Dr.).....960
Feb. 11—The Feud (Dr.).....925
Feb. 16—The Fisherman's Graddaughter (Dr.)..950
Feb. 18—The Trapper and the Redskins (Dr.)..705

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Jan. 20—The Usurper (Dr.).....905
Jan. 24—Cupid, D.D.S. (Com.).....356
Jan. 24—Adoring an Ad. (Dr.).....515
Jan. 27—Marble Quarrying in Tennessee (Industrial) 441
Jan. 27—The Flirto-Maniac (Com.).....420
Jan. 31—Bill's Boots (Com.).....245
Jan. 31—Too Much Protection (Com.).....600
Feb. 3—Sentimental Sam (Com.).....300
Feb. 3—It Might Have Been (Com.).....585
Jan. 19—Won by a Holdup (Com.).....629
Jan. 19—Flower Parade at Pasadena, Cal.....292
Jan. 22—The Confession (Dr.).....960
Jan. 26—The Modern Messenger Boy (Com.)...945
Jan. 29—An Outlaw's Sacrifice (Dr.).....996
Feb. 2—The Wrong Man (Com.).....554
Feb. 2—A Voice from the Fireplace (Dr.).....486
Feb. 5—Sensational Logging (Scenic).....1000
Feb. 7—The Samaritan's Courtship (Com.)....865
Feb. 10—Celestial Vengeance (Dr.).....840
Feb. 14—Loving Hearts (Comedy).....500
Feb. 14—The Hand of the Heiress (Dramatic)..450
Feb. 17—A Honeymoon Through Snow to Sunshine (Dramatic) 950

GAUMONT.

G. Kleine.

Jan. 18—Fatal Fascination (Dr.).....580
Jan. 18—Getting Square with the Inventor (C.).393
Jan. 22—Swallowed by the Deep (Dr.).....977
Jan. 25—The Price of Patriotism (Dr.).....574
Jan. 25—Sea Side Adventures at Home (Com.).371
Jan. 29—The Great Divide (Dr.).....741
Jan. 29—Wild Waves at St. Jean de Lux (Scenic) 243
Feb. 1—The Golden Lily (Dr.).....702
Feb. 1—Ascending the Jura Mountains (Sc.)...253
Feb. 5—Civil War (Dr.).....940
Feb. 8—Servant from the Country (Com.)....508
Feb. 8—Settled Out of Court (Dr.).....413
Feb. 12—A Rag Race (Com.).....197
Feb. 12—The Gambler's Doom (Dr.).....866
Feb. 15—The Ghost (Dramatic).....698
Feb. 15—Pastoral Scenes (Mystical).....285
Feb. 19—Better Than Gold (Dramatic).....577
Feb. 19—The Comedy-Graph (Comedy).....338

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

G. Kleine.

Jan. 12—True to His Oath (Dr.).....672
Feb. 9—Coals of Fire (Dr.).....672
Feb. 9—Venetian Isles (Sc.).....263
Feb. 16—The Acrobatic Fly (Nature Vaude.)...200
Feb. 16—The Blue Swan Inn (Dramatic).....770

PATHE FRERES.

Jan. 31—Coffee Culture (Indus.).....508
Jan. 31—Dick's a Winner (Com.).....453
Feb. 2—The Postmistress (Dr.).....918
Feb. 4—Roller Skating in Australia (Sc.).....266
Feb. 4—The Model Drama (Dr.).....718
Feb. 5—A Critical Situation (Com.).....623
Feb. 5—Adam II.—Miscellaneous (Edu.).....354
Feb. 7—The Bandit (Dr.).....394
Feb. 7—The Two Raffles (Com.).....594
Feb. 9—Cora, the Contraband's Daughter (Dr.).567
Feb. 9—In Ancient Greece (Ballet).....410
Feb. 11—The Troubadour (Com.).....561
Feb. 11—Before and After (Com.).....430
Feb. 12—The Jockey (Dr.).....840
Feb. 12—The Foot Juggler (Acrobatic).....157
Feb. 14—Enterprising Clerk (Comedy).....643
Feb. 14—Druid Remains in Britany Col (Sc.)...328
Feb. 16—Carmen (Dramatic) 900
Feb. 18—A Panicky Picnic (Comedy).....672
Feb. 18—The Little Beggar (Dramatic).....311
Feb. 19—Three Queens and a Jack (Comedy)...660
Feb. 19—Fate Against Her (Dramatic).....314

SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.

Jan. 24—The Ranch King's Daughter (Dr.).....700
Jan. 24—An Afternoon Off (Com.).....300
Jan. 27—The Devil, the Servant and the Man
Jan. 31—Shooting an Oil Well (Industrial)...715
Jan. 31—Our German Cousin (Com.).....285
Feb. 3—Politics (Dr.) 1000
Feb. 10—In the Shadow of Mt. Shasta (Dr.)..1000
Feb. 7—In the Serpent's Power (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 14—The Roman (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 17—The Girls of the Range (Dr.).....1000

VITAGRAPH COMPANY.

Jan. 8—Richelieu, or the Conspiracy (Dr.)...992
Jan. 11—Call Boy's Vengeance (Com.).....320
Jan. 11—The Old Maid's Valentine (Com.).....
Jan. 15—A Sister's Sacrifice (Dr.).....970
Jan. 18—The Toymaker's Secret (Dr.).....969
Jan. 22—A Pair of Schemers (Com.).....743
Jan. 22—Five Minutes to Twelve (Com.).....162
Jan. 25—The Life of Moses, Part 3 (Dr.)....976
Jan. 29—The Girl and the Judge (Dr.).....980
Feb. 1—Caught in His Own Trap (Com.).....503
Fez. 1—The Skeleton (Com.).....440
Feb. 5—Twelfth Night (Dr.).....970
Feb. 8—The Passing Shadow (Dr.).....996
Feb. 12—The Life of Moses, Part IV. (Dr.)....955
Feb. 15—The Wayside Shrine (Dr.).....930
Feb. 18—Muriel's Stratagem (Dr.).....655
Feb. 18—A Trip Through England (Scenic).....320
Feb. 19—Life of Moses (The Promised Land)...990

FOR SALE

One copy of Pathe's Hand Colored Passion Play, 3114 feet, in fine condition, $200.00. One Edison Ex-Model Moving Picture Machine in perfect running order, $50.00. One new model B Gas Machine with special Roco Jet burner $25.00

SOUTHERN PHOTO & FILM CO.
Athens - - - Georgia

Open Twenty-Four Hours Every Day—Write, Call, Wire or Phone Any Hour, Day or Night

ELECTRIC THEATRE SUPPLY CO., Inc. The Home of Good Film Service The Birthplace of Original Ideas

We Handle Everything Needed by Moving Picture Exhibitors 44 N. Tenth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

We have every subject issued by the Licensed Manufacturers

MOTIOGRAPH, PATHE FRERES, POWER'S, EDISON and LUBIN MACHINES, HALLBERG ECONOMIZERS and PARTS ALWAYS ON HAND

Write for our new proposition :—Supplying two customers in the same town each with twelve reels a week, keeping each one's supply away from the other, and no repeaters to either

·Essanay Films·

Trade Mark

Trade Mark

RELEASE OF WEDNESDAY FEBRUARY 16

AVIATION AT LOS ANGELES CALIFORNIA

(Length, approximately, 600 feet)

A film of rare interest. Shows Paulhan, Curtiss, Knabenshue, Beachey and others. Photographically perfect.

THE HOUSE of COMEDY HITS
"Baby's First Tooth"
"The Wrong Man"
"The Modenn Messenger Boy"
"The Best Man Wins"

RELEASE OF SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 19

The Cowboy and the Squaw

(Length, approximately, 935 feet)

This is a remarkable subject and the best Western picture we have released to date. This week's headliner! A big hit! Order quick!

RELEASE OF WEDNESDAY FEBRUARY 16

BABY'S FIRST TOOTH

(Length, approximately, 385 feet)

Will start a riot of laughter. Furiously funny from start to finish. Released with our aviation subject.

THE HOUSE of ENTERPRISE
"Aviation at Los Angeles"
Taft at the Ball Game"
"The World's Champions Base Ball Series"

Essanay Film M'f'g., Co.

FACTORY and STUDIOS 1333 ARGYLE ST. - OFFICE 435 NORTH CLARK ST.
CHICAGO and LONDON, 5 NEW COMPTON ST. W.C.

"Everything New" "A Service of Merit"

Equitable Motion Picture Co.

OF OMAHA, NEBRASKA

Just what the WESTERN exhibitor has long looked for—A FILM SERVICE—that satisfies "the appetite" of his patrons.

Every reel in our stock is a brand NEW ISSUE, from the best of American and European manufacturers, and insures a Service that embraces Every essential Quality, which means Success to the exhibitor.

Get in touch with us, and state your requirements.

Equitable Motion Picture Co.
1318 Farnum Street :: Omaha, Nebraska

UNIFORMS

If You Want to Improve the Appearance of Your Theatre

Uniform Your Attendants

IT PAYS

Send for Catalogue of the Latest Uniforms and Caps for Moving Picture Theatres

S. VORNOST

109 Randolph Street

Suite 913-915 Chicago, Ill.

CAPS

Motion Pictures

of

JAMES J. JEFFRIES	JACK JOHNSON
Stanley Ketchel	Billy Papke
Tom Sharkey	Tommy Burns
Kid Herman	Joe Gans
Gunner Moir	Joe Palmer
Young Corbett	Terry McGovern
Kid Sharkey	Young Dority

FRANK GOTCH GEO. HACKENSCHMIDT
IN THEIR CHAMPIONSHIP CONTESTS
Write for low rental terms

The CHICAGO FIGHT PICTURE CO.
81 CLARK STREET CHICAGO, ILL.

Independent Films.

"IMP."

INDEPENDENT M. P. CO.

JANE AND THE STRANGER. After a year of married life a young mother learns the real metal of her mate—a coward who, fearful of the strife of the world, deserts her and the child. It is a terrible blow, and she feels that she cannot survive it. She summons her brother to her deathbed and into his hands she delivers her written accusation of the cur and with her last breath charges him with the duty, vengeance.

Such a character as the brother's needs no charge to bring the villian to justice, and, armed with his photograph, he starts West, whither the deserter has fled. We now see him, after a long search, entering a barroom for refreshment. He is a stranger in a strange land, and the . outiers-men eye him askance. He is scanning the.. faces, too, but they do not know it. Suddenly a new figure appears he cannot believe it—looks at the photo again it is the man he is looking for!

The new arrival invites The Stranger to a drink, the latter accepts, then just as sociably, asks his man out for a walk. They are both out on a snowclad road, and suddenly The Stranger confronts the other with his photo and the letter. He is right the coward acknowledges, but suddenly makes for his gun. He is just a second too slow, and the avenging brother covers him with his own in addition. Instead of killing him as he deserves, he gives him a chance by throwing both pistols in opposite directions, each to run for his. The Stranger is quicker, and his aim is deadly—his sister is avenged.

Jane, a backwoods girl, has seen the strange duel, and summons "the boys," who go out on the trail to find the murderer, while Jane goes home. All day the man hunt is on, and Jane is about to retire when The Stranger enters through a window. Circumstances force her to be quiet, he waits his chance, then steps out right into the hands of the vigilantes! Her evidence is against him. He is bound to a horse, and is about to be hanged when a well directed bullet severs the rope. The horse dashes off and a few shots follow the fleeing animal. It was Jane's bullet. Almost without knowing it, she has fallen in love with The Stranger and in trying secretly to save him is wounded.

The next day Jane sees for the first time that The Stranger has dropped his sister's letter in her room. She realizes his nobility of character, also why he killed the man. She tells the boys. They go out, lasso him, bind his eyes, lead him back to Jane, and hide. When she comes in and sees him there is a pretty love scene, and what do the indulgent boys do but surprise the cooing couple by leaping out from under bed, chairs, and every corner of the room!

THE DEATH OF MINNEHAHA (The sequel of "Hiawatha".). This beautiful story of the passing away of Hiawatha's beloved Minnehaha comprises the winter scenes of Longfellow's poem, "Hiawatha," which was the first release of the "Imp" and which told how the Indian brave wooed and won the winsome maiden.

It is a bitter winter. Hiawatha, Minnehaha and old Nokomis are suffering from hunger; game is scarce in the woods—they are famine-stricken. Poor Minnehaha is ill and Nokomis is trying to keep a feeble fire alive to afford a little comfort. Hiawatha, noble brave that he is, does not betray his anguish and misery, but stolidly takes up his bow and arrow and goes forth into the woods, in the hopes of finding food.

Over snowclad hill and dale, round the great mountains and by the ice-silenced waterfall he wanders, seeking even to beard the savage beast in its own den; but Nature has given her things of life impenetrable hiding places from the hardships of winter, and Hiawatha's heart is sick:

> "Gitche Manito, the Mighty!
> Give your children food, O father!
> Give us food, or we must perish!
> Give me food for Minnehaha!"

It is of no avail. And even as he prays he hears the call from the tepee, where Pauguk, keeper of the Happy Hunting Grounds, is taking Minnehaha away. He hurries there, but too late—and seven days and seven nights he sits there and mourns her until at last he carries her to a spot by the river, where he buries her with his own hands.

> "Farewell," said he, "my Minnehaha!
> Farewell, O my Laughing Water!
> All my heart is buried with you,
> Soon your footsteps I shall follow
> To the islands of the blessed
> To land of the Hereafter."

GREAT NORTHERN.

NEVER DESPAIR.

Mary Wilson is Doctor Brown's housekeeper. There is something quiet and kind about Mary which makes her liked by everyone. She is nice and friendly to all, and although she is admired by the young men, still she does not show preference for any particular one. One day a young man working as a painter where Mary is employed, falls in love with her, and, strange to say, he succeeds in winning her for his wife. Dr. Brown has also a great admiration for his housekeeper, and intends to make her his wife, but on the day he proposes to her he learns, to his great sorrow, that she is lost to him. Mary is happily married, and her happiness is greatly increased by being the mother of a very pretty little girl. But her luck was too good to last. One day her husband is brought home dead, after having fallen from a scaffold, and Mary is left a widow. She fights hard to get an honest living, which she manages to do, with the help of her sewing machine, which she obtains on the rental system. But matters are very unfortunate, and she cannot keep up the payments. The man from whom she bought the machine will not wait longer for the money, and as she cannot keep her promise, he sends men to take the machine away, thus depriving Mary of her last means of supporting herself and child. Driven to desperation, and tired of fighting misfortune, she cannot bear the sufferings of herself and little daughter any longer, and seeing no way out of her misery except suicide, she places the last few pieces of coke in the stove, closes the damper in the chimney, and is now ready to die, with the aid of the poisoned fumes. A neighbor of hers who has been watching her for the past few days, is rather suspicious, and so when she smells the fumes, which penetrate through the apertures of the door, the neighbor knows that her suspicions are justified. She procures help to break the door open, and finds Mary and her child unconscious on the floor. They send quickly for a doctor, and, strange to say, the nearest doctor obtainable is Doctor Brown. Mary's former sweetheart, who arrives on the scene at once. His heart nearly breaks when he sees the misery of the woman he had formerly admired, and whom he still really loves. After doing his best to bring her back to consciousness, and succeeding, he thinks of his old intentions, and asks her to come back and be his wife. With tears in her eyes, Mary accepts the generous offer, and she is happy once again.

LUX FILMS.

HER DOLLY'S REVENGE.—A discontented little girl scolds her dolly and goes to bed sulkily. During the night we see her dolly walk calmly into her bedroom, and taking the scissors out of a workbasket, stabs her little owner to death. When next we see poor dolly she is before the judge and sentenced to death. The little girl awakes to find that, to her great joy, her dolly is still quite well and does not appear to be suffering from any consciousness of such unladylike schemes.

THE MAN WHO COULD NOT SIT DOWN.—This is the story of an unlucky gentleman against whom nature seems to have pitted herself in a ruthless manner. At an early hour he sallies forth to the park, where, with his morning paper, he settles down for a quiet read. His first tormenter takes the form of a painter who politely informs him that the seat is to be painted. The gentleman takes a seat elsewhere. His neighbors, who are enjoying a meal, soon make their position known, and the worthy gentleman is forced to flee before the odor of onions. The day's adventures come to a climax when he rests on the basin of an ornamental fountain and falls into the water. At last he finds relief by lying on the floor at home.

N. Y. MOTION PICTURE CO.

GOVERNMENT RATIONS.

Three Mexicans force an entrance to the storehouse at Fort Sam Houston, stealing some of the provisions. Sergeant Miles, making his rounds, discovers the theft and at once notifies Colonel Newton, the commandant of the fort. The Colonel suspects the Indians on the reservation of having committed the robbery and vows to find the guilty ones. The next day, Red Cloud, Chief of the Indians, comes to the fort to procure rations for his tribe. Colonel Newton tells him of the robbery and that he suspects the Indians. The Colonel then gives orders that no rations are to be given to the Indians until the guilty ones are given up. Red Cloud denounces the Colonel's accusation as a lie. Goes back to his tribe and tells them why they have not received their rations. Calling a "council of war," they decide to go peacefully to the Colonel and implore him to give them enough food for the women and children of the tribe, who are starving. The Colonel, growing angry, refuses to listen to their plea and orders them to leave the fort. The Indians then resort to drastic measures, attack the storehouse, killing the guards, and secure the rations, of which they have been unjustly deprived. The Colonel, seeing that the Indians are on the warpath, orders out a detachment of soldiers. A pitched battle follows. Just as the battle is at its height two scouts bring in the three Mexicans, having found them in the mountains with the provisions in their possession. The Colonel, realizing his awful mistake, waves the flag of truce, apologizes to the Indians for his terrible treatment of them. The "pipe of peace" is then smoked and pleasant feelings resumed.

ECLAIR FILMS.

FACE TO FACE.

Count Laval, a wealthy nobleman and a devoted Royalist, is greatly disappointed in his son, who, to the father's infinite sorrow, maintains the opinions of the Revolutionists. The Vendean War breaks out, and the son immediately leaves his father's home, and joins the Republican Army, where he acquits himself so creditably that he is rapidly promoted, and soon becomes an officer of rank. However, he is finally surprised by a party of insurgents lying in ambush for the purpose, captured and taken to the Commander of the Royalist Party. In this Commander he recognizes his own father. Both father and son are greatly agitated, and the old man is overwhelmed with the deepest grief, for he realizes that it has become his duty to condemn his only son to death, or else forever be a traitor to his cause. The interview is a most tragic one. The old man, without a waver, passes the death sentence. The prisoner is led away, and the father, his face buried in his now trembling hands, listens in fearful anguish for the volley of shot which will tell him that his boy is no more; and, as the dreaded sound falls upon his ear, he gives vent to his agony in a burst of bitter tears. In the meantime, however, a life-long servant and inferior officer of the old Commander, cannot bring himself to obey his chief's orders, and instructs the men to fire into the air, while the prisoner is allowed to make his escape. When the young man is safely away, the old servant confesses his disobedience to the Count, who at first becomes greatly enraged at the thought of his orders having been disregarded, but who ultimately cannot refrain from thanking and blessing his old servant and friend, who has saved him from a life of bitter self-reproach.

DUTY AND CONSCIENCE.

We are called upon to view the misery and sufferings of a man who has been unable to obtain employment for several months, and has been reduced to absolute and dire distress. In his despair, he yields to the temptation of trespassing upon the estate of a wealthy gentleman in hopes of shooting something to carry home to his starving family. He succeeds in killing a hare, but before he can get away he is discovered and arrested by the gamekeeper. The wretched man being desperate, wounds the gamekeeper and flees. In scaling a wall, he loses his footing and falls, injuring himself, so that he is unable to rise. He is soon overtaken by the pursuing gamekeeper, and dragged to the latter's cottage. As the gamekeeper is writing out the warrant for the man's arrest, he is moved by an inspiration, and suddenly becomes touched by the awful misery of the captive, and decides to show him clemency. After administering restoratives to the suffering prisoner, and not satisfied that he has done all that he should, he hears the sad story, and sends food and assistance to the distressed home.

A. G. WHYTE.

OLD MAID AND BONEHEAD.—Scarcely had Col. Woods and his amiable lady gotten half way to the station when Bessie, their madcap daughter, determined that she and her sister Florence should have a lark. They would write a letter to a matrimonial agency and then poke fun at the applicants. Lucy, the colored maid, was immediately dispatched with the note and then told that she might have the next afternoon off.

While puzzling over the matrimonial ads, on the following day, Sir Percival Bonehead ran across the one inserted for the girls, assuredly the most promising in the entire list. So, without loss of time, he made for the Woods's apartment.

Arriving, he was met by Lucy, eager to enjoy her holiday, but as she was heavily veiled and smartly gowned, the near-sighted Earl concluded that this was the heiress, whose millions he hoped to spend. With a low bow he presented her with a bouquet, and, not being repulsed, promptly proceeded to embrace the delighted maid. Not until she threw back her veil to receive his ardent kisses did he discover his mistake. Turing to beat a hasty retreat, he ran straight into the arms of Sam, Lucy's sweetheart, who unfortunately had come in just in time to see Sir Percival embrace her. Between the indignation of the pair, aroused in the breast of each, but for quite different reasons, the Earl was given a pretty strenuous five minutes. At last managing to reach the fire-escape, he hurriedly entered the old maid's apartment on the second floor and crept under the bed, just as she appeared, ready to retire. As her glance fell upon his feet, she stopped, paralyzed with delight and wonderment. There was a man under the bed! Encouraged by her voice, he crawled out, but the apparition which met his eyes was too much for even Bonehead. All means of exit seemed cut off, so, goaded to desperation, he dashed his head against the wall. Joy! it went straight through plaster, stone and all, and Sir Percival found himself in the street below. His respite, however, was but short, for having fallen on a sleeping policeman, the Earl was collared and marched off to the station-house.

A DAUGTER'S DEVOTION.—When sober, a better father than John Claton could not be found, but, alas! both Grace and Frank knew to their sorrow that when under the influence of liquor their father was quite a different man.

This he fully illustrated as he came in to-day, and when Frank attempted to shield his sister from the old man's abuse, he was savagely ordered from the house.

Jain Buckstone, who had come in during the quarrel, was greatly elated because Frank was out of the way. He had but to supply Claton with liquor and pretty Grace would soon be forced to listen to him.

The old man, all unconscious of the other's thoughts, demanded his companion's flask. No—not one drop should he have. With an oath, Claton sprang upon him, but, being no match for the younger man, was mercilessly hurled over the cliff.

Now, at last, Grace should be his he determined, as he stumped hurriedly along, and, upon reaching their cottage, opened the door and stepped boldly inside.

Frank who, during his year's absence in the West, had struck it rich, and hastening home to bring the glad tidings to his father and sister, reached the garden just as Buckstone entered the house. He was, therefore, in time to administer a thorough thrashing to the drunkard, while Claton, who had almost marvelously escaped with only a sprained ankle, and now came limping in, wished to have it repeated.

Fully realizing the dreadful havoc which liquor had almost wrought, John Claton swore never again to touch the poisonous fluid, and from that day to this, he has kept his word.

INDEPENDENT FILMS.

The following films are released this week by the Empire Film Co., 150 East Fourteenth street, corner Third avenue, New York:

Feb. 5—Foxy Soldiers (Great Northern).....245
Feb. 5—A Woman's Destiny (Great Northern).740
Feb. 5—Love and Treason (Itala).....1040
Feb. 5—His Daughter's Legacy (Pantograph)..1010
Feb 7—Justice of the Far North (Imp).....974
Feb. 7—Mr. Giddy's Revenge (Eclair).....400
Feb. 7—The Child and the Dancing Jack (Eclair) 406
Feb. 8—In Winter's Grip (Hepworth).....350
Feb. 8—Doctor's Peculiar Treatment (Lester)..560
Feb. 8—Ten of Spades, or a Western Raffle (Bison) 1000
Feb. 9—The Mountaineer (Centaur).....945
Feb. 9—Spike's Battle (Actophone).....1000
Feb. 9—The Longing for Gaol (Ambrosio).....574
Feb. 9—The Strongest (Ambrosio).....448
Feb. 11—Young Deer's Gratitude (Bison).....1000
Feb. 12—Foolshead Received (Itala).....500
Feb. 12 Foolshead Preaches Temperance (Itala).500
Feb. 12—Never Again (Great Northern).....715
Feb. 12—Worried to Death (Great Northern)....280

WANTED—100 Reels of Film; must be in good condition; also Motion Picture Machines, Gas Outfits, Slides, etc. Send list. State lowest prices. Address

MAX

526½ Washington Street, Portland, Ore.

WANTED—Pathe's Hand Colored Passion Play; also other Religious film subjects and Religious slides. Must be reasonable. Address

MAX

526½ Washington Street, Portland, Ore.

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a space saver, life saver and money saver. Shipped built up. It is the only sanitary theatre chair. Used by Keith, Proctor and Poli. It folds up automatically and is revolving, making the theatre all aisles. It is a friend to the public.

Send for our circular A. Write today.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO.
CANAL DOVER, OHIO

INDEPENDENT FILMS

LUX FILMS.

Jan. 26—He Would Be an Acrobat.....488
Jan. 26—Uncle Learns to Hypnotize.....498
Feb. 2—Hamlet 950
Feb. 9—Pirate's Fiancee.....698
Feb. 9—The Consequence of a Nod.....311
Feb. 16—The Man Who Could Not Sit Down....468
Feb. 16—Her Dolly's Revenge.....324

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.

Jan. 22—Anarchists on Board (Dr.).....
Jan. 29—The Mystery of the Lama Convent (Dr.)
Feb. 5—A Woman's Destiny (Dr.).....740
Feb. 5—The Foxy Soldiers (Com.).....235
Feb. 12—Never Again (Dr.).....715
Feb. 12—Worried to Death (Com.).....280
Feb. 12—Never Despair (Dramatic).....715
Feb. 19—Ruined by His Son (Dramatic).....

"IMP."
INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES COMPANY OF AMERICA.

Jan. 10—Right of Love.....975
Jan. 17—The Tide of Fortune.....975
Jan. 24—Never Again (Com.).....615
Jan. 24—A Rose of the Philippines (Dr.).....985
Jan. 31—A Coquette's Suitors (Com.).....650
Jan. 31—Sports in the Snow (Sc.).....950
Feb. 7—Justice in the Far North (Dr.).....950
Feb. 14—The Blind Man's Tact (Dr.).....650
Feb. 14—Brown's Gouty Foot (Com.).....300
Feb. 21 Jane and the Stranger.....900
Feb. 24—The Death of Minnehaha.....

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

Jan. 18—A Cowboy's Reward (Dr.).....
Jan. 21—Romany Rob's Revenge (Dr.).....
Jan. 25—A Romance of the Prairie (Bison)....950
Jan. 28—His Imaginary Crime (Bison).....950
Feb. 1—By His Own Hand (Dr.).....
Feb. 4—The Female Bandit (Dr.).....
Feb. 11—Young Deer's Gratitude (Dr.).....
Feb. 8—Ten of Spades (Dr.).....
Feb. 1—The Female Bandit.....1000
Feb. 4—By His Own Hand.....990
Feb. 8—The Ten of Spades.....1000
Feb. 11—Young Deer's Gratitude.....1000
Feb. 15—Government Rations 1000
Feb. 18—Dooley's Holiday 600
Feb. 18—The Impostor 400

ITALA.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Jan. 12—Episode of Napoleon's War with Spain.800
Jan. 22—There Are Some Ghosts.....400
Jan. 22—The Tempting Collar.....600
Jan. 29—The Timid One.....550
Jan. 29—A Good Winning.....430
Feb. 5—Love and Treason.....1000
Feb. 12—Foolshead Receives (Com.).....
Feb. 12—Foolshead Preaches Temperance (Com.)
Feb. 12—Foolshead Receives 610
Feb. 12—Foolshead Preaches Temperance.....365
Feb. 19—Louise Strozzi 900

AMBROSIO.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Jan. 15—The Son of the Wilderness.....925
Jan. 19—Paull 700
Jan. 19—Italian Artillery.....300
Jan. 26—The Last Keepsake.....600
Jan. 26—A Choice Policeman.....400
Feb. 2—Hero and Leander.....850
Feb. 9—The Longing for Goal (Dr.).....
Feb. 9—The Strongest (Dr.).....
Feb. 9—Longing for Gaol.....600
Feb. 9—The Strongest 400
Feb. 16—The Silent Piano 600
Feb. 16—I Have Lost My Latch Key.....400

ECLAIR FILM COMPANY.

Feb. 7—The Child with the Dancing Jack (C.).480
Feb. 7—Mr. Giddy's Revenge (Com.).....400
Feb. 14—A Bootblack's Daily Labor in Algiers (Sc.).....
Feb. 14—The Serum (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—Face to Face (Dramatic).....583
Feb. 21—Duty and Conscience (Dramatic).....498
Feb. 28—Nick Carter as Acrobat 721
Feb. 28—The Castles on the Rhine from Bingen to Coblenz (Scenic).....183

NESTOR FILMS.

Jan. 6—The Nemesis 991
Jan. 13—Mishaps of Bonehead; and Forgiven...995
Jan. 20—Wages of Sin 987
Jan. 27—Ordeal, and Bonehead.....1010
Feb. 3—Justice 965
Feb. 16—A Daughter's Devotion 430
Feb. 16—Bonehead 3rd 425
Feb. 23—In Arizona 965

FILM IMPORT AND TRADING CO.

Jan. 27—Bear Hunting (R. & R.).....
Jan. 27—Disguised Bridegroom (R. & R.).....
Jan. 29—A Young Girl's Sacrifice (Aquila).....
Jan. 29—A Tale of Colonial Days.....900
Feb. 6—His Daughter's Legacy.....980

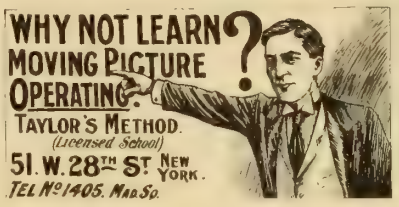
No. 70

35 Cents

Postage Paid

Send for catalog of Announcement and Ad slides

The Neosho Slide Company
100 S. Wood St., Neosho, Mo.



Class meets every morning and afternoon with F. H. Richardson of Chicago, as chief instructor. Evening classes meet every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Complete course $15. We positively guarantee you a $15 positionn We are selling agents for the American Moving Picture machine, and have a second hand Edison machine in A No. 1 condition, at one half of the original cost.

F. C. TAYLOR

51 West 28th Street, New York, N. Y.

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows Grand Stands. Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2.

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

SHE'S GROGGY BUT STILL IN THE RING!

Poor Old Mamma Ten Percent is not quite dead but she's wobbling like a hoss with the blind staggers. Too much exposure, too much publicity, too much lime-light has given her the jinks. But she is still able to penalize naughty film exhibitors who dare to switch their business from one licensed exchange to another. Some of the licensed exchanges in New York and Chicago swear she's dead. Others boast that she is not. So you see, the doctors disagree. And when doctors disagree its 'ell! Exhibitors can do one of two things:—Either refuse to stand for the penalty of ten percent or else throw off all this nonsense forever, become Independent, enrich your bank account with the receipts that the splendid Independent films will bring, be your own master, use the tremendous power that lies in your hands and—run your own business to suit your own self. Don't expect to get good Independent films from any exchange that is not buying. Make sure you're right by dealing with guess-who?

CARL LAEMMLE, President

THE LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE

Headquarters

196-198 Lake Street : : Chicago

Minneapolis, Portland Omaha, Salt Lake City, Evansville

(Canadian Office in Montreal)

The biggest and best film renter in the world

SCENERY FREE

... For Moving ... Picture Theatres

For FULL INFORMATION, HOW TO GET FREE SCENERY—a complete set front TORMENTOS, FANCY DRAPERY and one or two LEG DROPS, according to depth of your stage, and Back Drop representing a GARDEN SCENE, with BRICK WALL, showing spaces for ADVERTISEMENTS of LOCAL STORES near your PICTURE THEATRE. Write at once. COPY THE FOLLOWING FORM and mail it to us.

	Feet	Feet
Inside Measurements of your Picture Frame,	....	x.....
Size of your Picture Sheet,	.....	x.....
Distance from Picture Frame to Back Wall	.....	x.....
Distance from Side Wall to Side Wall, Back of Frame,	.....	x.....
Height from Stage Floor to Ceiling,	.....	x.....

TURNER COMPANY

Scenic and Theatric Studio

552 7th Avenue New York

M. P. MEN.—You have to put on Vaudeville Acts or lose money

LECTURES

on Suitable Subjects in Moving Pictures are a pleasing and attractive feature and always appreciated by your patrons. The peer and pioneer of lectures or "picture readings" with moving pictures is acknowledged to be

W. STEPHEN BUSH

Pleased to correspond with exhibitors

44 North 10th Street - - - Philadelphia, Pa.

THE MIRROR SCREEN

Makes your pictures brighter, more beautiful and more captivating. Pictures almost stereoscopic—there is nothing like it. Don't let the other fellow get ahead of you. Order one and be convinced.

Write to-day for Terms and Prices

Motion Picture Screen Co.

SHELBYVILLE INDIANA

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS

The Big Ticket. Any Printing. Any Colors.

5,000	$1.25	20,000	$4.60	50,000	$7.50
10,000	2.50	25,000	5.50	100,000	10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

GREAT NORTHERN

QUALITY FILMS

Scene from "NEVER DESPAIR"

RELEASE FOR FEBRUARY 12th

NEVER DESPAIR

or, From Misery to Happiness

A touching dramatic production cleverly enacted.

Length, 715 Feet

WORRIED TO DEATH

A laugh-producing comedy subject.

Length, 280 Feet

RELEASE FOR FEBRUARY 19th

RUINED BY HIS SON

A realistic feature production of the very highest order. Full reel length.

EXHIBITORS: Get lithographs and handsome descriptive photo-posters of our pictures from your exchange

USE GREAT NORTHERN FILMS AND INCREASE BOX OFFICE RECEIPTS

MANY HEADLINERS COMING

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO. 7 E. 14th STREET NEW YORK

THE PARIS DISASTER

Photographed by

Le Lion Company of Paris

Embodies the Principal Scenes and Events of the Recent Flood

RELEASED BY

The Power's Company

Wakefield, N. Y. C.

On or About February 15th. Wire Orders at Once

DOWNTOWN OFFICE: 121 East 23rd Street, New York

FILMS FOR RENT

NEW FILMS—HIGH CLASS SERVICE

The Pioneer House, With 8 Years Experience And $250,000.00 Back Of It

Write To-day For Terms

EUGENE CLINE

57 and 59 Dearborn Street, Chicago

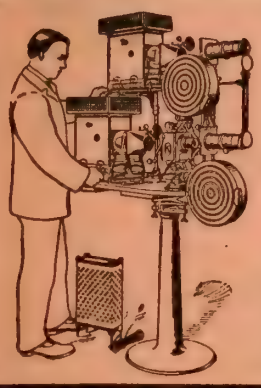
Vol. 6., No. 8. February 26, 1910 Price, 10 Cents

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE EXHIBITOR

ALL THE FILM AND SONG SLIDE NEWS

Published Weekly by THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING CO., 125 E. 23d ST., NEW YORK



The Motiograph Motion Picture Machine is A Wonder

AND WILL INCREASE YOUR BUSINESS

It projects Flickerless, Steady and Wonderfully Brilliant pictures, has Patented 1½ minute Rewind from main crank, revolving Magazines, Automatic Fireproof shutter, etc., not found in other Machines.—WILL WEAR TWICE AS LONG.

C. H. D. of Keokuk, Iowa, writes: Motiograph Making a Big Hit and Business increased wonderfully.

F. L. F. of Chicago, Ill., writes: "Used every day for seven months, and not one penny for repairs."

F. J. K. of Kansas City, writes: "Operating Motiograph nearly two years. Have operated all makes, but none to compare with Motiograph.—PRICES, $150.00 AND UP

The Enterprise Calcium Gas Outfit is the only satisfactory substitute for electric light Write for Catalog to-day

Western Representatives: S. Lubin, Geo. Melies

FILM

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564-572 West Randolph Street, Chicago

Calcium Gas Outfit

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

143 North 8th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Best and Newest Independent American and Foreign Films

SUPPLIES——18 REELS PER WEEK——SUPPLIES

PROMPT AND RELIABLE SERVICE

Members N. I. M. P. Alliance

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE

Power's Cameragraph No. 5

Power's Cameragraph No. 6

Guaranteed for 1 Year

"Power's" Means Perfect in Moving Pictures

Power's Inductor for alternating current

Power's "Bill Splitter" for direct current

Power's Tool Kit

Send for Catalog G

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115-117 Nassau St., New York

BISON FILMS

TRADE MARK

Regular Release Days—Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday, Saturday

FOUR REELS A WEEK—Tuesday, a "Bison"—Wednesday, Ambrosio—Friday, a "Bison"—Saturday, Itala

"FOUR BIG FEATURES"

Two "Bisons," an "Ambrosio" and an Itala"

Tuesday, Feb. 22nd—A "BISON"

"FOR HER FATHER'S HONOR"

Code—"Honor"

A story showing the true and sterling character of a girl of the West, who sacrifices herself to save "Her Father's Honor."

Wednesday Feb. 23rd—"ITALA"

"FOOLHEAD AT THE BALL"

"THE DOG OF THE CHEESE MONGER"

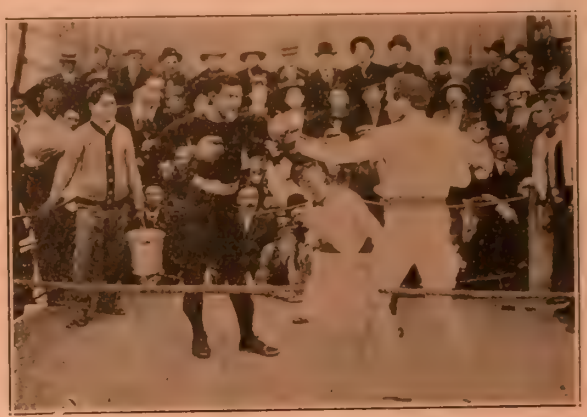
Code—"Head"

"It is to laugh" when you see the "Itala" double-header for this week. nothing but comical and amusing instances throughout the reel

Friday, Feb. 25th—A "BISON"

"DOOLEY REFEREES THE BIG FIGHT"

Code—"Hit"



"Take your corners," get ready for the "big laugh," a positive "knockout," when Dooley referees the big fight between Jackries and Jim Possum.

Saturday, Feb. 26th—"AMBROSIO"

"THE WITCH'S BALLAD"

"WHY FRICOT WAS SENT TO COLLEGE"

Code—"Hand"

"The Witch's Ballad," a beautiful fairy legend of sunny Italy, followed by "Why Fricot was sent to College, a side splitting comedy such as only Ambrosio produces.

LITHOGRAPHS AND POSTERS FREE

Exhibitors:—We furnish as usual all exchanges handling these productions with one sheet four colored lithographs, also posters containing synopsis absolutely free with each reel. Demand same from your exchange as they will positively increase your box office receipts.
Brief description of all subjects wil. be found on another page.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

Manufacturers of "Bison" Life Motion Pictures

429 SIXTH AVENUE, Cor. 26th Street - NEW YORK CITY

Phone 6690-1 Madison Sq. Cable Address: Nosib

Great Scot! Listen to These:

Roscoe Cuneo, Star Theater, Upper Sandusky, Ohio:—"I made arrangements to-day to enlarge my theater, adding 200 seats. Your IMP FILMS are the cream of them all. Keep up the good work." (Do YOU use IMP FILMS?)

H. Fichtenberg, New Orleans, La.:—"By using your IMP FILMS Saturday, Sunday and Monday my theater went $68 ahead of the corresponding three days of the previous week." (Do YOU use IMP FILMS?)

ED. J. Wagner, Hartford, Wis.:—"We are all daffy about IMP FILMS. I want every IMP FILM from my exchange, for they are the ones that draw the crowds." (Do YOU use IMP FILMS?)

T. A. Rogers, Jackson, Ohio:—"I want every IMP FILM I can get. They are certainly the candy. All we have to do is to advertise IMP FILMS, then push out the cardboards and take in the money." (Do YOU use IMP FILMS?)

S. S. Cooke, Richmond, Ind.:—"Keep it up. Keep it up. You've got it on all of them." (Do YOU use IMP FILMS?)

Jos. E. Golden, Hudson, N. Y.:—"Your IMP FILMS are great. Best I have ever seen. I feature all your reels big." (Do YOU use IMP FILMS?)

Sinclair Graham, Steubenville, Ohio:—"I have only to advertise it's an IMP FILM and it brings the crowds. I find people in attendance who never entered moving picture theaters before. It's all due to your high-grade pictures." (Do YOU use IMP FILMS?)

W. R. Walker & Son, Peru, Ind.:—"We wish to extend our heartiest congratulations on your IMP FILMS." (Do YOU use IMP FILMS?)

E. Auger, London, Ont.:—"You certainly deserve the warmest congratulations for the good work you are doing." (Do YOU use IMP FILMS?)

Exhibitors' Film Exchange, 138 Third Ave., New York:—"More power to the good right arm of the IMP. And as soon as the left arm means another reel per week, more power to that!" (Do YOU use IMP FILMS?)

We could print hundreds like the above, because our mail is loaded with them every day. Back of this there must be a powerful reason. Why don't you use IMP FILMS and see what it is?

Two More Corking Good Releases!

MONDAY, FEB. 28th.

"THE GOVERNOR'S PARDON"

(About 960 feet.)

Good man takes convict's place in jail so convict can see dying wife. Wife dies. Convict starts back to prison. Is killed by an auto. Good man still in jail is recognized by guard. Whole story comes out. Governor hears it all and extends his pardon just as the last of 960 feet of dandy pictures are about to run into the can. Every weep in this story means money in the exhibitor's pocket. People love to pay money to weep at a show.

THURSDAY, MARCH 3d.

"THE NEW MINISTER"

(About 940 feet.)

Ugly old sister's beau is a minister. Pretty sister has an up-to-date beau. Ugly girl's arm in a sling. Has her sister write note to her Jack for her. Other beau finds note, in his girl's handwriting. Ha! A rival! Rushes out and challenges other fellow to a duel. The duel is a scream, a scream, a scream, a scream. I can hear the people in your theater laughing their heads off when the duel comes on. Whisper to your exchange soon!

---

2 REELS A WEEK!

Independent Moving Pictures Company of America,
111 E. 14th St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres.

2 REELS A WEEK!

NESTOR FILMS

IN ARIZONA!

RELEASED FEBRUARY 23d, 1910 LENGTH 990 FEET

A magnificent production superbly acted by our own stock company of first class Broadway actors, assisted by Nebraska Bill's troup of genuine cowboys from the real West

Photographically Perfect Beautifully Toned

The finest picture we have ever produced, and we are just a wee bit proud of it, insist on it and you'll say that it is even better than "THE MOUNTAINEER" that we released on the 9th and which exhibitors write us was the best they ever saw, either American or Imported

NESTOR FILM CO.

BAYONNE, N. J.

The following Exchanges furnish our Films:

Great Western Film Service, 59 Dearborn St., Chicago.
Laemmle Film Service, 196 Lake St., Chicago.
Chicago Film Exchange, 46 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago.
Eugene Cline, 59 Dearborn St., Chicago.
Royal Film Service, 225 Dearborn St., Chicago.
Globe Film Service, 105 E. Madison St., Chicago.
Ind. Western Film Ser., Swetland Bldg., Portland, Ore.
Buckeye Film and Proj. Co., Arcade Bldg., Dayton, Ohio.
Wm. H. Swanson, 200 N. Seventh St., St. Louis, Mo.
Michigan Film and Supply Co., Detroit, Mich.
Phila. Proj. Co., 44 N. Ninth St., Philadelphia, Pa.
Ind. Film Exc., 415 Ferry St., Pittsburg, Pa.
Consolidated Ams. Co., 28 W. Lexington St., Baltimore, Md.
W. E. Greene, 228 Tremont St., Boston, Mass.
Victor Film Service, Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Buffalo, N. Y.
Texas Film Exchange, 311 Elm St., Dallas, Texas.
Exhibitors' Film Exchange, 138 Third Ave., New York City.
Paramount Film Exchange, 61 W. Fourteenth St., New York City.
Empire Film Exchange, 150 E. Fourteenth St., New York City.
Crystal Palace Film, Toronto, Canada.
Gaumont & Co., Toronto, Can.

Our Next Release The Vindictive Foreman Wednesday, March 2d

Four color lithographs furnished FREE with all NESTOR PICTURES

Sole Agent: A. G. WHYTE

1 MADISON AVENUE NEW YORK

LUX FILMS

RELEASED WED.

THE FISHERMAN'S HONOUR

639 Feet. DRAMATIC

Having hidden some fugitives a fisherman strictly forbids his wife and son to disclose the whereabouts to the Royalists who are in the neighborhood. Unfortunealy the little son is tempted by the troops to disclose the hiding place for a sum of money. He does this and the fugitives are routed, The fisherman then takes his son to the seashore intending to kill him but at the last moment his wife rushes upon the scene and saves the little one's life. An intensely dramatic film.

Release of March 2nd 1910

SAILOR'S DOG (Dramatic)

Don't Miss This. It's Great

A full Description of this Subject will be found on Another page

FEBRUARY 23rd

THE RUNAWAY STOVE

344 Feet. COMEDY

This film is a good short knock-about comedy subject. A Gentlemen purchases a stove, the stove is installed and a fire is soon kindled. Within the stove's firey heart a strong desire to roam springs up; then it starts off on a most amusing journey through the house into the street and around the town. At various places it appears as a boon and a blessing to men, but alas it must away. After setting fire to a haystack and causing considerable excitement among the community it returns home, where its owner soon follows with a crowd of angry people at his heels. After a long and heated dispute the owner satisfies them by binding the stove with a strong rope.

Released March 2nd, 1910

THE GOLF MANIA (Comedy)

DON'T MISS THIS. IT'S GREAT

A Full Description of this Subject will be Found on Another Page

THE WORLD'S BEST—BAR NONE

Write for Weekly List of Descriptions of our Films

R. PRIEUR

10 E. 15th Street Telephone Call: STUYVESANT 3124 NEW YORK

Have you seen "Hamlet," a Lux classic reel of great power and beauty. Large posters for Hamlet sent to any exhibitor on receipt of 5 cents for postage.

GREAT NORTHERN

QUALITY FILMS

Next Release, Saturday, February 19th

RUINED BY HIS SON

Realistic Feature Production of High Standard
Full Reel Length

Release, for February 26th

DOCTOR'S SACRIFICE

A Cleverly Presented Story of Modern Life Photographic excellence superb
Length approximately, 810 Feet

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO. 7 E. 14th STREET NEW YORK

VITAGRAPH

"LIFE PORTRAYALS"

THREE REELS PER WEEK

YOU DARE NOT MISS ONE OF THEM

Tuesday, February 22

PAID IN FULL

A Powerful Dramatic Subject. An Arab love story, with the scenes laid in Algeria. An entirely original plot of thrilling interest. Approximate length, 930 feet.

Friday, February 25

A LESSON BY THE SEA

Intense Heart Interest. A drama of contemporary society life. Seashore scenes of marvelous beauty. Approximate length, 963 feet.

Saturday, February 26

THE SOUL OF VENICE

A Magnificent Spectacular Drama of the 16th century. Brilliant scenic and photographic quality, with a plot of gripping power. Approximate length, 950 feet.

Vitagraph Posters for all subjects. If your exchange will not supply you, write to us.

In preparation, a magnificent and stupendous production of "ELEKTRA"

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

NEW YORK, 116 Nassau St.
CHICAGO, 109 Randolph St.
LONDON, 25 Cecil Court
PARIS, 15. Rue Sainte-Cecile

"AGFA" ANILINE COLORS

Prepared for

Coloring Slides or Photographs

LIST OF COLORS

ROSE	VERMILION
ORANGE	LEAF GREEN
BLUE	PINK
GREEN	TURQUOISE
BROWN	PURPLE
VIOLET	DARK YELLOW
MAROON	LIGHT YELLOW

PRICE, FIFTY CENTS.

3 Ounce Bottle Concentrated

Berlin Aniline Works

213-215 WATER ST. NEW YORK

The Secret of Success is to begin with a

Good Beginning

then you won't fear the ending

From FIRST to LAST

the absolutely BEST in Film service is that distributed by

The Pittsburg Calcium Light & Film Company

Pittsburg, Pa. Des Moines, Ia. Rochester, N. Y.
Wilkes Barre, Pa. Cincinnati, Ohio.
Omaha, Neb.

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY - 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

EDITORS: J. P. CHALMERS, THOMAS BEDDING, F. R. P. S.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rica and the Philippine Islands.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3⅜ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.

TIME DISCOUNTS: 5% two or more insertions, 10% three months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

G. P. VON HARLEMAN, Western Representative, 913-915 Schiller Building, Chicago, Ill. - Telephone, Central 3763

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 6 FEBRUARY 26, 1910 No. 8

Summary of the Week.

Candy or the Picture....287
Moving Pictures vs. Vaudeville....288
Some New Developments of Business....288
St. Louis to the Fore in Show Advertising....289
Dignity of the Exhibitors' Profession....289
The Rehearsal, the Rehearser and the Rehearsed....290
The Moving Picture and the Actor....291
"Lux Graphicus" rejoices over the changed attitude of the press toward the moving picture....292
Chicago Notes . . . London Picture Palace de Luxe....293
Picture Personalities (Pathe's "Carmen")....294
New Race of Degenerates....296
Size of Picture and "Throw"....296
Operators' Column (Questions and Answers)....297
Correspondence—Credit Where Credit Is Due—Music for M. P. Houses—Rheostat Problems—Religious Productions—Local Competition....303-304

The Candy or the Picture.

The influences which the moving picture is said to have upon modern manners and customs are numerous. To read what is said by one set of people, the picture is sending the juvenile part of the population to perdition; to read what is said by another section, it is one of the greatest uplifting forces of the time. Of course, neither party is correct. Speaking generally, the children are none the worse for the picture when it is of good quality. They are amused and entertained and occasionally instructed; they are neither better nor worse for looking at a good moving picture than they are for looking at a good stationary one. In short, most of what is said about the influence of the moving picture upon young people is largely conjectural and journalese. Evidence and statistics are seldom, if ever, forthcoming.

But there are exceptions to this state of things. Facts and figures are occasionally produced as to the way in which children are influenced by the picture. Some of these facts and figures are supplied in a recent issue of our contemporary The Confectioners' Review. According to this esteemed authority, children are giving up eating candies and spending their money on pictures. Our contemporary quotes facts in support of its contention. A jobber knows of many small retail stores that have suffered heavily—whose trade, in fact, has completely disappeared. A broker tells of a number of stores having gone out of business; some salesmen assert that the picture is cutting into all classes of candy business. Another authority quotes cases where candy stores have lost as much as 70 per cent. of their trade when a moving picture store moved next door. The facts, then, seem to be beyond dispute that a great deal of juvenile money is diverted from the candy store to the moving picture show.

Is this change in the juvenile habit to be approbated or deprecated? Of course the sellers of candies say it is to be deprecated. The owners of moving picture shows, on the other hand, of course, say it is to be approbated. But which is best for the children—candies or pictures? Probably the latter, if they are of good quality. Candies, we venture to hazard the opinion, are more or less deleterious, that is to say, though they are sweet and pleasant to the infantile or juvenile palate, they hardly fall within the domain of that class of nutriment which scientists assign for human existence. Upon those grounds, then, if our contemporary be right, the moving picture is to be approbated. The picture may improve the mind, and amongst children the candy may please the palate, but it disorders the stomach and so has an unfavorable reaction upon the small bodies of the juvenile public. From our point of view we think the children are better off with good moving pictures and though we sympathize with our confectionery friends in their loss of trade, we are sure they would side with us in agreeing that the trade has been diverted into proper channels. Most of us have taken candies; most of us who are not members of the softer sex agree that they cloy, are sickly and are, perhaps, not ideally wholesome. But we cannot say this about the good moving picture or any other work of art. It is a thing of beauty and a joy forever; whereas your candy has a very evanescent existence indeed and is forgotten until it superinduces internal disturbance.

It would be interesting to know whether the great candy manufacturers such as Huyler's, The Mirror and others can trace any falling off of their business to the inroads of the moving picture. Probably not—the consumption of candies amongst girls and women who eat these things with discretion not being liable to diminution by such causes as the popularity of the moving picture. We think that if small children can be prevented from acquiring the candy habit until they are old enough to take only what is good for them, why then the picture will have produced a distinctly beneficial effect upon the rising generation.

The Moving Picture vs. Vaudeville.

IS THERE A CONTEST BETWEEN THEM?

"These pictures would be simply fine, if the operators would only run them properly." This remark was made to us the other evening by an occasional patron and a permanent admirer of the moving picture. It is a remark that has been made to us in many forms during the past few months. It has been made to us by those who make moving pictures; by those who run them, and by those, and there are very many, who go to witness the pictures. It is a vital question; it is so vital that we are convinced it has an important bearing upon the future popularity of the moving picture as a public entertainment.

We do not think it is far-fetched to hazard the conjecture that, between this question of the proper exhibition of the picture by the operator, and the possible rivalry of vaudeville, there is a close connection. Within the last few months, in New York City, numerous theaters which have relied chiefly upon the moving picture as the power of attraction, have reverted to vaudeville. Or, one should say, they have largely diluted the picture with vaudeville, until now where once the picture was the principal item in the entertainment, it takes second place; it is a mere adjunct of the ten and twenty-cent amusement house. Just as we are writing this, the names of no less than seven large picture houses in New York City occur to us in which this dilution of the picture with vaudeville has been made.

Now, why is this? Is it that the public is tiring of the picture? Most decidedly not. Is it that there is any novelty in vaudeville to the public? Certainly not. Vaudeville is one of the oldest kinds of entertainment, whereas the picture is one of the newest. Why is it, then, that in these cases, where only a few months ago the pictures drew crowds, vaudeville is necessary in order to keep up the attendance. Frankly, we think it is because of the incompetent manner in which moving pictures are shown by eight out of every ten operators. Only the other evening we went in company with some friends to a moving picture house which also shows vaudeville. We were amazed at the ineffective manner in which the pictures were shown by the operator, who also seemed to be doing his best to extract as much noise as possible out of his machine. He seemed to have no regard for time. The characters were made to race across the screen at breakneck speed, instead of simply walking. He also varied his speed in the most irrational manner, and the result was that not only we, but people seated around about us were confused, annoyed and dissatisfied, with what seemed to them a series of rapid, jerky jumbles on the screen. Incidentally we may say the effect of some very fine pictures was ruined by this man.

What was the immediate result of this? The people seemed to welcome the vaudeville acts when they came, for at least these were clear and intelligible; the actions of the performers could be easily followed, and what they said could be easily heard. But the poor picture was not given even a ghost of a chance to make itself intelligible; in fact, it looked to us as though the operator was purposely trying to destroy the effect of the pictures.

This occurred in one of the best known moving picture theaters in New York City. Possibly it was an exceptional occurrence. Unfortunately, however, within the last week or two we have seen exactly the same treatment of the picture at other theaters. There seems quite an epidemic of bad operating at theaters, not one hundred miles from Fourteenth street. As we have said, we noticed it not merely once but several times lately. What is the result of this? People won't trouble to try and understand things which, either designedly or by ignorance, are made obscure to them. If the picture won't tell its own story clearly and lucidly, your audience is not going to worry about filling in the breaks or the gaps or straighten out a confused narrative for itself. They won't trouble about it. They will simply turn to some other amusement which is perfectly obvious to them.

This is a serious matter for the moving picture industry. It is one that the film makers should take in hand. They should endeavor to assure that due justice is done to their pictures at the various theaters. Of course, in this we are speaking of our own personal observation in New York City, but we have evidence that it is not an uncommon thing in other parts of the country, namely, that the effect of the picture is ruined by incompetent handling. The public is very sensitive in these matters—especially the American public. It can be easily made to tire of an entertainment which is not properly served up to them.

We should like every manager of a moving picture theater who reads this article to personally assure himself that his operator is doing justice to his pictures, especially in the important matter of the timing of the dramatic action. We are not now dealing with the question of showing good light or other technical departments of an operator's work; we are drawing attention to the one thing above all others which is important for the proper elucidation of the story on the screen, namely, that the movement of the film through the machine should be properly timed. There is no doubt, in our opinion, that the popularity of the picture is threatened, not because the public wants cheap vaudeville in a moving picture house, but because the pictures are not properly shown.

Some New Developments of Business.

The representative of a European film making house was recently in this country and on the completion of his business he returned home with a number of very extensive orders in his pocket. These orders were for the printing of American films in Europe, in other words it means that the firm to which we are referring will have negatives of American subjects sent over to them, and prints will be made there instead of here, and distributed in the usual way amongst the renters and exhibitors.

This is a very important little development of the business which we think should be noted in these pages. It has to be borne in mind that the cost of production of moving pictures in Europe is less than in the United States. In England, for example, positive pictures are sold now at 6 and 8 cents per foot; in this country the average price for the same subjects delivered to the renter is between 10 and 12 cents. Hence it will be perceived that while the European film maker has done a good stroke of business for himself the American exporter can save money, as it obviously pays him better to produce a thing abroad for six cents than to make it here for 8 and 10 cents and export it.

Similarly, we observe that a counter movement or, shall we call it, a reciprocative movement, is in progress. In the last number of our contemporary, "The Kinematograph and Lantern Weekly" appears an advertisement from the Powers Company of 241st Street and Richardson Ave., New York City, U. S. A., seeking the purchase of negatives for European subjects for release in America simultaneously with release in Europe. This means of course in its logical development that the duties on European subjects can be avoided by the simple plan of having the negatives sent here and prints made from them. If the Powers Company are successful in their scheme, and we see no reason why they should not be, this policy is bound to have an influence on the business in the United States in European made films, always provided, of course, that the quality of the positives made here equals the quality of those made abroad. There is no reason why this should not be. The most celebrated French pictures it is well known are printed in this country.

It seems to us that this little departure does something towards solving the vexed problem of the importing of European made subjects into this country. As it is, the positives have to pay considerable duty, and there must be some difficulty therefore in competing with the American made positive. We commend the enterprise of the Powers Company in this respect and hope to learn that it is successful.

St. Louis to the Fore.

We have more than once recommended moving picture exhibitors to extend their advertising. That is to say, we think the moving picture theater when properly conducted appeals to as large, important and intelectual a section of the community as the ordinary theater, so we want to see the moving picture theater adopt as far as possible the same methods of attracting patronage as the ordinary theater. We want to see artistic billboards and posters publicly displayed, and we want to see the theater just as prominently and effectively advertised in the newspapers, within due limits, of course, as is the ordinary theater.

The St. Louis exhibitors are apparently of our way of thinking. This week we reproduce a recent front page of our contemporary, the St. Louis "Republic." It will be seen that this newspaper pays adequate tribute to the entertainment possibilities and attributes of the moving picture. It gives some interesting statistics with regard to the moving picture theater in the great Missourian city. There are 200 of these houses there. It seems that there are more than a million dollars invested in them and they employ about 1,500 persons.

This is a very satisfactory state of things. Evidently, to quote our contemporary, "the business in St. Louis has been placed upon a systematic and businesslike basis." We congratulate the St. Louis exhibitors who have brought about this proper state of affairs. Sixteen of them write us this week asking us to reproduce the page from the St. Louis "Republic," which we are very pleased to do. It will be seen that there are advertisements of no less than sixteen moving picture theaters appearing in the St. Louis "Republic." This shows enterprise on the part of the newspaper and enterprise on the part of the exhibitors. It is an example to be followed by the exhibitors in other cities. It shows how they can get together for the purpose of mutual support. We have not the slightest doubt that the other great newspapers of the country would co-operate with them in having the moving picture theater more prominently brought to the notice of the public. Other cities, please imitate St. Louis as soon as possible!

The objection on the part of some exchanges to educational or industrial subjects prompts us to call for a vote, so that the subject may be settled. We would like to hear from the exchanges what reel was most in demand during the past three months. In other words, what were the best money-making reels issued during that period. We would also like to hear from the exhibitors as to what film or films they considered were the most appreciated by their audiences during the past three months. We and others are anxious to get this guide to public opinion.

Dignity of the Exhibitors' Profession.

By S. L. Rothapfel.

While at the convention of the F. S. A., at the Imperial, at New York, I had the pleasure of becoming acquainted with the editor of this worthy publication. I found him, like myself, a motion picture enthusiast, and before I became aware of it I had been commissioned to write a series of articles for these columns pertaining to the management and conducting of a motion picture performance.

Now, my brother exhibitors and operators, I do not wish to be held up as an authority, nor do I say that I am absolutely correct, but what I am about to impart to you has been the result of many days of hard work and the expenditure of a considerable amount of money.

Motion pictures are no longer a fad—they are here to stay, and are sure to become the greatest source of amusement in this country.

The day of the ignorant exhibitor with his side-show methods is a thing of the past, and the public now demand an intelligent interpretation of these pictures and the conducting of these theaters in a more businesslike and artistic manner, and if you expect to remain in this business and reap a reasonable amount of profit therefrom you will have to join the ranks of the higher class exhibitors who are sure to spring up every day, or else you will fall by the wayside.

The secret of the successful motion picture theater of the future will be the ability of the management to make the people forget that they are witnessing a motion picture, to make them forget that they only paid you five or ten cents to witness the performance.

The manufacturers are doing all in their power to give you detail; spending enormous sums to give the pictures reality and tone. Some even go so far as to give you a detailed lecture and music scores. The makers of the different projecting machines are spending fortunes to perfect their machines, and equip their plants with the very finest tools and machinery that it is possible to make; in fact, everything is being done to assist you to make the motion picture theater what it should be; to raise it to the standard where it belongs, as the most popular form of amusement in this country.

Now as they are doing all in their power, it is our duty to co-operate with them in every way and assist them, and by so doing assist ourselves in building up an industry which is only in its infancy.

I have made a careful study of the motion picture theater both her and abroad; I operate them and also the machine, and I am going to give you, to the very best of my ability, such advice and ideas as I found were practical and successful, and shall be glad to answer any queries through these columns, or personally if you will enclose stamp for reply.

I will take up each item in detail and then summarize the whole, and most cordially invite you to assist me if you have found anything that you thought would improve or help the business in which we are engaged.

Next week the subject will be "Management."

Grand Rapids, Minn.—The Gem Theater has been purchased by Messrs. Trask and Comers, Mr. Trask having purchased the interests of Mr. Hagen. The firm name is now Comers & Trask. Business at the Gem is on the increase. The theater runs licensed films and no vaudeville, and under the able management of Geo. R. Comers it is likely to have a long and prosperous career.

Renew your subscription to the Moving Picture World, $2.00. Do it now. It will pay.

THE REHEARSAL, THE REHEARSER AND THE REHEARSED.

A favorite recitation which I remember to have heard at many a Bohemian gathering illustrated the woes and troubles of a stage manager. The elocutionist was supposed to be describing the final rehearsal of a drama. Much of the fun of the recitation consisted in depicting the anguished state of mind into which the poor man was driven by the sheer stupidity of the people whom he was rehearsing. I can recall one or two passages of the recitation.

"My little child," he was supposed to be saying to a small girl, who was playing the deserted foundling, "at this part you come right in the middle of the stage; you kneel down, you clasp your hands together, look up to the sky, and say, 'Oh, heaven; oh, heaven.' You see that cross beam up there where the carpenter has left his bread and cheese in a bit of paper?" "Yes, sir." "Well, my child, that is heaven. Keep your eyes on heaven when you come to that point."

"Now, then," continued the frantic stage manager, "where's the heroine? Where is Miss De Montmorency? Where is that woman? Where in thunderation is that ——— ——— ———? Oh, here you are, are you? You beauty! Why don't you leave the gin alone and come and do your work? Now, then, for your speech—'Where is my child to-night?' Oh, go on, clear your throat; and say SOMETHING. Don't stand there like a stuffed mummy pawing the air." Well, Miss De Montmorency having been set going—"Now, we will have the snow. Let us have the snow" (looking up into the flies) "drop that snow! Let down that ——— snow, you ——— ——— idiot. Oh, my God, was there ever such a collection of ——— fools in all the world gathered on this stage to-day?"

Anybody familiar with the rehearsing of stage plays will know that although this kind of thing may look slightly exaggerated and sound exceedingly comical, it is nearer the mark than is commonly supposed. Rehearsing a play is hard work for all concerned. Author, producer, stage manager, actresses and actors for the time seem to be in a maelstrom of trouble. It looks impossible to extricate order from the chaos.

I had a personal experience once, illustrative of the peculiar agony of mind into which an author may be driven by the obtuseness of the actors and actresses. I wrote a play, gentle reader! It was produced and I assisted in its production. Within two nights of the public production of the piece the leading lady (bless her!) absolutely refused to speak certain lines that had been set down for her. She had to say that she was "over fifty years of age, and consequently was getting an old woman." This was a pivotal point in the play. Nevertheless the dear creature would not speak those lines and (they happened to be true in her case, for she was getting old), the result was that an entire scene had to be rewritten and rehearsed. This delayed the production of the play and in the result brought about a totally opposite effect to what I had in mind. Lovely woman on the stage is sometimes a very trying proposition.

Much the same sort of trouble seems to be experienced by the producers of moving picture plays as by the producers of ordinary plays. Not many months ago I watched a well-known producer at work rehearsing his crowd. He had to drill some soldiers. His raw material was obtained from one of the Mills Hotels in New York City. The men knew as much about marching, marking time, carrying a gun and wearing uniforms, so as to look like soldiers, as the man in the moon. Yet all one long weary afternoon Mr. Producer toiled, drilling his raw material into stage soldiers. He shouted, he swore. The perspiration poured off his face, he became hoarse and fatigued. Yet he stuck to his job like a Trojan. At the end of it all he turned to me, as he mopped the perspiration from his face, and said: "My God, if you fellows who write in the newspapers about these pictures knew the amount of heartbreaking work that a producer has to go through, you would be a little more lenient with us."

This is a point that the great public seldom thinks about. They watch a Selig crowd work on the screen, but there is never a thought in their minds for Producer Turner, who, in that great field out in Chicago, has shouted, gesticulated and excited himself over the rehearsing work. So, too, even in a comedy scene. Your most charming actress may be, and probably is, during rehearsals, just a bit of expressionless putty. She has to be moulded into shape. Like a rough diamond, she must be polished up by the producer. Your hero, too, has to be made to look heroic. The comic man has to be kept in his place. Comic men have a strong knack of overdoing things. Invariably they think that the success of the production hinges upon their efforts.

The moving picture play is just a mosaic, each part of which has to be put into its proper place and made to bear its due relation to the other parts. The supers of the military type, to which I have just referred, especially where crowds are hastily arranged, are not usually overdone with brains. A well-known story illustrative of this point occurs to me. "Now, you," said a stage manager to his super, "now, you, instead of coming down the right hand side of the stage at this point, will come down the left hand side." "Good Lord," was the reply, "more study—more study." This about fairly illustrates the mental equipment of the crowd. It is hard work licking this material into shape; it is hard work knocking the woodenness out of them and teaching them to look natural and more naturally.

Such a picture as the Vitagraph "Moses" must have entailed an enormous amount of work on the producers. This reflection occurred to us only the other night when looking at the Vitagraph release of Saturday, February 12. There you had the extremely well drilled crowd acting, it seemed to us, with perfect freedom and naturalness throughout, especially in the manna scene where the hungry Israelites make for the heaven-sent food. Work of this kind is something of which the producer can be proud. But it is hard work, it is unpicturesque work, and I fear does not receive that recognition from the public which it deserves. Stage producers do not appear in the limelight. Their work goes forth, is judged or misjudged as the case may be. Yet they are doomed to be voiceless and never to be heard in their own defense or in mitigation of what may be said or written against them.

T. B.

Hoyt G. Morrow, general manager of the Lyric Amusement Company, with offices in the Baltimore Building, Oklahoma City, Okla., has installed a new department in his business which is designed especially for the buying and selling of moving picture theaters, vaudeville houses, airdomes, etc. In short, it is a kind of brokerage department. We feel that the Lyric Amusement Company will be successful in their new enterprise, as we are receiving a large number of calls and inquiries from parties all over the United States who desire to buy and sell amusement places. We recommend this company to all our readers who wish to purchase, lease or sell a moving picture theater, vaudeville house, etc. Their advertisement will be found on another page of this issue.

THE MOVING PICTURE AND THE ACTOR.

By H. F. Hoffman.

With the advent of every great invention there comes a cry from the ranks of the workers whom the new invention is going to affect. Meetings have been held by labor unions and resolutions have been passed forbidding union workmen to labor in a shop where a newly invented machine has been installed to do the work of human hands.

And now that the moving picture has come into its own, we hear the showman and the actor crying loudly: "It's taking the bread out of our mouths." "Othello's occupation's gone."

Looking back over the list of great labor saving inventions, it is next to impossible to find one that has not been a real benefit to the very craft it seems designed to kill. Every invention that is to revolutionize a trade must have the two big essential points: more product and less cost. At first it seems that with a machine one man will hereafter do the work of twenty, while the other nineteen will be driven out.

But there is a great balance wheel somewhere in the inscrutable machine of Providence that keeps the universe from flying to pieces by centrifugal force. In the case of new inventions that affect the trades, the market and the market price are the great governors. With goods selling cheaper more people can afford to buy them and the demand becomes greater, therefore more machines are necessary and before long those nineteen men and more are back operating machines. More factories are started and the demand for men greater than ever before.

When the photo-engraving process came into vogue many an old woodcut and steel engraver lay down and imagined themselves starved to death before the pangs of hunger had a chance to do their work. Twenty years ago the woodcut was the only means of illustrating any printed matter. The steel engraving was a reckless luxury and the price of both made the printing of an illustrated catalogue run into fabulous sums as compared with now.

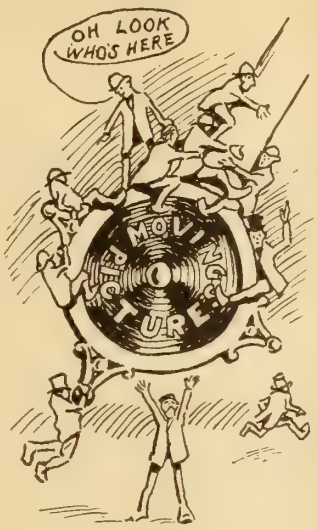
When the new process came in, the engraver and the woodcut man were growling that their occupation was gone, but soon they came to learn that skilled engravers were needed in the new trade. Half-tones and line cuts became so cheap that most business men could not afford to do without them. The work and orders began piling up and all those old engravers were sorely needed as retouchers and finishers. Many of them started plants of their own in smaller cities that never before could support an engraver.

If a new invention penetrates into the smaller towns and becomes a necessity there, put it down as a lasting success that means work and money for all.

What did the livery stable man do when the automobile came along? If he was wise he didn't try to "shoo" it away. Instead of that he jumped into the auto and went along with the procession. He changed his livery stable into a garage and now he gets more rent for the use of a car in a day than he did for a horse in a week. City or country, no matter which, the motor car has come to stay. The coachman became a chauffeur; the cabman bought a taxicab, and the old world rolls on just the same, only a little bit smoother with each new convenience.

When the linotype first appeared the strong typographical unions opposed it bitterly. At first their members were forbidden to work in shops where the linotypes had been installed. Later on they made a concession, that for every linotype in a shop there must be a certain number of regular journeymen at the cases. But the new machine got too strong for them. The linotypers' union was formed and the old printers saw their handicraft being devoured by this new infernal machine.

But wait. The newspapers were enlarging. The advent of the big, fat, five-cent Sunday newspapers in all cities called for skilled operators. Compositors became linotypers. Way back in the rural districts country weeklies began turning into dailies. Weekly papers sprang up where they never could exist before. The demand for printers became greater than ever. The new invention had taken its place in the country town, and that always means prosperity.



We are reading to-day of how the moving picture has demoralized and disintegrated the theatrical business, and how the poor actor is being slowly but surely starved out. Some of their complaints remind us of the Chinese when they beat on tin pans and make other hideous noises to scare away an evil spirit. To these our tip is: Don't let the Juggernaut's car run over you; jump into it and take a joy ride.

Moving pictures have done more for the good of the theatrical business than anything else in the past hundred years. Of course the new invention may have broken a few eggs while settling into its firm and absolute position, but it is here to stay and here for the good of all.

Many theaters in the larger cities were making no money, even before the pictures came—and what a lifesaver they proved to be. When in doubt, try pictures. Many are the road companies that have closed, giving the same excuse: "We cannot compete with the picture shows." They are right; the old-style road show cannot compete with them, but why sit down and cry about it? Be like the old engraver and the old printer. Follow the example of the livery stable man. If you see the great pendulum swinging toward you, grab on to it; swing with it, and you will find lots of old friends swinging with you, only some of them grabbed it quick and got a good seat.

Perhaps it has not occurred to the reader, while all these road companies are closing, that back in the country towns they are cleaning the cob-webs out of the old dark "Opry House." Getting ready for pictures. The Opera House has always been there, but one show a month was all the town would stand. Now they are going to have shows every night. This condition shows us the great balance wheel at work: the market and the market price. The moving picture machine has produced more goods at less cost.

Actors of melodrama have found a new field in posing before the animated camera. Some of them have made their biggest hit in talking behind the sheet. Many have turned their attention to the vaudeville opportunities, making more money than they ever did before, and a lot of them are making a good deal more than they are worth, so great is the demand.

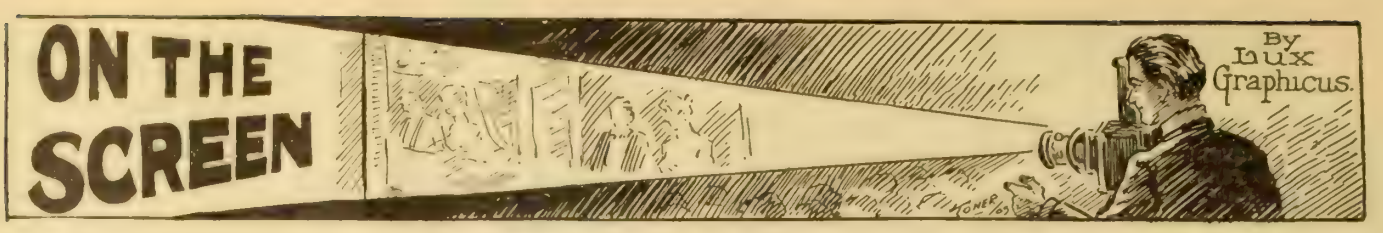
Many former theatrical managers have joined the ranks of moving picture managers. Old repertoire managers have quit the road forever to locate permanently as exhibitors. Stage hands have become operators; musical directors need never be out of a job, while good singers and drummers are always in demand.

The moving picture has penetrated to the country town and that is a sure sign of permanency.

Miss Maude Adams, when she is old and gray, will regret the day when she refused to let the camera record her "Jeanne d'Arc." Many of our present-day theatrical stars, who now frown upon the little strip of celluloid, will reflect, when the aches and pains of old age have removed them from the stage, what might have been. Though crippled with rheumatics, they may be acting still. Their work, like the soul of John Brown, would go marching on, while their royalties would come marching home to the fireside they would never have to leave.

By posing before the camera our great dramatic actors can appear before a hundred audiences at once; even though beauty fade or death remove. They can contribute to the pleasure of the remotest hamlet that could never expect to be honored with a one-night stand. But a hundred years from now, who will know or care who or what Maude Adams was if she still refuses to record her pretty features and her winsome ways?

The Vitagraph Company reports that the demand for the new posters which the company is now supplying, commencing with the second reel of "Moses," has been unexpectedly large, and the style of illustration and design adopted in the posters is calling forth hearty praise from all quarters. It is recognized by showmen that the new Vitagraph posters add variety to the lobby or billboard display.



Has anybody, I wonder, noticed the changed attitude of the press towards the moving picture? Has anybody noticed the completeness with which that which only a few short months ago was looked at askance in the press, is now accepted as un fait accompli and given its proper place in the scheme of things? Probably nobody has—except those who, like myself, make it the business of their lives to keep their hands on the pulse of public opinion. The change is really wonderful. A year ago, or even less, the press cuttings that came my way were full of the most absurd and prejudiced nonsense on the subject of the moving picture. The press of the United States through ignorance, of course, was making itself ridiculous. We have changed all that.

* * *

The time has disappeared when the ignorant contributor to a newspaper jeered at the picture for its technical and artistic defects and its alleged demoralizing tendencies. The pulpit, too, is discreetly silent on the same subject. Not a year ago there were Canons, Archbishops and other reverend gentlemen who were charaterizing the moving picture as one of the instruments of his Satanic Majesty for leading young people astray. These fanatics, it is satisfactory to note, are silent now.

* * *

It is about the changed attitude of the press that I want particularly to speak in this page this week. The other day I spent several hours in going through a big batch of cuttings from the general press on the moving picture. This is a little duty which circumstances obliged me to overlook for several months past. The generally innocuous nature of the references to the moving picture which are now printed, is what struck me in looking through these cuttings. They were mostly of a statistical or newsy character. There was comparatively little of the denunciatory sort. Here and there one came across a foolish person, chiefly an ill-informed woman, who decried the effect of the moving picture upon children. But you could count these fanatics on the fingers of one hand.

* * *

I am sure that everybody who has got the good of the moving picture business at heart will be glad to note the improvement in the attitude of the general press of the United States towards the moving picture. The novelty has worn off, together with the odium that so often attaches to a novelty or an innovation. It is very curious how the Chadbands, the Pecksniffs and the Stigginses always scent possible dangers to morals in any new form of entertainment or sport that the community may seize upon. For example: There is bridge, a game of cards. Chadband & Company ascribe all sorts of dreadful results from the playing of this game among society women. These results probably never happen. Society women, whether they play bridge or not, are neither better nor worse morally than their poorer sisters.

* * *

So it is with roller skating, which has just been resuscitated in this and other countries. Chadband & Company affect to perceive all sorts of evils in this innocent pastime. So they did when the safety cycle became popular. So they did with motoring. So they do with everything else which affects church attendances. There is the rub. If these people had their way, they would forbid any kind of innocent recreation which kept people away from the dreariest of all places—the churches and chapels. But, as in the case of the moving picture, their pulpit denunciations do not produce the desired effect and they get tired of the game of uncharitable attacks. For which the Lord be thankit!

* * *

But it was chiefly about the press generally that I wanted to talk. Not only is the attitude of the press in general at this time fair and rational towards the moving picture, it is something more, it is distinctly friendly on the whole. Then, again, American magazine editors seem for the moment to have tired about printing articles dilating upon the wonders, real and imaginary, of moving picture making. So in this branch of literature, the novelty has worn off. The subject no longer makes salable copy, because the people at large, like the press, have got to that point when they accept the moving picture as an accomplished fact, or as I have already called it, a part of the scheme of things.

* * *

This is a very good sign, indeed. It reflects the attitude of the public towards the moving pictures—that attitude being now one of absolute toleration and recognition of the fact that the picture is virtually a necessity of life, just as amusement generally is. The picture house has passed out of the experimental stage. It is as firmly fixed in the minds of the public as the ordinary theater. The ordinary theater is certainly having a bad time in this and other countries. But, then, this is traceable to the fact that for several years its position in public favor was an abnormal one. It took up too much of people's time and money. Now the proportions are being adjusted and in the adjustment the ordinary theater is temporarily suffering because the process of adjustment implies proper recognition of the position of the silent drama in relation to the vocalized drama.

* * *

I fear that I have grown a little discursive, but it is inevitable in a consideration of this important subject of the attitude of the press, otherwise the people at large, towards the moving picture. What has happened in this country is happening and has happened in others. I observe that across the Atlantic the clerical fanatics and the newspaper ignoramus have been put in their proper place, or at any rate are in process of being put there. The zealot and the persecutor have done their best to kill the picture, but they have failed. Over there the general press and theatrical magnates jeered at the moving picture for a time, but now it is pleasant to see that they have bowed to the inevitable. They have recognized and realized that the people at large want the picture, will have the picture and will not be cajoled into either rejecting it or accepting something else for it.

* * *

The industry at large has nothing to thank the general press for in this. It has nothing to thank the church for, it has nothing to thank the public authorities for. Its thanks, if any, are due to the public, who have consistently and growingly supported the efforts of those who have tried commercially to popularize the phenomena of persistence of vision. I was one of those, in another position, twelve years ago, who saw the wonderful entertainment possibilities of the moving picture. I was one of a very few. Reading now what I wrote then, it looks almost like prophecy. Yet at that time I was smiled at for my ideas; and so with many others in the manufacturing end of matters. The press was antagonistic and its antagonism has continued down to within the last few months. On the whole it has been a very long fight, but the fight is over and the battle won, notwithstanding the overwhelming odds of an ignorant press and its enormous influence. Marconi had to suffer in this way. Professor Langley was slighted for predicting aeroplanes. So was Count Zeppelin over his airship. So is every innovator with original ideas which upset the conventions or interfere with the existing order of things. It is this crisis which the moving picture has gone through and emerged from successfully. It is satisfactory that the hostility of the press towards the moving picture no longer exists.

A TIP FROM AN OLD PHOTOGRAPHER.

In using Metol as a photographic developer, it sometimes happens that the hands of the operator become affected in certain places with a sort of eczema, causing the skin to peel off in scales and finally producing sores and wounds. By accident I happened to find an excellent remedy for this skin trouble in the juice which is pressed from the pores of a fresh orange peel. In cases of eczema of the above mentioned kind, several applications of this juice rubbed into the affected skin will cure the trouble inside of 24 to 48 hours, producing a perfectly smooth skin. In severe cases the healing process will take a little longer.

CHICAGO NOTES.

The most important event of the week was a private exhibition at Mr. George Kleine's offices of some educational films of great interest.

If the foolish exhibitors want to kill the moving pictures by associating them with the cheapest class of vaudeville, they are merely ruining themselves, as motion pictures are not dying, they are here to stay and to prosper, but always in a higher sphere.

The films shown to us at Mr. Kleine's were a series of surgical operations. No amateur doctors amusing themselves on some dummies or corpses, but eminent doctors operating on live subjects. This exhibition was a real clinic. The very delicate operations shown on the screen were of excellent photography, every detail was there, and we could follow every move of the chief surgeon, of his assistants, of the nurses and we could even detect the breathing of the subjects.

We do not feel at liberty to give all the details of these remarkable operations, as they are only interesting to medical students. We mention the films for the purpose of showing that our manufacturers, fully aware of the doings of certain exhibitors, are preparing themselves for a more glorious future, in making cinematography the greatest educator of the world.

The films show that any remarkable surgical operation performed in Paris, London, Vienna, etc., can be shown to all the medical schools of the world by means of moving pictures, and that valuable records can be preserved for future generations.

Mr. George Kleine, after showing us that educational work offers a vast field, greatly amused us by giving another exhibition of the "Acrobatic Fly," also followed by the "Fly Pest." As mentioned in a previous letter, we had the pleasure to see on the screen some scientific experiments, showing the effects of certain acids on different metals.

If Mr. Andrew Carnegie would only put some of his millions to build moving picture palaces to show educational films he would do a far better work than the building of so many public libraries.

* * *

I spent an afternoon and evening on Halstead street, but I am sorry to say that I found nothing to say in favor of the industry, as the cheap vaudeville seems to have full swing.

On the corner of Madison and Halstead I was tempted by a big sign reading: "O YOU BIOGRAPH! 2,000 feet of Pictures and 4 Big Vaudeville Acts." I paid my 5 cents and was treate dto half a reel of very old Biograph picture and to four cheap, silly and short vaudeville acts, a show of not over thirty minutes.

* * *

Many of the moving picture theaters appear to me as if they were a dumping ground for the yearly big crops of stage-struck folks who, unable to obtain an engagement with regular theatrical managers, go to moving picture managers, where they are not engaged according to their merits but in consideration of the small wages they are willing to work for to keep the wolf from the door.

In one of these so-called palaces I had to smile in my hat. It appears that the manager, who reads The Moving Picture World—they all read it, detected some copies sticking from my pocket. This gave him a cold shiver and, running to his pianist he urged him to moderate his music. The pianist took the warning and abandoned his noisy ragtime tune.

In another place I was greatly amused at a sign announcing that the manager was catering to ladies and children. Yet this very manager went from seat to seat to collect the tickets with an old cigar stump in his mouth. Not very courteous to the ladies.

This manager does not believe in the neat uniform, yet he believes in making himself and his ushers as conspicuous as possible. It was a nasty, cold, windy day, yet the manager appeared in a pair of white pants decorated with little black dots and some white cuffs over his coat sleeves. He looked more the part of a cheap vaudeville actor ready to take his part than the manager.

* * *

"The Price of Fame" of Essanay made a great hit at the Orpheum. It was a grand success. The question remains: Who deserves the credit for such a success? Was it Essanay? Was it the Orpheum? To be frank, both shared in it.

Although "The Price of Fame" is one of the best dramatic productions from the Essanay studio, it probably did not score a hit in some places, while the management of the Orpheum made it a masterpiece.

In the scene in which the poor composer tries his notes on his old piano and in the scene in which the judges pass on the merits of the composition, the orchestra stopped, the pianist was the only one at his instrument and he struck his piano keys as if he followed every motion of the fingers as shown on the screen. It was the most realistic effect and the house was carried with well deserved applause.

* * *

A renter told me that he fully appreciated our persistent fight against cheap vaudeville and, to quote his own words, he said: "For every vaudeville act the exhibitor puts on he takes off a reel, or if he does not reduce the pictures he calls for a cheaper service. As we do not book vaudeville, we are the losers each time." This is very true, Mr. Renter, and I wish all the exchanges would recognize the fact and help us in the fight.

J. M. B.

A LONDON MOVING PICTURE HOUSE DE LUXE.

[We condense from our British contemporary, "The Bioscope," the following description of a recently opened moving picture theater in London. It will be seen that it possesses many features not enjoyed by the average American moving picture theater.—Ed. M. P. W.]

It would be difficult to convey to our readers any adequate idea of the sumptuous scale on which Mr. M. A. Pyke's latest picture theater has been arranged. The Ealing Cinematograph Theater is a veritable palace of luxury, and admitted by those who have seen it and are in a position to compare it with others, to be the finest the world has yet seen. The whole arrangement of the interior and the decorations are magnificent, yet in good taste, and any display of adjectives in describing the building will be pardonable.

Entering the handsome vestibule, with its galaxy of beautiful indigenous and exotic plants, which are also conspicuous in the hall, we are at once struck by the lavish scheme of decoration, the marble floor, and the thick pile carpet. The hall speaks comfort and luxury, and the numerous chairs which are there for the use of patrons, and the cheery looking fire, make us feel at once that here is ease and rest. From the hall, there is a grand staircase leading to the balcony, manager's office and other rooms at present unoccupied, the balcony being reserved for the highest-priced seats, and from this position a splendid view of the pictures is obtained as we sit in a luxurious arm-chair. Straight through the hall we enter the auditorium, and are at once attracted by the splendid decorations from floor to ceiling and everything strikes the eye with pleasing effect. There is a thick carpet covering the whole floor space, and comfortable upholstered seats throughout. The front seats are priced at 3d., the back seats 6d., and those in the balcony are 1s. The hall is interspersed with red-shaded lamps of the old-English style.

We must not omit the lounges. There are three of these, two of which are entered from the auditorium, one being reserved for threepenny seat-holders, and the other two for sixpenny and shilling patrons. The first we may describe as that leading off the entrance hall. Here are to be found all the leading daily and weekly papers; the room is profusely set with chairs and sofas, and patrons can sit down and read the papers by the side of a cheerful fire. The whole room is redolent of luxury, and we can only compare it to the drawing-room of a first-class hotel. The two lounges inside the auditorium are similarly furnished, but, so far as we could see, are not supplied with papers. We venture to state that no such conveniences and aids to the comfort of patrons on the part of an entertainment caterer have yet been attempted in this or any other country.

Accommodation is provided for from 450 to 500. The hall is about 60 feet high, with a fine arched stucco-plaster ceiling, and is 68 feet long by about 40 feet broad. The operating room is delightfully cool, having walls of brick and cement 14 inches thick, and is fitted with two of Gaumont's famous Chrono machines. The voltage is 105 alternating current, and a Cooper Hewitt transformer has been installed, with two small resistance frames to steady the arc. In addition to the ordinary requirements, a complete set of tools, stocks, dies, etc., has been provided, by which the operators can effect ordinary repairs to the machines.

There is no lack of music by which appropriate accompaniments are obtained to the pictures. Piano and organ are provided, and on the occasion of our visit the music was tastefully and skilfully rendered in keeping with the subject of the pictures. In addition, one of Messrs. Keith, Prowse's splendid automatic pianos, which gives high-class selections, and one of Messrs. Hepworth's wonderful singing machines —the Vivaphone—have been installed.

The pictures themselves are steady and well projected. The screen is 14 by 12 feet, and is set in a beautifully finished proscenium.

PICTURE PERSONALITIES.

Victoria Lepanto.

Anybody looking at this picture can see that the lady was ordained by nature and chosen by expert selection to enact the part of Carmen, and such she has done in the Pathe moving picture of that name. Equally so, she has played the part of Marguerite Gautier in "The Lady with the Camelias," also released by the same renowned firm. Mme. Lepanto is an attache of the Italian branch of the Pathe Company, and we are sure that moving picture theatergoers throughout the United States will be glad to make her acquaintance, if it is only in effigy. Naturally the regret is they don't see the lady herself. In regard to the personalities of the moving picture stage, Pathes have a great opportunity for making public the identities of the artists who work for them, because Pathes are one of the greatest moving picture houses in the world. They have gone after the talent, and the talent which works for them properly looks for the reward of publicity for its efforts. This favorably reacts on commercial exploiters of talent. It all comes to this: that just as the public has very properly interested itself in the personality of Mme. Pilar-Morin, it will also interest itself in that of Mme. Lepanto. It is interesting itself in the personalities of all the great performers on the moving picture stage. We are glad to congratulate Pathes upon having secured the services of this charming actress.

MLLE. VICTORIA LEPANTO AS "CARMEN."
Member of Pathe's Film d'Art Company in Italy.

One of the latest exchanges to reach us is "Stamboul," the daily organ of the progressive party in Turkey. Amongst the advertisements we see that of the Ampitheater where the Pathe film d'art pictures are shown each evening at 9 o'clock and twice on Sunday.

WILLIAM HAVILL.

CHIEF OF CHICAGO'S BOARD OF EXAMINERS.

By F. H. Richardson.

In Chicago there is one man particularly deserving more than passing mention and that is Mr. William Havill, chief of the Board of Moving Picture Operators' Examiners. Mr. Havill it was who secured to Chicago the examination of moving picture operators, acting in the capacity of chief examiner without pay for more than a year to get the proposition on its feet and going. Not only this, but it was he who organized the Moving Picture Operators' Union and had much to do with getting the organization into good running order and established on a fairly sound basis. Like most men who have "started something," Mr. Havill has made a few enemies, but he has made three friends to every foe. Mr. Havill was the first president of the Union, but resigned after things were running smoothly, believing that his dual capacity of examiner and official of the Union gave ground for malicious rumors which were freely circulated for a time. But, to the credit of Mr. Havill, no man has been able to lay his finger on one single wrong act and say "you did it." His record is clean and clear and he has been of great benefit to Chicago operators in more ways than one. The writer is glad to number the chief of Chicago's Board of Examiners among his friends and trusts that the time is near when those of small mind who have attempted to traduce him will learn to appreciate what the operators of Chicago own to him. If he has succeeded in getting a Board of Examiners and an active union of operators established in Chicago it wasn't done with wind, either, but by good hard work and lots of it. The Board was established by act of the City Council, passed October 5, 1908. The license fee for operators is $10 per year. The first Board consisted of Mr. Wm. Havill, president, Mr. James W. Sloneker and Mr. Walter P. Stuart. In the beginning conditions forced the Board to pass some men whose competency might well be open to question, but gradually the examinations are being stiffened, thus forcing operators to raise their standard of knowledge or drop out. The operation of the Board has been beneficial in every way, though the licenes fee is too high, all things considered. For this the Board is, however, not to blame, the fee being set by the City Council.

Renew your subscription to the Moving Picture World, $2.00. Do it now. It will pay.

PART II 8 PAGES

THE ST. LOUIS REPUBLIC.

WANT AD SECTION

102D YEAR. SUNDAY MORNING. FEBRUARY 6. 1910. PRICE FIVE CENTS.

ST. LOUIS'S
HIGH-CLASS
MOVING-PICTURE
THEATRES

GEM

(Taken from Daily Colonist)

PANTAGES THEATER.

ONE PRICE TO EVERY THING 10c

Read What They Say

about this week's big special feature at THE GEM. Without doubt, one of the most thrilling and interesting acts extant.

You Can't Afford to Miss This!

Besides this high-priced novelty, we offer a variety of new moving picture films, just received and shown for the first time.

PRETTIEST! BEST YEATLATED! HIGHEST CLASS! UP-TO-DATE!

6th st.

East side, between Walnut and Market Streets.

The Moving Picture Theater Now a Permanent Factor in Public Amusement

WE LIVE in an age when the genius of invention is abroad in the land—an age of mechanical ingenuity, mystery of revolving wheels and might of electrical power applied alike to the serious business of life and its amusements and recreations.

Meanwhile that much-abused mechanical mirth-provoker, the moving picture show, has come to stay, for it has evolved as the climax to a popular demand for cheap amusement, and its rapid growth, perfection of construction and ease of operation entitle it to a definite place among important factors in our modern life.

The history of the moving picture show is interesting. It is the outgrowth of scientific improvements and deeper investigations into the arts of photography.

Time was when the common photographer was regarded almost as a miracle by the uninitiated Amateurs and professionals vied with each other in producing photographs of greater and more superior excellence. Finally came delvers into the laws of vibration, who were also practical photographers, and who made this important discovery, viz: that apparently continuous motion is but a series of repeated vibrations, and that a series of photographs can be taken of a moving object, which, in their rapid review, constitute what has been called a moving picture. The application of this discovery at once widened the horizon so far as photography was concerned.

That this has been abused and made to subserve evil ends and pander to the depraved tastes of a large section of the public there is no doubt but this is not the rule. It is emphatically the exception. In earlier days, when the moving picture was in its infancy, it was natural that those who saw its possibilities in a commercial sense should waste as little time as possible and should endeavor to apply the discovery to whatever most conveniently lent itself to the purpose best and at least expense.

But the interest in the moving picture and its wonderful possibilities grew apace. The genuine, scientific and mechanical side of the invention awoke much inquiry and the moving pictures began to assert itself and once its way into public recognition as a great exemplar of educational principles and scientific wonders.

To-day the great moving panoramas that show magnificent scenes and transport us suddenly, as if we were carried by aeoli, to distant parts of the earth have risen to a place and please as a civilizing factor, and as our quest for healthy amusement and recreation we cannot do better than witness some of the wonderful exhibitions furnished us by the splendidly managed amusement halls that now cater for the best, in place of pandering to the worst, side of human nature.

Added to the moving panorama is the accompaniment of wondrously good music. Electricity, that mysterious force about which we still know so little, has been harnessed by man, and now drives the motors that connect with the machinery, and for the consideration of 5 and 10 cents the visitor may now enter a luxuriously upholstered hall, brilliantly illuminated, and while sitting spellbound by the rapidly shifting scenes that transport him in imagination to tropical climes, he may ravish his soul with fine orchestral effects from harp-toned instruments whose wonderful voices pour forth upon the air the melodies of New York's famous songsters or St. Louis' leading musicians.

St. Louis has nearly two hundred moving picture theaters, many of them housed in expensive and ornate buildings. Considerably more than $1,000,000 is invested in these enterprises and about 1,500 persons find direct employment in them. The moving picture business in this city has been placed upon a systematic and businesslike basis, enabling the public to get the utmost value at a minimum of cost.

THE PINNACLE of Motion PICTURE PERFECTION

GRAND CENTRAL THEATER
SIXTH AND MARKET STREETS

FROM NOWHERE TO THE FRONT RANK IN FOUR DAYS

O. T. Crawford's NOVELTY THEATER

BIG SUCCESS

Opened Wednesday, Feb. 2, 1910
THRONGED NIGHTLY.
Investment $75,000. Yet All Seats
10 Cents 10
Fireproof. Open on All Sides.
EVERY NIGHT,
Saturday, Sunday and Holiday
AFTERNOONS
EASTON AVENUE,
Just East of Grand Avenue

ROOF GARDEN

OPEN NOW. Only One in St. Louis.
2 BIG SHOWS UNDER 1 ROOF
VAUDEVILLE
On Perfect Stages
MOTION PICTURES.
ORCHESTRAS.
SINGING.
Wellston, Grand and Page Cars

NEWEST, MOST MODERN, MOST UNIQUE SHOW PLACE IN ST. LOUIS.

The McKinley Theater

2218 South Jefferson Avenue,

C. A. YOUNG, Prop. and Manager.

Is one of the finest Moving-Picture Theaters and is under the able management of Mr. C. Young, whose business experience ably fits him for the management. The house is packed to the doors each evening and many good words are said of the show. The best special acts that money can obtain are put on each week. A few words to the public from Mr. Young: At the outset there were some people dissatisfied with the location, through the general known prejudice against the moving-picture theater. These same people are now much pleased with the show given and may be found in the audience each week. A visit to The McKinley and you will be convinced that Mr. Young is giving much for the money.

CASINO THEATER
Olive and 6th Sts.
(Opposite Barr's)
=WHERE=
THE REFINED PEOPLE OF ALL ST. LOUIS GO.
The place for ladies to rest while downtown shopping.

The VICTOR Gravois and Victor

Highest-Class Moving-Picture Theater on the South Side.

Some time ago several men conceived the idea to amuse the public at large. One must feel em. Barnum, the circus man, once said. This may or may not be true. However, we are not going to try out Mr. Barnum's adage. It is and always will be our aim to amuse you in a wholesome and educational way. The tired housewife or business man that seeks recreation does not care to have her or his nerves stung to death by hilarious, cheap vaudeville. So when we put on any feature, the first question that arises is—Is it instructive? Will it offend? Is it going to amuse? And we are quite confident that we will keep our house standard where we have placed it. We show pictures that are works of art and are classed under the head of Feature Reels. We have a four-piece orchestra and splendid vocal talent. Our Theater Programme changes Sunday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday.

THE WHITE HOUSE
BLACKSTONE AND PAGE AVS.
HIGH-CLASS MOTION PICTURES AND MUSIC.
COMING SOON!
RICE'S TRAVELOGUES
SHOWING EVERY COUNTRY IN THE WORLD.
VIEWS OF ONE COUNTRY EACH NIGHT, DESCRIBED BY ONE OF THE BEST LECTURERS OBTAINABLE.
First Time in Any Motion-Picture Theater in St. Louis.

THE ASTOR
5 N. Broadway
Where you see the new and latest pictures first
ILLUSTRATED SONGS
Everything First-class and Up-to-date
5 N. BROADWAY

Open every evening at 7 p. m.
Open every Sunday at 2 p. m.

ALBERT LYNN Prop and Mgr.
THE NIGHTINGALE
2909 South Broadway
Illustrated Songs and Moving-Picture Parlor.
CHANGE OF PROGRAM
Sunday Tuesday Thursday Saturday
PICTURES TO PLEASE EVERYONE.
Admission 5c. Established 7 Years.
Handsome prize given away the last Tuesday in each month
SPECIAL FOR SUNDAY AND MONDAY
Live Corpse Comedy. Don't Fail to See It.

The Best Child's Shoe Made Anywhere—There's Double Wear In Every Pair.

BUSTER BROWN BLUE RIBBON SHOES

FOR BOYS—FOR GIRLS
All styles — all leathers — all sizes — and every pair built for service
THE BROWN SHOE CO.,
Makers—St. Louis, Mo
ASK YOUR SHOE DEALER FOR THEM

THE SAVOY
VANDEVENTER AND MORGAN.
THE HOUSE OF QUALITY
Commencing Sunday, February 15,
The Savoy Players
in Comedy and Dramatic
Playlets
Novelty Vaudeville Features, Vocal Selections, High-Class Motion Pictures. Savoy Feature Orchestra.
COMPLETE CHANGE OF PROGRAMME SUNDAY, WEDNESDAY AND FRIDAY.

The Dewey
M. KAISER, Prop.
2303 S. Broadway
High-Class Motion Pictures.
Program Changed Four Times A Week.
Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Sunday.
ADMISSION 5c.

St. Louis Calcium Light Co.
OXYGEN HYDROGEN GAS FURNISHED IN TANKS FOR STEREOPTICON AND MOVING-PICTURE MACHINES
Stereopticon Views, Lecture Sets, Lodge Drills, Moving-Picture Machines and Films for Sale or Exchange.
Calcium Lights, with Lenses, furnished for Theatres, Entertainments, Lawn Parties, Church Festivals, Tableaux and Private Balls on a Cash or Rental Basis.
STEREOPTICON VIEWS
Put up to Lecture Song with Reading from 500 parts of the world. Comic, children's songs, stories, religious, etc., illustrated songs, temperance or anti-Saloon slides for sale or rent, cheap or sold special. Slides made to order from photographs and engravings.
OUR ILLUSTRATED SONG SLIDE SERVICE is the largest Song Slide Rental Exchange in the United States having original copies of over 40,000 sets of song slides made, sold and kept up-to-date. Song slides [illegible] per week, over 1,000 complete sets to select from. We receive from 5 to 10 new ones every week. All original copies. No stock slides.
915 OLIVE STREET BOTH PHONES

THE HIPPODROME
13 N. BROADWAY.
Programme Changes
Sunday, Wednesday, and Friday
The Moving-Picture Show for Ladies and Children.
Illustrated Songs.
Admission 5 Cts.

FAMILY THEATER
Broadway and Bremen.
Change of program Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Sundays.
Music by Professors Gieselmann, J. Donovan and Hartman.
J. MOGLER, Proprietor.

ONE OF THE PIONEERS OF BROADWAY
—IN THE—
MOTION-PICTURE BUSINESS.
DEWEEZ BROS. Proprietors of the Broadway Theater
South Broadway at Victor St.
It is always our policy to procure the LATEST and BEST Motion Pictures Obtainable.
Entire Change of Program Every SUNDAY, TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY AND FRIDAY.
MUSIC BY THE BROADWAY ORCHESTRA.
Latest Illustrated Songs by our Eminent Artist, MR. BURNS
ONE CALL AND YOU WILL BE A STEADY PATRON TO OUR SHOW.

JNO. J. POWERS, Proprietor
THEO. T. HAMILTON, Manager
The Alice
SIXTEENTH AND CASS AVENUE
"The House of Quality"
Life Motion Pictures and Illustrated Songs
All subjects are thoroughly explained by Mr. Theo. T. Hamilton, giving high-class original dramatic, educational and comedy lectures on all pictures. Mr. Hamilton is the best known lecturer in the city. He is in a class all to himself.
Songs by Master Johnnie Hambrich the phenomenal boy soprano.

Advertising the Moving Picture Show. (See page 289.)

A NEW RACE OF DEGENERATES.

By H. F. Hoffman.

There is no place on earth quite like a film exchange during the "crowded hour," from 11 to 12 a. m. The moving picture has been held publicly responsible for most of the sins of omission and commission, but so far they have escaped the blame for producing a new race of degenerates, namely, the city "operator."

It is perhaps unfair to hold the pictures liable for the direct production of this race, but they certainly brought the atoms together into a concrete whole which may be seen mornings at any of the film exchanges in all its wild and unfettered non compos mentis.

Bear in mind that not every person seen in a film exchange is a member of this race. Some few ordinary mortals are obliged to mingle with them for an hour each day, but not by choice; they are exceptions and cannot be included in the species.

It is difficult to describe in a word the full characteristics of any one specimen of the degenerate operator. Two words might do it: greasy and smutty. Greasy of body and smutty of mind. The animal, however, may be distinguished by any of a number of earmarks, such as: immoderate laughter at puerile wit, horse-play, wrestling matches on linoleum well moistened with tobacco juice, crap shooting, hasty consumption of cigarettes, whittling of furniture with penknives, pounding, back-slapping, a breaking out at the mouth of profane gibberish and loud demands for the immediate delivery of reels.

The members of this race are never named such names as James or John or Frank or Edwin. They have special names of their own, such as: "Bug House," "Spaghetti," "Muzzletoff," "Dorando," "Longboat," "Mud Scow," "Pork and Beans," "Lizzie," "Dippy," "White Wings," "Rhymo the Monk," etc., etc. They are named immediately upon their first appearance, Indian fashion, from some personal characteristic or deformity, and if none of these are sufficiently noticeable, the new recruit is given the name of the theater from whence he hails, which is usually printed on his reel case, such as: "Casino," "Lyric," "Comedy," "Pastime," "Hippodrome," and so on.

Another noticeable trait of this genus operatus is the remarkable ease with which they become acquainted. The tribal specimens seem to recognize each other at a glance and fraternize forthwith. No credentials are asked when they join the merry throng, nor are they ever missed when they come no more.

Their conversation affords some insight of the cranial development of the species. For greeting it is apparently the custom to deliver a right-handed wallop across the skull, knocking off the hat if possible, and at the same time shouting, "Hello, Kiddo," after which the conversation proceeds.

"Where wuz you las' nite?" "Aw, I wen' home, ware wuz you?" "I seen Mazie." "Did you?" "Yes; she ast about you." "Did she; wha'd she say?" "She says you promised to take her to the Poultry Pickers' Ball an' you d i d n' t make good." "Aw, she's a liar." "She says you're a cheap sport; you're in bad with her all right." "What do I care, I met a queen the other night that's got it on her forty ways. Where'd you get the 98-cent lid?" "That ain't no 98-cent lid." "You mean to say that hat cost mor'n 98 cents?" "Yes; for money." "I got dat money. Hey, Dopey, come over here —you hear what he says, he says he paid mor'n 98 cents for that lid." "Yes, put up your money." "All right, I'll put up my money; where's yours?" "Never mind, I got mine." "You got to show me." "Well, you got to show me." "Aw, you're a bluff— Hey! Let him up there!" and he rushes away to assist the under dog in a wrestling match, whose victor is sitting upon his head.

There appears to be no female gender to this breed of wolf cubs. At least, it is certain that if a lady should enter this boisterous playhouse they would not alter their speech or actions on her account. At some previous time they were probably human beings, but when they went through their examinations and received the licenses that made them "operators," the ordeal must have been such a mental tax that is left them bereft, or produced a mental metamorphosis that is sad to contemplate.

The tall young man who passes out the reels in one of the New York exchanges was asked to hand down an opinion as to what caused this abnormal reincarnation, and he opined as follows: "They're Nutty, just plain Nutty. This is the only fun they have. All the rest of the day they are shut up in their hot 'coops,' Sundays and all, and it gives them 'attic trouble.' At 11 o'clock at night they get away and all there is to do then is go to bed. In the morning they have to come with their reels, and all the fun the poor devils get is what they have right here in this office."

SIZE OF PICTURE AND "THROW."

By F. H. Richardson.

I have spoken of this matter before in these columns, but it would seem that a further word would not be amiss since there is a widespread misunderstanding concerning the effect of distance and size of picture as affecting the illumination of the screen. The writer makes the statement unqualifiedly that "throw" (distance of machine from screen) has little or nothing to do with brilliancy of picture. In fact, he claims that a better illuminated picture will be had, from a given candle power arc, at 100 feet than at 50; this by reason of the superior quality of lens. For it must be understood that the long focus lens is generally a better made article than is the one of short focal length. What does affect the result on the screen, however, is the size of the picture. To grasp this idea, which runs counter to the view held by nine out of ten operators, one must consider that one is projecting a given number of light rays through an aperture and that each and every one of these rays will reach the screen, except for the comparatively very slight deflection due to dust and other impurities in the atmosphere. This deflection or absorption of light is too slight, however, in 100 or even 150 feet to be taken seriously into account, except the air be exceptionally dusty or smoky. Therefore, we may say that practically all the light passing through the aperture reaches the screen be the distance 50 or 150 feet. That is common sense, pure and simple. Many cite the rule that the illumination decreases inversely with the square of the distance. Applying this rule to projection is an error. It applies to an open lamp from the fact that its rays are diffused in every direction and the further you go from the source of illumination the less number of light rays there are to the square inch or foot. It does not apply, however, where a given number of light rays are projected and confined to a given surface area.

But when that surface is increased, then we begin to apply the rule in a limited way. Suppose you have a picture 8 x 10 feet. Your screen then has 80 square feet of surface. Now suppose you are projecting 1,000 light rays (the actual number is millions, of course) through the aperture on this screen. This means that each square foot of surface will have the brilliancy imparted by 1,000 divided by 80, or a little more than 12 rays to each square foot of screen. Now suppose you increase the size of your picture to 12 x 14. You now have 168 square feet of screen to illuminate, with no more light to do it with. This means that instead of 12 light rays to the square foot you have but 6 rays to the square foot of screen, or practically half the brilliancy you had before. Do you see the point? Yet nine out of ten operators and managers will brag about the results they get on a long throw, but say nothing at all about the size of their picture. This matter is simple enough that it should be understood by everyone. Common sense must tell you that what I have said is absolutely correct, except that some may be inclined to think there will be a considerable deflection through atmospheric impurities. There is some, undoubtedly, but not enough to materially affect results within a range of anything numbered in hundreds of feet, except in exceptional cases of smoky or dusty air. This article is prompted by an inquiry (see "Operators' Column") from a manager who evidently holds to the "loss of illumination by increased throw."

Some scientists have gone to the trouble to prove that celluloid film if placed in a corked bottle and the bottle be subjected to heat, that enough gases will be generated to explode the bottle. Ignorant writers in the daily papers have seized upon this to point out the danger in theaters where celluloid films are being shown, but reasoning from the results of the experiment it would require a million or more feet to explode a building, and even then it would have to be as tightly closed as the bottle.

OPERATORS' COLUMN.

Conducted by F. H. Richardson.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

